We are told (Gen. 2: 7) that man was formed of the "dust of the ground;" that God breathed [blew] into his nostrils the breath of life, and man (formed of dust] became a "living soul." That this living soul was formed of dust is so plainly stated that we think no unbiassed mind can fail to see it. This man was made in the image of God, male and female. Gen. 1: 27. Here, again, theologians have gone to the end of their wits to ascertain what this image consisted in, as pertaining to man. Some have claimed that it was immortality; but we find the word image defined thus: "A representation or similitude of any person or thing formed of a material substance; as an image wrought out of stone, wood, or wax."—Webster. "God formed man in his own image." Jesus asks concerning the penny (Matt. 22: 20, "Whose is this image and superscription? They say unto him Cæsars." We point to man and ask, Whose image is he? The Scripture answers, "God's." "Adam begat a son in his own likeness, after his own image, and he called his name Seth." But Adam was in the likeness and image of God; hence his son Seth must have been in the same likeness and image.

Will any one claim that Adam begat an immortal soul? Man is a living soul: the beasts are also living souls (Gen. 1: 30, margin, Heb. a living soul). Man received from God the breath of life, or spirit of life. So also have the beasts (Gen. 7: 21, 22, margin, Heb. the breath of the spirit of life). "For that which befalleth the sons of men befalleth beasts, even one thing befalleth them: as the one dieth, so dieth the other; yea, they have all one breath; so that a man hath no preeminence above a beast; for all are vanity, all go to one place, all are of the dust [Gen. 2: 19; 3: 19], and all return to dust again." Eccl. 3: 19, 21. The same Scripture terms which are claimed to prove the natural immortality of Adam, or his consciousness in death, may be claimed with equal propriety to prove the immortality of the beasts, and their consciousness in death. Take the atonement by the death of Jesus Christ out of the Bible, and the future of man after death would be an eternal blank; hence Paul argues, "If the dead rise not, then is not Christ risen," (1 Cor. 15: 16, 18, 19); then they also which are fallen asleep in Christ are perished. If in this life only we have hope in Christ, we are of all men most miserable;" and closes this point by saying, "If after the manner of men I have fought with beasts at Ephesus, what advantageth it me if the dead rise not: let us eat and drink, for to-morrow we die."

If Adam was made immortal he could not have died; but Adam did die, therefore he was not immortal. Immortality is an innate principle of undying nature, not to be lost by a change of circumstances.

We are now prepared to inquire, What was the nature and object of the tree of life in its relation to man? It is certain that its properties were not to give life, for Adam had received that from his Maker before he saw the tree of life. Nor was it to make him immortal, for, as we have shown, Adam was made mortal (like other animals), to generate his species, with the prospect of immortality and dominion before him; and it would seem absurd to suppose that God would give him free access to the tree whose fruit would change that nature from mortal to immortality before he had fairly entered upon the work assigned him (Gen. 1: 28); for it is a fair and reasonable conclusion that the two trees in the midst of the garden, viz., the tree of life and the tree of the knowledge of good and evil, would first attract his attention, and being forbidden to eat of the latter, he would first partake of the former.

Eternal life would be the inevitable product or result of immortality, while free access to, and partaking of the tree of life would preserve the life of a mortal man forever (Gen. 3: 22), as well as nine hundred or one hundred years, and yet not make him immortal, as immortality is not the result of life, but eternal life is the legitimate result of immortality.

Again, Paul informs us that immortality is an object or condition to be sought "by patient continuance in well doing" (Rom. 2: 7), and is recompensed with eternal life. Neither of these did Adam possess, nor did they grow in nature's garden, but were placed in the distance as an object of pursuit, and to be given to the victors when the race is ended. What, then, was the object of the tree of life? We think Adam (as all other animals) was constituted to generate his own species and supply the earth with men (Gen. 1: 28), subject to change, decay, and loss of life, by a change of circumstances. If he eat of the forbidden fruit he must "surely die;" being in this condition, the tree of life was provided (not to give, but) to perpetuate his life until his work of replenishing the earth and subduing it (preparatory to his having dominion over it, provided he did not forfeit it by sin) is done. This is clearly proved from Gen. 3: 22: "And now, lest he put forth his hand and take also of the tree of life, and eat, and live forever." Adam had free access to the tree of life while in the garden: if left there after he sinned, with free access to that fruit, such was its nutritious power to counteract the waste of his nature (not to change that nature to immortality, but to preserve his life), he would never die, and God's denunciation against sin would never be fulfilled: hence the Lord "drove out the man, and placed cherubims and a flaming sword to keep the way of the tree of life." Gen. 3: 24. (To be continued.)

PUBLISH THE GLAD TIDINGS.

News is recent intelligence of events not looked for—not anticipated, while tidings is intelligence of events anticipated—waited for. "We wait for tidings respecting an absent or sick friend. We may be curious to hear the news; we are always anxious for tidings." Webster.

God's ancient people received a gracious promise from God that he would send them a heavenly leader, who should, in the spirit and power of Elias, prepare a people for the coming of the Lord. Israel for a long time waited for tidings of his approach,—evidences of his speedy advent to accomplish the much desired work foretold by the prophets. At last Gabriel appeared to Zacharias, and announced to him the long expected "glad tidings" that his wife Elizabeth, although "well stricken in years," should become the mother of the wonderful man of God. Zacharias, on account of the fact that it seemed impossible that his wife could become the mother of the predicted agent to do the marvelous work of preparing a people to receive the Messiah at his foretold advent, and notify the world of his speedy approach, did not believe the message. For this unbelief God made the priest dumb (a striking type we think) for a season. John, the long expected man who was to train and educate a people to look for the immediate personal appearing of the Messias did come and prove himself to be the forerunner, so that when Jesus should be presented as the Christ they could not reject him as such without rejecting John with all the accumulated evidences of the divinity of his mission.

God had taught all good men for ages to look for a Savior—a mighty deliverer to appear upon the earth. They had anxiously and prayerfully waited, generation after generation, age after age, to hear the first note of the heavenly tidings—that the long looked for King was coming. At last in God's own time the glorious tidings—the news of Messiah's prayed for advent—sounded. its first note from angelic lips, falling upon the ears of the devout shepherds.

Those who were then living in holy expectancy, waiting for God to fulfil his gracious promise to send a Restorer of our world and Redeemer of our race, like Simeon and Anna, caught the glad note of holy tidings and echoed it upon the human ear with ecstacies of devout joy.

The Holy One appeared in all the glorious perfections of humanity, blended with Divinity, and glorified by an eternal oneness with Deity. Standing among the sons of Adam, he was the only one "altogether lovely," the "chiefest" among ten thousands. His head rose far above the grade of corrupted humanity, while from his presence Satan and demons were driven in dismay. His heavenly origin and allmightiness were manifested in his power to convert the fleecy waves of a disturbed sea into terra firma; for his triumphant march, as the echo of his voice, stilled the howling tempest and stopped the rushing winds. The sick and dying were vitalized into vigor and health by his touch. Blind eyes were opened, and deaf ears unstopped by his commandment. The fig tree was killed, the wild colt tamed, and the fish swallowed Peter's hook by the exercise of his will. He satisfied the hungry thousands with a little bread, and put to silence the wisdom of the world by his God-likeness and superhuman wisdom. He spake to the dead, and they leaped into life to manifest their obedience to the King Eternal.

He notified his friends that he must return to his Father from whence he had come, and would send the Holy Spirit to comfort them while suffering the loneliness and sadness of his dreaded absence. He also, before leaving his covenant people, promised them that if he went away and prepared a place for them, he would "come again and receive them unto himself;" and said, "Where I am there ye may be also."

Upon this most definite and glorious promise of Jesus Christ the true church, having the true gospel hope and faith, has ever rested in a joyous expectancy of that promised "coming again;" delighting in the prospect of "ever being with the Lord." The church has therefore remained upon the watch-tower through the tardily moving christian centuries, praying for and longing to hear the most joyous of all glad tidings—the speedy returning of the Christ.

The blessedness of hearing these all-inspiring tidings, and the glorious privilege of sounding them out upon the four winds of heaven seems to have been reserved for the faithful of this generation.

God's great prophetic clock has evidently sounded the alarm, notifying all to prepare for the ending of the hour—the gospel age. The signs, indicating the approach of the great change, the transformation and reconstruction of a world, which will be more glorious and sublime than any marked upon the calendar God gave to man, are now flashing their light athwart the heavens and sounding their deep notes exactly as foretold. The glorious tidings, "Behold he cometh with clouds; and every eye shall see him" is now sounding a more important note upon the human ear than ever greeted it since the dawn of time. The events betiding those who meet that day will entirely eclipse those of all other days, in grandeur of scenes, importance of results, as to glory and infamy, life and death, extent and duration.

As a wife waiteth with heart-longings to hear the tidings of the coming of her long absent husband, as she wanders homeless and friendless, so the church has waited with longings indescribable, peering into the heavens, and watching every vibration of changing earth-scenes, to catch the first ray of light, and hear the first sounds indicating the approach of her heavenly Bridegroom.

As the events heralding this proclamation will be more important to our world in their grand and eternal results; ending sin and the curse, raising the dead, glorifying the saints, radically changing earth's government, bringing Christ back to our world as the Judge of quick and dead, the Redeemer of his people, the glorious King of its restored dominions, so is it more vitally important in its reception, sublimely glorious in its promises and terrible in its threatenings than any message ever revealed by God to man.

The church was never called of God to do a more reponsible work, or to take a higher or more holy position in proclaiming any truth from the lips of Jehovah than in sounding the most glorious news of Jesus' returning.

As the message is of superior importance, so God has guarded it on every hand with numerous and incontrovertible evidences of its divine origin, the imperative necessity of accepting and proclaiming it to the world, and the blessed certainty of its ultimate accomplishment.

We view the faithful promulgation of this last edition of inspired truth as a grand specialty in christian labor. We look upon this judgment message as God's last battery to be unmasked before the enemy's works. Preaching the gospel of the kingdom is the last work Christ has given his servants to do. Let us never dream of being prepared to meet the coming Christ until we find ourselves at the post of duty appointed by the great Commander.

Whenever God gives his people special work to do, Satan always makes special efforts to turn them from that work; to blind them to that duty, and hide the truth which manifests the divine will upon that subject. All can see this principle in its application to the past, but it is always most difficult to see it in its application to the present—to ourselves.

Ye men of God, be careful and see if he has called you to bear any special tidings to this generation of coming events! Can you read the divine inscription upon the mile-post we are now passing? Are not the earth-scenes now every where exciting the public mind, somewhere pre-written on the inspired page? Did God overlook the strange events of our times in giving the prophetic history of the world to its end? If you find the history of the present, be careful and read the sentences which follow in the consecutive history, where you will find the special tidings, or the account of that which betides the world in the immediate future. Be faithful, be faithful, all ye people of God, to your high and holy calling, for these times call every one to their post of duty.

J. C.

JEWISH EXPECTATION.

There is evidence that the Jews think their land is not to "be trodden down of the Gentiles" but a short time longer. But it must be "trodden down" till "the times of the Gentiles be fulfilled." When they are fulfilled, we may expect the return of Jesus to set up "the kingdom of heaven." Some of the Jews now hold very prominent positions in the old world. Mr. Disraeli, of Jewish origin, is the Prime Minister of the British Government. The Messrs. Rothschild [Jews] hold the purse strings of Europe. Their influence is immense. It is said the Jews are waiting for the opportunity to purchase Palestine, or a portion of it, when the Turks are ready to sell. We think the rightful Heir to David's throne will return before the Jews can purchase the land. The Lord says, "The land is mine," and "shall not be sold for ever." Lev. 25: 23.

The Advance says:—

"Without being too sanguine, we think that striking events are immediately before us. The finger of God is certainly moving forward the hand on the dial toward noon. If, as interpreters of prophecy almost universally believe, we are on the eve of the day of millennial glory, we cannot but conclude that the events now transpiring in the East are, partly at least, struggles between the darkness and the light as the morning breaks."

Yes, we believe "the day of millennial glory" is at hand. "Striking events" are about to open that will astonish the world, shake the very foundations of society, and cause men's hearts to fail them with fear. The converging lines of prophecy are continually approaching their terminal point. The end must be soon.

M. G.

THE DUTY OF THE HOUR.

In view of the great event now approaching, every christian should be fully awake, clad with "the whole armor of God," that he may be able to stand firmly in Christ amid the perils of these last days. Now is the time, if ever, to persuade the unconverted to seek an interest in our dear Savior. No opportunity should be omitted that may be employed to lead them to life's living fountain. The value of eternal life to one loved soul will be of more value than the treasures of the whole world. Shall we refuse to give them a helping hand now, when it is most needed? If persons saved from a shipwreck or burning house should refuse to help rescue other perishing ones, we should think them almost unworthy of respectable society. How much more is this true if we do nothing to save our friends, relatives and neighbors, who are in danger of eternal destruction? Will the Lord say to the idle ones "Well done"?

Let each inquire, What am I doing for Jesus? Every christian man and woman should go to work at once, when pardoned, to persuade others to leave the broad road that leads to death eternal. He owes such service to his divine Master, as well as to the perishing.

If any father or mother who reads this knew that a dear child had just taken a dose of poison, or been bitten by a rattlesnake, thereby greatly endangering life unless immediate relief could be obtained, would the news be passed by with indifference? But such a calamity would only result in temporal death. Instead of this, that same child may be poisoned by sin, or bitten by that "old serpent," which must result in eternal death, unless help is sought from the great Physician. Every sinner is a sick person, and needs the help and sympathy of all who truly love Jesus. They should spare no effort to convince him of his great danger, and of the willingness of the Lord to help him. Paul ceased not to warn the people night and day. Should we not do as much in these last hours of time? Is there not danger that many will be found at last like the barren fig tree, having "nothing but leaves"? Is it not time to inquire whether we are living to please self, the world, or the Lord? Let it be kept in mind we "cannot serve God and mammon." We must either gather with Christ, or scatter abroad. He says we are his "friends" if we do whatsoever he commands us. Again he says: "If ye love me, keep my commandments." We are commanded to come out from the world and be separate, and then he will accept and guide us. It is a great privilege to submit to the direction of one who is never found to be weak or unwise.

The hour has come when all who wish to be ready to meet Jesus should make a full, unconditional, and everlasting surrender to him, and be willing to do or suffer anything that will advance his cause. Whatever we do for his glory is for our good. If we go contrary to the one, we do to the other. When we give the heart unreservedly to him, we have done the best thing possible for our present and future welfare. Has the reader done this? If not, why not? What objection? If willing, why not now. Jesus says now. Let the response be, Now.

"I give my all to Thee,
Friends, and time, and earthly store;
Soul and body thine to be,
Wholly thine for evermore."

Jesus is waiting to have you say, Yes, I'll be thine, wholly thine, for ever more. If this be the language of the heart, then there is nothing to fear. Perfect love and peace come next, with full assurance that "all is well." The present will be filled with sunny contentment, doubts all gone, and the future outlook will be bright and glorious. May such be the experience of the reader.

PORT SANILAC.—We are now (Mar. 11th) at Port Sanilac, Mich., about thirty-three miles north of Port Huron. We arrived at a late hour last evening, after a very tedious day's stage ride. Owing to the exceedingly muddy traveling, it was necessary to walk the horses a good part of the way. It took about ten horses to go the thirty-three miles. To-day (Saturday) we have had three good meetings. The prospect is encouraging. Eld. George W. Wright has been holding meetings here, and some forty have been converted since the beginning of the move. We hope to see many more come to Jesus.

M. G.

IT PAYS.—We have the best of evidence that those who have been sending the Crisis to their friends for three months have been doing a good work, that will produce rich fruit. So far as we can learn, most are delighted with the paper, and wait joyfully for its weekly visits. Do not let the list be closed till every subscriber has sent at least one copy for three months to some person. A little self-denial will save money enough to pay for it. Do it for Jesus.

M. G.

THERE are many fruits which never turn sweet until the frost has laid upon them. There are many nuts that never fall from the boughs of the forest trees till the frost has opened and ripened them. And there are many elements of life that never grow sweet and beautiful until sorrow touches them.

THE TRACT FUND.

THE ADVENT CHRISTIAN PUBLICATION SOCIETY, at a meeting on Springfield camp-ground, August 11th, 1875, voted to raise Two Thousand Dollars for the free distribution of Tracts the ensuing year; and they invite the help and co-operation of all lovers of the Lord and of his truth, in the furtherance of the good cause. The times are ominous of coming events, and admonish us to diligence in the Master's work. The Lord is at the door, and what we do must be done quickly. Let the contributions be prompt, hearty, and liberal. The Lord will reward the liberal giver.

HAMILTON.

L. BOUTELL.

Last Saturday I took the last train for this place. Bro. Elam Burnham was at the depot and took me to his home. I came by appointment to preach in their new Chapel, erected by the labor and sacrifice of Bro. E. Burnham and others in the neighborhood. The house is well constructed, pleasantly situated, seated with settees, and will hold quite a large congregation. It is a Union Chapel, open to all christians.

I preached three times last Sunday, to interesting congregations, with good attention. I tried to give them the Bible hope, culminating in the coming of our blessed Lord and the resurrection of the dead, when all will be rewarded according to their deeds. A valuable Bible has been presented them by Srs. Bosworth and Harding, of the 4th Baptist Church, Haverhill. On presentation the congregation rose and sung,

"Praise God from whom all blessings flow."

I could but hope the day I spent with them might be profitable. The singing was good and brisk; all tongues seemed inspired with tune. I left, praying they might have a reformation that would make the best of them better, and the rest of them good. So mote it be.

SOME OPINIONS OF THE PRESS ON THE TIMES.

THOS. FITZSIMMONS.

We give in this column a few of the opinions of the press on the present extraordinary times in the United States. We have come across them in our recent readings, and as they are extracted from papers neither Prophetic or Advent, perhaps they will be received by sceptics as unbiased testimony of the latter day—"Distress and Perplexity of Nations."

THE OUTLOOK.—"It does seem to the superficial observer inexplicable that agriculture, trade, manufactures, and transportation, should all be suffering at once, with apparently no tendency towards recovery. Great forces are at work, producing a great change."—New York Tribune.

OUR POLITICS.—"It must fall upon the present generation of our country to throttle the public thieves, and to re-arrange the machinery of a pure republican government."—New York Herald.

PUBLIC MISRULE.—"Politically the country is becoming more and more disordered each year.—Elizabeth, N. J., Herald.

A DISHONEST AGE.—"The age of embezzlements and defalcations, public and private."—Philad. Evening Bulletin.

RELIGION.—"There are half a million of people in New York City and vicinity, to whom the preaching of the gospel is as strange as to the inhabitants of New Zealand or Ashantee."—New York Evening Post.

OUR COMMERCE.—"There has been a general decline in the foreign commerce of the United States during the year 1875. In New York the exports have fallen off over twenty-one millions, and the imports over fifty-three millions."—Boston Journal.

PRISONS OF THE UNITED STATES.—"We have received from a friend a terrible account of brutalities and indecencies, developed in an investigation of a county prison in Georgia. Our friend probably does not know that his story can be matched easily enough up North. Here are more than 4000 prisons in the United States, and it is a fearful fact that a majority of them are terribly managed, immoral, unclean, fraudulently managed, and gate-ways of perdition, brutalities to the inmates resulting in death being frequent. We could fill our paper with such sickening details."—New York Weekly Journal.

EVILS OF THE DAY.—"The past year has been one of unusual demoralization in literature. Never during the same length of time has the public press and publications so reeked with obscenities, immoralities, and insidious attacks upon the principles which lie at the very foundation of upright moral character. Looking still further, we see the spread of intemperance, dishonesty, disbelief in man's responsibility to God, oppression, and inhumanity. These elements of the situation taken together give a gloomy aspect for the future, and threaten the defeat of religion, the subversion of morality, and the destruction of the freedom of the State."—The Interior, Chicago.

We could supplement the above testimony by columns. The evidence is valuable as showing us beyond question the rapid fulfilment of the last day prophecies.

YORK CO. CONFERENCE.

The A. C. Conference of York Co. and vicinity held a quarterly session at South Windham, Me., March 2nd to 5th, 1876, Eld. Jesse Gay presiding.

The business transacted during this session was as follows: The Secretary and Treasurer gave their reports, which were accepted. The Evangelist reported that he had visited and held meetings in six different places. The whole number of meetings held were eighty-seven, and fifty-eight persons had requested prayers. He thought that most, if not all of these had found peace. His receipts amounted to sixty-eight dollars and fifty-nine cents; and his travelling expenses had been six dollars and fifty cents. This report was discussed at length, and finally accepted; after which it was unanimously Voted, That C. H. Sweet serve us another quarter as Evangelist.

Voted, That we choose G. F. Haines to assist C. H. Sweet in his labors as Evangelist.

Voted, That our Evangelists be requested to properly represent themselves, financially, to the people among whom they labor, and that they be requested to have a collection taken up.

We next listened to reports of preachers and delegates, which were of unusual interest. Elders W. H. Mitchell, J. Gay, E. A. Stockman, G. H. Haines, and C. H. Sweet reported in person, and Eld. J. Hill by letter. They all reported revival interests, some of them extensive reformations.

REPORTS OF CHURCHES.

Biddeford: Still united in trying to advance the cause of Christ. Nine or ten hopefully converted and reclaimed. A number have come in from other denominations. Hollis Centre: An increasing interest in their prayer meetings. South Windham: A small band; well united; not so much engaged in the work as they should be. Kennebunkport: Has been blessed with a wonderful reformation, which wrought a great change in the churches and people there. West Poland: Interest low. A few still holding on. Steep Falls: Rather backward in the Advent cause. Portland: Had a little revival. Eight or ten started. The bar between the two societies seemed to be melting away, but Satan crept in and succeeded in stirring up much of the old feeling again. Things now appear to be getting quiet. Bonny Eagle: Enjoying a remarkable revival interest. Bar Mills: Nearly thirty conversions. Congregations good. Interest increasing.

It will be seen that we had a larger number of church reports than at some previous sessions; while the number of preachers reporting themselves is smaller than ever before. We do wish something could be said or done to induce every preacher and church within our limits to report themselves. It would add immensely to the interest and usefulness of our Conference.

We adjourned to meet at Bar Mills, Me., the first Thursday in June next. We had large congregations, good social meetings, and excellent preaching throughout this session.

C. H. SWEET, Sec.

Correspondence.

From Bro. B. Spaulding.

Dear Brn. Editors:—Let me in a few words speak of the goodness of God to poor me, an old man seventy-six years old. I am infirm with age, but my general health is good. I travel two miles in a day often, and visit families as I used to, and give lectures occasionally.

I am now in Windham, Vt., a hundred miles from home. I am doing the same work that I do in other places. I feel that it is a wonder that I live and am able to work, while those younger than myself are laid up by age and infirmity. God has been good to me from my youth up, and crowned my life with his blessing. Blessed be his name! I have been preserved through evils, seen and unseen, even through thirty-five years, and God has raised up for me kind, hospitable friends everywhere.

I take this opportunity to express my gratitude to friends all over the country, who have received me so kindly and treated me so hospitably. God bless them, is my prayer.

I am now with the scattered ones among the mountains of Vermont, and I find them in quite as good state of mind as those who are in places where churches are established. They are not troubled with the divisions and strife which rend our churches and bring reproach upon the cause. I have been exceedingly tried with the divisions and jargon which prevail among us in many places where I have been. There is a want of the good spirit which "suffers long and is kind," which "thinketh no evil," but esteemeth others better than themselves. O for more of this loving, heavenly spirit, which will overlook others' imperfections.

I feel sad to see this dividing spirit. What are we coming to? The answer comes—Why, we are coming to the advent of our blessed Master, Jesus, when each one must stand or fall for himself. We cannot lean upon the church, nor upon one another. It will not be asked in that great day whether we belonged to a church, or whether we believed in the thousand-year age, or the thousand years gone by, or the seventh-day Sabbath, or the non-resurrection of the wicked. No, these are matters of minor importance. They do not affect our salvation. We may all have our peculiar belief in relation to these things, but we must have the spirit of Jesus, and a disposition to love each other. Love to God and love to man is the essential thing.

I have been looking over the Crisis, and I see many names with which I am acquainted; it gives me joy to see them. I cannot read much, because of weak eyes, but their names do me good. Though I cannot read, yet I can write, and do write a great deal; and will correspond with any who will write me, and do it with pleasure. Keep your hearts in order, your lamps burning; "signs there is no mistaking, proclaim Messiah near." Chelmsford, Mass., is my post-office address.

From Sr. F. D. Lapham.

Dear Brn. and Srs. scattered abroad:—Thinking that perhaps you would like to hear from this part of the Lord's vineyard, I thought I would write a few lines for the Crisis. We are now living in Southern Kansas. We were formerly from Gilman's Corner, Sangerville, Maine, where for the first time we listened to Advent preaching by Brn. Hemenway and Birch. Afterward Bro. Israel Damon, and others of like precious faith. Those were days never to be forgotten while time lasts. We shared in the blessed hope, the glorious anticipation of our Lord's coming in '54; and the same wave of crushing sorrow swept over us that brought God's people into the tarrying time.

After our disappointment we came West; and for years we never heard the voice of any one preaching the glorious message. But the great truths of the Bible were too deeply engraven on our hearts to be obliterated; and we could still pray "Thy kingdom come, thy will be done on earth as it is in heaven."

The Crisis was our only preacher, and its contents were read with eagerness. But the pieces about tobacco worried my husband, for he had used it for years, and rolled it in his mouth as a sweet morsel. But he often went to the water pail to rinse his mouth before he could bow in prayer, and often resolved to quit its use. Still the old enemy conquored.

Two years ago last New Year's day he read Bro. Hemenway's pledge,—Never again to taste tobacco. He started up saying, "If Bro. Hemenway can leave off, I can. Lord, remove this longing, and I'll endure the pain." Since then he has been like another man. His health is much improved, and he weighs more than he ever did. He used tobacco twenty-seven years, and his leaving off has proved a blessing to him. He often says that if he was ever called to preach it is against tobacco using. Several by his persuasion (for he never leaves them a hair line to stand on) have renounced the filthy weed, knowing that they must cleanse themselves from all things that offend if they would stand acquitted before the Judge of all the earth.

Last spring we attended the State Conference, and for the first time for nineteen years found ourselves among those that we could truly call brethren. Although we were among strangers, yet we felt at once that we were at home among Father's family. Thank God for that tie which binds God's children together. There are no jarring notes of discord, but that love that casteth out all fear. We returned home feeling that we had indeed feasted from God's word. This winter Bro. Preston, of Burlington, has come to see us, and been preaching of the soon coming King. There seems to be a great interest to hear, and we think that some will come out on the Lord's side, and that much good will be done. Pray for us, in Southern Kansas, that the Lord will raise up a little band here, that shall be saved in the day of his coming. Amen.

Longton, Elk Co., Kansas.

From Bro. D. D. Lathrop.

Editors of the World's Crisis:—Dear Brn.: I used to be a subscriber to your paper, have been a number of years; but of late years have not been. About a year and a half ago my wife died, and my family somewhat scattered. My address used to be New Milford, this Co. I got so hungry for present truth that I sent to you a few days ago for specimen copies of the Crisis. They came, and I have had a good feast that does my soul good. For the many years that I have held the Advent or Christian faith, it has pleased the Lord to place me among people who opposed it. For what reason it is best known to himself; perhaps he knows there is no danger of my being overcome by the Spiritualisms of the present day, and I can do a little towards suggesting the truth to those who may be benefited thereby. I know I have tried to do so in the love of Jesus. In my earliest work of that kind I was met with all the opposition that the Baptist church, to which I belonged, could bring to bear; but finding themselves so weak before the sword of the Spirit, and fearing the church would soon be on my side, a few of the leaders procured my exclusion by voting me a letter, recommending me as a Christian, but not of their faith. They never gave me the letter, however. I suppose they thought it would have rather a bad influence against them.

Some nineteen or twenty years have elapsed since then, and thank the Lord, he has ever been with me and kept me; but I am sorry to say that that church has been declining ever since, and is about ready to die, unless God has quite recently revived them. I have not lived among them since my expulsion. The doctrine of "the immortality of the soul" is the tenderest sore spot in the faith of most people here that I have ever found; and no wonder; for it is not so much as named in the Bible. It is not the ne plus ultra—"much in little"—with them, but it is the "much in nothing."

There has been a great revival here among the different churches up to the first of this week; now it is being weakened for want of the more solid food, such as Advent christians usually enjoy at the gospel feast. They cannot leave "the first principles of . . . repentance from dead works," for want of the strengthening food, and need to be perpetually fanned to keep the breath of life in them.

Montrose, Pa.

From Bro. J. A. Packard.

Dear Brn. and Srs.:—I have felt for some time that I would like to say a few words through the Crisis, and the time has come when it seems to be in order to speak of the dealings of the good Lord with us in New Boston, N. H. For the last year and a half, or more, for causes to be much regretted, this church has been very low in spiritual things, and divisions have crept in among us, until it seemed as though our little church must go down. Our prayer meetings were poorly attended, but, thank the Lord, there were a few who offered their petitions to Daniel's God continually, and in time there came a change. Bro. T. L. Hall came among us just in time to render efficient aid, under God, in righting the ship. He has been with us ten Sabbaths, also holding meetings three weeks, preaching every evening but one. Would to God there were many that would preach for the good of souls instead of the dollars, and more that felt the worth of such preaching deep enough to stay the hands of the faithful servants of the Lord.

The church has been greatly blest, and some we trust have given themselves anew to God. We humbly hope lasting good will be the result of these meetings. We feel that we have but little time to war against sin, but we expect the conflict will grow more severe as we near home, and the enemy will bring his forces nearer, if possible, in order to throw more effectual shot within our ranks. But thank God we have a place of retreat from the enemy. We can hide in Jesus, run into his name and be safe. O, what a blessed hiding place is this! Then let us be good children, and do God's bidding, and all will be well with us when he comes.

From Bro. L. Boutell.

Dear Brn.:—I have just returned from New Bedford, where I have spent two Sundays with the Advent church in the old Kempton St. Chapel. I find they have made some progression since my last visit with them. Their prayer and conference meetings were spirited, and with zeal did they give a reason of their hope "that maketh not ashamed." Some precious ones have fallen sweetly asleep in Jesus; others are sick, but by the goodness of the Lord Bro. H. V. Davis is at his place in meeting, giving glory to God.

Saturday I visited our dear Bro. M. Batchelor, who has been very sick and under the doctor's care; but his symptoms were better, and he was hopeful (the weather becoming warmer) of soon being out among his friends again, confessing Christ and his love for his appearing, for which he has battled so manfully for the last thirty years and more. I also visited dear Bro. S. S. Brewer; found him and wife pretty well, and pleasantly housed away from the cold north winds of winter at their daughter's, where they have been for some months. He is now desirous of getting out into the field to proclaim the sacred message that relates to the soon coming of our Lord. And I do hope they, with the blue-bird, may come out with thrilling notes of prayer and praise, highly seasoned with the song of redemption. Remember him, and pray for these dear sainted pilgrims. In Jesus' love.

Chelsea, Mass., March 20th.

From Sr. O. N. Morse.

Dear Brn.:—I have been reading the many letters from the dear pilgrims scattered over the earth, and with one united voice they cry, "How long will his chariot wheels delay? When will this night of sadness end and bring in everlasting day?" Surely all things proclaim Christ's coming at hand.

My mind goes back to '43 and '44, when my dear companion, who is now sleeping in Jesus, and myself were living in Lockport, N. Y., and Bro. Miller came there and proclaimed the coming of the Lord. We gave heed to the words we heard, and to-day the coming of the Savior sounds pleasant to my ear. Although alone in this world of sorrow and death, I have the blessed promise in God's Word that he will never leave nor forsake those who put their trust in him. The signs thicken, and men's hearts are failing them for fear of what is coming on the earth, and I long for the time to come when my loved companion, who walked with me in life's journey, will come from the enemy's land. I know he will awake in his Redeemer's likeness. O the blessed hope of the glorious appearing of our Savior Jesus Christ, who has abolished death and brought life and immortality to light.

We are admonished not to be "ignorant concerning them which are asleep, that we sorrow not as those which have no hope; for if we believe that Jesus died and rose again, even so them also which sleep in Jesus will God bring with him. . . . We which are alive and remain unto the coming of the Lord shall not prevent them which are asleep. For the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, . . . and the dead in Christ shall rise first; then we which are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them in the clouds, to meet the Lord in the air; and so shall we ever be with the Lord. Wherefore comfort one another with these words."

Springville, Wis.

From Bro. T. L. Waugh.

Dear Brn.:—As a report of the condition of the church and of religious matters here may be interesting to many who read the Crisis, I will relate what God by his Spirit has been doing for us. A series of meetings was commenced Feb. 23d, continuing every evening but one up to March 9th. Bro. and Sr. G. L. White have been laboring with us in these meetings, which have been increasing in interest and a number among the children and youth, and several heads of families have become hopefully converted and are on their way rejoicing. The church has been strengthened and encouraged to renewed effort in trying to rescue the perishing. We have labored together in love and harmony since the meetings commenced, and our hearts have overflowed with gratitude and praise to God for the work he has wrought among us as a church and community. Truly it is marvelous in our eyes. Our last was a praise meeting in which many participated. It was a precious season to those present and will not be forgotten. We expect this good work, so auspiciously begun, will continue until others who are unsaved will be brought into the fold of Christ, the ark of safety, the city of refuge, that when the storms of God's wrath are poured out, they may escape the sinner's doom and be saved with the ransomed host. I would say with the Psalmist, "Let everything that hath breath praise the Lord." We have class meetings Tuesday evenings besides our usual social meeting on Thursday evening. Divine service on the Sabbath as usual.

West Morris, Ct., Mar. 10th.

From Bro. G. D. Danks.

Dear Bro. Burr:—By request of the church, I will write and let you know how we are prospering here in this place. We have had regular meetings for about one year at our house, under the leadership of my father, H. D. Danks, who has preached to us every Lord's day at 10.30 A. M. We also have prayer meetings Sunday and Wednesday evenings. But we have had no organization until last Sunday, Feb. 20th, when we met and organized a church of thirteen members, of whom we elected Bro. Charles Dewrose as elder.

Although we are few in number, we feel strong in the Lord, and willing to hold up the "banner." We are looking for the soon coming of our heavenly Master, and there is a deep and increasing interest manifested in the cause of Christ. O let us be faithful, and strive on a little longer until Jesus comes, and we shall have done with this cold, wicked world. Brethren and sisters, pray for us that we may prove faithful, and with you gain a home in the everlasting kingdom. Yours, in the hope of eternal life when Jesus comes.

Fon Du Lac, Wis.

From Bro. M. Batchelor.

To the Church scattered abroad, Greeting: I am at home, sick with chills and fever. Have been confined to the house for four weeks. I am now improving, and hope, when warm weather comes, to be again in the field, where there is now so much to be done. I have not been able to answer letters from my dear brethren, and they will hereby know the reason why their letters are not replied to. I ask the prayers of the church that I may be speedily restored to health, and my brethren abroad.

New Bedford, Mass., March 16th.

From Bro. E. Morrill.

Dear Editors:—The Lord is blessing the people of Hampton with a shower of salvation. We have been laboring in this hard old town for the past three weeks. Have had great prejudice to overcome, and the enemy has been very busy trying to neutralize the effect of our labors; but God's power is above the power of the enemy, and a good number of stout-hearted and some of the hardest cases in Hampton have found Jesus and are happy in his love. Praise the Lord, it still goes on.

Obituaries.

QUIMBY. In Carlinville, Ill., March 1st, '76, of an ovarian tumor, Mary Jane Quimby, daughter of Elliot and Lucretia Braley, and wife of Jesse S. Quimby, aged thirty-nine years and ten days.

Sister Quimby was born in Holliston, Mass., gave her heart to the Lord at the age of ten years, and was baptized when fourteen. She was married in Carlinville, Ill., Feb. 27th, 1859, and in the same house and room where she was joined to her husband, the hand of death parted them. During her residence in Carlinville her conversation and influence was more and more for Jesus, until in the last year or two of her life, the whole city, in its religious recognitions, regarded her testimony and life as a power for good among them, unsurpassed by any in her sphere. Often have congregations melted to tears under her spiritual testimony, and during her sickness the sympathy of the church-going community was greatly enlisted in her behalf, as were also many who cared but little for the modern type of christian profession. Sister Quimby's modest, unpretending ways, and her truthful, searching words, bore a weight of testimony among the ungodly seldom equalled. With christian resignation she bore her sufferings, which were intense, while her heart and lips were filled with God's praises. A large circle of relatives, as well as the church of Christ, mourn her loss. Her faith was that Jesus would soon awake her again. The motto of Scripture hanging on the wall of her room for the day of her death, was, "I am the resurrection and the life." (John 11: 25). This was the last word she read, and was the text for the service, from which we preached to a very large audience in the M. E. Church. The Methodist and Presbyterian ministers joined us in the service. The local paper gave a just tribute to her memory.

FRANK BURR.

Bro. and Sr. Quimby were personal friends of ours when we lived and worshiped together in the old Granite State. Sister Q. was for a time a member of our family, much respected and loved for her fidelity to Christ and sweet christian spirit in social life. May angels watch the place of her silent slumbers, and Jesus call her to blissful life at his appearing. J. C.

HARWOOD. In Providence, Feb. 3d, 1876, Mary S., wife of George S. Harwood, aged sixty-nine years.

Mother is gone, and husband and children are left to mourn. That voice which we so much loved to hear is still in death, but we sorrow not as those which have no hope; for we believe she will come again from the land of the enemy. She was converted while in her youth, and maintained a christian walk until her death. She had been a great sufferer for most thirty years, but bore it with christian patience. She was perfectly resigned to Him who ruleth all things. Near the close of life she looked up, while her countenance seemed almost angelic, and bade each good bye separately. I have no doubt many of the readers of the Crisis will remember her. She has attended the campmeetings at Wilbraham and Springfield for a number of years. We are looking forward to a glorious reunion in the kingdom of God, when all the loved ones who sleep in Jesus will be clothed in immortality, never more to die. Words of comfort were spoken by Bro. J. W. Thomas. E. M. LAKE.

BURRELL. In Rockland, Mass., Feb. 23d, '76, of typhoid pneumonia, Reuben Burrell, aged seventy-two years.

For forty-four years he had been a follower of Christ, and since 1842 a believer in the Second Advent doctrine. He died as he had lived, firm in the faith that he would meet Christ at his coming, and receive the welcome, "Come, ye blessed of my Father." His last words to his wife, who was very ill at the time, were—"Good night, mother; meet me in the morning of the resurrection." Although a great sufferer, he said he never enjoyed a day more than the Sabbath before he died. He has been for the past three years an active worker in the cause of Christ in the Baptist church, there being no Advent society near. He felt there was work to do, and souls to save, and we felt assured his earnest appeals to both the church and the unconverted, have been, and will be blessed still more. Bro. White conducted the funeral services, assisted by L. L. Fitz, pastor of the Baptist church. A large circle of friends mourn their loss, and feel that he was gathered "like a shock of corn fully ripe."

DANFORTH. In Woodbury, Vt., Jan. 6th, 1876, of dropsy, Elmina Danforth, wife of Bro. Charles W. Danforth, aged fifty-two years.

A faithful wife, a loving mother, and a devoted disciple of Jesus has fallen asleep to await the trump of God to awaken her from her brief slumbers to stand upon the earth renewed. This hope was an anchor to her soul as she drew near the hour of death, and helped her to bear her great sufferings with patience and christian fortitude. She leaves a husband, five children, and an aged mother to mourn her loss, but they sorrow not as those who have no hope. Words of comfort were spoken by the writer from 1 Thess. 4: 13–14.

A. GORDON.

KILBURY. In Fremont, N. Y., Feb. 26th, '76, Sr. Camilia Kilbury, aged thirty-one years.

Sr. Kilbury gave her heart to God a few years ago, and has lived a meek and humble christian life. She has left a husband, sister, and other relatives to mourn her early death. The writer attended her funeral at the A. C. Chapel, Fremont, and spoke words of comfort from Rev. 14: 13. May the Lord help husband and relatives that mourn to so live that they may have a reunion in the world to come. W. J. HOBBS.

MOSES. In Brentwood, N. H., Jan. 17th, '76, Mrs. Paulina Moses, aged seventy-three.

Suddenly, and remote from friends, "Aunt Paulina," as she was familiarly known, passed away. As to her last days' experience we know but little, but have no question that the adage, "People die as they live," was verified in her case. She had lived for Christ, and loved his appearing. "She sleeps, but not forever." E. OWEN.

BALZAR. In Milldale, Southington, Ct., Jan. 1st, 1876, of consumption, George Balzar, aged fifty-nine years.

The subject of this notice had been a Roman Catholic, but during his sickness, when nigh to death, refused to send for the priest for comfort, choosing rather to put his case in the hands of God, trusting for pardon in the blood of Jesus. We used at the funeral service his large Catholic family Bible, from which we brought forth to the large circle of mourners (mostly Catholics) the Gospel hope. He was highly esteemed.

ENOCH MORRILL.

BERRY. In Portsmouth, N. H., Jan. 26th, 1876, George W., child of Edwin W. and Annie M. Berry, aged eleven months, sixteen days.

Little George was a beautiful child, but was nipped by death's untimely frost, and withered like the morning flower. Bro. and Sr. Berry mourn, but not without hope. Funeral service by the writer, assisted by Brn. Emery and Wells.

"There my little ones I know
Round me shall be clinging;
There the loved of long ago
With me shall be singing.

Oh that land I long to see,
Where the weary hearted
Shall with Christ in glory be,
Never to be parted."

J. W. WHITE.

GROVER. In Portsmouth, N. H., Feb. 15th, 1876, Mrs. Adeline S. Grover, formerly from Elliott, Me., aged sixty-eight years.

For nearly fifty long years the subject of this notice had been an open professor of faith in Christ, being actively connected with the M. E. Church, but during the last few years of her life, and especially the last one, she became much interested in the faith we hold. She died suddenly of consumption, but was ready. Four children survive her to mourn. "How long shall death the tyrant reign?" E. OWEN.

NICHOLS. In Hereford, P. Q., Feb. 24th, 1876, Bro. Nathaniel B. Nichols, aged seventy-six years.

He leaves a companion, three sons and two daughters, and other relatives, to mourn their loss. We trust our brother died in hope of eternal life. He was a great sufferer, and bore it patiently till the last. We hope to meet him where the inhabitants will never say, "I am sick." May the blessing of God sustain his dear companion and all the friends in this bitter trial.

JOHN H. EVANS.

CROUSE. In East Washburn, Me., March 2d, 1876, Leroy Crouse, infant son of Abraham and Bethiah Crouse, aged fifteen months and seventeen days.

This babe was sick for about a month, but death came at last and released the innocent one from all its sufferings. May the Lord sanctify this affliction to the good of the parents and children, who deeply mourn their loss. Funeral services by Eld. R. A. Patten, Baptist.

G. CROUSE, JR.

WELLS. In Hereford, P. Q., Feb. 22d, 1876, Deborah A., wife of Hiram Wells, aged eighty-three years.

She leaves one brother and five sisters, also Bro. and Sr. M. B. Wells, who had the care of their step-mother for nineteen years. They feel their loss. They miss her around their fireside, but she died in faith, in hope of eternal life when Jesus comes. Funeral services by the writer, from Ps. 23: 4. JOHN H. EVANS.

FOREIGN NEWS.

LONDON, March 11. A land slip occurred last night at Caub, a small town on the Rhine in Northern Germany, caused by rains. Eight houses were buried and twenty-six persons killed.

March 15. The Times has a special from Berlin containing the following:

A letter from Peko Paulovich, who commanded the insurgents at the battle of Muratovizza, asserts that 1550 insurgents attacked 3200 Turks. Only 700 of the latter returned to Gatschko. About 800 were killed and others drowned or dispersed. The insurgents captured 675 rifles and four rifled cannon.

March 16. The Paris dispatch to the Times reports that the inundations have stopped work on the Government tobacco factory, and in the founderies of Alfortville. Two hundred houses are flooded at St. Maur.

The gale of Sunday caused a fearful destruction of life and property. Eleven persons were killed in Cambria. At Selgers the river Roer rose 20 or 30 feet, inundating the country. At Coblentz the Rhine rose behind the railway bridge like a waterspout to the height of the houses. Hamburg and Frankfort have also suffered.

DOMESTIC NEWS.

Louisville, Ky., March 10. Capt. J. M. Burt of Mt. Sterling, Ky., a gentleman well known for reliability, arrived in Louisville to-night with specimens of the flesh which fell last Friday in Bath county. The flesh covered two acres of ground, resembled mutton, and left traces of blood on trees and fences which were touched by the falling flakes. Chickens and hogs devoured it with evident relish. The heavens were clear, the sun shone and only floating clouds were visible at the time—2 P. M., March 3. Quantities of the flesh have been preserved. That brought to Louisville was given to Prof. Lawrence, a well known scientist, who says without doubt it is animal flesh. He proposes making an examination to-morrow. Hundreds of persons are willing to attest with affidavits the truthfulness of the entire matter.

Chicago, March 11. Specials report that a most terrific wind, rain and thunder storm visited the Northwest late yesterday afternoon and evening. It appears to have extended from Quincy, Ill., to the northern portion of Iowa, and to have been specially severe near the Mississippi river. At some places it amounted to a tornado, and considerable damage was inflicted. The town of Hazlegreen, in the southeast corner of Grant county, Wis., near the Illinois line, which has about a thousand inhabitants, mostly lead miners, was struck by the tornado about four o'clock. Messengers were dispatched to Galena and Dubuque for doctors to care for the injured. These messengers told a story of a most extraordinary destruction of property and life. One of them affirmed that forty-one people had been killed outright or injured, and that the town was almost totally destroyed. There is no telegraphic communication with the region.

The latest accounts give the list of killed and wounded as follows: Joshua Richards, Mrs. John Lowey, Mrs. Thomas Richards, the wife, mother and daughter of Thomas Edwards, a son of Joseph Jackson, Edward Thompson and his father, nine persons in all. There was a rumor that eighteen were killed, but it cannot be authenticated. A great many are badly injured, some probably fatally. Broken legs, arms and other casualties are reported in numberless cases. The village was built of wood and the tornado swept a clear track from the southeast to the northeast through the town, destroying twenty-six buildings in all.

THE loss by the fire in the California State Prison is estimated at about $300,000.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

As the Mass. Annual Advent Christian Conference is soon to convene, and as at its coming session there are Delegates to be chosen to attend the National Meeting of the Second Advent Christian Association, it is necessary, in order to determine the number of Delegates to which the Conference is entitled, that there be sent to the Secretary by each church the number of members therein. It is therefore earnestly requested and hoped that each church within the bounds of this Conference will without delay send to the Secretary its present membership, so that at the Conference it may be certainly known how many Delegates are to be sent by this Conference to the meeting of the Association. Let every church do this at once, and so be represented in the Conference. Direct—Boston, Mass., Drawer 5140.

S. G. MATHEWSON, President.
I. I. LESLIE, Secretary.

A Meeting of the Board of Managers of the S. A. C. Association will be held in Boston, at the Crisis Office, on Tuesday, April 11th, at eleven o'clock A. M.

S. G. MATHEWSON, President.
C. E. BARNES, Secretary.

Notice.

The next Annual Meeting of the Mass. Advent Christian Conference will be held with the church in Lynn, commencing Tuesday, April 11th. The Conference will continue over the following Sunday. Important business is to come before this meeting of our Conference, and it is hoped that every church in the State will be represented by one or more delegates to which it may be entitled by the Constitution of the Conference.

I. I. LESLIE, Secretary.

NOTICE.—By divine leave, Eld. Edwin Burnham will commence meetings at Farmington, N. H., in the Advent Chapel, March 26th, and hold as long as it seems duty. All christians are cordially invited to come, and unite to labor in these meetings for the salvation of dying men. As this may be our last opportunity before Jesus comes to hear our Bro., we hope our brethren and friends in this region will avail themselves of this privilege.

A. BEARD,

Conference.

The Delaware Dist. A. C. Conference is hereby called to meet and hold its fourth annual session at the Advent Christian Church, Eighth Street, above Noble, Philadelphia, Pa., commencing on Thursday evening, April 20th, and continue over the following Sabbath. All the officers for the year ensuing will be chosen at this session. It is earnestly hoped that every church sympathising with us will be represented, either by letter or delegates. All letters of correspondence for the Conference can be addressed to Edwin King, 1716 Francis St., Philadelphia, Pa.

WM. ASHMAN, President.
E. KING, Secretary.

Hoosick Valley Conference.

The next Quarterly Session of the Hoosick Valley Conference will be held with the church at North Adams, Mass., commencing Wednesday evening, April 12th, and continue with three meetings each day over the following Sabbath. It will soon be said "It is done." We are having our last meetings; we are doing our last work. The Father by his Spirit is bringing to light and to our remembrance numerous evidences of the approaching end.

Brethren in the ministry, do come to this meeting with the light you have, that we may feed and be fed with the pure Word of God. We do earnestly hope that the churches will be represented by delegates, and as many others as can come. Do not wait to be blest at the meetings, but come filled with the Holy Spirit, to work for the salvation of others. The meetings will be held in Millard's large Hall, a short walk only from either of the depots. Those who are dwelling in God and God in them, will you pray for this meeting?

PROTRACTED MEETING.—The Lord willing, there will be a protracted meeting in the Town Hall at Rochester Village, N. H., commencing Wednesday evening, March 22d, and hold over Sunday, March 26th. We hope the friends of Jesus will come and labor in the meeting for the salvation of sinners and upbuilding of the church.

ENOCH MORRILL.

NOTICE.—There will be a protracted meeting, beginning at the Vitum school-house in Sandwich, April 7th, as Bro. Isaac Hodgdon may arrange. Brn. D. W. Davis and C. R. Parsons are expected to preach the Word for the brethren.

C. R. PARSONS.

NOTICE.—There will be a Woman's National Union Campmeeting holden at Seabrook, N. H., commencing June 28th, and continuing till July 10th. Any wishing to build tents can correspond with C. A. Barton, Seabrook, N. H. Particulars hereafter. A. E. SMITH.

NOTICE.—The Mass. A. C. Conference will hold its next annual session at Lynn, on Fast day week, April next. Regular notice hereafter.

THE Pittsfield, Me., Campmeeting will commence Sunday, Aug. 27th. O. S. FRENCH, Sec.

THE Mechanic Falls Campmeeting will commence Saturday, Sept. 2d.

R. R. YORK, for the Committee.

NOTICE.—There will be a Conference in Milltown, Me., to commence March 22d, at 7 o'clock P. M., to continue over the Sabbath. Bro. A. Ross is expected to attend. Other preaching brethren are cordially invited to come and assist in the good work. Come one, come all; and may the blessing of God rest upon this meeting for the salvation of sinners. M. W. CORLISS.

THE LAKE VIEW CAMPMEETING, Magog, P. Q., Canada, will be held, as per vote of Conference, immediately after the Alton Bay meeting. Time hereafter definitely given. Let those who have promised to build cottages be in time with their preparations. Lots free, and all welcome.

C. P. DOW, for the Committee.

NOTICE.—The Lord willing, there will be an Advent Christian Conference holden at E. Washburn, Maine, Crouse school-house, commencing Thursday, March 30th, at 2 o'clock in the afternoon, and continue over the Sabbath. Preaching brethren, M. W. Corliss, R. Snow, and H. Raymond, are expected to preach the Word of life. We cordially invite other preaching brethren and sisters, who would like to come to this meeting, to come filled with the Spirit, and take hold with the church here, and labor for the salvation of souls. For the brethren, GOULD CROUSE, JR.

NOTICE.—Any of our Connecticut churches desiring the Conn. A. C. Conference to meet with them about the last week in April next, please correspond at once with O. D. WOODRUFF, Sec.

NOTICE.—I expect to be at liberty after the middle of April to go and labor most of the time, as the way opens, with those who may desire to investigate facts of prophecy fulfilled and fulfilling touching the immediate coming and kingdom of Jesus Christ. Address me at Rutland, Vt., immediately. H. K. FLAGG.

THE church in Concord, N. H., have chosen Uri Baker, E. Gordon, and Wm. H. Hurd, for their ministerial committee.

E. D. CLOUGH, Church Clerk.

ALL brethren wishing to preach to the A. C. Church in Keene, N. H., will please correspond with A. A. Stiles or Geo. W. Elliott. In behalf fo the church, A. A. Stiles, G. W. Elliott, G. W. Spalding, H. H. Darling.

IMMERSION AND SPRINKLING: "The water and the blood, the ordinance and the atonement," is the meaning of the proposed title of our forthcoming work—"Baptism and Rantism," which we hope to issue soon, showing what "Baptism" is, and that "Rantism," or sprinkling, is not baptism, but relates to the atonement and the "blood of sprinkling," and therefore has a place in the teachings of the New Testament. Please continue to send in orders. Price of the book not over 50 cts. Let all who want it send in at once, to L. C. MCKINSTRY, Richmond, P. Q.

THE ministerial committee of the Advent Church of Hoosick, N. Y., are C. M. Lawton, Potter Hill, N. Y.; C. Brawnell, West Hoosick, N. Y.; L. Gardner, Hoosick, N. Y.

THOSE wishing to preach at Melvin Village, N. H., will please correspond with C. H. Shepherd, or M. W. Piper, before sending their appointments. T. W. PIPER.

Those wishing to preach in Lawrence, Mass., please correspond with J. Churchill, J. T. Merrill, or F. Flanders.

Appointments.

APPOINTMENTS MUST BE RECEIVED AS EARLY AS TUESDAY MORNING (as our paper goes to press about noon) to insure insertion for the coming week.

The following RESOLUTION was passed at the late meeting of the A. C. P. Society:—

"RESOLVED, That no appointments be published in the CRISIS henceforth for persons unknown to the Editorial Board (by which is understood the Editors, Editorial Committee, and Business Agent), unless satisfactory reference shall be given."

The Committee appointed by the Adv. Chris. Association, at its last Annual Meeting, to advise with the Editorial Board "in relation to the publication in the World's Crisis of the appointments of men unworthy of recognition as preachers," having attended to the duty assigned them, recommended, and the Editorial Board have adopted, and ordered to be published, the following resolution:—

"RESOLVED, That when the Editorial Board is properly notified by any of our Churches, or Ministers, or responsible persons, by a written allegation that a certain minister, or ministers, lack moral character, that they be instructed to notify such minister, or ministers, of the information received, as a reason for withholding their appointments till after a proper trial and acquittal."

All communications in relation to this matter should be addressed to the Secretary of the Board—GEO. T. ADAMS, Boston, Mass.

A NEW BOOK.

"LIFE IN CHRIST:

A STUDY
OF THE SCRIPTURE DOCTRINE
ON THE NATURE OF MAN; THE OBJECT OF THE DIVINE INCARNATION,
AND THE
CONDITIONS OF HUMAN IMMORTALITY.

BY EDWARD WHITE,
Author of the "Mystery of Growth," etc.
LONDON:
ELLIOT STOCK, 62 PATERNOSTER ROW.
1875."

The above is the title of a book of 590 pages octavo—perhaps the most comprehensive and exhaustive statement of the arguments in favor of the non-eternity of future suffering yet published.

As many as can, should possess themselves of this work. Just received from the London publisher, and for sale at this Office. Price $4.00. Sent by mail on reception of the same. AG'T.

VALUABLE ENGLISH WORKS

JUST RECEIVED.

HADES, OR THE INTERMEDIATE STATE OF MAN. By Henry Constable, A. M. This is an able work of 367 pages. Second edition. Price $1.37. Postage 13 cts.

THE STRUGGLE FOR ETERNAL LIFE. By E. Petavel, D. D. The design of this work is to show that "Eternal life, instead of being the natural inheritance of man, is to be striven for and sought by faith in Christ, and patient continuance in well doing, and that at last there is a choice of the fittest for eternal existence, while confirmed sinners are doomed to extinction."

Price: Cloth, by mail, 85 cts.; paper, by mail, 55 cts. AG'T.

"GOSPEL SONGS."

"A choice collection of Hymns and Tunes, New and Old, for Prayer Meetings, Sunday Schools, etc."

This is a new book that has had a large sale at our campmeetings this season, and contains some very choice pieces:—"When Jesus Comes," "More to Follow," etc., etc. For sale at this Office. Price, 35 cts. per copy; $3.60 per dozen by express; by mail, 40 cts. per copy. AGENT.

PRICE REDUCED.

A NEW EDITION JUST PUBLISHED.

THE DURATION AND NATURE OF FUTURE PUNISHMENT.

By Henry Constable, A. M., Prebendary of Cork.

Reprinted from the second London edition, with an Introduction by Prof. C. L. Ives, of Yale College. 8vo., 68 pp.

All things considered, we regard this the best work on the subject treated of now before the public, and the one to distribute, especially among our friends and neighbors who do not hold with us on the subject.

We have procured a large lot of the publisher, and put them at the following low prices:—One copy, 25 cts.; one dozen for $2.50; sent by mail, postpaid. $17 per hundred, by express. Please order freely. A'GT.

THE BIBLE DOCTRINE OF THE SOUL.

An answer to the Question: "Is the Popular Conception of the Soul that of Holy Scripture?"

BY CHAS. L. IVES, M. D.

Professor of the Theory and Practice of Medicine in Yale College.

This is a book of 119 pages, in which the Author discusses the above question in an interesting and able manner,—showing the material nature of, the mortality and destiny of the Soul,—A future immortality to be the special portion of the Righteous,—What the Bible teaches as to the future of the Wicked,—The intermediate state,—The Resurrection,—That of the Righteous and of the Wicked, etc.

The Author claims that the doctrine set forth,—"Honors God, exalts the Bible, insures preaching of future punishment, subverts Universalism and Infidelity, errors of Romanism, of Spiritualism and Swedenborgianism, helps in work of Missions, rightly values the body, brings Christian unity, and promotes personal holiness."

We are much pleased with this work. It is having a wide circulation. We have just received a quantity of the pamphlet edition, and can now fill orders at the following prices: Pamphlet, 25 cts. per copy; $2.25 per dozen by mail; $15.00 per hundred by express. Bound in cloth, 30 cts. per copy by mail; $3.00 per dozen by express.

THE TRUE SABBATH.

WHICH DAY SHALL WE KEEP?

AN EXAMINATION OF

MRS. ELLEN G. WHITE'S VISIONS.

BY MILES GRANT.

ISSUED

BY THE ADV. CHRIS. PUB. SOCIETY,

A NEW WORK

On the Sabbath of the Old Covenant. An investigation of Mrs. E. G. White's Visions, showing that they are not from God.

All who have accepted Mrs. White's visions as coming from heaven, or who have been led to rest on Saturday instead of the Lord's day, should read this work. Let those who live among our Seventh-day brethren send and get a number of the books to give away. If the reader has friends at a distance who have received Mrs. W.'s Visions as true, have a copy of this work sent to them.

It contains 106 pages, and we will send it at the following prices: Single copy, 20 cts.; per doz., $1.75 by mail; per hundred, $10.00 by express. AGENT.

PRICE REDUCED.

The great Map of History, twenty-two feet long, and about thirty inches wide. This valuable work, of which mention has been made in the Crisis, we now have a supply of, and will send to those who may order at the publisher's reduced price of $12.00 per copy, by express. We have them on rollers, and in book form, and can supply either way.

The best method of using the chart or map of history is to hang the frame on the wall of the room (the map being in the frame, of course), by the two hooks in the upper bar of the frame, high enough to stand, or sit, in front of it, and there examine or study it.

Students and beginners in history should occasionally look over the map in its entire length—drawn out on the wall, or tables, or on the carpet—until they are well acquainted with the entire outlines, plan and compass of the map, which embraces all history.

CHARITY.

In the hour of keenest sorrow,
In the hour of deepest woe,
Wait not for the coming morrow,
To the sad and sorrowing go;
Make it thy sincerest pleasure
To administer relief,
Freely opening thy treasure
To assuage a brother's grief.

Go and seek the orphan sighing,
Seek the widow in her tears;
As on mercy's pinions flying,
Go dispel the darkest fears;
Seek the stranger sad and weary,
Pass not on the other side,
Though the task be sad and dreary,
Heeding not the scorn of pride.

Go with manners unassuming,
In a meek and quiet way,
O'er the fallen ne'er presuming,
Though thy brother sadly stray;
'Tis a Savior's kind compassion,
'Tis his righteousness alone,
All unmerited salvation
That around thy path has shone.

When thy heart is warmly glowing
With the sacred love of prayer,
Be thy works of kindness flowing
Not as with a miser's care;
Duty e'er shall be thy watchword,
Pity drop the balmy tear,
Always toward the fallen cherish
Sympathy and love sincere.

NORTH CAROLINA AGAIN.

To the A. A. M. Society.

Dear Brethren:—The blessed truths we as a people love so well are spreading rapidly in this beautiful, healthy country. To show how God is at work, I copy a letter received from this country before I left home. It is from a very able and prominent Baptist minister, who refused to publish my appointments last September when I came to this country; but he has been reading since then, and now writes as follows:

"Jan. 12th, 1876.

Dear Bro. Cargile:—To-night finds me doing what I would not have done twelve months ago without feeling that I had almost committed a crime; but now rest assured, I do it with pleasure; that is addressing you as a fellow-laborer in the gospel. I begin to see what it is to be persecuted for righteousness' sake. I have been trying to preach the Bible as God gave it, which is an unwelcome message to the majority of my people. I have been thinking of writing to you for sometime, but have delayed till after our regular church meeting, which was last Saturday, as that was the time old Bro.——— said he was going to have a general cleaning out of Flat Top church. We were all there ready, but behold the old man did not appear; consequently not a thing was said about the Advent doctrine, notwithstanding I preached a straight out Advent sermon, as far as I was able, from 1 Pet. 1: 3–5, and, as I told them that day, I never have felt more at liberty in my life than while preaching from this and kindred texts. I said I felt that God's hosts were with, or around me. I can't tell what will be the termination of the matter at our church, but God being my helper, I intend to stand for what I see the Word teaches, leaving the consequences with Him who doeth all things well.

My time as Pastor will terminate next meeting; then there will be a change in matters, and I pray God for the better. I long to see you return to N. C. again. Come without limiting yourself as to time, if you can. I did not try to preach on last Sunday, as Bro. D. C. Harmon was present with his gun heavily charged with immortality. Text—What is man? His first position was that man was made of two parts—one mortal, the other immortal. I could but think, when he made this statement, how different from the statement made in Gen. 2: 7. The other statements were pretty much in harmony with this. When will the time come when we, as ministers of the gospel, will be willing for the Bible to speak?

I am still trying to preach to four churches, but understand they are going to close the doors against me at one of them, down in Caldwell, next meeting. This does not daunt me, as I feel I have the Bible for my theme, and trying to trust what Paul says in Rom. 8: 28, I tell them I will do like my blessed master; I will preach it on the highway, to one or to a thousand, as opportunity offers.

There are many believers in the doctrine of the kingdom in this country, and the number is increasing in proportion as it is preached. A large field presents itself, where the people will readily embrace the truth, I believe, if it is presented to them as it is in the Bible. The harvest is great, but the laborers are few. I have an appointment ten miles from here, East, the fifth Saturday and Sunday, to preach 'The Kingdom.' Pray that I may have the Spirit to attend me. I never felt like I wanted to preach as badly in my life as I have for the last few days. The cause I guess you can explain better than I can.

I have just commenced to read 'The Plan of Redemption,' by Welcome and Goude, in which I see things as I never saw them before, and I think in their true light. I have just read 'Ghostology' for the first time; I think it the most convincing I ever read. I have read many tracts and pamplets since I saw you, but love my Bible the best of all. When I think of the saints' inheritance, and realize what it is, I often think this is too good for me. Who could help loving a being like our blessed Lord? who would ever offer such things to poor sinners like me? and with the poet I can say—

'If there is only one song I can sing,
When in his beauty I see the great King,
This shall my song in eternity be,
O! 'tis a wonder that Jesus loves me.'

I want you to write me as soon as you get this, and let me know when you are coming. Send your appointments. I will publish them this time. Love to Bro. Smith. Tell him to come back when he can. Pray for me. Yours in the gospel, T. F. N———."

Thank God, this brother has the light, and is willing to breast the storm of popular opinion. His cheerful and christian wife is with him. She said to me, "I don't care what they say; I want the truth." O, I do praise God for the advancement of the work. I will now give a few "notes by the way."

After receiving Bro. N——'s letter, I left home Jan. 28th. Stopped with the church at Ooltewah, Tenn., till Monday 31st. Had good social meeting and preaching Saturday, and on Sunday preaching and the Lord's supper. Sister Susan Smith (the aged widow of Bro. Silas Smith) was very sick. Pray for her. She is indeed a mother in Israel. Left Ooltewah on Monday 31st, and on the train met the editor of the Baptist Reflector of Morristown, Tenn. He never had heard of our views, and after talking a while said, "The parable of the rich man and Lazarus is all I can find that seems to favor the concious state of the dead." I gave him some very strong tracts. He kindly invited me to dinner. I found his wife also was very kind and social.

Left Morristown Tuesday, Feb. 1st. Had a lively controversy on the train with a Bro. Susong, a wealthy farmer of Cocke Co., Tenn., a Baptist, who believed folks went to heaven when they died. I asked for his Scripture. He replied, "Oh, if I was as well posted on my side as you are on yours, I could find as many on my side of the question, but I have not taken time to look them up." I told him that if the Bible was like an old fiddle—i. e. play any tune you want—I had no further use for it; but that it was not yea and nay, but yea and amen, to the glory of God.

Tuesday night stayed at Wolf Creek. It snowed, and the ground was frozen hard next morning. I started in an old open hack for Ashville, N. C., a distance of sixty-nine miles. When I had gone five miles, facing the keen North Carolina winds, I was very cold, and a gentleman came out from a store on the road side, in Madison Co., N. C., who proved to be Bro. P. Scism, the owner of the store. He said if I would stop over he would send round and get me a congregation to speak to; and as our views had never been proclaimed there, I felt it duty to do so. A small audience was out at "Antiock," M. E. Church South, in which I had the liberty of speaking. Took dinner with Bro. and Sister Gorrell, of M. E. Church South, who treated me hospitably, for which I shall ever remember them kindly. Spoke again at night to a large concourse of people, notwithstanding the extreme cold. Staid all night with Bro. Scism's amiable family. Here I met a Bro. Frank Lamb, who seems to have a mind to search for truth. The people seemed interested, and many invitations were given me to visit them again, which I will do, the Lord willing, on my return.

Thursday morning, Feb. 3d, very cold, cloudy, and high winds. I started at nine o'clock in the same old open hack, went one mile over the rough frozen ground, and had to leave it at a blacksmith's shop on the road side for repairs. I mounted a stage horse, with his harness on, and with my large valise, filled with reading matter, before me, the driver on the other horse, we reached Ashville at half-past nine P. M., almost worn out with riding over the rough snow and ice, through the mountains, where a stage could not go till it thawed. During the day we passed much grand scenery and works of nature. Winding up the rapid French Broad River, we passed under many rugged rocks. Just after passing the celebrated Warm Springs, kept by Col. Rumbo, we passed through a narrow place between the river and the long fabled "lover's leap." It is a huge and almost shapeless rock, towering two hundred feet or more over the bosom of the swiftly rolling river. About one hundred and fifty feet from the water, in yellow paint, are the words "J. C. Smith, 1843." I was astonished; and cannot tell how any human being ever painted it there.

In Ashville Bro. W. P. Blair, proprietor of the stage lines, kindly refunded half of my stage fare for riding on horseback. Left Ashville Friday, the 4th, in the stage with Bro. J. H. Mills, former Editor of the Baptist Recorder, which once published a warning against the dangers of Adventism. I had a pleasant time with him on theology, while being bumped and jolted and shaken down in the stage through the mountains to Old Fort, where we arrived at ten P. M., almost frozen.

Saturday, Feb. 5th, took the train for Morganton, still in company with Bro. Mills, also Col. S. McD. Tate, the President of this Western N. C. R. R., which is destined to run to Morristown, Tenn. We had a pleasant time till at a station a gentleman entered the car, and Bro. Mills introduced him as Rev. Mr. Crisp, and said he could talk to me on the Bible. Bro. Crisp is a Methodist minister, who I found had so much zeal for his views that he would "give nor ask no quarter." He said he heard how I carried things "rough shod" with Bro. Moody and others, in Caldwell Co., but I could not run over him that way, His eye showed irritation. I told him I proposed to be a christian, and they (christians) did not run over things "rough shod," but always worked with the mild spirit of Jesus. He challenged me for a debate, and began to take the position that Paul taught the immortality of the soul by "this earthly house of our tabernacle." I began to ask him questions about the distinction between the "earthly house" and the "tabernacle," when evidently seeing the absurdity of having an empty house in heaven at the resurrection of this old body, he turned very abruptly and left the car, saying as he went, "Well, I will end the conversation with one not worthy to talk to me." I thanked him kindly as he went. I accepted his challenge, and wrote him, after consulting my brethren, to come on the 14th.

In Morganton I met Bro. D. D. Coffey, who had come sixteen miles on horseback to meet me. We reached his house just at dark, took supper, and then with Sister Coffey, his wife, we rode by the dim light of the moon through snow and ice to Bro. Henry Coffey's, where we had a good time with several of the brethren and sisters who met me there. It gave me pleasure to hear them tell how the Lord had brought them through tribulation since I left them in September. Sunday, the 6th, spent the day with Bro. Israel Coffey and wife, also Bro. O. F. Goodwin and Sister Hutchinson, who all live in the same house. I received here by a messenger a proposition from Bro. D. C. Harmon (Baptist) to debate, in Wautauga Co.

Monday, A. M., I started with Bro. Goodwin and rode twenty miles to Blowing Rock, in Wautauga Co., and staid with Bro. Nelson, a minister of the Baptist church. He with his good wife loves the truth, and by every possible way made us feel welcome; and really we felt at home, and enjoyed their hospitality. The people were so anxious for the debate, that a Baptist Bro. started at twelve o'clock at night on horseback after Bro. Harmon to come and meet the Adventist. Tuesday, at three P. M., spoke in the dwelling of Bro. Wm. M. Morris, who keeps guests during the summer at his celebrated spring. He and his wife are Methodists, but love Jesus, and proved by their kindness to us that religion is charity.

Wednesday, the 9th, spoke at the dwelling of Bro. Sherril, who is also prepared to keep boarders during guest season. Persons cannot find a more pleasant summer retreat than here, on top of the Blue Ridge mountains, with as good water as can be found anywhere. At three P. M. Bro. O. F. Good win preached at the house of Bro. Morris again, and we spent the night with him, together with Bro. and Sister Nelson, where we had a blessed little social meeting. Thursday, the 10th, I tried to preach at eleven A. M. in the dwelling of Bro. John Estes, a Baptist Bro. We took dinner with him and his devoted wife. At three P. M. Bro. Goodwin preached with good effect. He is now a sower of the seed, and I thank God for giving me such a helper as Bro. G. We rode to Bro. Ben. Greene's, and staid till the next morning, enjoying the extreme kindness of himself and his kind, social companion, both of whom seemed glad to receive us.

May God bless all the dear brethren and sisters in Wautauga Co. who love the truth, and lavished so much kindness on his unworthy servant. Friday, the 11th, spent the day in debate with Bro. D. C. Harmon, Moderator of Three Forks Baptist Association. Had a pleasant discussion, and feel thankful that it was conducted in a kind spirit, and not a harsh word during the day. At night rode down the mountain with Bro. Elijah Moore, fifteen miles, to his home, where we arrived at eight P. M., having come the last four miles through a heavy rain, and so dark I had to call out occasionally to learn whether I was following Bro. Moore, whose mule would go home. Thank the Lord we reached there in safety, and with the kind motherly attention of Sister Moore, we soon forgot the rain storm, and went to bed with a severe headache from the hard day's work in debate.

Fearing this article has grown too lengthy, I must close here for the present. I have some blessed news for my next "notes by the way." Meetings increase in interest. Pray for your Bro. J. A. Cargile.

REPORT OF J. J. SMITH'S LABORS.

Dear Brethren:—Since my last report I have been almost constantly at work for the Lord, in my feeble way. On my return from N. C., I first visited our little churches. I found the brethren and sisters holding on, and pressing forward in their pilgrimage, excepting a few of the young, unstable ones, who could not, or did not, resist the temptations of the Christmas frolics. How can it be otherwise with the weak ones, when all the sects get up Christmas tree parties, sport and mingle with the world, and have a good time together. I know one village in which all three denominations of the place got up foolish parties to raise money for benevolent purposes. They have secured an infidel to act the part of a clown for the occasion. I am informed that this same clown was about the same time indicted for blasphemy, and has been refused as a witness in court, on account of his denying the Bible as a revelation from God.

When the writer preached in the house of these same "fun"-loving christians, on the saints' inheritance, a large concourse being in attendance, he courteously invited their minister to conclude the service, which he did by saying, "Let us get down in the most humble manner and pray." His prayer began thus: "We thank thee, O Lord, that we do not worship a material Jesus, but a spiritual Savior, and a God without body or parts." Thus he controverted the doctrine of a personal reign of Christ with his saints on the earth. The assembly being dismissed when he concluded, all retired, leaving me without an invitation to dine or lodge. It occurred to me that if I had preached a funny sermon I might have had a dinner in that village without going to a public house and paying for it. But, thanks to the Lord, I had the means for paying that time, or I might have suffered hunger. I know another brother who preached a good Bible discourse in that same house, and had his discourse criticized, after which he was left without an invitation to lodge for the night. He put up at a public house.

In view of the Savior's language, Matt. 10: 14, is it obedience to continue our efforts in such a place? I have visited one other village and two cities where four or five churches in each have kept their doors closed against our preachers, but throw them open to the "lovers of pleasure." In some of these cities we have had the privilege of preaching in the Court House; in others we have hired a hall at $5.00 a service. In other instances hotel keepers have thrown open their halls freely to us, and good has been done. But outsiders inquire why we are not allowed to preach in churches. The answer is that we are "heretics," "materialists," "soul-sleepers," etc. Thus popular clamor being against us, the public soon learn to be shy of us, so far as thorough drilling can effect it. The preachers turn on us and say, "Where are your converts?" "What good are you doing?" "Don't you feel as though you had cut yourself off from the religious world?" "You must have a hard time of it." We can reply in the language of one who "conferred not with flesh and blood," "Necessity is laid upon me." I must do duty.

But to return: we have warned and admonished the young members of our little churches, time and again, to be on their guard against the wiles of the enemy. We have good reason to believe our labors in that direction have not been in vain. We do have much less party going than others.

We have had a visit from Bro. John S. Lawver, of the Southern Ill. Conference. He preached for us some, and did much in social intercourse with us to strengthen and encourage us. We all regretted that he left so soon, but he was not in good health, and the weather was rainy at the time. He hopes to spend some months with us next autumn. He is the right man to do good in this field of hard labor.

In January I answered to the call of Eld. S. R. Hood, of Etowah Co. He is one of those five Baptist ministers in that section lately proscribed for the truth's sake. I set out on foot to Trenton, Ga., where I purposed to take the train on the A. & C. R. R. to Ft. Paine, about forty miles. I was informed that, owing to the bad condition of this Road, but few would travel on it, and that none who knew its condition could feel safe on it. I hesitated to ride on it, but I had not now time to walk and meet my appointment; so, trusting to and praying the Lord's protecting care in his work, I paid my full fare, and moved off slowly. I soon saw that there was a dread among the passengers, some standing outside keeping their eye on the engine, so as to leap from the train if she should fall through the trestle. But, thanks to the Lord, I reached my point safely. At or near 1 o'clock P. M., I started over Lookout Mountain, a distance of about fifteen miles to the nearest place where I was acquainted with any one. With a heavy overcoat and other luggage, I found this a hard afternoon's walk; but as the weather was not so warm as when I made that hard walk last summer, I did not injure my feet as I did then, but the road was rough and tiresome.

On the way I came to that remarkable river, called Little River, being, I suppose, about one hundred and fifty feet wide, and at this time about three feet deep, running on top of the mountain, and leaping from its summit through immense gorges, and over majestic precipices. The scenery is grand for miles. I had been informed that I would have to wade this rapid current if I got over, but on reaching the ford I found that a man had just dug a trough about eight inches deep, and as many wide. This was in a round log of white wood, about ten feet long, with the bark on. I called to a man on the other side to set me over on a horse. He said he could do it in the trough. So for ten cents (cheap enough) he took me to the other shore.

It was now nearly sundown. It was yet four miles to my destination; no other habitation on the way; a dim path to follow. Should I miss my route I might have to stay out all night, in a wild forest, abounding in wolves after dark. I had heard some frightful stories of their following men, and snapping at their heels as they ascended some tree to get out of their reach. With these thoughts came also the thought that on one occasion, at least, a servant of the Lord was protected from the teeth of lions, and the same Lord had power to protect from wolves. Twice after dark I lost my path, and found by the roaring of the waters in the great chasm that I was approaching the wolf neighborhood, and retraced my steps. Thanks to the Lord, I arrived safe at my cousin Jesse W. Smith's before they had retired. Here I found a hearty welcome, kind sympathy and hospitable treatment, that cheered and refreshed my old bones and muscles.

The next day I had but six miles to travel to reach my first appointment. I spent the day with my cousin's family at Bro. F. M. Thompson's. Both of these families are of like precious faith, my cousin having learned the truth some years ago near Bethel Church, Tenn. He has been industriously preaching the truth from house to house, and wherever opportunity offered. He reminds one of his father, Silas Smith, of Ooltewah, Tenn., who died last spring, having finished his untiring labors in the most triumphant hope.

Bro. Thompson furnished me a good gentle mule, to ride to my appointment at Friendship Church. On my arrival I met with many smiling faces and cheering words. O how pleasant these friendly greetings! but will it not be sweet in the great gathering day?

I preached here Friday night, Saturday and evening, and over Sunday. Here I had the assistance of Brn. F. R. Banksow and Wm. W. Livingston, both of whom are suffering shame for the name of Jesus, having been excluded from Baptist churches for preaching "materialism."

These brethren might effect much good, but they are unable to devote a great share of their time to the ministry. They are poor in earthly goods, and have to labor to support their rising families. Bro. L. also labors under physical disadvantages, his lungs being weak. They have many warm sympathizers outside their own church. It is generally known by their communities that they have been excluded in palpable violation of the rules of the churches so excluding them. The churches that have driven us out for preaching the truth have, in every instance that has come under my observation, declined from that day, and are doing but little if any good.

I would not fail to mention that the brethren and sisters at Friendship, being turned out doors for the truth's sake, had to build them a house to worship in. Though poor in this world's goods, they have willing hands, and have gone to work in good earnest and built them a good, substantial, plain house. Men of the world helped to build it, not for a sect, but for all God's people, never to be locked against any who come to preach the Bible. Merchants aided by contributing nails, etc. The Lord bless, preserve and build up these dear ones in the truth.

From here I went to meet Bro. S. R. Hood, of Oak Hill, Etowah Co. In my next I will report my labors with him and his people. May the Lord keep us all in these trying times.

THE DEPARTED.

C. P. DOW.

The dead we mean; not those who have left us for a day, or a short period, and will return; but those gone to the vale of death,—the still, cold land of deepest shadows, where is no dial plate to mark the passing years, burdened with great events, in which the living take a part. O, how the number increases! "when in this vale of tears I backward look and miss such numbers."

What a feeling of loneliness, what a painful consciousness that one by one our loved and loving friends are leaving us to "fight the good fight of faith" without their presence and helpful influences. Each true christian friend that thus departs leaves one the less by our side to cheer us on. Death's arrows are flying thickly around us; the funeral knell is often heard, the new graves are upon every side; go where we may, we see the sad evidence of the same old tyranny, provoked and caused by sin. Well may we feel prompted to inquire, "When will the night be gone? When the joyous morning come? When will the spoiler himself be spoiled, and the Sun of Righteousness arise with healing in his beams? When will those who sleep in the dust awake and sing? That gilded hour of untold gladness will, in due time arrive. This well established truth helps us to bear the deep grief of the separation.

From week to week in our several papers we read the brief obituaries, that in a year's time, amount to a large number. Honored names of our ministers who have fallen within a few years past, linger upon our memories, and we think of their sermons, and self-denying labors, and feel the while, the warm tear coursing down our cheeks. Brn. Miller, Galusha, Whiting, Pinney, Pratt, Howel, Bliss, the two Turner's, Hitch, Hudson, John and Edwin Himes, Hancock, Stevens, Smith, Curry, Lee, Chapman, Page, Merrill, Hastings, and others—all departed, gone from life, gone from the living, and are now with the dead, where none "praise the Lord" or "hope for his truth." Prostrate, with faces upturned, as though looking "for the Lord from heaven," with cold hands folded over hearts now still,—they wait in the grave. "Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord." Others of the living will depart, during the brief period of the present swiftly passing year, and we may each well ask, "Is it I?"

All men seem to deem all men mortal but themselves. Two of my valued christian friends, having recently died, a notice of whose death will in due time appear, caused me to take up the strain of this article—Sr. Thompson, of Kansas, and Bro. Hoyt, of Magog, P. Q., both gifted persons, whose absence is a loss. The man of hoary hairs, as he looks backward through the dim vista of rapidly receding years is startled to see the many vacant places of those who started with him to run the race of life, with hope young and gay. Many of these are out of sight, fallen by the way. Those in the vigorous and healthful prime of manhood, all absorbed as they may be in the busy scenes of this vain and transient life, are often compelled to pause and give at least "the "passing tribute of a sigh," as they see one by one drop from the circle, and sink into the solemn silence of the tomb. Youth may well mourn to find that even its blooming ranks are fearfully thinned by the fell destroyer. This shows the frailty of our tenure of life; for the "rider of the pale horse" is victorious even there.

What then is our hope? Said my friend, who saw an open grave before him, "If I go down, I shall come up. There is a resurrection of the dead." This is the hope that is like an anchor, both sure and steadfast. This is "everlasting consolation, and good hope through grace." It bids those in grief to "sorrow not as those that have no hope." We do believe that Jesus died and rose again, most literally; and that "even so, them that sleep in him will God bring with him," without the loss of one.

We have read about a resurrection at the last day—beyond the time of dying, so that all may be rescued. Oh, the divinity of the plan! how well ordered! It is worthy of a God. We need not be querulous about "how the dead are to be raised up;" as though these might after all be a lack of power; nor are we left to petition "science" with its vaunted powers to help us; all we need is to know or duly recognize the ample power of the mighty God of the vast universe, and simply feel that underneath us is the unfailing power of that God who says—"I will ransom them from the power of the grave." Let all the mourners be comforted.

IN MEMORY OF MOSES SMITH.

C. J. HUCKINS.

Gone from his home is our father dear,
And we miss him sadly there;
Vacant the place by the window now,
And empty the old arm-chair.

Threescore and sixteen were the years he lived
Ere death the dread summons gave;
Meekly he sank in his icy arms
To the quiet rest of the grave.

I go to his home—it is lonely there,
For father will greet me no more;
The dear hands that led our infant feet,
Their labor of love is now o'er.

Then farewell, father, fare thee well,
Thy days on earth are o'er;
But we'll meet thee with the angel throng
On Canaan's happy shore.

FROM J. C. & S. E. SMITH.

Dear Friends in Christ, Greeting:—It has been some time since you have heard from us, and we will again write to you, hoping and praying that a few thoughts penned in the spirit of our Master may not be unprofitable to the readers of our much loved paper, the Crisis.

Since our last correspondence we have been East, making Newton Upper Falls, Mass., our home for the last seven months. While there we were greeted by many loved ones, who are anxiously looking for the return of the Nobleman. We saw many whom we had formerly learned to love, and who are still doing what they can for the spread of truth. We attended a number of meetings while there, held in different localities, and saw some good done in Jesus' name.

Feb. 2nd, we again started for this mission field. It was hard to part with those we love, and leave a pleasant home, where we were enjoying the comforts of life; and had it not been for the command, "Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature," we would have gladly tarried East with them.

Wednesday, at five P. M., we started from Boston; came as before to Albany, Rochester, Buffalo, Cleveland, Toledo, Quincy, Kansas City, and from there to Pleasanton, Linn Co., Kansas. We were not quite three days and nights on the way. Wife and little Chester did not leave the train till we reached Kansas City, Mo. At Pleasanton Bro. Crowell was at the depot awaiting our arrival, and welcomed us to his Tabernacle. Feb. 9th, Bro. C. prepared his house for meeting, and we spoke to a few brethren and sisters who are endeavoring to hold up the standard here and let their light shine.

10th, I started for Arvonia, Osage Co., leaving my wife at the quiet home of Bro. C. Rode thirty-five miles or more, and then put up for the night among strangers. In the evening I went to a school meeting, which lasted nearly two hours, and then I hung up the chart, and spoke to them from Dan. 2. All stopped and listened with great attention, and after meeting they came for tracts, and requested me to stay longer. One man gave a stirring exhortation, and advised them all to take the tracts and read them, as they were the truth.

11th. Went on my way rejoicing, and scattering the seed by the way-side, as I met persons from time to time. I reached my uncle's in the afternoon, and took him by surprise. Called on Bro. Brian and family; found them in the work, and looking for the Lord. At night rode seven miles further, making a distance of thirty-five miles. We had a happy greeting at our brother's home. Bro. Hunt was there, and we had a refreshing season. Before the throne of grace, around the family altar, we felt the presence of the Lord, and gave thanks for his watch-care and great goodness in our protection, and the protection of others from whom we have long been separated. After thanksgiving and praise we packed up, crossed the river to Bro. Webster's, then returned to Bro. Brian's and took him to his appointment on Tuck-war Creek. At night a large company came out to hear the Word. Bro. Brian had been here before, and a door of utterance was opened before us.

Sunday, 13th, we met at 11 A. M. The house was full, and the Lord helped in speaking from the chart from the words, "And the kingdom, and the dominion," etc. I never saw better attention. After meeting, a large company came up for tracts. At night we had an overflowing house, and the words of Paul, found in Heb. 9: 27, 28, we endeavored to present to the hearers. The Lord gave great help, and we warned them to flee from the wrath to come. Twenty or more arose and promised by the help of God they would meet us in the kingdom. We had a weeping time in the Lord. Seed has been sown here by Brn. Brian and Webster that will tell in the coming judgment. The Lord will bless his own truth when it is presented in love. It will not return void.

Monday, 14th, we took Bro. B. home, and then went to Arvonia; heard Bro. Hunt give a temperance lecture to the children and neighbors. 15th, visited Bro. Webster and a Bro. on the prairie. 16th, started with Bro. Hunt for Franklin Co., distance thirty-five miles; reached there before night. Found Bro. Snyder and companion in the living way for the kingdom, and glad to see us again. 17th, rested. At night met for worship. Had freedom in the Lord speaking from 2 Pet. 3: 4. A goodly number testified to the goodness of God, and their expectation of soon seeing the King in his glory.

18th. Came to Ottawa, and stopped at Sr. Wilson's. Scattered some seed for the Lord, and on Sunday, 20th, went to the colored church, and was invited by the preacher to speak. The words of the apostle from Titus 2: 11–14 we appropriated to their use. The Lord helped in presenting his grace and salvation, the teaching of his divine law, and the looking for the blessed hope and the glorious appearing of the great God and our Savior Jesus Christ. Was invited to speak again. Thank the Lord some drank in the truth, and rejoiced to know redemption was nigh. Had three preachers out,—one white man, who has come out on the blessed hope. Sunday night we went to hear a professor lecture on the subject of "Ishmael." He showed the fulfillment of prophecy in regard to this nation. He spoke of the Turks; said that by spring they would be driven out of Europe, and that would be one move in the conversion of the world. Thus they are overlooking the second coming of Christ. At the close of the meeting I asked him some questions, gave him some reading matter, and trust he will learn a more perfect way.

22nd, we started for Pleasanton, distance fifty miles. On the 23d we arrived, and loved ones were glad to see us. At night Bro. Hunt spoke from the words, "He that hath ears to hear let him hear." The evening of the 24th we had another meeting.

25th. With Bro. Crowell and my wife we started for Missouri, Bates Co., to attend the Quarterly Conference. We arrived in season to attend the evening meeting. Here we found brethren and sisters from different churches, and Bro. Cate who has been used as an instrument in the hands of God of strengthening the cause. Also met Bro. Little, who came some distance to attend this meeting, and who with Bro. Cate are true yoke fellows in the Lord, doing his bidding. While there we had a blessed season—a refreshing long to be remembered. Brethren and sisters were kind and hospitable, and came together in the spirit of the Master. They made advancement in the right direction. They commenced to raise a Mission fund for tracts and books, and for those who labor in the gospel. We praise the Lord for the sweet season we enjoyed while with them.

The 28th we returned to Pleasanton. We have calls from a number of counties to labor. Hundreds of places ought to be visited, and the seed of the kingdom sown. We need tracts and papers. Will not some of our brethren and sisters, who have them to spare, send to me at Arvonia, Osage Co., Kansas; also papers? Bro. Harrington and others have been brought out by reading the Crisis. There is a vast country here for labor, and the Lord is blessing every effort. Multitudes are anxious to hear these great truths that relate to the near coming of Christ and the resurrection of the dead.

O may all make haste and do up their work while it is called to-day. Pray for us, dear brethren and sisters, that we may have strength to publish the glad tidings till Jesus comes. From your Bro. and Sr. in Christ.

Pleasanton, Linn Co., Kan., Feb. 29th.

WAR.

War, like intemperance, is a giant evil in its ramifications, reaching and contaminating all of the interests of society. Like the river with its poisoned fountain, its corrupting influences reach every nook and retreat, sending a widespread desolation wherever man is found. Under its withering influences, more deadly than pestiferous miasma, it blasts every rising hope, cripples industry, exhausts natural resources, fans the fires of jealousy and hate, widens local chasms, excites malicious animosities, practically closes the doors of the churches and the halls of learning, and thus fearfully degrades our fallen humanity. In its absolute sway, its tyrannical assumptions, it siezes not only the public treasures, but lays a ruthless hand on the national conscience, transferring the individual moral sense to the censorship of a superior in military position, making might the synonym of right. The inferior is thus compelled to yield his moral convictions to a superior in command, ever subject to the caprices of men by no means models of purity, or to the supposed emergences of the accidents of war. In such circumstances and under such influences private virtue must become dwarfed, and vice assume gigantic proportions. The Sabbath, a necessity, not only of man's moral but of his physical nature, is violated, desecrated, becoming a day of hilarity and carnage. Familiarity with crime makes it less odious, while scenes of cruelty and bloodshed cannot fail to callous the heart, brutalize and destroy, in some degree, the more ennobling and the finer sensibilities of our higher nature.—J. H. Hanaford.

The Resurrection.—Reflecting the other day upon the sad state of the churches at the present moment, I was led to look back to apostolic times, and to consider wherein the preaching of the present day differed from the preaching of the apostles. I remarked the vast difference in their style from the set and formal oratory of the present age. But the main differenee I observed was in the subjects of their preaching. Surprised I was when I discovered that the very staple of the preaching of the apostles was the resurrection of the dead. The apostles, when they preached, always testified concerning the resurrection of Jesus, and the consequent resurrection of the dead. It appears that the Alpha and Omega of their gospel was the testimony that Jesus died and rose again from the dead according to the Scriptures.—Spurgeon.

True minds help one another by mutual struggles.

HOME AND HEALTH.

OLD BEDS.

Are old beds as wholesome as new ones? No. We have much to learn about beds. Disease and feebleness very often come from our beds. Without refreshing sleep we cannot enjoy or exert the full powers of our physical or mental natures. The first question which many of our wisest doctors are now asking of their patients is, "How and where do you sleep?" The location of a bedroom is everything. Science and common sense tell us that our bed-rooms should always be on the sunny side of the house, and that light and air should pass through them most of the day. The seeds of disease are in our mattresses. Thousands of families sleep on feather and curled hair beds which have been in daily use—and they boast of it—for twenty-five years. How often have such beds, even in well regulated families, been turned out to the sun and exposed to the air, as they should have been, especially in the summer months, for hours together? It is frightful to think of the quantity of perspiration from our bodies which adheres to the unrefreshed mattresses.

Ignorance of these matters inflict upon posterity untold burdens, and robs the world of an immense amount of power. How can a man who has slept on an unhealthy bed rise in a singing mood in the morning ready for a full day's work? Almost any bed well managed contributes to vigorous health and long life. The material of the mattress is of the smallest account. Freshness and cleanliness are the essentials. In the sweltering nights no bed is fit to be occupied that has not been under the sun several hours in the twenty-four. The maids in our houses make up the cribs and beds almost as soon as they are vacated, without the slightest regard to purification. The hard struggle for healthy life is of our own creation. As we make our beds so we must lie on them. There is light enough on this subject, as on all others, but we love the darkness rather than the light. We think with pity of the family which attends the poisonous theaters and returns to neglected beds at midnight. This is called enjoyment and recreation by persons who know not what they are doing.—Ex.

HOME AND HAPPINESS.

The truest happiness is ever to be found at home. No man without a home can be long happy; at least, truly so. But the domestic group can only be productive of happiness when stimulated by affection and prudent friendship. What can be compared in the intercourse of life with the attentions, the little acts of kindness and loving smiles in the family? These all raise the most pleasant emotions, and call forth the liveliest sentiments of our natures. What are the honors of ambition, the pleasures of fame and name, in comparison with home and happiness? We often see distinguished men shutting out the praises of the world, and seeking the pleasures of home around their own quiet firesides, with there prattling little ones, and enjoying their innocent pleasures. This to a fond parent is one of the purest sources of mirth.

Even Cicero, with all his hardness of heart and illiberality of mind, felt the tenderness of home attachments. At one time he acknowledged that he received no satisfaction in any company but that of his little daughter and wife. Sir Thomas Moore devoted much of his time and life to his family, from a sense of duty, also delighting to amuse his children. Let us, then, renew our efforts to increase the happiness of the children with whom we are thrown. Children would progress more rapidly in their studies were their teachers less austere, and would win first the affections of the little ones. After several years' experience in this matter, I have found this to be true. Let the children see that you love them and feel an interest in them, and I will insure success as teacher.—Christian Neighbor.

Fashionable Life.—If there is any environment which can degrade a human being or harden a young heart, it is the atmosphere of fashionable life, without that home culture which should be its natural accompaniment. You may take the tenderest and most beautiful and lovely girl, the one that is kindest at home, and loves her father and mother most, and put her in the highest circle of fashionable life, with plenty of money and full scope to do as she pleases; let her dress herself as she will—cover herself with diamonds and pearls; let the love of admiration become the ruling passion; and soon all the tenderness of that young nature passes away; her thoughts concentrate upon herself—what figure she is cutting, who her admirers are, what conquests she can make. By and by the youthful, beautiful modesty is gone, and the way is open for vice, that, in the beginning, would not have been dreamed of, or, if thought of, put away as utterly impossible. —Banner of Holiness.

Drink less with your Meals.—If water with food is the cause of functional debility much more objectional is hot drink. Everything taken at a high temperature is relaxing. The teeth are injured by hot drinks; the throat and stomach debilitated by them, and if we use tea, coffee, wine, etc., the mischievous effects are greater. Drink, then, should not be taken with food. It is better, if one is thirsty, to take a draught of water thirty minutes before eating, or four hours after. Many men have relieved themselves of dyspepsia by not drinking even water during meals. No animal except man ever drinks in connection with his food. Man ought not to. Try this, dyspeptics, and you will not wash down mechanically what ought to be masticated and ensalivated before it is swallowed.—Ex.

A PROSPECT.

L. A. WHEELER.

"Now we see through a glass darkly; then face to face"—1 COR 13: 12.

"Through a glass darkly," a marriage I see;
An invitation has been given to you and to me;
It has long been preparing by the King and his Son;
The Bride has been wooed, the work is most done.

"Through a glass darkly," a city I see;
And mansions preparing for you and for me;
So gloriously fair and splendidly bright,
There is no need of the sun, for the Groom is its light

"Through a glass darkly," but yet it is true,
Without money, without price, for me and for you;
No matter how poor or despised you have been,
If you are washed in that fountain that cleanses from sin.

"Through a glass darkly," and garments I view,
Whiter than snow for me and for you;
Put them on quickly, dear Bride of the Son,
And not be without robes when the marriage has come.

"Through a glass darkly," and angels I see
Coming for you and coming for me;
Changed in a moment from a servant to heir,
We mount up to meet our spouse in the air.

The glass now removed, face answereth to face,
With praising and shouting and songs of free grace;
Loving, adoring, rejoicing and greeting,
The saints from all ages and climes are now meeting.

The glass now removed, and with it our sorrow;
Sickening to-day, and dying to-morrow;
We fear it no more, for the Bride and her Groom
Are sweetly united, and safely at home.

PARADISE RESTORED AT CHRIST'S SECOND ADVENT.

By Rev. T. R. Birks, Prof. of Divinity, Cambridge, Eng.

The heavenly Paradise, or New Jerusalem, described in Rev. 21, is plainly the antitype of the beautiful Assyrian garden from which Adam and his wife were driven. It is the promised home of the second Adam, the Lord from heaven, and of the Bride, the Lamb's wife, where the saints shall be for ever with their Lord, in the full enjoyment of the beatific vision. All the features of the description, whether by resemblance or by contrast, are designed to unfold the surpassing beauty and glory of this heavenly inheritance.

The former Paradise was, after all, an earthly dwelling-place, not far from the later sites of Nineveh and Babylon, and shared largely in the curse which lighted upon the whole earth for Adam's transgression. But the New Jerusalem "cometh down from God, out of heaven, prepared as a bride adorned for her husband." No taint of sin or defilement can ever obscure the brightness of its glory. Again, the earthly garden was watered by the four rivers of Paradise, as if to denote the confluence of all the happiness the creature can supply. But the bliss of the heavenly paradise has a higher source, uncreated and eternal. It is watered by one stream, surpassing all the fountains earth can supply, "a pure river of water of life, proceeding from the throne of God and of the Lamb."

Still further, the treasures, which bordered one of the rivers of the first Paradise, were only in the mine, or the depth of the sea. The pearls and the onyx stone were to be secured only by laborious toil. But in the heavenly city they have all been brought forth from their hiding places in immense profusion; they are perfect in their beauty, and no toil is needed to secure and enjoy them; treasures far surpassing all the gems of earth. "Each several gate was one pearl; and the street of the city was pure gold, as it were transparent glass; and the foundation garnished with all manner of precious stones."

In the first Paradise, Adam, through sin, fled from the presence of his Maker. Here the children of God "shall see his face, and his name shall be on their foreheads." There the blessing was transitory, and followed by a lasting curse; and Paradise itself, and the whole creation around it, were made subject to vanity for six thousand years. But here "there shall be no more curse," but joy and blessedness without end.

The pleasures of the earthly Paradise, even while they lasted, were the pleasures of infancy. It was a garden, and not a metropolis nor a kingdom. Its dwellers had the innocence of childhood, not the deep experience of good in its triumph over evil, which is given to the church of the first-born. They were naked, and knew it not. But the dwellers in the heavenly city are clad in glorious robes, the fine linen which is the righteousness of the saints, clothing of wrought gold, the perfected work of the sanctifying Spirit, and these robes are made white by the blood of the Lamb. Their home is a garden for pleasant delight, a country of vast extent, a city for all the fulness and variety of social love, in dignity a metropolis enthroned over a ransomed universe, and, above all, a holy of holies, where the glory of the divine presence is completely unveiled. No temple is there seen, because it is itself a temple, or rather the most holy place in the spacious temple of the whole new creation of God; and no veil separates its worshipers from the full vision of him whom they adore.

Again, in the earthly garden the tree of knowledge of good and evil was planted hard by the tree of life, and was the sad occasion of our parents' fall. But in the Eden above, the tree of life blooms for ever, and no tree of false and dangerous knowledge is planted by its side. Nay, more, the tree of life itself is multiplied, and becomes a fertile grove, bordering the river of life on either side with fruits ever varying in their richness and spiritual fragrance, of healing virtue and pleasant taste. "On either side of the river is the tree of life, which bare twelve manner of fruits, and yielded her fruit every month, and the leaves of the tree were for the healing of the nations." Rev. 22: 2.

While even in this life we may by faith eat of the tree of life, and have the earnest of the blessing of eternal life, the fulness is reserved for the coming of our Lord, and the time of his manifested kingdom. All the promises to the "overcomers" point us forward to that glorious day. Then the faithful shall be delivered from the fearful sentence of the second death. Then shall the saints of God be called by a new name, which the Lord himself shall name. Then shall power be given to them over the nations, and they shall be made sharers in the perfect victory of their Redeemer. They shall walk with their Savior in white robes, having been made meet, by his cleansing blood and quickening Spirit, for the inheritance of the saints in light. They will then be pillars in the temple of God, and dwellers in the New Jerusalem, and will sit with their Lord upon his throne. And then, also, will they enjoy in its fulness the privilege, of which the earnests had been given them in their pilgrimage, to eat of the tree of life, which blooms in the midst of the Paradise of God. "For now we see through a glass darkly, but then face to face; now we know in part, but then shall we know even as we are known." See Rev. 3.

Business, worldly pleasure, the conflicts of worldly policy, even human philosophy, in which God is forgotten, and his works alone are studied, cannot feed or satisfy the immortal spirit of man. Even those glimpses and snatches of truth which the christian can attain amidst the darkness of the present world are not enough to quench the deep hunger and thirst of the soul. We need a higher and nobler portion; and that higher portion has been provided for every believer. It is the tree of life in the midst of the paradise of God. It is the meditation, through eternal ages, on a scheme of love that has been unfolding from the birthday of time, and that will display fresh beauties, and hidden depths of love and wisdom, through all the countless ages of the world to come.

It is when the ransomed spirit, gazing on all the changing events of six thousand years, in which not even a sparrow hath fallen to the ground without our heavenly Father, and keenly alive to the awful reality of moral evil, can say, with clear discernment of the glorious truth, "Where sin hath abounded, there grace doth much more exceedingly abound," and apply to the whole range of Providence the words once spoken in the view of our Savior's miracles of mercy, "He hath done all things well." It is to see divine love, full, deep, holy, eternal love, beaming down from every star, reflected from every dewdrop, revealed in every judgment, confirmed by every deliverance, stooping to number the hairs of our head, overcoming evil, in all its subtlety, with heavenly wisdom, visiting misery, in all its depths, with deeper compassion, unutterably stern in its severity, unfathomably profound in its counsels, unspeakably gentle in its condescending kindness to the least and meanest of the creatures of God.

This tree of life strikes its roots deep in all the events of Providence, where the carnal eye sees no sign of the divine presence. But hereafter it will be a spreading tree, under whose branches a whole universe of ransomed souls may find shelter, whose fruits shall satisfy them with an endless variety of heavenly joys, and the very leaves shall be for the healing of the nations. O how blessed, how delightful must be the privilege of seeing all things in the light of a goodness that is without flaw and without weariness; to discover perfect love and boundless wisdom in all the vast range of creation, providence, and grace, and to enter into the full import of that song of praise, of which eternity can never exhaust the meaning—"He is the Rock; his work is perfect; all his ways are judgment, a God of truth, and without iniquity, just and right is he." "Great and marvelous are thy works, Lord God Almighty; just and true are thy ways, thou King of saints!"

The coming glory of the church of Christ has many aspects, and all of them are full of blessings. But perhaps this is the most delightful of all the rich blessings which compose the promised inheritance, that we shall see the Lord as he is, and know even as we are known. It is but a faint glimpse of the divine perfection, of the grace of the Lord Jesus, of the love of the Father, and the fellowship of the Holy Spirit, that we can attain in this valley of sin and death. But when the veil is drawn away, and instead of the cherubim with flaming sword, to keep the way of the tree of life, the angels at the gates beckon us into the heavenly city, how blessed must it be to see the King in his beauty, while every cloud of fear, suspicion, and darkness is done away!

The love which tracks the course of one single believer from the cradle to the grave, should be enough to fill his lips with ceaseless thanksgiving. How much more, when we see this love, along its path of silent mystery, following all the sons of God through every varying scene of their pilgrimage; and see it pursuing with a voice of deepest sorrow, and warnings and invitations, sealed by the death of him who hath no pleasure in the death of the sinner, the rebels with whom it seems to plead and weep in vain. Here, indeed, is an ocean of love without bounds, without dimensions, in which our thoughts lose themselves in the deep abysses of the divine goodness. These treasures are laid up in store, but the day of revelation is at hand. Silently, every day and every hour, these fruits are growing upon the tree of life; and when the mystery of God is finished, and the Lord returns personally to complete the work he has begun, and accomplish the restitution of all things, then his glory shall be revealed and all flesh shall see it together.

In Christ's millenial kingdom the jar and tumult of worldly strife will be hushed into silence; the dreams of human philosophy will pass away like a cloud, and disappear. On the ruins of all the world's phantom greatness a glorious vision will then arise, the revelation of thoughts of love which are from everlasting to everlasting, a counsel which has never failed, a goodness that has never suffered the taint; a wisdom that has seen the end from the beginning, an almighty power which has triumphed over a perverseness of evil that seemed incorrigible, and difficulties that seemed insuperable; which has brought good out of all evil, and light out of the depths of darkness, and at length subdued all things under the feet of the wondrous Redeemer, that God himself may be all in all.

Let us learn, then, to look forward, with steadfast hope, to this grace which is to be brought to us at the revelation of Jesus Christ. And O, may those who have never begun to taste of this tree of life, this holy happiness to be found in the knowledge of our God and Savior, come at once in faith, that they may eat of these pleasant fruits. "The Spirit and the Bride say, Come." In the cross of the Lord Jesus a new and living way is opened, by which the most guilty and vile may draw near, and have boldness of access into the most holy place through the blood of Jesus.

No cherub with sword of flame bars the approach, but the angels themselves invite us to enter in. There is joy in the presence of those blessed spirits over one sinner that repenteth, over one prodigal restored to his Father's home. O that the dwellers in the streets and lanes of our great cities, worn with care, wasted with disease, and too often debased with sin, might be raised to the hope of this better city, this more glorious metropolis; where, instead of the feverish din of trade and the ravages of death, there is the pure river of life, proceeding from the throne of God, and the tree of life with golden fruits on either side of the river, society in its purest, noblest forms of mutual love and happiness, all consecrated to the glory of the true and eternal King.—Christian Herald.

"SEARCH THE SCRIPTURES."

L. A. WHEELER.

"Their eyes were holden that they should not know him."—LUKE 24: 16

These words were spoken concerning two men whom Jesus appeared to and talked with after his resurrection, as they were on their way to Emmaus, and may serve to illustrate our real condition since the fall.

Before that fall man talked with his Maker face to face; but since, he has had to live a life of faith; yet God has been pleased, from time to time, to manifest himself to the human race, sometimes by angels, sometimes by visions, sometimes by dreams, sometimes by an audible voice from heaven, and by his own Son. But, like those two men, our "eyes are holden," and it is only by searching the Scriptures, and faith opening our understanding, that we realize our privileges and dangers. Those who search not the Scriptures are not aware that "the angel of the Lord encampeth round about them that fear him, and delivereth them." Ps. 34: 7. They are as insensible of this as was Elisha's servant when he and his master found themselves compassed by the Syrian army, and he in his fear exclaimed, "Alas! my master, how shall we do?" "Fear not," says the good man, "for they that be with us are more than they that be with them. And Elisha prayed, and said, Lord, I pray thee, open his eyes that he may see. And the Lord opened the eyes of the young man; and he saw; and, behold, the mountain was full of horses and chariots of fire round about Elisha." 2 Kings 6: 15–17.

Many of God's children have been led to exclaim as did Jacob, "Surely the Lord was in this place and I knew it not." Gen. 27: 16. What a privilege to have guardian angels, and what a privilege to know that we have them. It keeps us in peace, when if we had not this knowledge we might be troubled.

But it is not always from visible dangers, as in Elisha's case, that we are delivered. No doubt we have greater deliverances from invisible dangers than any other; for we read—"Be sober, be vigilant; because your adversary, the devil, as a roaring lion, walketh about, seeking whom he may devour." 1 Pet. 5: 8. God knows all our needs, and has provided for them. If Mary Magdalene could have seen those seven devils, or that man that dwelt among the tombs could have seen that legion that Jesus cast out of him—a power sufficient to cause two thousand swine to rush into the sea—they might have been less willing to have first formed their acquaintance. One thing is certain, the man besought Jesus that he might be with him. Perhaps he thought that Christ's company might keep him from getting into such a condition again; or, if he did, the physician would be at hand. Let us keep near Jesus, for dangers, seen and unseen, are about us, and we should search the Scriptures that we may see things as they are.

THE SIGNIFICANCE OF THE GREAT PROPHETIC SYMBOLS OF DANIEL AND JOHN.

L. T. CUNNINGHAM.

(Concluded.)

As to the exact time when this power was set up, or established, is not as yet certain. The taking of Rome from the Goths in A. D. 538, has been regarded as a strong point; but time has proved its fallacy. The taking of Ravenna, the capital of the Gothic kingdom of Italy in A. D. 539 or 540 is now regarded as the last point to which we can look as the commencement of the 1335 year period. But the taking of Ravenna does not necessarily fix the point there for the setting up of that abominable power; for it would necessarily require some little time for legal arrangements between Justinian and the Papal hierarchy, after the breaking of the Gothic power in Italy, in order to the giving to the papacy jurisdiction over the whole empire. The giving of the saints into the hand of this power, by the decree of Justinian in 533, dates the 1260 years of Dan. 7, which period must consequently end in 1798, at the French Revolution.

Although the 1260 years have been supposed to commence with the 1335, yet the passing of time has proved the fallacy of such connection. We have been of the opinion for some time that no two unequal prophetic periods found in the Bible commence together, or terminate simmltaneously: this is especially true of the periods in Dan. 9; and we see no reason why the principle should not apply to all prophetic periods.

When God announced to Noah the period of one hundred and twenty years to end the antediluvian age, the word went forth from his mouth but once. So of the periods of the sojourn in Egypt and in the wilderness; also the seventy years' captivity in Babylon, and so of all prophetic periods in the Bible,—God speaks but once, and his word must be regarded, or direful consequences will follow unbelief in his declarations. There can be no doubt of the execution of his word according to the exact data given; for there can be no failure on his part; the failures on our part in time calculations must be ascribed to human weakness and incompetency, and our past experience must teach us lessons of modesty in our assumptions, which time has proved fallacious.

We are not yet certain as to the proper adjustment of the Christian with the Vulgar Era as to the birth of Christ. The learned are not agreed on this point, so that our time arguments may be affected from one to four years. If the generation in our Lord's prophecy (Matt. 24th) is to be understood as a hundred years, that must terminate in 1880; so that whatever error may exist in human chronology, it will not affect the divine. A space of from one to four years is the utmost limit (according to human wisdom) that the prophetic periods can be extended; and the relation that prophetic events sustain to chronological data make it almost certain that the grand crisis will be reached within the above limit. Therefore we have come into a period of awful expectation of the immediate coming of the Son of man to judgment. While we wait the Eastern movement in the Holy Land with anxiety, and the downfall of the "king of the north" (or Turkey), we welcome it as the harbinger of "the battle of that great day of God Almighty," when "blood" will flow in the valley of Jehoshaphat, to "the horse bridles, for a space of a thousand and six hundred furlongs." This will be the indignation of Yah-veh on the nations, and on all their armies, while the saints are in their chambers, secure above, till the indignation is overpast, when they will descend with Christ to Mount Zion in the heavenly Jerusalem. Then "the kingdom, and dominion, and the greatness of the kingdom under the whole heaven, shall be given to the people of the saints of the Most High, whose kingdom is an everlasting kingdom, and all dominions shall serve and obey him."

Here is not only the earth restored, as the kingdom, but here is dominion also given to the saints; they are to be in a state of true royalty with Christ their King. As Adam was in a state of royalty before the fall, having "dominion" over the beasts of the field, and the fowls of the air, the cattle, and every creeping thing, as subordinate king over all the earth under Jehovah; in like manner will the saints under Christ have a similar dominion over the new earth (for proof see Micah 4: 8; Isa. 11: 6–9); the wolf and leopard being in that state of docility that a little child will lead—control them.

If it was not necessary for wicked nations to exist at creation, in order for Adam to have somebody to reign over, aside from what God specifies as belonging to his dominion, neither will it be necessary for wicked nations to exist in the new earth, or in the thousand years, in order that the saints may have somebody to reign over. This applies equally to the thousand years, as to subsequent duration; for the saints shall reign for ever. See Rev. 22: 5. Amen. The Lord hasten the glorious time.

Since writing the foregoing, the great prophetic movement as set forth in Dan. 11: 44, 45, is being inaugurated by the present insurrection in Turkey, as the last great prophetical sign in the consecutive order of events in said chapter, foreshadowing the immediate downfall of the Turkish empire in Europe, when the Turk shall "go out in great heat [Tafel's Trans.] to destroy, and utterly to make away many," and to "plant the tabernacles of his palace between the seas in the glorious holy mountain," and then "come to his end" with "none to help him." We believe the Turk is destined to go to Jerusalem, where he will gather his embattled hosts to make his last stand against his enemies, on the holy mountain, claiming it for the seat, or throne of his empire, and will there fall, or "come to his end and none shall help him." "And at that time shall Michael [one like God] stand up," i. e., to reign. Christ now comes himself to claim the holy mountain, as the throne of his sovereignty over the kingdoms of this world, which will then be "dashed to pieces"—"broken to shivers." (See Ps. 2: 9; Rev. 2: 27.)

This awful "time of trouble" is just before us; the world is very soon to be involved in it; all the enemies of Christ, the unconverted millions of earth's teeming population, must drink the bitter cup of coming woe;—"the third woe cometh quickly." "The seventh angel sounded, and"—(see Rev. 11: 15–19.

O that God might help all that may read these pages to immediately seek shelter in Christ by repentance of sin, and faith in his atoning blood, ere that solemn judgment scene of separation of the righteous from the wicked. Amen.

DOCTRINE.

MRS. L. M. STODDARD.

Much is said in these days against preaching doctrine. Union meetings are held in many localities with the express argument that no doctrine shall be spoken of, or made prominent, so that outsiders may be puzzled to know to what denomination we may belong."

This appears quite a feasible plan, looking from a human stand-point, but when we look into God's word, we find that all the teachings of Jesus, who spake as never man spake, were doctrinal; and on a certain occasion "when he had ended his sayings, the people were astonished at his doctrine, for he taught as one having authority and not as the Scribes."

Shall not we then who believe we are living in the "last days," when Paul says they will not endure "sound doctrine," be in a safe position when we follow the example of Jesus? Shall we yoke up with "despisers," "scoffers" and "mockers," in these "perilous times," and refrain to sound the alarm far and wide, "Behold the Bridegroom cometh?" Shall we who stand before the world in the same position that Noah and his family did before the antediluvians, shun to declare the great dispensational truth to this last generation? Shall we who came out of Egypt and saw the great and wise ones of earth quail before the burning truths which distinguish us as a people, be shorn of our strength in trying to mix oil and water, by compromising or refraining from teaching or preaching the word of the Lord which is doctrine? God forbid!.

Hear the words of Moses, which he spake in the ears of all the congregation of Israel, Deut. 32: 2, "Give ear, O ye heavens, and I will speak, and hear, O earth, the words of my mouth. My doctrine shall drop as the rain; my speech shall distil as the dew; as the small rain upon the tender herb, and as the showers upon the grass." If the "tender herb" and the grass can grow and thrive without the "dew" or "showers of rain," then can a man or woman "grow up into Christ their living head" without doctrine?

We notice another fact, i. e., That the doctrine of God is always spoken of in the singular number, while the opinions of men and devils as doctrines. Jesus says, "My doctrine is not mine, but his that sent me; and if any man will do his will, he shall know of the doctrine, whether it be of God, or whether I speak of myself." John 7: 16, 17. He also says, "Sanctify them through thy truth; thy word is truth."

If it is true, as we believe it is, that the signs have appeared, indicative of the coming of the Just One to reign on David's throne, and establish his kingdom upon earth, it becomes the watchmen upon the walls of Zion to sound the notes of alarm, whether the people will hear or forbear; and rightly divide the word of truth, and give to each a "portion of meat in due season;" or when the time is due, to present doctrine or the word of the Lord, which will sanctify, purify, and make ready a people who shall exclaim, "Lo! this is our God, we have waited for him, and he will save us. This is the Lord, we have waited for him; we will be glad and rejoice in his salvation."

It is said by some "Let us have more of practical preaching, for we are tired of so much doctrine." I would inquire if there is a truth in God's word that is more practical in its bearings upon humanity than the doctrine of Christ's coming? I am glad that such men as Spurgeon are finding out the great difference between the apostolic preaching and the popular preaching of these days, and the subjects or motives made use of to bring men and women to a knowledge of the truth. Did not Peter preach the second coming of Christ and the restitution on the day of Pentecost, which resulted in the conversion of three thousand? Did he not testify in the house of Cornelius that Jesus was ordained of God to be judge of quick and dead? Did not Philip preach the things concerning the kingdom of God which caused both men and women to be baptized? Did not Paul say that God had commanded all men to repent because he hath appointed a day in which he will judge the world in righteousness by that man [Jesus] whom he hath ordained? Did not Paul speak boldly, disputing and persuading the things concerning the kingdom of God? Did he not reason of righteousness, temperance, and a judgment to come, which made Felix tremble? Look at the effect of his preaching in the wicked city of Thessalonica, when they turned to God from idols, to serve the living God and to wait for his Son from heaven. Hear him comforting the sorrowful ones by preaching the resurrection of the dead and change of the living at the coming of Christ; and hear his last words from the dungeon at Rome, to his beloved son in the gospel, Timothy, "I charge thee therefore, before God, and the Lord Jesus Christ, who shall judge the quick and dead at his appearing and his kingdom, preach the Word, be instant in season, out of season: reprove, rebuke, exhort, with all long suffering and doctrine. For the time will come when they will not endure sound doctrine, but after their own lusts shall they heap to themselves teachers having itching ears. And they shall be turned unto fables. But watch thou in all things; endure afflictions, do the work of an evangelist, make full proof of thy ministry. For I am now ready to be offered, and the time of my departure is at hand. I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith. Henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which the Lord the righteous judge shall give me at that day; and not to me only, but unto all them also who love his appearing." This was written to Timothy to be recorded for the benefit of the church in these last days.

We see then the great object of preaching the doctrine of Christ coming to earth again. It leads men to repentance, and causes them to believe in the Lord Jesus Christ as the only name given under heaven whereby they can be saved. It teaches us to be watchful, prayerful and diligent, that we may be found of him in peace. It teaches us to be patient, and to purify ourselves that we may be without spot and blameless, and not be ashamed at his coming. It teaches us to use the world without abusing it, for the time is short; and to count all things loss, if by any means we may attain unto the resurrection of the dead. It teaches us to be pilgrims and strangers, like the patriarchs of old, and to look for a heavenly country and city.

As well might Paul have kept still in the synagogue at Ephesus about the things concerning the kingdom of God, instead of departing from them to the school of Tyrannus, and disputing two years longer, as for us to withhold the doctrine that the earth is to be the future inheritance of the saints, that there is no reward till Jesus comes, and no immortality out of him; and that the wages of sin is death; also that there is no millennium before the coming of Christ, and that the fulfilment of prophecy and signs of the times warrant us in preaching and believing the kingdom of God at hand. Shall we hold our peace when the world is perishing for lack of knowledge of these things? We believe the very stones would cry out against us, and echo these potent truths in the ears of earth's inhabitants.

In view of these facts and the manifest desire to substitute something else in their place, we feel like the blessed Master when he wept over Jerusalem, after they had turned their backs upon the great dispensational truths of those days. We would not by any means be in the condition the disciples were on a certain time, when they forbade one who was casting out devils in Jesus' name, because he followed not with them, but we would keep to the great work assigned us, seeking every opportunity to "speak a word in season and out of season," scattering the tracts like autumn leaves, that converts may be "fed with the sincere milk of the word," that they may grow in "grace and knowledge of the truth in Christ Jesus."

Let us have the mind of Christ; and while we speak boldly for God and truth, let it come from a heart of love, warmed by the Spirit of our heavenly Father. Let us remember that we once sat in darkness upon the blessed doctrine of the speedy coming of Christ, and our eyes were anointed with heavenly eye-salve, and so we feel for others who are blind to these important things concerning the kingdom of God.

MOODY LOOKING HEAVENWARD.

We hear very little of revivals now outside of New York, and there the interest is continued at the Hippodrome where Moody and Sankey continue to draw crowds, and where the interest seems to be deepening. Yesterday Mr. Moody preached on the subject of Heaven, a subject which he will continue to-morrow. It was a clear and vivid description—such a picture as could be drawn only by a man who believes thoroughly what he finds in the New Testament. He began by saying that in these days there were many people who think there is no heaven except on earth, and no God except nature. But the heaven on which he would have all hopes fixed was the one above the skies, the one in which were God the Father, and Christ the Son, the angels and the friends who have gone before; and with his Bible in his hand, he read the texts on which this vision and this hope were founded. He spoke of the children—the way to teach them the simple story and to lead them to God; and all his hearers were apparently more deeply touched than they have ever seemed to be before. Mr. Sankey and Mr. Thatcher sang softly together "Waiting and Watching," before the meeting closed. The noon-day meetings are largely attended, a great many people daily pouring in from the country.—Newark, N. J. Daily, March 10th.

When Mr. Moody was conducting meetings in Brooklyn, a few months ago, a little Advent tract was mailed to him on the Bible doctrine of the future abode of the saints, "showing from the writings of Moses and the prophets, the testimony of the Lord Jesus and his apostles, that the place of abode of the saved is not in heaven where Christ now dwells, but that it will be on this earth where Jesus lived, suffered and died, and from which he ascended, intending to return again and reign upon it with his elect forever."

It was so plainly written that a Sunday-school scholar of ordinary intelligence could understand it; for it only arranged God's words concerning the meaning of the Abrahamic promise of inheritance, the locality of Christ's eternal throne, and exhibited proof upon proof that the prayer—"Thy kingdom come, Thy will be done on earth" etc., which was taught by Christ himself to his people, can only be realized by them when they are raised from the dead or translated from mortality when Jesus comes; and thus will be fulfilled those blessed words of Jehovah—"But as truly as I live, all the earth shall be filled with the glory of the Lord." Numb. 14: 21. Not a word of this blessed doctrine is given in the above report.

Did Mr. M. receive the tract? I have no doubt he did. Why then does he follow the old unscriptural rut, teaching that heaven above the stars is the christian's eternal home, saying that "The heaven on which he would have all hopes fixed was the one above the skies, the one in which were God the Father, and Christ the Son, the angels and the friends who have gone before." Mr. M. is not alone in this course. That entire host of ministers that sit by him on his platform may know by an hour's searching of the Bible that the saints' inheritance cannot be reached prior to the second advent of our Lord, the day of resurrection. This truth has not been hid in a corner during the past thirty years; and still nearly all of those teachers, Mr. M., with Bible in hand, included, ignore it, by repeating and endorsing traditionary notions in its stead to the crowds who hang upon human utterances instead of consulting and following the word of truth.

Why is this? Because truth is progressive, and as it advances it disturbs the interest of those who abide in error. To embrace newly revealed truth involves crosses, sacrifices, and reproach, therefore men generally shrink from it—as from a hated, unpopular thing.

Let Mr. Moody test this matter. Let him show by the divine oracles that the eternal inheritance of the Lord's redeemed cannot be obtained till they wake from the unconscious sleep of death by the voice of the archangel and the trump of God. Then will be seen the reason why the apostolic church attached so much importance to Jesus and the resurrection, as the only hope of future life, and will look for, and hail with delight, the evidences that prove that the coming of the King is now at the very door.

How long, think you, would the Hippodrome preacher be in cleaning out that crowd of clergy and laity, or rather, how long would they be in cleaning him out if the Bible view was fully presented?

One of the same tracts was put into the hands of the so-called female revivalist, Mrs. Van Cott, by an Advent sister, when she was holding meetings in this city. I am told she treated it with the utmost indifference, if not contempt, as being a subject beneath her notice. The tract was also given to one of our most eminent M. E. ministers, who promised to read it, and we believe he did; and yet, notwithstanding the scriptural light it gave him, he preached a sermon a few weeks afterward on heaven, and expressed his belief that his sainted father was there now enjoying his eternal reward, and indulged the hope of going there some day to join him.

The above facts are given with sincere regret, not to attack the christian character of any one, but they show that the great want among professors of Christ is not knowledge, but a willing disposition to follow the truth through unpopular paths. Surely either ignorance or self-deception reigns when doctrines as fabulous as the Papal purgatory are proclaimed in direct opposition to a thus saith the Lord.

Dear Advent brethren aud sisters, we find ourselves in a peculiar position. It is not of our own devising, but the love of truth has led us here, and here we must abide, waiting humbly on the Lord. We are separated from sectarianism and from the most of its theology. They are ashamed of our testimony. Go to one of their meetings and test this assertion by giving your convictions in full. What brought us here? Divine convictions received with tears and prayers over our open Bibles. The Lord heard us and gave us light and strength. Our course involved a painful circumcision, a path of self-denial and reproach. But O, how the Lord illuminated and emboldened us to wave his banner.

Sectarianism refused to go forth with us without the camp, and shall we now go back and tacitly endorse teaching that shocks our understanding since the light of prophecy beamed upon our minds? We must not. Though often weary and discouraged we must keep onward. A blessed message has been committed to our trust, oh, let us pray against lukewarmness, and rally around our colors that are almost trailing in the dust. Let others who refuse to walk with us in our Advent testimony go on in their own path. If they bring souls to Christ we rejoice in that. It shows that their zeal is better than their knowledge, and should provoke us to more zeal in the use of ours. If our zeal correspond with our illumination, and we use both with clean, unselfish hearts, and clean hands, the testimony will commend itself to the consciences of the hearers, for the Holy Spirit will always seal his own truth when uttered by those who are sanctified thereby. We do not refer to hobbies and speculations that have been forced upon us under the name of Advent truth. May the good Lord deliver us from such afflictions, for their fruit has been bitter, but the doctrine of the old paths, the inheritance, the resurrection, the signs of the speedy coming glory—proclaim it brethren! Awake, awake. O Lord, revive thy work!

Some of our aged brethren and sisters who still linger on the shore of time can tell of the heavenly power that once attended the Advent message. It was truly as the "Sword of the Lord and of Gideon." Men heard, trembled, and turned to the Lord. Christians were weaned from worldly idols and prepared to meet the Bridegroom. Their assemblies were indeed as heavenly places. It was not a movement of pretty, sensational singing, or pointless preaching, but a solemn judgment impression produced by a truth-loving ministry, and its fruits were good. But oh, trials came; hobbies came; divisions came, and slumbering came, and is now heavy upon us. Is the arm of the Lord shortened or his ear heavy? Is not his truth the same, and shining out with still greater effulgence? We are not straitened in the Lord, but in ourselves. What shall we do but look away from ourselves, and unitedly, trustingly cry, O Lord, revive thy work? JOHN LYLE.

THE POWERS OF HEAVEN.

"For the powers of heaven shall be shaken."—Jesus. —LUKE 21:26.

This language of Christ was a sublime prediction given in answering a question propounded by his disciples. They say unto him, as recorded by Matthew, "Tell us, when shall these things be? and what shall be the sign of thy coming and the end of the world?" "Jesus answered;" then what follows, expressed by Christ, as recorded by the inspired historians did answer their question. The passage at the head of this article was among his statements made in giving that answer, which is in the form of a prediction, presenting the last sign in the series connected directly with the grand event inquired after, viz., the "coming" of Christ.

The central idea in the question which they wished explained and defined was the time "when" certain events should take place. Not what should be their nature or results; but "when" they should transpire. The disciples defined what they meant.

The question naturally presents three distinct propositions. (1) The "things" to be looked for. (2) The time "when" they should occur. (3) The nature of the evidences to indicate their approach. The disciples expressed the events they inquired after when they said—"Thy [Christ's] coming and the end of the world." They also specified the nature of the evidences which should indicate the approach of the events, when they said—"What shall be the sign of thy coming?" To answer the question therefore intelligently and properly, Christ must present a sign, or a series of signs, which must be so arranged as to show "when" the "coming" and "end" will take place. He did this in a plain, masterly manner; first foretelling that certain great events, occupying a period of time, and affecting nations and peoples, must transpire; "after" which the signs would "begin to come to pass;" thus showing that the church should not look for the signs of his coming until after other events predicted should be seen.

He expressed the fact that the signs would not appear at one time, but consecutively—one after another, when he said, "When these things begin to come to pass, then look up, . . . for your redemption draweth nigh." The last of these signs, as given by Christ, which must indicate the time of his coming and the end of the world, is the shaking of the powers of heaven.

What is that sign? and has it appeared? The "heaven," the powers of which shall be shaken, appears to be the same as that which shall pass away (ver. 33), and from which "fearful sights and great signs shall appear," V. 11. In these passages heaven is not the place of God's throne, for that will not pass away; but it is the atmospheric and starry heavens surrounding the earth. This appears evident from Christ's expressions—"The stars shall fall from heaven, and the powers of the heavens shall be shaken . . . and they shall see the Son of man coming in the clouds of heaven with power and great glory." Matt. 24: 29, 30. The heaven referred to has clouds and stars visible to men on the earth; for they will see among them "fearful sights and great signs."

The "powers of heaven" must be the forces, energy, controling influences which govern the stars, clouds, and all things upon which those forces operate. Shaking those powers must be changing or deranging them; so that those forces will produce different results in the motion, order and condition of all bodies and elements in the heavens. The shaking of the powers of a kingdom would be manifested in the social and political changes among the subjects. So the shaking of the powers of heaven or physical forces, which has been wont to produce certain physical order and relation between the bodies and elements of the heavens, will be manifested by physical changes in the condition and relations of those bodies.

These new and strange appearances are presented by the Savior as signs of his coming and the end of the present order of earth-scenes. He expresses the idea, we think, that the shaking will result in the events which he presents as signs, when he states what the signs will be, and adds, "Men's hearts failing them for fear, and for looking after those things which are coming on the earth; for the powers of heaven shall be shaken." The word for is used to show that the statement following it gives the reason or cause for that which the sentence preceding it stated. I must go to Boston to-day, for my wife is there waiting for me. What follows the word for in this sentence gives the reason for the statement preceding it. It shows that the reason was given why I must go to Boston. The word was used just so by the Savior, to show that he did give the cause which produced the fear in men's hearts, which was, the shaking of the powers of heaven.

This fear is given as one of the signs following the others, and evidently produced by them; for it is produced by an anticipation of the very things which the signs indicate, and will come to pass; for Jesus said, "Men's hearts failing them for fear, and for looking after those things which are coming on the earth." It appears evident, therefore, that the shaking of the powers will produce the great physical signs, and will finally result in the grand physical change of this world thus signified.

The text is so grouped with those referring to the sun, moon, stars and clouds, that it seems to us to be wresting it from its legitimate position to make it figurative, while those are interpreted as literal. If it be received as literal, then true science must certainly serve to explain some of the foretold phenomena; for science explains the forces or powers acting upon real matter and beings, so that when those powers are changed, the changed motions, relations and conditions of matter and beings will indicate it.

It appears therefore that these signs, when developed, will particularly interest two classes of men;—the Scientists, who will be watching for every change in the movements and relations of earth, matter, and the heavenly bodies; and the prophetic student, who will be watching for the fulfillment of the predictions foretelling these sublime physical changes. Both classes are represented in these prophecies as being particularly interested in these developments. The scientists, fearfully watching the grand procession of scientific phenomena, expecting the dreaded final result; while the servant of God, beholding the long-looked-for signs, will lift up his head, looking for speedy redemption.

These grand events, so wonderfully presented by Christ, are, we believe, being transcribed from the prophetic to the historic page. The scientist and prophetic interpreter are presented there, side by side, deeply interested in the mighty unfoldings of nature's great changes in the heavens and upon the earth, arousing the two classes especially to a vivid conception of earth's approaching doom. We have much direct testimony upon this point, from pens of the most learned and pious men in the world; but have not the space in this article to give more than one, which we have recently selected. A writer presents a long article upon the subject in the Philadelphia Sunday Dispatch, from which we extract the following:—

"THE END OF THE EARTH.

It is an extraordinary coincidence, to use no stronger phrase, that at the present time Dr. Cumming is by no means alone in predicting that the terrible cosmical convulsion by which our earth and its inhabitants shall pass away, will surely overtake us soon. . . . The present heralds of approaching doom are not only members of widely different schools of speculative philosophy, but their well-recognized ability entitles their opinions to great respect, even when expressed individually. How much more so, then, when they unite in declaring a single unmistakable conviction!

During the past decade our idea of the universe has undergone a complete change—a radical metamorphosis—though but few persons appear to recognize this fact. The notions hitherto entertained by astronomers respecting the stars and the heavens have disappeared. Take the constellation called the 'Great Bear' or 'The Wagon' as an illustration. Every one has regarded that as the enduring symbol of pre-established harmony—of the unalterable duration of the firmament. For several centuries the mariner has watched the two last stars in that constellation—those that form the rear of the imaginary 'wagon,' and termed 'the pointers'—as pointing infallibly within a few points of the pole star.

The polar star and 'the pointers' are the elements of stability to the mind of every sailor who crosses the ocean. Yet that ancient constellation is passing away, and its form will be completely changed. Each star in the 'Great Bear' has a motion of its own. Formerly, as the eminent French astronomer, M. Camille Flammarion, recently demonstrated in the Revue Scientifique, 'the constellation had the form of a cross; it is now in the form of a wagon, and is gradually changing into an ellipse, when it will be of no service to the sailor.' Nay! the pole star itself, as well as the stars in the 'Great Bear,' are drifting away from us and from each other at a velocity of thirty miles per second. It takes a cannon-ball about five seconds to go one mile. The stars of this constellation are, therefore, drifting sideways from the pole star and each other one hundred and fifty times as fast as a cannon-ball. At this rate, how much longer will our present 'pointers' and pole star be reliable for navigators? * * *

It has been customary to treat the planets as members of one family, and astronomers have expatiated enthusiastically on the remarkable fact that the planets all moved in nearly one plane, corresponding with the centre of the sun's body, and that the motion of the sun on its axis, those of the planets round their axis (the sun), and the sun and the satellites round their primaries, were in one direction—from west to east.

* * * It was a terrible revelation to Professor Airy when, examining Saturn one night with the magnificent equatorial telescope at Greenwich Observatory, he discovered that the planet had suddenly changed shape. Normally presenting the form of an ellipse, he beheld with awe that the two zones of the planet corresponding with the north and south temperate zones of our earth were mysteriously flattened, communicating what he termed a "square-shouldered aspect" to the hitherto beautiful orb. In plain terms, the planet looked like a rectangle with rounded corners. The astronomer was convinced that his eyesight was impaired. He tried another combination of lenses, and a different eye-piece, but the result was the same. There was Saturn and his belt out of all shape! An assistant was summoned. He, too, saw the extraordinary change. What could it indicate? The Professor began to consider. There was the mighty mass of Saturn, exceeding that of the earth ninety-fold. That stupendous mass was endued with gravitating energy precisely in the same way as the earth's mass. There must be from the surface toward the centre a continually increasing pressure. This pressure is incalculable. It must enormously exceed the internal pressure existing within the earth's interior. Steel, in fact, would be as yielding as water under such a pressure.

Such a phenomenal sinking and change of shape as this, must have involved amazing and most stupendous throes—throes whose force and magnitude paralyze the imagination and prostrate the mind with the vertigo of the infinite! The cataclysm would certainly involve the utter destruction of life—so far as we understand the term. The astronomer felt that doom had overtaken the favored inhabitants of Saturn, with their glorious summer, and mellow, effulgent skies. Henceforth he revealed in his orbit round the sun the silent graveyard of an unknown race. It was from this remarkable planetary catastrophe, combined with certain prophecies of Daniel, Zechariah, and the Apocalypse, that led Dr. Cummings, some years since, to believe that the "Great Tribulation" was close at hand.

* * * "The sun himself is but a star in the 'milky way,' and an unhealthy, changeable, organically diseased star at that. The planetary family that revolves round him are likewise subject to sudden internal maladies—convulsive eruptions or morbid and fatal spasms. Mercury is probably burned to a cinder—or more properly resembles a red-hot iron ball, uninhabitable. Mars and Saturn are dead." Thus reasoned a few months since the famous German astronomer, Herr Schroter, of Lilienthal, when an extraordinary experience was vouchsafed to him. He beheld, in fact, the death of the majestic planet of the solar system—the grand and transcendent Jupiter! He reports the awful catastrophe as follows:

"The evening being extremely fine, I was watching the second satellite of Jupiter as it gradually approached to transit of Jupiter's disk. It appeared in contact at half-past ten o'clock, and for some minutes remained on the edge of the disk, presenting an appearance not unlike that of the lunar mountains coming into view during the moon's first quarter, until it finally disappeared on the body of the planet. After an interval of exactly twelve minutes I again turned to Jupiter, when, to my utter astonishment, I perceived the same satellite outside the disk. It remained visible for precisely four minutes, and then suddenly vanished.

No possible explanation of this most extraordinary phenomenon can be conceived. Of course, even to suppose that a cloud layer rose or fell in a few minutes several thousand miles—about eight thousand miles—is as inadmissible as to suppose the solid crush of a globe to undergo so vast a change of level." The phenomenon will probably forever remain an impenetrable mystery; but there remains not an atom of doubt that such a gigantic throe involved the instantaneous destruction of everything resembling life on the planet. Death, in fact, overtook Jupiter as it had overtaken his three brothers, and as it may in a few months overtake our earth, or any reader of these words.

Saturn and Jupiter seem to have been suddenly convulsed by a gigantic spasm of gravitation very much as the individual is suddenly stricken dead by apoplexy. There are good grounds for believing that our globe, as well as the kindred planets, Venus, Uranus, and Neptune, may perish simultaneously in what will be the crowning convulsion of our system. Father Secchi, the eminent astronomer of Rome, and the highest living authority on the sun, has recently discovered that the grand source of all terrestrial activity—the controller of the planets whether alive or dead—the origin of all energy, activity, vigor and vital power—the sun himself—is at present subject to some extraordinary influences, which produce continual changes in his form as well as in his size. His diameter is less than usual, his colored sierras are deeper, while his red prominences are larger than usual. These perturbations, the learned father declares, indicate a disturbance of extraordinary character and vehemence in the solar-cloud envelope, probably occasioned by shrinkage in the sun's mass. For it must not be forgotten, while examining the probabilities of the impending convulsion and extinction of life from our earth and the solar system, that this fact of the sun's shrinkage has been tolerably well known to astronomers for nearly a decade. Of course the sun cannot continue to give off the vast amount of heat that he does without expending material. You cannot heat every room in an immense house without a large expenditure of fuel. The sun emits every minute as much heat as would melt a shell of ice forty feet thick all over the sun's surface.

* * * Father Secchi, in this alarming solar disturbance, traces a striking comparison between the fate of the planet Saturn and that likely before long to befall the sun. In each system there are eight orbs circling around the central body; and each system exhibits close by the central orb a multitude of discrete bodies—the zodiacal light in the solar system and the scheme of rings in the Saturnian system—subserving an unexplained purpose.

There is still another momentous consideration. The various planets probably act upon the sun even as the sun acts upon them. Let us look for an analogical system of action and reaction. Unquestionably the moon exerts an influence on the occurrence of earthquakes and volcanoes in our planet—not, be it understood, by her own attraction directly, but by affecting the balance between terrestial forces. We observe the direct action of the moon in the tides; but in the indirect action of which we speak the primary forces—centrifugal and centripetal—are affected. Similarly, as the eminent French savan, M. Flammarion, has remarked, "the planets indirectly affect the sun's condition, and the recent gigantic throes in the two prime planets, Saturn and Jupiter, probably exerted a powerful and disastrous influence on the central orb of our system." * * *

As exhibiting the terrible experiences through which our globe has already passed, the distinguished philosopher just quoted remarks: "There are grounds for believing that the moon will unite itself with our earth. The results of the collision are manifest. The whole mass of the moon and the cold crust of the earth would be raised some thousands of degrees, and the surface of our globe be converted into a fiery ocean. Such a collision is by no means improbable, however, for it is almost certain that such processes of combination between different parts of our globe may have repeatedly happened before the earth attained its present magnitude, and that luxurious vegetation which now exists as deposits of coal, may have at different times been buried under the fiery debris resulting from the conflict of those masses." Something in the same style, on a smaller scale, is continually happening in our day. Thousands of meteors are daily falling upon our globe, mostly in the form of ashes, consequent upon the fierce conflagration of those bodies while being projected with inconceivable rapidity through our atmosphere. Sometimes a meteor is not entirely consumed in this passage through our atmosphere, and it strikes the ground like the Iowa meteor of Feb. 12th, 1875—a series of metallic fragments, weighing in all over five thousand pounds.

Let the imagination that is not appalled by these immensities strive to conceive of them. Yet Science is as certain concerning these distances as in predicting that there will be a total eclipse of the sun on the 17th of September next, visible in the Northern and Western Pacific Oceans, and in Australia. When astronomers, therefore, enter the field of prophecy, their presagements deserve attention. But when theologians skilled in scriptural exegesis, and believers in Spiritualism who are incapable of charlatanry, unite with the mathematical astronomer in predicting that the end of mundane things is at hand—is at the very door, so to speak—people of sagacity and acumen will perceive that this is no crude sensation—no fanatical dream. PUBLISH THE TRUTH.

As we draw near the end of the gospel age, and as the converging lines of inspired truth meet at a focal point, just in the future, so that the period of preaching and publishing those truths is about to end, the necessity and importance of proclaiming them to all men are intensified.

God has wonderfully multiplied and enlarged the means and channels through which the truth can be published to the people of the present generation. The servants of Christ now enjoy great advantages over those of past ages, of preaching to larger congregations, on account of increased facilities for congregating, and also on account of increased toleration extended to all lands. They have the advantage of rapidly running to and fro, increasing the knowledge of the great prophetic visions.

But one of the most marked and we think providential channels through which truth can now be brought to bear upon the public mind is the press. The art of printing by movable types is a modern and wonderful invention. It has radically changed the mode of communicating intelligence among men. God saw that his church, to do her appointed work of preaching or publishing the gospel of the kingdom to all nations by one generation, must be supplied with extraordinary facilities, and so he has caused to be furnished for her special advantage the steam car, so that they may "run," and the steam press, so that they may make the "vision" "plain upon tables" (of paper and canvass), "that he may run that readeth it." When the time comes that God requires his people to do a specific work he always provides the means by which that work can be accomplished. Therefore when the time comes which the prophet foresaw, that the servants of God are required to put the vision, presenting the coming of the Bridegroom, after a tarrying, in a condition that it may be READ, he will furnish the means, so that it may be written, printed, and scattered broadcast, that all who may be induced to "run to and fro" to circulate the "knowledge" that "Michael" is about to "stand up" may be helped to accomplish the God-appointed work.

The argument appears conclusive to us that the church of this generation is the one designated by the prophets and Christ, whose duty it is to "write" the vision; and that God has been faithful on his part to furnish the means by which it may be accomplished. If this is true, then we have been correct for the last forty years, in understanding that it is now a special duty of the church to use all the means at her command to preach and publish the great message of the Bridegroom's speedy coming.

Dear brethren in Christ, if these ideas are in harmony with the Word of God, our devotional duties of praying and preaching are no more sacred and imperative than are those of publishing papers, tracts and books, and sending them every where, bearing the glorious tidings of coming redemption.

The comparative advantages of printed matter, in its easy circulation and access to the people, and little expense, is becoming greater every week. There are thousands of people whose hearts are stirred with fear at the manifest perturbed condition of our world, and who are anxious to obtain any reasonable solution of it, and the probabilities relating to the unfolding future. Many will read who cannot hear; and some will read who would not go to hear an unpopular preacher explain these mysteries by the prophetic Word.

We believe that our publications were never so much needed to scatter the light of present truth as they are to-day. There is a cry coming up from all parts of the land, Send us papers; send us tracts and books. These petitions, nearly of all them, express the desire for something that will give the Bible explanation of the strange events now transpiring, and what may be expected beyond them.

We devoutly believe that, in view of these things, it is our christian duty to make a more earnest, persistent, and united effort to increase the subscription list of the Crisis, and all of our truth-publishing papers. The three months effort has evidently accomplished much good, and we hope that many upon that list will become permanent subscribers. The financial pressure is against this part of our work, but let each do what they can, and God will assist, so that our whole duty will be accomplished.

We need new tracts, more tracts, and more funds to furnish them, and more interested and faithful persons to scatter them. We do most earnestly desire that a new and increased interest will be awakened upon this vitally important subject. O that all could see that we have but a few days to work, and that the work is of infinite importance. God has called us with a loud voice to be faithful at our appointed post of duty; and the angels watch with ceaseless vigilance to see how the church stands the awful test of the last fearful conflict. Lovers of Jesus, do all you can to sound the gospel note in all ears, and open to all eyes the pages of Sacred Truth. J. C.

WHO RAISED SAMUEL?

Bro. Gillett writes to inquire who raised Samuel? He says he has been in a Bible class, composed of ministers, lawyers, merchants, and farmers, who were examining the case of Saul and the woman of Endor. In answer to the question, Who raised Samuel? some said God; some the woman; some that it was an illusion.

The record of this event is in 1 Sam. 28. In the third verse it is said: "Now Samuel was dead, and all Israel had lamented him, and buried him in Ramah." At this time Saul had become so wicked that the Lord would not communicate with him either "by dreams, nor by vision, nor by prophets." The Philistines gathered in great numbers against Saul and the armies of Israel. Saul was frightened, and knew not what to do. In his dilemma he said to his servants: "Seek me a woman that hath a familiar spirit, that I may go to her, and inquire of her." The woman was found at Endor, about sixty miles from Ramah, where Samuel was buried. Saul took "two men with him, and they came to the woman by night." Saul made his business known, requesting an interview with Samuel. This was to be accomplished by the aid of "the familiar spirit."

The inquiry may properly arise here, Could the woman raise Samuel from the dead? or could her familiar spirit, or demon, raise him? If so, how is Christ "the resurrection and the life"? John 11: 25. If the woman, or her "familiar spirit," could raise one of the prophets, why not all of them? We think it is certain that Samuel was not raised by the woman nor her familiar spirit. Does it look reasonable that God raised him to give information through a demon and his medium to one whom he had refused to answer in any way? Certainly not. Then it follows that no one raised Samuel to converse with Saul.

We believe the whole account is but a record of a spiritual manifestation similar to those of the present day. The woman was dependent upon her "familiar spirit." She could do nothing without his aid. What was his part to perform? To cause the woman, his medium, to see the one called for, and then speak, through her, whatever seemed best to the familiar spirit. These demons—familiar spirits—like mesmerizers, have power to form a mental picture of any person, or object, in their own minds, which may appear as real objects to their mediums when under their control. In the case of the woman at Endor, her familiar spirit first showed her "gods ascending out of the earth." We think no enlightened christian man believes there are any gods in the earth to come up at the call of a familiar spirit. But the demon controling the woman had only to form a mental picture of gods coming out of the earth, and they as real beings to the woman.

Saul was very anxious to get a word from Samuel. Soon the "familiar spirit" presents him the sight of the woman; and she said, "An old man cometh up, and he is covered with a mantle." Then "Saul perceived," from his description, "that it was Samuel." Then the "familiar spirit" began to talk through his medium, claiming to be the real Samuel.

Does any candid person believe that the real Samuel, who was "dead" and "buried" in Ramah, was called out of his grave that night, and brought some sixty miles under the control of demons, to be at a Spiritualist circle? Did Samuel have on the very mantle he wore before he died? We think no one would make so wild an affirmation. Then if the mantle that the woman saw was not real, the wearer was not real. The woman might have put her hand where she saw Samuel standing, and felt neither mantle nor the person of Samuel. Like all spiritual manifestations when mediums claim to see their friends, they only see the mental pictures produced by the familiar spirits. They seem like realities to the medium, but the real objects are never present.

We answer the inquiry at the head of this article by saying, we see no evidence that any one raised Samuel. M. G.

TRINE IMMERSION.

Is one immersion the apostolic mode, or is it not? W. P. HILDERBRAND.

Trine-immersion and trine-baptism are synonymous terms. We have heard it said by a zealous advocate of trine-immersion that the three immersions constitute one baptism. Such a statement is no more correct than to say three immersions make one immersion. Immersion and baptism are two words to express the same thing.

In answer to the inquiry, we think no better authority can be given than the apostle Paul. He says, "There is one body," "one spirit," "one hope," "one Lord," one faith, one baptism." Eph. 4: 4–5. Have we a right to change the apostle's word "one" to trine? If not, then the matter is forever settled.

After a careful examination of the subject, we have not been able to find one particle of proof that any of the apostles ever taught or practised trine immersion. We find no trace of it till the time of the heretic Marcion, about the middle of the second century. M. G.

SANILAC.—The interest at Sanilac is rapidly increasing. At this date (March 14th), several have found peace, and confessed Jesus openly. Some fifty remained to the inquiry meeting, and several seemed to be decided to become the disciples of Jesus. Notwithstanding the very bad traveling, the audience last evening was said to be the largest ever seen in the place, gathered for religious purposes. They came eight miles with teams, and women walked from two to four miles and back. The Spirit of the Lord is moving the hearts of the people. To him be all the glory. M. G.

CORRECTION.—We seldom think it best to pay any attention to false statements made about us. If all were noticed, we might be kept busy a good part of the time, in making corrections. Sometimes it may be duty to expose a lie, a slander, or a crime, when the cause of Christ is being made to suffer by letting it pass unnoticed.

In Dr. N. H. Barbour's attack on us in the last "Herald of the Morning," he represents us as saying we had lived eleven years without sinning. We wish to say we made no such statement to him or any body else. We do not like to hear any one say he lived without sin; or has lived a certain length of time without sin. It may be true, but we do not think the effect is good upon an audience. M. G.

LEXINGTON.—We commenced meetings in Lexington, last Sabbath evening, March 19th, in the Advent chapel, which is neat and inviting, and is the result of Bro. Wright's faithful efforts. We had a very fine and attentive audience. Religion is said to be at low ebb in the town generally. We hear it stated by those well acquainted, that there is not a young man in town who is a christian. At our second meeting, which was last evening, there was clear evidence that the Spirit of the Lord was at work upon the hearts of those present. In the inquiry meeting four decided to submit to Jesus, and become his disciples, and others were almost persuaded. One backslider was reclaimed. We are looking for gracious results in a few days. M. G.

UNQUENCHABLE FIRE.

A Bro. in New Berne, N. C., wishes to know what is meant by the "unquenchable fire."

When speaking of those out of Christ, represented by "chaff," it is said, "He will burn up the chaff with unquenchable fire." Matt. 3: 12. We do not think any stronger language could be used to express the utter end, or blotting out of the wicked. An unquenchable fire must, of necessity, burn up whatever comes within its reach. The fact that the fire is unquenchable affords positive assurance that all who are put into the fire must be burned up, leaving nothing but smoke and ashes. If a house should take fire, and be declared unquenchable, all would understand that the house must be burnt up. Sodom was burnt with an unquenchable fire, but it is not burning now. The temple at Jerusalem was also burnt with an unquenchable fire in the time of Titus. Jer. 17: 27. Eusebius speaks of martyrs who were burnt with a pur asbeston—unquenchable fire. They are not now burning.

The gehenna fire, into which all the wicked are to be cast, after their condemnation, will burn them up just as completely as though they were briers, thorns, or stubble. From that destruction they will rise no more, but be "extinct;" "be as though they had not been." Thus sin will be finished, and only the saints will live for ever." M. G.

FROM BRO. D. C. THOMAS.

Dear Crisis:—It is with pleasure that I hail the weekly visits of this beloved paper. It fills my heart with joy. They are sought for by my neighbors as soon as received; and while I remember that my brethren and sisters are permitted to meet with those of like precious faith, I am alone; and yet not alone, for God is with me.

I am going into the highways and hedges, warning people to fly to Christ; for time is short. Jesus is coming; and as I go from place to place, my heart is sad to see the darkness that engrosses the people. I did not suppose that since the light shone from the Star of Bethlehem, there ever was such darkness on the minds of people as I find in visiting from house to house. People are perishing for lack of the bread of life. I am led to cry, O my God, raise up laborers, and send them into the vineyard; for truly, the harvest is ripe.

I spoke twice Sunday, the fifth of March, and in the evening after I had gone to a place to stay over night the people flocked in till the house was filled, and requested me to talk to them. I talked until twelve o'clock at night, and then they did not want me to stop; but poor nature would not endure any longer. I talk every night, and visit, and pray, and exhort; and, thank God, a few are willing to turn to God and find mercy.

The other night six arose for prayers. I tell you, Brn. and Srs., if any poor unworthy servant of God ever needed the prayers of God's people, it is myself; for I am alone here to defend the truth we love so well.

If any one has got any tracts or papers that they want God's blessing upon, send them to me, and I will scatter them. I am called on almost every day for some of our books or papers. I give them away as fast as I get them. Sr. L. M. Stoddard gave me a few tracts, which have been the means of bringing two souls to Christ. May God bless the good sister. I am doing all I can to get the truth before the people. I am laboring night and day, although I have much opposition; yet God is on my side; praise his name.

Now I would like if some one would send me a church covenant, and I would like to know whether I have the right to baptize those who come over on the Lord's side, as I have no license to preach, but what God gave me. For reference as to who I am, Brn. B. P. Stevens, M. R. Miles, Sr. L. M. Stoddard and Bro. Newell will testify. I was formerly of Kendall, Orleans Co., N. Y. My post-office address now is Seymour, Alleghany Co., N. Y. Brn. and Srs., one and all, pray for me.

THE TRACT FUND.

THE ADVENT CHRISTIAN PUBLICATION SOCIETY, at a meeting on Springfield camp-ground, August 11th, 1875, voted to raise Two Thousand Dollars for the free distribution of Tracts the ensuing year; and they invite the help and co-operation of all lovers of the Lord and of his truth, in the furtherance of the good cause. The times are ominous of coming events, and admonish us to diligence in the Master's work. The Lord is at the door, and what we do must be done quickly. Let the contributions be prompt, hearty, and liberal. The Lord will reward the liberal giver.

CAUTION.

One of our preachers in the western part of the State has been arrested for solemnizing a marriage, and was brought before a Justice, having no certificate of ordination or appointment from any Conference. He could not make any defense. Let all the preachers in Mass. apply for a certificate from the Conference, and it may be found useful. J. H.

Correspondence.

From Sr. F. Reynolds.

Dear Editors:—As I read from week to week of the meetings which are held by Bro. Grant and others, how I long to be there to mingle my songs of praise with those loved ones who are looking for the Savior's return. My thoughts go back this morning to the Amboy Campmeeting, six years ago, where I believe I met with more of God's loved ones than I ever met before. It was almost Eden restored, and if we enjoy these earthly meetings so much, what will it be, by-and-by, when Jesus comes?

Jesus knew well what love meant when he said, "I will come again and receive you unto myself, that where I am, there ye may be also." Love desires to be with the object loved, hence we long for the Master's return, that the saints may be with him. None will say—I am of Paul, or of Cephas; but all will be one in Christ; and our union will not last for a week or a month, but forever. Our joys, our friends, our homes, our praises are to be eternal. Adieus and farewells will be sounds unknown. When the trumpet has sounded; when the sentence, "Come, ye blessed of my Father" has been pronounced, when the golden harps and crowns have been distributed, then will be heard the ringing of glad hosanna's from those bright and glorious ones who have washed their robes and made them white in the blood of the Lamb.

"The Lord is coming!—tell the story
To the waiting weeping bride;
The Bridegroom comes in clouds of glory;
He comes to place her at his side.
Oh, sinner, haste! to warning listen!
'Tis weeping mercy's latest call;
The tempest thickens: lightnings glisten!
Soon will the storm of vengeance fall."

Englewood, Ill.

From Sr. M. A. Elliott.

Dear Editors:—Thinking it might be cheering to all the lovers of Jesus, and those who are interested in the perishing, I wish to inform you that the Lord is at work among this people, as well as in other places. Twenty or more have declared a purpose to begin a new life. We trust most of them have found the Savior precious.

Meetings have been held every evening for the past four weeks. Bro. Phetteplace has been laboring here during the past year with good success. The congregation has greatly increased, and the Sabbath school is twice its former number. To God we give all the glory. Praise his name!

Not long since, one evening, I was in one of the churches in this city, which was well filled; and as they were disappointed in a speaker, the evening was spent in prayer, songs and exhortation. One of the number that spoke referred back to the time when he was first converted. Calling the city (in N. H.) and an Adventist minister by name, he said he did not preach the straightness of the way, and as he was in the habit of drinking and using tobacco, the tempter overcame him and he fell. But some four years ago he listened to her who was expected to preach that evening, and she told what a christian could not do and live. He was convicted and resolved to be a christian, and the Lord had kept him by his power, through faith, until the present evening.

As I listened I felt grieved, thinking that if we as a people believed we had more light prophetically, should we not live better lives practically? O, may God help us to be Bible christians, true to ourselves, to God, and to each other, that when Jesus comes we may hear him say—"Come, ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world."

Lowell, Mass.

From Bro. O. King.

Dear Editors:—By your permission I would like to say a few words, through the Crisis, to the dear ones scattered over this world of trials.

Cheer up, dear saints, for there is a better land just ahead. The promises of God are sure. The good Lord is more willing to give than we are to ask. Bless his holy name! If this should meet the eye of any who are trying to serve God, and yet have doubts and fears, make a full consecration to his divine will, and he will assuredly bless you with that love which casteth out all fear. Faith then takes hold of the promises of God embracing that blessed inheritance that is to be given to all who prove faithful to the end.

I have enjoyed a heavenly feast for six weeks, for I have laid all upon the altar. Now my prayer is that I may ever feel the obligation I am under to do every duty I owe to God and my fellow beings.

O that God may direct some one this way that has the good word of life; for wife and I are all in this vicinity who openly profess the Advent faith. Pray for us, dear ones, that we may ever prove faithful.

Willida, Lyon Co., Iowa.

TO THE BRN. AND SRS. IN CHRIST.—Sister Lizzie, wife of Bro. Abner Collins, of Kittery Point, Me., is very sick. She earnestly requests all who have faith in the healing power of the Lord, to pray for her that she may be healed. Her faith is strong that it will be done. CYRUS FORD.

Obituaries.

TABER. Fell asleep in Jesus in New Bedford, Mass., March 13th, 1876, Sister Hephzibah D. Taber, aged forty-three years.

Her disease was pulmonary consumption, from which she suffered long ere death came to her relief.

Sr. Taber was converted twenty-one years ago, by hearing the gospel of the kingdom; and nine years ago united with the Advent church in N. B., where she was well known, beloved and appreciated as a christian and friend. She loved life here and hereafter, and clung to it and her friends, hoping the Life-Giver would come and save her from the dark and dreary valley. She loved the coming of Jesus. She was evidently chosen and disciplined by God, passing through the furnace of affliction and suffering until she was fitted for his kingdom. She has left a husband, and a dear, devoted son, also a mother in California, with other relatives. Their loss and that of the church is her gain.

She has fallen asleep, but soon will awake:
The shadows are flying, the day soon will break.
Not long now the sleeping will wait for the call
That cometh from heaven, and awakeneth all.

I. LESLIE.

LEEMAN. In Bath, Me., Dec. 8th, 1875, Samuel Y. Leeman, aged fifty-two years.

Bro. Leeman has for many years believed in Christ as his Savior, and in his soon coming to redeem his people and restore the earth. When the news of Christ's soon coming began to be preached in Bath, Bro. L. with his faithful wife, gladly cared for the Lord's ministers, and did all they possibly could to plant and sustain the truth in that city. In later years he has never forgotten nor forsaken the cause, though poor, and embarrassed with business and accumulating cares. A few days before his death he was suddenly taken with profuse bleeding from his lungs, which continued at intervals and terminated in death. But he sleeps in Jesus, we humbly trust, to awake to immortality and eternal life in the first resurrection. Sister L. has been prostrated by sickness, now near six months, and is left to mourn, with two sons and two daughters, the sad loss of a kind husband and father. But she expects to see him in the better land. May all the family find grace in Christ, and be there also to dwell with the redeemed. I. C. WELLCOME.

FRENCH. Fell asleep in Jesus, Feb. 28th, 1875, Nellie E. French, aged fourteen years.

The following are some verses written by her friend, Carrie E. Curtis, and given to Nellie the Sabbath before she died.

Dearest Nellie, we shall miss you
When your life has ebbed away;
We shall miss you in the school-room,
We shall miss you every day.

We shall miss you; we shall miss you
When we see your mother's face;
Reading there in every feature
That no one can fill your place.

We shall miss you, we shall miss you
When your life's short day is o'er;
We shall miss you till we meet you
On that fair celestial shore.

Yes, near Nellie is missed everywhere, but we have the sweet assurance that we shall meet her again. She met death without a murmur or complaint, made all necessary arrangements for her funeral, and expressed a strong desire to be buried near the chapel, so that she could come up right where she was converted, baptized and died. She rests from pain and sorrow, and when Jesus comes we know that Nellie will live forever.

And now again, Feb. 20th, 1876, the monster death has entered our abode, and snatched from our embrace our sweet little babe—Paul Milton French, aged eight months.

Our hearts are left lonely and sad; but we look forward to the time when we shall meet all our loved ones in our Eden home.

MRS. C. A. FRENCH.

BICKFORD. Fell asleep in Jesus in Meredith, N. H., Feb. 15th, 1876; of apoplexy, Lucinda Bickford, wife of James Bickford, aged seventy-one years.

Sr. Bickford gave her heart to the Lord in her youthful days, and for the last few years she has been interested in the doctrine of Christ's soon coming and kindred truths. She was a great sufferer for the last six weeks, and her prayer was that Jesus would let her go and be at rest. She leaves a husband and ten children to mourn their loss, yet they sorrow not as others which have no hope. May God sanctify this affliction to the good of that mourning circle, and they be prepared to meet the dear wife and mother ere long in the paradise of God. Funeral services attended by Elder N. Glidden, who spoke words of comfort from Rev. 14: 13. L. A. D.

PRATT. In Portsmouth, N. H., March 1st, '76, Mrs. Margaret Lear, wife of Bro. James H. Pratt, aged seventy years.

A gangrenous foot, which defied all medical treatment, was the immediate occasion of our sister's death. She had for upwards of fifty years been a professed follower of Christ. Her last days, though filled with suffering were days of peace. "Ye sorrow not even as others which have no hope." E. OWEN.

MOORE. In Seabrook, N. H., Feb. 23d, 1876, Edwin A. Moore, aged fifty-two years.

He was beloved by all who knew him. He rests in hope. We tried to comfort the mourners from Ps. 30: 5. A. P. MOORE.

CAPEN. Died March 12th, 1876, Mrs. Nellie M. Capen, wife of Warren F. Capen, and daughter of Caleb and Dorcas Goodnow, aged thirty-three years.

Sister Capen was born in West Bethel, Me. She gave her heart to the Lord when quite young, and was a firm believer in the second coming of Christ and the resurrection of the dead. She was a great sufferer, but patiently endured to the end. May God sustain the lone husband, mother and friends, in this hour of affliction; and may we all be ready to meet her when the Lord comes.

L. M. SMITH.

BASSETT. Fell on sleep, in Jesus, in Bridgewater, Vt., March 3d, 1876, Seth Bassett, aged eighty-eight years.

Our brother professed faith in Christ in 1843, and has held fast whereunto he attained; and it is evident that by the godly life he lived, no man will take his crown from him in the day of our Lord Jesus Christ. He leaves no dying testimony but a living one. He received the title to immortality and an incorruptible inheritance in the kingdom of God, through Christ, the living vine, who liveth and abideth forever. Services were attended by the writer. A. DAMON.

THOMAS. In Nelson Center, Kansas, Feb. 15th, 1876, Sister Lorinda E. Thomas, in the nineteenth year of her age.

Sister Thomas embraced Christ as her Savior a few days before the sickness which resulted in her death. Her father, mother, brother and sister were converted to Christ at the same meeting. So their house, which had so recently become a house of prayer and rejoicing in the blessed hope, is a house of mourning and bitter weeping; but not as others which have no hope. Words of comfort were spoken by the writer, from 1 Thess. 4: 18. G. P. BOUTWELL.

CARGILE. Fell asleep in Jesus, in Wrentham, Mass., on the 29th of Nov., Sr. Mary F. Cargile, wife of Willard Cargile, in the eighty-first year of her age.

She died in the faith that she should sleep until the Lord shall return to translate his waiting ones, and awake the sleeping saints to immortality, and then be ever with the Lord. S. S. BREWER.

BALDWIN. In Ira, N. Y., Feb. 22d, 1876, of consumption, Henry Baldwin, aged fifty-seven yrs.

We attended the funeral, and tried to comfort the friends from the Word of God.

M. R. MILES.

MILERKIN. In Ossipee, N. H., Feb. 27th, 1876, Ivery Milerkin, aged fifty-four years.

Words of comfort were spoken by Eld. A. Stillings, from Job 14: 1, 2. A. STILLINGS.

PHILBRICK. In Ossipee, N. H., Feb. 28th, 1876, infant child of Hiram and Betsey Philbrick, Words of comfort were spoken from Matt. 19: 14, by Eld. A. Stillings.

WALLACE. In Palmer, Mass., March 15th, 1876, Samuel J. Wallace, aged forty-three years.

Words of comfort from 1 Thess. 4: 13, by the writer. H. H. TUCKER.

Married.

PERRIN—RAMSAY. In Floyd, Iowa, Jan. 23d, 1876, at the A. C. Church by Elder R. J. Hill, Mr. WILLARD PERRIN and Miss BELLE RAMSAY, daughter of Elder C. C. Ramsay.

GUSTIN—BALMER. At the residence of the bride's father, in South Creek, Pa., Feb. 6th, 1876, by Elder E. C. Cowles, Mr. JOHN W. GUSTIN and Miss ABBIE BALMER, all of South Creek, Pa.

PETERSON—BEAN. In Effingham, N. H., March 7th, 1876, by Eld. L. W. Gowen, Mr. LEWIS J. PETERSON, of Limington, Me., and EMMA L. BEAN, of Effingham.

STILLINGS—THOMPSON. In Effingham, N. H., March 12th, 1876, by Eld. L. W. Gowen, Mr. FREEMAN C. STILLINGS, of Bartlett, N. H., and Miss HATTIE A. THOMPSON, of Effingham.

FOREIGN NEWS.

LONDON, March 18. A Paris dispatch to the Daily Telegraph says an arch of a railway bridge over the river Ill, near Lutterbach, gave way under the pressure of the flood.

A passenger train from Mulhouse for Strasbourg, which was crossing at the time, was precipitated into the river. The carriages fell on top of one another and were dashed to pieces.

Owing to the violence of the stream, none of the passengers could be saved. All were either crushed to death or drowned. Thirty corpses have already been recovered.

LONDON, March 19. All the railways converging at Aberdeen have been blocked by snow for the past thirty-four hours. Telegraphic communication in Scotland is almost totally interrupted. Sixteen trains on the Caledonia Railway alone have been delayed. One train has not been heard from since Friday.

A telegram from Naples reports that the long expected eruption of Vesuvius commenced Friday night. The lava is flowing toward Pompeii. A large column of vapor rises from the summit and reflects the fire beneath. Vast quantities of lava are thrown upward, and the sight is magnificent.

March 24. A dispatch to the Times from its Ragusa correspondent reports that Mukhtar Pasha failed in his attempt to revictual Nicsic. He had succeeded in provisioning the first block house in the Duga Pass, but was afterward obliged to withdraw to Keistag.

The insurgents followed, made a night attack on Keistag and drove Mukhtar to Gatschko. The Turks lost 120 killed. Extreme distress prevails in Nicsic.

The belief obtains at Vienna that Servia will soon declare war unless Russia brings a powerful and direct pressure to prevent it.

DOMESTIC NEWS.

Great Storms in New England.

We have been visited with two very heavy and destructive storms in the Eastern States, which have done immense damage on the land and sea. It was snow in the northern part and rain in the south. The snow blockaded everything in the north, and the floods have swept away dams, bridges, factories, houses and railroads, doing immense damage and destroying many lives. Much damage was also done to shipping on the coast.

J. C.

Quebec, March 22. Letters received from Moisie and the seven Islands, state that there is great distress among the residents there, and unless timely aid is received starvation will result.

Laramie City, March 23. A boiler in the Union Pacific Company's rolling mill, at this place, exploded to-day, wrecking the south half of the mill. The fireman was killed and ten others wounded seriously, two of whom will die.

Porsmouth, N. H., March 22. About 2 P. M. on Tuesday an unknown schooner, apparently in distress, near Gerrish Island, was endeavoring to keep off shore, but with the terrific wind and sea could not have done so, and nothing having been seen or heard of her since, though search was made; it is feared that she went down with all on board. Several fishing schooners in the lower harbor dragged their anchors and were driven on Clark's Island, Fort McClary and Fishing Island. Wreckers have gone to their assistance. A schooner, heavily loaded, was seen to cut away her masts to prevent going ashore, and was then not able to weather the gale and went plump on Clark's Island, where she now can be seen in a precarious situation.

ITEMS.

— The losses by the floods in Austria and Hungary are estimated at over $11,000,000.

— A Jupiter powder mill in the northern suburbs of New York city exploded yesterday, killing four men and wounding six others.

— More than forty persons aged one hundred years or over, are said to have died in the United States during the last year.

— There was a serious fire at Chareston, S. C., March 20th. Hundreds of persons were rendered homeless and penniless; the pecuniary loss is estimated at $500,000.

— A battle was fought at Oaxaca, Mexico, recently, between the insurgents and Government forces, in which the latter are said to have been seriously beaten.

— A fearful railway disaster lately occurred in France. A passenger train was dashed into a river, and the loss of life was terrible. Over thirty bodies had been recovered at last accounts.

— The promulgation of the Turkish firman of reforms has created great agitation among the Mussulman population at Aleppo and Damascus. Disturbances have already taken place, and still graver disorders are apprehended. The Turkish Government has sent troops to Damascus.

— The growing wheat crop of Kansas is said to be thus far in a state of unusual advancemnet, and the prospects for a large yield are very encouraging. In most districts the fields are green with the cereal, and the stalks are said to be of unusual strength.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

As the Mass. Annual Advent Christian Conference is soon to convene, and as at its coming session there are Delegates to be chosen to attend the National Meeting of the Second Advent Christian Association, it is necessary, in order to determine the number of Delegates to which the Conference is entitled, that there be sent to the Secretary by each church the number of members therein. It is therefore earnestly requested and hoped that each church within the bounds of this Conference will without delay send to the Secretary its present membership, so that at the Conference it may be certainly known how many Delegates are to be sent by this Conference to the meeting of the Association. Let every church do this at once, and so be represented in the Conference. Direct—Boston, Mass., Drawer 5140.

S. G. MATHEWSON, President.
I. I. LESLIE, Secretary.

A Meeting of the Board of Managers of the S. A. C. Association will be held in Boston, at the Crisis Office, on Tuesday, April 11th, at eleven o'clock A. M.

S. G. MATHEWSON, President.
C. E. BARNES, Secretary.

Notice.

The next Annual Meeting of the Mass. Advent Christian Conference will be held with the church in Lynn, commencing Tuesday, April 11th. The Conference will continue over the following Sunday. Important business is to come before this meeting of our Conference, and it is hoped that every church in the State will be represented by one or more delegates to which it may be entitled by the Constitution of the Conference.

I. I. LESLIE, Secretary.

☞ ALL those wishing to attend the Conference at Lynn, commencing April 11th, going from or through Worcester, can procure tickets via. Nashua R. Hoosick Valley Conference.

☞ TIME CHANGED.

The next Quarterly Session of the Hoosick Valley Conference will be held with the church at North Adams, Mass., commencing Wednesday evening, April 19th, and continue with three meetings each day over the following Sabbath. It will soon be said "It is done." We are having our last meetings; we are doing our last work. The Father by his Spirit is bringing to light and to our remembrance numerous evidences of the approaching end.

Brethren in the ministry, do come to this meeting with the light you have, that we may feed and be fed with the pure Word of God. We do earnestly hope that the churches will be represented by delegates, and as many others as can come. Do not wait to be blest at the meetings, but come filled with the Holy Spirit, to work for the salvation of others. The meetings will be held in Millard's large Hall, a short walk only from either of the depots. Those who are dwelling in God and God in them, will you pray for this meeting?

A NEW BOOK.

"LIFE IN CHRIST:

A STUDY OF THE SCRIPTURE DOCTRINE ON THE NATURE OF MAN; THE OBJECT OF THE DIVINE INCARNATION, AND THE CONDITIONS OF HUMAN IMMORTALITY.

BY EDWARD WHITE,

Author of the "Mystery of Growth," etc.

LONDON:

ELLIOT STOCK, 62 PATERNOSTER ROW.

1875."

The above is the title of a book of 590 pages octavo—perhaps the most comprehensive and exhaustive statement of the arguments in favor of the non-eternity of future suffering yet published.

As many as can, should possess themselves of this work. Just received from the London publisher, and for sale at this Office. Price $4.00. Sent by mail on reception of the same. AG'T.

THE BIBLE DOCTRINE OF THE SOUL.

An answer to the Question: "Is the Popular Conception of the Soul that of Holy Scripture?"

BY CHAS. L. IVES, M. D.

Professor of the Theory and Practice of Medicine in Yale College.

This is a book of 119 pages, in which the Author discusses the above question in an interesting and able manner,—showing the material nature of, the mortality and destiny of the Soul,—A future immortality to be the special portion of the Righteous,—What the Bible teaches as to the future of the Wicked,—The intermediate state,—The Resurrection,—That of the Righteous and of the Wicked, etc.

The Author claims that the doctrine set forth,—"Honors God, exalts the Bible, insures preaching of future punishment, subverts Universalism and Infidelity, errors of Romanism, of Spiritualism and Swedenborganism, helps in work of Missions, rightly values the body, brings Christian unity, and promotes personal holiness."

We are much pleased with this work. It is having a wide circulation. We have just received a quantity of the pamphlet edition, and can now fill orders at the following prices: Pamphlet, 25 cts. per copy; $2.25 per dozen by mail; $15.00 per hundred by express. Bound in cloth, 30 cts. per copy by mail; $3.00 per dozen by express.

ISSUED

BY THE ADV. CHRIS. PUB. SOCIETY,

A NEW WORK

On the Sabbath of the Old Covenant. An investigation of Mrs. E. G. White's Visions, showing that they are not from God.

All who have accepted Mrs. White's visions as coming from heaven, or who have been led to rest on Saturday instead of the Lord's day, should read this work. Let those who live among our Seventh-day brethren send and get a number of the books to give away. If the reader has friends at a distance who have received Mrs. W.'s Visions as true, have a copy of this work sent to them.

It contains 106 pages, and we will send it at the following prices: Single copy, 20 cts.; per doz., $1.75 by mail; per hundred, $10.00 by express. AGENT.

PRICE REDUCED.

The great Map of History, twenty-two feet long, and about thirty inches wide. This valuable work, of which mention has been made in the Crisis, we now have a supply of, and will send to those who may order at the publisher's reduced price of $12.00 per copy, by express. We have them on rollers, and in book form, and can supply either way.

The best method of using the chart or map of history is to hang the frame on the wall of the room (the map being in the frame, of course), by the two books in the upper bar of the frame, high enough to stand, or sit, in front of it, and there examine or study it.

Students and beginners in history should occasionally look over the map in its entire length—drawn out on the wall, or tables, or on the carpet—until they are well acquainted with the entire outlines, plan and compass of the map, which embraces all history.

AG'T.

UNDER THE CLOUD.

DR. H. P. ANDREWS.

'Tis night! and all around
The shadows darkling lie;
The murky clouds, damp, dark
And gloomy, shroud the sky.

Yes, it is night! and scarce
My eye can pierce the gloom,
Or catch one gleam of beauty.
I stumble o'er the tomb
Of buried hopes; I tread
Upon the flowers, once green
And beautiful; the sheen
Of bubbling streams, so bright
In life's fair morn, is gone;
And dark and noiseless now
The streamlet hurries on.

Yet, hark! Is that the knell
Of midnight or of noon,
The record seems to tell
So hoarsely to the darkness?
Most surely of the day
It speaks, and not of night;
And all around the ray
Of sunny noon gleams bright,
Telling to other hearts,
"It is not night."

Then why this gloomy shroud?
Why all so drear and dark?
Listen, sad soul; a voice
Out of the gloom doth speak:
"Under the cloud."

O Faith! hast thou no power
The gloom to pierce, the clouds
To rend? They darkly lower,
And press me 'neath their folds,
Strengthless, unhelped, I die!

Turn God-ward, sorrowing one,
And humbly prostrate, cry,
Light! light! O Father, light!
Thank God! the answer comes:
"Unto the soul upright
And pure there shall arise
Light in the darkness."

Enough! enough! Be still
My restless heart! Though dark
Thy noon—darker than night—
Within thy gloomy cell,
To Faith's unclouded eye
God's angel shall appear
"With glory bright."

NOTES BY THE WAY IN NORTH CAROLINA.—No. 2.

To the A. A. M. Society.

Dear Brethren:—My last report closed with the debate between Bro. Harmon and myself, on Friday, Feb. 11th. Saturday, 12th, and Sunday, 13th, we spoke at our "Berean" church, on John's River, in Caldwell county. During the morning service on Sunday there came a terrible rain storm, which kept the congregation from leaving at the close. Twenty or thirty minutes after I had finished my talk on the "authenticity of God's Word," several came and said that as the people could not go, I had better preach again, which I tried to do, and endeavored to hold up Christ as the Redeemer.

Sunday night social meeting at Bro. D. D. Coffey's. A few spoke, but no one would pray. In this country the minister does all the work, and the church seems willing to allow it. But I am working hard to get our brethren and sisters to work, and rejoice that I have some encouragement to push the battle in the name of the Lord.

Monday, 14th, went to the church to meet a Bro. in debate who had challenged me, but he failed to come, and we had a blessed meeting. Brn. Nelson and Goodwin gave us warm and spirited exhortations after I had tried to preach. Eight came forward for prayer, and we all rejoiced that the debater did not come. It seemed as if the Holy Ghost had settled right down upon us, and all seemed to feel that God had begun to work. At night Bro. Nelson preached at the dwelling of Bro. Henry Coffey. Subject—"The Warfare." His effort was able and timely, and the result was, sixteen gave testimony, voluntarily taking the cross, and we did indeed sit together in a heavenly place in Christ. I staid with Bro. Holyfield, whose wife pledged to be a christian; and I learn she has since embraced Christ.

Tuesday, 15th, spoke at 11 A. M. Seventeen came for prayer, and all were blest. At 2 P. M., spoke again. Thirteen came for prayer, one joined the church, and three came for baptism. Staid with Bro. J. J. Presnell, who took me to Morganton next day to meet an appointment left there some time ago by special request. Spoke at night in the Court House to a few men; no ladies out. A drunken man interrupted me very much by speaking to me repeatedly, and others sat in the audience and smoked cigars. I went to a hotel, paid $2.50 for lodging, and found that the village paper, The Blue Blade, had published my meeting as follows:

"The Adventists are making considerable headway in the upper edge of Burke and in Mitchell and Wautauga counties. We are to have them here the 16th. They preach that the wicked will be annihilated, like a horse or a cow, and that hell is all a humbug. Let 'em wait and see."

With such misrepresentations from the Editor, it is not strange that the servant of God should receive cold shoulders. Thursday, 17th, I called for my mule, and rode about twenty miles to Bro. Charles Coffey's, the community where the Baptist church, called Lower Creek, allowed me so much room to preach out doors last September. Bro. Coffey and family received me kindly, and bade me a hearty welcome, which was appreciated, like health to a sick man, after the cool treatment I had received in Morganton—the place where Bro. Bowman once labored as a Methodist.

Friday, 18th, spent the day writing and studying; the first rest I have enjoyed since I began my labor here. At night spoke at the dwelling of Bro. James Hartley. Saturday, 19th, spoke out of doors, one mile from Bro. Hartley's, to an attentive crowd. Social meeting at night at Bro. Charles Coffey's; a good time. Sunday, 20th, spoke out doors at Cottrell's school-house, where we had good attention during three discourses. Here is the place where they shut me out last fall to keep out the heresy. But truth, like water, must have its way, and it has found its way into the church, and several have taken a bold stand for it, which is causing some trouble. The following is a letter to them by a sister who had broken ranks and come over to "the Adventists," leaving a mother and sister in the Baptist church:—

"To the Lower Creek Church.

Brn. and Srs.:—In answer to the allegation of last Church Conference, in view of the discord now threatening this church, I gave my name to the Advent church, but, after reflection, decided to remain in this one. I loved the Baptist church in its original union and purity. I love her cause. I love every principle that distinguished her from other denominations, and I claim her fellowship.

As to the doctrine for which I am brought in question, I beg leave to submit the following: I believe the Bible. I believe it was given by Inspiration. I believe it is our guide from earth to heaven. I believe it requires man to search its records. (1) I believe the Bible teaches the mortality of soul and body. (2) I believe it teaches the unconsciousness of the soul from death to the sound of the resurrection trump. (3) I believe it teaches immortality for the saints through Christ, after the resurrection and judgment. (4) That it teaches the righteous will be rewarded with everlasting life in happiness. (5) That it teaches the wicked will be punished with eternal death. If these views are in harmony with Baptist faith, I am with you; if they are obnoxious to a few sticklers for rigid discipline, I abide your decision. I remain yours with respect,

C. J. E. Coffey."

The church, evidently seeing that they could not exclude Sister Coffey according to the Bible, realized that a law must be enacted to take cognizance of such cases, and then deal with her under this new law. Accordingly the following resolutions were adopted, and Sister Coffey excluded under them; viz.:—

"Resolved, That we offer our unqualified condemnation of that system of doctrine which denies the immortality of the soul and the eternal duration of future punishment, as contrary to the faith of this church ever since its organization, and contrary to the faith of the Baptists in all ages.

Resolved, (2) That if any member of this church shall persist in teaching or holding those doctrines, we, in faithfulness to our principles, will at once withdraw fellowship from such members."

Thus it will be seen that truth is taking such a firm hold here that the priesthood is becoming alarmed.

Monday, 21st, spoke at the dwelling of Bro. Lee Coffey, whose wife has been sick for six years. Their son-in-law, Bro. Sion J. Sherrill, takes great interest in the truth, and is one of nearly twenty, including Bro. Cottrell and family, who consider themselves out of the Baptist church by the above resolutions. It seems that every effort to stop the truth only serves to scatter it more widely. Five young brethren have agreed to hold a weekly prayer meeting here. I praise God for it, and pray that he will help them to keep it up. Monday night had a social meeting at Bro. James Hartley's. Tuesday evening spoke at Bro. Joel Crisp's. Wednesday rode to Bro. Patterson Coffey's, where I was permitted last summer to preach my first sermon in North Carolina. Bro. Goodwin came at night, and we had a pleasant time and enjoyed the hospitality of Bro. and Sr. Coffey, who belong to the Baptist church, but treated us with great kindness.

Thursday, rode to Bro. Elijah Moore's, who with his good wife makes me feel welcome. I believe it is one of the hundred homes of Mark 10: 29, 30. Bro. Moore has given his heart to the Lord, and is one of thirteen to follow him in baptism before the meeting closes. Friday I suffered much uneasiness on account of my loved ones at home, and I prayed nearly all night for God to give me victory, and prepare me for the duties before me, and I obtained it. O praise his holy name! Saturday, spoke at the church, and at night spoke at Bro. Israel Coffey's, where we had a precious social meeting.

Dear brethren, these social meetings are new to the people here, but this night made me almost imagine myself at campmeeting. There were several prayers and many voluntary testimonies for Jesus. O bless his dear name for his blessings on our feeble labors.

Sunday, 27th, spoke at the church, where it was said there were one thousand people assembled. I had to stand in the door and speak to the people in the house and in the church yard also. We then repaired to the water, where I buried thirteen who desire to be ready for the Master's coming. May God keep them. In the afternoon fourteen joined the church, and we then gathered around the table of the Lord, to show the death of our precious Savior. I saw a Methodist and a Baptist brother come to the table together, and I did praise God that sectarian walls are tumbling down. I then bade adieu for the present to the many precious ones, and started for home. Stopped at Bro. Seims, in Madison Co., N. C., and preached twice, where I had spoken on my way out. I pray God to bless the dear friends I met here. I reached home Friday, March 3d, at 1.30 A. M. Found all well, and do feel to give God the glory for his goodness to my dear wife and children.

I left home on the 28th of January, and have rode hundreds of miles on trains, in stages, wagons, on horse-back, and partly on foot through the mountains on my way to Ashville, and have tried to preach and hold social meetings thirty-four times; debated one day; but, better than all, have seen several start for the kingdom of God. I realize more and more every day the great need of being wholly the Lord's, and I do regret the low state of the churches; but I rejoice that here and there are some noble exceptions. I still feel encouraged to push on till the kingdom comes. Pray for me, that God will help me to stay on the walls till the Master comes. Thanks to the dear ones whose help was received by my wife in my absence. Also the friends in N. C. for their kindness to me. Love to all the saints.

Yours in the Lord, J. A. Cargile.

TRUSTING vs. TRYING.

But I have tried and tried; it is of no use. How often does the pastor hear this pitiful story. Yes, they tried; but how? They sought in their own strength to subdue their passions and make their lives pure, and then they were coming to the Savior.

What need had they of a Savior, if they saved themselves? What need of a cleansing fountain when they were already cleansed?

But they never became clean; the very dust of this life fell upon their garments faster than all their efforts could remove it, and in disgust they gave it up after a short struggle; being worse off than before, having lost courage, hope, and self-respect, and feeling weaker than ever.

Now to these discouraged ones I would say: just trust—come to him trusting. Leave all your life to him; give your love to him; he will make you clean. Your very desires will be changed, all the world will be changed to you; you need not even try, for your impulses will be pure, and your life made holy by your love of Christ. Give him all, just as it is, and he will order all for his glory.—Guide to Holiness.

A Gentleman.—It takes four things to make a thorough gentleman. You must be a gentleman in your principles, a gentleman in your tastes, a gentleman in your person, and a gentleman in your manners. No man who does not combine these qualities can be justly termed a true gentleman.

"THE MODE OF BAPTISM."

G. W. BAILEY.

Having recently read a work of over three hundred pages, with the above title, I thought I would notice a few points in the book as it came under my notice. In the preface is this statement: "We have gone to their classics and Lexicons, and shown that baptizo does not mean to dip, and is no model word at all." Yet under the head of Classic Usage it gives for the word bapto eight authors who define it as "to dip" and "immerse." And for baptizo five who define it as to "dip" etc. The book is written in conversational form, Mr. Stanley being the chief speaker.

He illustrates the uncertainty of the meaning of baptism as follows: "Sir Wm. Blackstone, in his commentaries on the laws of England, says that a law of King Edward III. forbade all ecclesiastical persons to purchase provisions at Rome." . . . "The law, said Blackstone, might seem to prohibit the buying of grain, and other victuals; but when we consider that the statute was made to repress the usurpations of the Papal See; and that nominations to benefices by the Pope were called provisions, we shall see that the restraint is intended to be laid on such provisions only." p. 25.

Now if it be true that baptism has such meanings as to sprinkle or pour, and that provisions has such a secondary meaning, still we are not left to any uncertainty about the matter; for if the law had said salt provisions, then it must have meant victuals, and could not have meant the Pope's benefices. So we are not left to conjecture as to the meaning of baptism; for we have qualifying words connected with it, such as "buried," and "planted," and "baptized into his death," etc.; so that we are restricted to the planting kind of baptism, and not the sprinkling kind.

In relation to John's baptism he says: "Suppose we call it half a million," p. 30 Thus trying to show that there was so great a multitude, it were impossible for John to immerse them all. He says: "Perhaps John's disciples were jealous of the growing popularity of this new teacher (Christ), as securing a greater number of converts than their master, who a little while before had had all Palestine running after him." p. 43. Christ does not seem to have had more than a thousand disciples at the most. He had the "twelve," and "other seventy," and about a "hundred and twenty," or the five hundred witnesses of his resurrection. If he had more converts than John, then it must have reduced John's disciples amazingly. "For one, I have no objection to concede that John and those who were to be baptized did go into the river, and that the baptism was performed in the river. But that is far from saying that they were immersed." . . .

"Standing thus in the water ankle or possibly knee-deep, the liquid was taken up in the hand or a dish, and poured or sprinkled upon the head of the recipient. That this was the view of the matter held in the early Christian Church, is apparent from the representations of Christ's baptism, given in ancient pictures and sculptures." (See pp. 252 to 259).

How much less time would it take to pour than to immerse them? But, as if to avoid the difficulty he says, "Or what is more probable, in the baptism of these great multitudes, they were arranged along the shore, and sprinkled by John with a bunch of hyssop," etc. p. 37. If it is more probable they were sprinkled than poured, then the testimony of those cuts are worthless.

In speaking of John's baptism, he says, "After Paul had explained the matter to them, they saw the defectiveness of the baptism they had received, though it was the very same Christ himself had received, and were then rebaptized in the name of Jesus." p. 51. As bad as it was it seemed to be good enough to prove sprinkling with. Sprinkling seems to be a defective baptism however. But still further, to show that John did not go into the water, he illustrates thus: "I saw a few days since, some Dutch women washing clothes in the Hudson; but they had not gone into the stream for that purpose." Were the clothes in the river, or did they arrange them along the shore and sprinkle them with a bunch of hyssop?

"Besides it is said that John did baptize in the wilderness. Does this imply that he thrust persons beneath the sand and dust of the desert?" p. 36. Sand and dust not being the element to be used, it does not imply such a thing. But if John was not in the wilderness when he baptized there, where was he? When speaking of Naaman the leper, he says, "Or we may interpret it with the learned Dr. Horner, thus: "Accordingly he goes and dips into Jordan, and thereby obtains water which he dashes, sprinkles, or pours upon the spot seven times." p. 70.

Nothing is gained by that arrangement, so far as the meaning of the word is concerned, for if it were a vessel of any kind that was used, then the vessel becomes the subject of the verb baptize, instead of Naaman. Even in that case the immersion of the subject is not disposed of, for he did not sprinkle or pour the dish into the river, but he immersed it, or dipped it into the river. We can sprinkle or pour a fluid, but not a compact body.

It seems water was quite scarce in Palestine, in the Savior's day, as we learn by the following: "Baths, large enough for such a purpose, could not have been usual, nor could water in sufficient quantities have been had if they were." p. 81.

But in giving the reason of John's being near the Jordan, he says, "You forget that such vast numbers of people, many of them coming from a considerable distance, with their asses and camels, which were used for riding and carrying tents and other equipage, would have required large supplies even for drinking. They would need also water for cooking, and performing the numerous ablutions prescribed by their ceremonial law." Also of Ænon. "The word signifies the 'springs.' . . . The original words translated 'much water,' are literally 'many waters;' that is, streams or rills running from the fountains. . . . The expression 'many waters,' added Mr. Stanley, is the same that is found in 2 Chron. 32: 3, 4, where it is said that King Hezekiah stopped up the waters of the fountains which were without Jerusalem, saying, 'Why should the kings of Assyria come and find much water?' i. e. supplies for their invading army." pp. 34: 54.

There seems to have been water in abundance for drinking and cooking purposes, also numerous ablutions, etc., or even to supply an invading army. But when they want to immerse believers, it is wonderfully scarce; there not being enough to be had, even to fill a bath tub. He speaks of the events of the day of Pentecost on this wise: "It says a sound like as of a rushing, mighty wind came, and it filled, etc. Not the Spirit, nor even a wind, but a sound as of a wind. If there was an immersion then, it was an immersion in sound and in nothing more substantial." Peter says of it: "But this is that which was spoken by the prophet Joel." . . . "Therefore being by the right hand of God exalted, and having received of the Father the power of the Holy Ghost, he hath shed forth this, which ye now see and hear."

The writer also argues that those converted at that time could not have been immersed for lack of time, garments, and those to administer it. Christ sent forth twelve, and other seventy also, making eighty-two in all, who were commanded to tarry at Jerusalem. These could have baptized them in an hour easily.

Hear what he says about Lydia and her household. "I cannot think it would comport with the delicacy of a christian lady in the East, to be publicly immersed by a man in a river, within or near to a great city." p. 124. If he had said, to be poured, standing in the water waist deep in a nude condition,—as the cuts in the book represent it,—did not comport with christian delicacy, it might have been true, but when we consider that these same ones have often immersed females in a river,—and will do it again probably rather than to lose their converts, the remark does not come with a good grace from that quarter. Such talk is only intended to throw disgrace upon the ordinance.

The great trouble with them is in not knowing what it signifies. "We are to seek then the source of all this imagery, not in the form of the outward rite, but in its spiritual signification." p. 136. We will now look at a statement from history. Greek was introduced into Asia with the invasion of Alexander, B. C. 334–323; and being the language of the conquerors and their successors, became in one or two hundred years the prevailing tongue in the East. At this time Hebrew had ceased to be spoken, having never recovered from the blow given to the nation by the captivity in Babylon. The Scriptures talk differently. At one time when Paul was to be led into the castle, he, by permission, turned and spake unto the people in the Hebrew tongue. "And when they heard that he spake in the Hebrew tongue to them, they kept the more silence." The people seemed to understand it. Christ at one time addressed him in the Hebrew tongue, saying, "Saul, Saul, why persecutest thou me?" The point to be gained is, that the Jews at that time did not speak Hebrew, but a corrupted Greek, so that nothing can be gained by applying to Classic Lexicons for a definition of the word Bapto, or Baptizo.

In speaking of baptizing in different places, he says: "In every place, however, where I found man, I found a little water, often only that which had been collected, drop by drop, in caves of the mountains; and with these precious drops I sprinkled their bodies, as their hearts had been already sprinkled from an evil conscience with the infinitely more precious drops of the Savior's blood." p. 279.

Notwithstanding the great difficulty of obtaining water, he would have us believe that men live and flourish without water. Do they not wash themselves? Do they not drink but a few drops at a time? Yet no such circumstances seem to conspire to necessitate sprinkling in this land of "much waters."

In speaking of a case of baptism in the "Adirondac region," in the winter, he remarks: "Had Christ preached and baptized in this climate, would he who healed the sick have risked the life of the body to wash out the stains of girlhood? It is one of the inexpressible inconsistencies of weak humanity, that followers of the divine Lord should in his name commit cruelties that unbelievers would shrink from. The laws of life and health can no more be violated under the plea of obeying Christ, than the law of the ten commandments. It is no less a presumptuous tempting of God, than Christ's leaping from the pinnacle of the temple would have been, under the solicitations of the devil." p. 301.

Enough has been quoted from the book to show its character. It is written ostensibly for the young who are in doubt in regard to the mode of baptism; but in reality it is a blow aimed at the close communion of the Baptists. There are some good things said in the book, and some good hits against close communion. Hoping that some able pen will, at no distant day review the work, I will now close this brief notice of the book. There seems to be any amount of special pleading, and slurs with regard to the views of others. The reading of the book reminds me of the sayings of another. "When argument fails a multiplicity of quotations dazzles."

WALKING WITH GOD.

The difficulty which most people have in religion, is to bring the thought of God in their daily lives. His very greatness makes it hard to connect him with homely, every day matters. We get some sense of him in church, or in the prayer-meeting, or in rare hours of exalted feeling. But when we go into the busy world, where most of our life is spent, God fades away into heaven that is farther off than the blue sky above our heads. This is a great loss to us. It is neglect on our part of our highest opportunity. God walks with us in closest nearness at every moment. There is in him, if we could learn to take it, a provision of helpfulness, of sympathy, of sufficiency, for every step in the whole round of our daily life. The very things that seem insignificant and without spiritual meaning are set round us by God as a part of our education. And if we habitually recognize his presence in them, all the incidents of business, and our household care and daily walk would become threads of gold, holding us in the sweetest, noblest friendship with our heavenly Father.—Ex.

Truth being founded upon a rock, you must boldly dig to see its foundation without fear of destroying the edifice; but falsehood being laid on the sand, if you examine its foundations you cause it to fall.

REPORT OF LABORS IN ALABAMA.

NUMBER TWO.

After closing my labors with Friendship church, Bro. Bankson furnished me a good riding horse for the remainder of this trip, which saved me much fatigue. Many thanks to the Lord for such kind brethren. Bro. B. went with me to Yellow Creek church, where they had recently excluded him for "heresy," or "materialism," without allowing him to speak in defense of his teaching; after having promised, at the previous meeting, that he should have the privilege of proving his doctrine from the Bible. In order to get a majority to vote against him, brethren from other churches were allowed to vote; and some were induced to join the church for their vote, after which they were dismissed from the church.

I met with a good turnout at the Academy near the church. I here met with Bro. S. R. Hood, regarded as the father of "heretics" in this section. While the Baptists, with whom Bro. Hood has been long associated, are virtually denying the resurrection of the dead, there is a denomination of Baptists in this section who boldly deny the resurrection "of that which goes into the grave," either just or unjust.

There seemed to be considerable interest manifested in our discourse from 1 Pet. 1: 3, followed with a warm exhortation by Bro. Hood. Went the next day home with Bro. Hood, and held service in the evening at Mr. McClusky's. Next day went on Lookout Mountain, and preached at Bro. Everett's. After having had a month of warm weather, the plum trees all in full bloom and peach trees putting out, we now have the coldest weather of the season. But Bro. Hood and myself passed over into Will's Valley, where the non-resurrectionists preach. It being very cold the people did not turn out. At night met a small congregation. Bro. Hood and myself addressed them. Hope some good was done. The next day we went back on the mountain to Bro. Blackwell's, who opened his house for meeting that evening, and notified his neighbors. Many came, and evinced an interest in hearing the Word. The next day (Sunday) we had a fair assembly out to hear us. We had urgent solicitations to visit them again. In the afternoon rode back to Bro. Hood's, and preached in his dwelling to a fair audience. The next day rode to Bro. J. J. Purcell's and preached at night to a small congregation, among whom were a few of "like precious faith."

From this point we went across the Coosa river, and through its swamps and dreary desolations, till we came to a school. Bro. Hood got the teacher to announce that we would preach there at night. We found a comfortable and welcome home with Esq. Reeves. At night met a small congregation, and the next day and night preached to increasing congregations, who seemed much interested.

Here I met a man with whom I had spent many of my boyhood days, but whom I had not seen for about forty-five years. We recalled many incidents of the past, and talked of the mighty changes since we had parted. But few of our youthful companions are now above the sod, and we too will soon leave the changing scenes of time. My friend, though not religious, became deeply interested in our discourses on prophecy, and wished he could go with us a month to learn truth. With a word of exhortation to prepare to meet me in the kingdom, I gave him the parting hand, perhaps to meet no more in this short life. We found more than usual liberality among this people, all the denominations showing us kindness and hospitality.

We next went to Bro. S. H. Hodge's church. Bro. H. is a co-laborer with Bro. Hood in the ministry. The church mostly stand with him in the faith, and not being connected with any Association, they are not troubled with committees to win them back to orthodoxy, as are some others. I endeavor as much as possible to present Bible truth in the language of the Bible; and I find it is often offensive to persons who profess to teach the Bible.

Our third appointment at this place was interrupted by a heavy rain at the hour, but I lectured from the "Prophetic Chart" to a few at Bro. Hodge's. I learned some were convinced that the end of this age is nigh at hand. On my way to Lebanon church the next day, I lost my "Prophetic Chart," so kindly furnished me by Bro. L. T. Cunningham, in 1868. It fell out of my bundle, I suppose, on a road on which I met many persons going south. If a number of negroes I met found it, they will be on the lookout for the "show." I hope however it may fall into the hands of some one who will learn something from it.

On arriving at Bro. Hood's (Lebanon church), I learned that the brethren were preparing for communion on Sunday. They, as a church, yet stand in the minutes of the Cherokee Baptist Association, though they did not represent themselves in the last annual meeting. A committee of five ministers was appointed last August, to visit and labor to reclaim them from their "heresy." This committee, appointed six months ago, had not yet discharged their duty. At conference meeting the church agreed to commune sitting around the table, with the vacant chair at the head; and invited me to assist in the administration. After sermon on Sunday the table was spread, and the invitation to partake was now changed. Instead of inviting "all Baptists, who know themselves to be in good standing in their own churches at home," it was "to all christians who have obeyed and desire to obey the Lord Jesus Christ." One sister of another church partook with us, shouting for joy that the restriction was removed; others seemed to feel as if they were entering upon a new era. Some, however, showed a timidity in refusing to partake with us, who afterwards confessed that their desires were with us, and seemed to be ashamed that they had declined. Hope they will do better next time.

Bidding adieu to the loved ones, I turned in the direction of home. Resting for the night at Bro. Hood's, I set out to meet an appointment at Yellow Creek. On my arrival found the church door locked, and from the people assembling learned that my appointment had been publicly announced by the preacher, but with a protest against allowing "heretics" to preach in the house; but those who had borne the burden of the expense of building the house being numbered as heretics, none of the present members dared to raise an objection. The sexton did not come out, nor send the key; but a window being open, some one entered and opened a door. I addressed a small audience, who seemed to be interested. It seems that the working members are in harmony with us, but a well drilled bare majority of the less intelligent members claim to rule the others. How long such discordant elements may hang together I know not; I think not long.

Making a hard ride the next morning, I reached my appointment at Friendship, on Spring Creek, a little behind time, but the loved ones were patient till I arrived and preached on the practical duties of the christian. Some of the older members said it was food to them. Thank the Lord. I preached here again at night. The next day and night preached at McGee's Chapel. I learn that a year ago or less we were unwelcome to preach here. Now it is open to us, with solicitations to preach. Bro. Livingston proposes to preach here occasionally. I hope the Lord may crown his labors at this point.

Here met with an aged sister of days long since passed away. Since I saw her a youthful maiden she has filled the place of a wife and mother about forty years. She is the mother of seventeen children, many of whom with their father lie in the dust. O what trials she has endured, and how deep the impress made upon her features! I hope to meet her in the kingdom soon.

After a day's rest with Bro. Thompson and my cousin J. W. Smith, the former furnishing me with a good mule to ride to the railroad station, my cousin accompanied and returned the mule. This saved me that hard tramp again, for which I thank them. A new road master has undertaken to improve this horrid road, but I have since learned that he was thrown off and killed. I arrived safely in Trenton, where I set out on foot for home. Found all well, thank the Lord. I have been from home this time twenty-five days, preached twenty-seven discourses, besides losing four appointments from stormy weather. Have had many pleasant seasons with those I hope to meet in the kingdom.

May the Lord bless and crown our efforts. Soon I hope to meet all the dear waiting ones in the "land of pure delight," where there will be no storms, mud, or rough mountain roads or miry swamps to contend with.

LINES COMPOSED ON THE DEATH OF ESTELLA I. MUNROE.

W. H. DAY.

The morning sun with splendor bright
Had flooded wide the world with light,
And nature's smile did grief destroy;
The feathered warblers sang for joy.

A lovely child, in youth's bright morn
From parents' kind embrace was torn;
And death came in with silent stride
And took the father's joy and pride.

For days she lingered here with pain;
Friends thought she would revive again;
But death that severs fondest ties,
Deemed that it should be otherwise.

No more on earth we'll see her face;
No more we'll feel her kind embrace;
But friends for her will mourn and weep,
While she beneath the daises sleep.

Then visit oft the sacred spot,
And plant the blue Forgetme-not;
But then remember, Earth, thou must
Restore to life that sacred dust.

Then, weeping friends, dry every tear,
The resurrection day draws near,
When Gabriel's trump shall shake the tomb,
From death's dark land thy child shall come.

But then you question me to know
What! The same child that walked below?
Yes, the same child thine eyes shall see,
But clothed in immortality.

CONFERENCE REPORT.

The first semi-annual session of the Advent Christian Conference of Northern Pa. and Southern N. Y., met as announced at Norfolk, Tioga Co., Pa., Jan. 29th, 1876. Called to order by the President, Eld. E. C. Cowles. Opened the session with singing, and prayer offered by Eld. B. Butler. The Secretary being absent, Eld. A. H. Briggs was elected Secretary, pro tem.

The following committees were appointed: Devotional—S. Gardner, A. A. Johnson, S. Monroe. Business—B. Butler, M. Gardner, S. Moose.

The following ministers were present, and gave cheering and encouraging reports: Eld. B. Butler preaches some; is desirous of doing more; loves the principles of the gospel of Christ. Eld A. H. Briggs preaches most of the time; wishes to do more. Eld. Seymour Moose preaches from once to three times a week; standing firm, and looking for the coming of the blessed hope. Eld. E. C. Cowles devotes most of his time to laboring in the ministry; meets some opposing and discouraging influences, but feels to press on; has seen some good results of preaching the truth.

Bro. A. Worden, of Bingham, took part with us, and made some interesting and cheering remarks.

Delegates from the churches reported as follows: Bro. M. Gardner, Westfield church. The number of members remain the same, have prayer meetings, and prospects good. Have occasional preaching. Bro. A. A. Johnson, Turner Creek church. Trying to live. Have no preaching; have some prayer meetings. Bro. E. A. Keeler, Little Marsh church. Still holding on to the great and glorious truths of the revelation of God.

The committee appointed at last session to visit Turner Creek and Fremont churches, reported a visit to Turner Creek church, and gave a favorable report of said church. Had not been able to visit Fremont church. Report approved, and committee retained to visit Fremont church.

Several items of cheer and of an encouraging nature took place in our Saturday fellowship meeting. Two wanderers confessed their backslidings, and came back to Father's house, and with renewed zeal, courage and devotion to fight the good fight until victory is won. Bro. Israel Dodge, one of the foremost and most influential citizens of the place, who had for years sheltered in that vain and delusive doctrine of universal salvation, but had had two years previously shown to him by Eld. E. C. Cowles, from the texts found in 1 Cor. 15: 22, that his foundation was like a rope of sand, frankly confessed it, and accepted the truths of the word of God. May the Lord bless and comfort him with the blessed hope.

Adjourned to call of the President. Thus another conference session is past, and its good results will be manifest in the soon coming day of judgment. May the Lord more fully enlighten us, show us more clearly how to save our fellow creatures from moral degradation to a life of purity and holiness, for the judgment hastens. Amen.

H. Ziegenfuss, Sec.

WAR AND DUELING.

What, in principle, is war? It is the duel between nations, differing in no respect from the duel between individuals, except that the successful combatant is allowed to carry off as spoil the effects of his vanquished antagonist. It is an adjournment of great questions of international right or courtesy, from the bar of temperate discussion and peaceful arbitration before peers to the bar of chance or mere force. It is an appeal from the reason and conscience of the parties themselves, from large views of their true interests, and from the moral judgments of mankind to the exploded trial by combat of the middle ages. Alas! alas! that, eighteen hundred years after the coming of the Prince of peace, this relic of barbarism should still be clung to by nations calling themselves christians, and God grant the penalty which they are now suffering, and which has been treasuring itself up for ages, may deter us from following their dazzling but dangerous example.—Bishop Potter.

HOME AND HEALTH.

PROPER TIME AND DURATION OF SLEEP.

Some have contended that it is of little importance whether we sleep in the night or in the day-time, so that we sleep a proper length of time. But every indication of nature and all experience are opposed to such a notion, and to a properly enlightened mind there cannot be the least ground of doubt that the night is the natural time to sleep; that is, in all parts of the globe where the twenty-four hours are regularly divided into day and night. And all experience in civilized life has proved also that, other things being equal, those who get a considerable portion of their sleep before midnight, are, as a general fact, the most healthy and long-lived. In that state which in all respects is most perfectly adapted to the constitutional nature of man, therefore, there is every reason to believe that he would retire to rest soon after daylight disappears in the evening, and rise with the first gleam of light in the morning. But in the present artificial state of civic life, there are so many things to disturb and break up the natural physiological habitudes of the human system, that even the sleep of man is exceedingly affected by circumstances; so that it is impossible to lay down a general rule which will be equally suited to every individual.

The best general rule, therefore, which can be laid down for all people in our climates where the day and night are nearly of the same length as ours, is, that they should retire to rest as soon as they can after daylight disappears, and rise as soon as their sound and refreshing sleep is at an end, and certainly as soon as the earliest dawn of the morning appears. But if mankind will not listen to this general rule, which is undoubtedly the best that can be given to them, then I will give them another which is an extreme concession to human perverseness of habit; and say that, as a general rule, the very latest hour at which any human being should be kept from sleep is ten o'clock at night, and none should be in bed after the sun is risen.

We have been told of individuals who habitually took but four hours' sleep; and undoubtedly some, by virtue of good habits in other respects, or a powerful constitution, may hold out many years in this way; but it always and inevitably shortens life, by an undue expenditure of the vital energies of the constitution in maintaining the animal and sensorial powers and functions. Six hours are probably the shortest time that man can habitually devote to sleep, consistently with the permanent welfare of his system; and perhaps eight hours of sound sleep are as many as any one can secure or enjoy to advantage in the present state of things. An average of seven hours, therefore, is probably the nearest we can come to exactness in a general rule for man in civic life.—Health Reformer.

The Mosaic Dietary Laws.—It is strange that the Mosaic prescriptions for man's diet, chiefly taken from the tabernacle rites, have become, by common consent, the bill of fare of civilized society, with variations, of course. In the cities, especially, the main articles of food are those which the Laws of Moses recommended. When in former days people dieted largely upon pork many became hogs themselves, and many diseases still raging among men, have been conveyed into the human system by the consumption of pork, rabbits, hares, and other animal food which the law forbids.

Physiologists understand well enough the importance of diet, and yet none have gone to the trouble of giving the Mosaic dietary laws a thorough scientific examination. Here are the Jews, after 3,000 years, a healthy, intelligent, energetic, and fertile race. Much is said about their longevity, temperance, charitable disposition, etc., still no scientist has taken the trouble to examine the food on which this race lived and thrived. The point is certainly, scientifically, very important.—Israelite.

THE LAND OF REST.

A. P. CRESSEY.

Oh, give me a home in the land of the blest,
Where sin cannot enter and death cannot come;
From the north to the south, from the east to the west
The earth shall rejoice and the wilderness bloom.

Here, the flowers we pluck soon fade and are gone;
Here, friends that we love oftimes prove untrue,
And leave us in sadness to wander alone,
And coldly and scornfully bid us adieu.

Here, sin has blighted the old and the young,
The rich and the poor, alike feel its power;
And life at the longest is scarcely begun
Ere the blight of old age brings death at the door.

Then farewell to earth, to its beauty and wealth;
Farewell to its loved ones, we must bid them adieu;
In the land of the blest we shall meet them in health,
Where life shall be lasting and friendship prove true.

Oh, Lord, let me live in the land of the blest,
Where sin cannot enter and death is unknown,
Where the wayworn and weary forever shall rest,
And drink the pure water that flows from thy throne.

THE LAW OF GOD.—No. 2.

R. W. WILSON.

Gal. 3: 21, 22—"Is the law then against the promises of God? God forbid; for if there had been a law given which could have given life, verily righteousness should have been by the law. But the Scripture hath concluded all under sin, that the promise by faith of Jesus Christ might be given to all that believe." We learn from this scripture that the law could not give life, and the reason why, for it could not give righteousness. God hath concluded all under sin, and it is impossible to justify a man by the same law which convicts him; this is true of any law wherein a moral obligation is involved. Therefore law and life, in the case of the sinner, are incompatible, for violated law claims his life. He is represented by our Savior as being a great debtor, but having nothing to pay. This is the reason so much is said in the Holy Scriptures about salvation by grace through faith, in opposition to doing.

The position maintained by this passage being true, that righteousness and life are not obtainable to a sinner by obedience to law, how are we to understand the words of Christ as recorded in Matt. 19: 16? "And, behold, one came and said unto him, Good Master, what good thing shall I do that I may have eternal life? And he said unto him, Why callest thou me good? there is none good but one, that is, God; but if thou wilt enter into life, keep the commandments. He saith unto him, Which [knowing that God had given more than ten]? Jesus saith, Thou shalt do no murder; Thou shalt not commit adultery; Thou shalt not steal; Thou shalt not bear false witness; Honor thy father and thy mother; and, Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself. The young man saith unto him, All these have I kept from my youth up; what lack I yet? Jesus saith unto him, If thou wilt be perfect, go and sell that thou hast, and give to the poor, and thou shalt have treasure in heaven; and come and follow me. But when the young man heard that saying, he went away sorrowful; for he had great possessions."

This young man was a sinner, an idolater, but did not seem to know it. Like the rest of the Jews, he claimed to have a righteousness which is by the law. "All these things have I kept from my youth up; what lack I yet?" Our Lord, knowing his condition, made use of the most direct and effectual means for his conviction, by taking him on his own ground, proving his guilt from his own standard of righteousness; and for this same reason the Savior, in several instances in answering questions to persons of this character, has referred to some of the precepts of the Decalogue; but he has never taught that a sinner by obedience to the ten commandments, or any other law, without repentance toward God and faith in him as the only Savior, would obtain eternal life.

Righteousness is the great want of our fallen race, because we have forfeited our life by sin; and righteousness is a prerequisite to life. Said Paul—"If righteousness come by the law [the point is, if we could obtain righteousness by obedience to the law], then Christ is dead in vain." He was made under the law, "to redeem them that were under the law." "Christ hath redeemed us from the curse of the law, being made a curse for us"; and the subjection of Christ to the claims of the law, in rendering an absolute obedience to every precept, and suffering its curse, was in order to procure and present to us a righteousness suited to our condition.

The debt which we owe consists of two parts—performance and penalty. The righteousness of Christ, to be available for us, must furnish both; and in view of this Jesus fulfilled the precept and exhausted the penalty, procuring for us the forgiveness of sins and the right to eternal life. This righteousness, wrought out for us by the perfect obedience and death of our blessed Lord, is said by Paul to be the righteousness of God, because he devised and has accepted it; and it is called a righteousness of faith, because faith, hearty faith, is the sole condition of its bestowment. Rom. 3: 22—"Even the righteousness of God, which is by faith of Jesus Christ unto all and upon all them that believe." Rom. 10: 10—"For with the heart man believeth unto righteousness." That works may be fully excluded, Paul, in Rom. 5: 17, says of those who receive the gift of righteousness, they "shall reign in life by one, Jesus Christ."

Man, in possession of this righteousness of faith, is right in the sight of God and his law. He is in Christ, and has legal rightness. His condition is better than that of Adam before he sinned; for although he possessed a moral fitness for the kingdom, he did not have a right to eternal life; but the believer who is in possession of Christ's righteousness has both. Gal. 5: 5—"For we through the Spirit wait for the hope of righteousness by faith." What is the hope of righteousness? It was something that the christians of Paul's day were waiting for. It was not righteousness, for this they had; "and what a man seeth, why doth he yet hope for? But if we hope for that we see not, then do we with patience wait for it." The great blessing for which the righteous wait is eternal life, "which God that cannot lie promised before the world began." Titus 1: 2.

God's wondrous plan of grace and love is first to bestow upon believers in the record he has given of his dear Son his gift of righteousness, and then its associate blessing the gift of eternal life. "Where is boasting then? It is excluded. By what law? of works? Nay, but by the law of faith. Do we then make void the law through faith? God forbid; yea, we establish the law." Rom. 3: 27, 31.

A Sabbatarian said to me not long since that "no one could ever be converted without the law; for 'by the law is the knowledge of sin'"; but Paul has not said the law is the only means by which sin is known; and that God has made sin known by other instrumentalities the Scriptures fully attest. The appointed work of the Holy Spirit is to convince the world of sin in general, and the sin of sins in particular. "Because they believe not on me." Paul has revealed several sins which are not made known by the decalogue; such as impatience, vulgar and foolish talking, drunkenness, pride, malice, etc. Paul said, "I had not known sin but by the law, for I had not known lust except the law had said, Thou shalt not covet." This passage when taken in its connection is easily understood. Paul is giving in this chapter the condition of an unconverted Jew, under the law, as we find in the fifth verse, where he says—"For when we were in the flesh," etc. Paul could not say this as descriptive of his own condition, for after the gospel of Christ, "the law of the Spirit of life had made him free," and had given him more knowledge in his Master's first sermon on the sin of lust, than is to be found in the law.

God's great moral detector in this dispensation is his Holy Spirit connected with the truth contained in the gospel—the law of Christ—which he has repeatedly declared will be the standard by which men shall be judged in the last day. Rom. 2: 16—"In the day when God shall judge the secrets of men by Jesus Christ according to my gospel." John 12: 48—"He that rejecteth me, and receiveth not my words, hath one that judgeth him; the word that I have spoken, the same shall judge him in the last day." This being the fact, the gospel, or law of Christ, must necessarily embody each and every moral precept, expressed and defined in language so plain as to leave no ground for misapprehension in relation to which are in force in our day. God has given several commandments to his people Israel, which are now abrogated, having served the end for which they were given. If a Judaizer were to say to us, You must keep the feast of the Passover, with other duties connected therewith, the Lord has commanded that the "first day shall be an holy convocation; ye shall do no manner of servile work therein"; we would answer, No, because obedience to this commandment is not taught by Christ or his apostles. And if he were to say, You must keep holy the seventh-day Sabbath, for thus the Lord has commanded, we would answer, No, for the same reason,—it has no record in the law of Christ under which we live and by which we shall be judged; and, moreover, if the non-observance of these commandments does not convict men now, not being brought over and inculcated in the New Testament, verily, they will not in the day of judgment; the law being unchangeable.

Sabbatarians will doubtless be "slow of heart" to admit that obedience to the fourth commandment is not taught in the New Testament. But if it is it can easily be found; and I demand of them one passage from the New Testament requiring obedience to the fourth commandment of the decalogue. I do not require a word-for-word quotation of this precept, but any terms giving the same meaning, that the seventh-day Sabbath shall be observed as holy time, is all that is necessary. He who does this will have to do considerably better than Elder Canright did when he was preaching in Santa Clara, Sept., 1874. He promised at the close of one of his discourses that the next night he would give a text from Christ, enjoining obedience to the fourth commandment. The next night, to the great surprise of several who were present, the Elder gave them Matt. 24: 20—"But pray ye that your flight be not in the winter, neither on the Sabbath day." Certainly it ought to be obvious to every one that the same argument that would prove the Sabbath day holy time in this text would have equal force in proving the winter holy time also; which involves an absurdity, and manifests a misapplication of the passage. But this is the best that people can do, after over twenty years' study, to produce a single item of authority from Christ, enforcing obligation to observe the seventh-day Sabbath.

It is claimed that some of the other precepts of the decalogue, which we admit are now in force, are not mentioned in the New Testament; but this is not true, for we find every moral precept contained in the decalogue brought over and taught in the New Testament; not in the same words, it is true, but this is not necessary, so long as the expressions used clearly convey to us the same ideas and principles. New Testament writers seldom have quoted any part of the Old Testament verbatim; this not being requisite in order to give the same truth.

To prove, and show more plainly to the reader that the nine moral principles contained in the ten commandments have been brought over and embodied in the Gospel, we will place them in contrast:

DECALOGUE.—1. Thou shalt have no other gods before me.

GOSPEL.—1. Get thee behind me, Satan; for it is written, Thou shalt worship the Lord thy God, and him only shalt thou serve. Luke 4: 8.

DEC.—2. Thou shalt not make unto thee any graven image, nor the likeness of anything that is in heaven above, or that is in the earth beneath, or that is in the water under the earth; thou shalt not bow down thyself to them, nor serve them; for I the Lord thy God am a jealous God, visiting the iniquity of the fathers upon the children unto the third and fourth generation of them that hate me; and showing mercy unto thousands of them that love me, and keep my commandments.

GOS.—2. Thou shalt love the Lord thy God, with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind. Matt. 22: 37.

DEC.—3. Thou shalt not take the name of the Lord thy God in vain; for the Lord will not hold him guiltless that taketh his name in vain.

GOS.—3. But above all things, my brethren, swear not, neither by heaven, neither by the earth, neither by any other oath; but let your yea be yea; and your nay, nay; lest ye fall into condemnation. Jas. 5: 12.

DEC.—5. Honor thy father and thy mother, that thy days may be long upon the land which the Lord thy God giveth thee.

GOS.—5. Children, obey your parents in the Lord, for this is right. Honor thy father and mother, which is the first commandment with promise; that it may be well with thee, and that thou mayest live long on the earth. Eph. 6: 1-3.

DEC.—6. Thou shalt not kill.

GOS.—6. Thou shalt not kill. Rom. 13: 9.

DEC.—7. Thou shalt not commit adultery.

GOS.—7. Thou shalt not commit adultery. Rom. 13: 9.

DEC.—8. Thou shalt not steal.

GOS.—8. Thou shalt not steal. Rom. 13: 9.

DEC.—9. Thou shalt not bear false witness against thy neighbor.

GOS.—9. Thou shalt not bear false witness. Rom. 13: 9.

DEC.—10. Thou shalt not covet thy neighbor's house, thou shalt not covet thy neighbor's wife, nor his man servant, nor his maid servant, nor his ox, nor his ass, nor any thing that is thy neighbor's.

GOS.—10. Thou shalt not covet. Rom. 13: 9.

It must be admitted that every moral precept found in the decalogue is embraced in the above quotations from the gospel; but the fourth commandment not being one of these, God has not had it re-affirmed in the law of Christ, being not intended for universal observance, because unsuitable to the "all nations" to whom the gospel is addressed. God gave the Sabbath and several other feast days to the Jewish nation to mark their deliverance from Egypt. Deut. 5: 15—"And remember that thou wast a servant in the land of Egypt, and that the Lord thy God brought thee out thence with a mighty hand and by a stretched out arm; therefore the Lord thy God commanded thee to keep the Sabbath day." And owing to the shape of our globe the simultaneous observance of the seventh day as a Sabbath, by all nations, is impossible. Elder White says, "The sun is God's great time-keeper," and that "the Sabbath begins with the darkness" (of Friday night). This may answer for the inhabitants of this part of our world, but for those who live where the days and nights are several weeks and months long it will not suit.

Some may object to the first commandment as recorded in the gospel, on the ground that it was addressed to the devil; but the same objection with equal propriety might be urged against the first promise God made of our Redeemer, as given in Gen. 3: 15. Surely no one can be so unreasonable as to claim that these portions of the divine record were not given for our instruction because spoken to Satan. The character of the beings addressed does not diminish the authority or the preciousness of God's words, whether spoken to the devil or his children. Coming from God to us they have the same weight.

Sabbatarians make much talk about the position advocated by some, that the ten commandments, as a whole, were abolished by Christ; but we know of but few who hold to this view of the subject. We maintain that although the ten commandments, or first covenant, in the form in which it was given to Israel, was abrogated by Christ, taken out of the way, "that he might establish the second," and with it its Sabbath and other feast days, which were never intended by God for the observance of all flesh, hence did not involve a moral principle except to those to whom they were given, and to whom alone they could apply. But not so with the moral principles of the decalogue. These have had an existence during the whole history of our race, and have been made known to all men either by an external or an internal law. Rom. 2: 14, 15—"For when the Gentiles, which have not the law, do by nature the things contained in the law, these having not the law, are a law unto themselves; which show the works of the law written in their hearts, their conscience also bearing witness, and their thoughts the meanwhile accusing or else excusing one another."

These moral principles having been brought over, re-affirmed, and embodied in the law of Christ, are now in force, and christians under the new covenant render obedience to these, not in order to be saved, but because they are saved, being controled by the love of God, which is shed abroad in their hearts by the Holy Spirit which is given unto them. "Love is the fulfilling of the law." It was absolutely necessary in order for the full establishment of the new covenant to abrogate every covenant which involved works. Why? Because the new covenant is one under which the just "live by faith," and not by their doing; and its law is the "law of faith"; and there can be no agreement between covenants of works and the covenant of faith, any more than there was between Abraham's wife Sarah and the bond woman. In order to maintain the one, the the other must be "cast out," or, as Paul in another passage has stated—"He taketh away the first that he may establish the second." This involves the removal of all covenants of works, such as the covenants of circumcision and the Sabbath, recorded in Ex. 31: 16—"Wherefore the children of Israel shall keep the Sabbath, to observe the Sabbath throughout their generations, for a perpetual covenant."

It is somewhat difficult for some to understand how the gospel can be good news, and also act as and be called a law; but we think it should be plain to all that even the good news and offer of salvation by grace through faith in Christ, if rejected, will prove the means of condemnation and destruction. "If ye believe not that I am he, ye shall die in your sins." "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved; but he that believeth not shall be damned." Isaiah in speaking of Christ says (42: 4)—"He shall not fail nor be discouraged till he have set judgment in the earth; and the isles shall wait for his law." His law is his gospel. This is a savor of life unto life, or of death unto death." This is called by James (1: 25)—"the perfect law of liberty," and in 2: 12 he says—"So speak ye, and so do, as they that shall be judged by the law of liberty."

I am aware that seventh-day keepers claim that this text means the ten commandments, on the ground that two of the precepts are mentioned in the previous verse. But this is not a valid argument; for as we have shown before, Paul had spoken of the decalogue and two other portions of the Bible in one short verse, and calls both the law. Gal. 4: 21—"Tell me, ye that desire to be under the law, do ye not hear the law?" And furthermore, no one with any degree of propriety or reason can apply this passage to any other law but the law of Christ; for the scriptural proof already adduced establishes the fact that it is God's ordained law, by which he will judge the world. Such a law must contain the whole duty of man; and there is but one law of which this can be affirmed, which is the law of Christ. It is the perfect law of liberty. Jesus said, "Ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free"; and he preached "liberty to the captives." Paul said—"The law of the spirit of life in Christ Jesus hath made me free from the law of sin and death." The gospel has proved itself a law of liberty to its millions. How is it with the decalogue? Is that perfect? If so, for what? Is it to make sin known? No; for there are many sins which it does not reveal. Is it perfect to save? No; for it has never saved any one. Is it a perfect law of liberty? Has it ever given freedom to a single soul of our race? We know it has locked many up in the cold, dark cell of condemnation, but who has it ever brought out unto liberty? It does seem very strange that any person could become so bewildered as to take portions of God's Word, which speak of the whole duty of man, perfection, and liberty, and say it means the ten commandments.

THE NARROW WAY.

J. R. SMITH.

"Strait is the gate, and narrow is the way that leadeth unto life, and few there be that find it." Jesus Christ is the only way whereby lost sinners can come to God and obtain mercy and pardon. "There is no other name under heaven, given among men, whereby we must be saved." If any undertake to climb up any other way, "the same is a thief and a robber." None but those who have a true and a living faith in Christ, wrought in the soul by the Spirit of God, are true members of the church here; and only such will be members of that church that will be presented faultless to Christ at his appearing. "Christ loved the church, and gave himself for it, that he might sanctify and cleanse it with the washing of water by the Word, that he might present it to himself a glorious church, not having spot, or wrinkle, or any such thing.

A life of holiness is crucifying to the flesh, not pleasing to the carnal mind, because "the carnal mind is enmity against God," and "is not subject to the law of God, neither indeed can be." Holiness never will agree with men's sensual appetites and motives; and although such may have their names written upon the church books, yet they are not registered in the Lamb's book of life. It is a fact that a large majority of the professed followers of Christ are not in "the narrow way," for they deny him by their daily lives and conversation.

Says the apostle—"I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ, for it is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth." There is a divine eternal power in the gospel of Christ, which makes men "new creatures in Christ Jesus." The christian who is in "the narrow way" has partaken of the divine nature; his delight is in the law of the Lord, and in his Word doth he meditate day and night. He delights to do the will of God, and is like a tree planted by the rivers of waters; he brings forth fruit in season. He is led by the good Shepherd, hears his voice, and follows him. Although he may be called to go through trials, yet he willingly and cheerfully submits, remembering it is written, "The Lord God is a sun and shield, who will give grace and glory, and withhold no good thing from them that walk uprightly."

Christians who are in the narrow way find Jesus to be a satisfying portion; the one altogether lovely, and the chiefest among ten thousand. This world is not their home. They acknowledge themselves strangers and pilgrims here, looking for a better country; and have turned away "from idols, to serve the living and the true God; and to wait for his Son from heaven; whom he raised from the dead, even Jesus; who hath delivered them from the wrath to come."

There is a path that leads to God,
All others go astray;
"Narrow" but pleasant is the road,
And christians love the way.

THE CRY AT MIDNIGHT.

D. T. TAYLOR.

We have for many years past been persuaded that the cry at midnight, Matt. 25: 6, heralding the Bridegroom's presence, was not uttered by the virgins who waited his coming, but by the attendants who were heading the Bridegroom's procession; consequently, it cannot be forced to represent a similar cry made by the waiting church during some time prior to our Lord's arrival. The reasons for thus believing are obvious, and may be stated as follows:

First—In the features of the Jewish wedding, drawn upon for the parable in question, the virgins were in waiting at and around the house of the bridegroom, while the latter with his attendants, having celebrated the wedding at the house of the bride's father, had left that house and were proceeding on the street to meet the virgins and enter the house of the bridegroom, the attendants, not the virgins, meanwhile, shouting along the street the so-called midnight cry.

Second—The cry was first made by persons awake. But the whole body of virgins, weary at the long delay of the bridal retinue, had fallen sound asleep, and are so described at the very instant the cry was sounded. How, therefore, could these slumbering virgins open the cry? Certainly they would be the last ones to cry it while asleep. Our Lord declares they were all asleep. It was the cry that awoke them.

Third—"The going forth to meet the bridegroom," the original movement prior to the cry, was founded upon a well known previous understanding and announcement of the approaching nuptials. This was the prime, grand, preparatory movement, made intelligently, made on evidence. This may denote the latter-day, wide-spread, advent movement, occupying some considerable time, but the final "going out" is a sudden movement, marked by excitement and a quick ending.

Fourth—We search the parable in vain to find that a single virgin, who was unready when the cry was made, ever got ready afterwards. All awoke, all stirred the rude lamp, all was haste; but with one class it was too late. Hurry, alarm, seeking there was; but there was no preparation. The true preparation, with lamp, oil, dress, waiting love, and intelligent faith, was made from the beginning. From this very beginning there were "five foolish." These essayed to pass in, but entered not. "Wisdom uttered her voice" for these in vain.

Fifth—An older and doubtless truer translation confirms and establishes this view. The common version misleads in using the word "cometh" or "comes" or "is coming." Its use supposes an event at hand and near to come, but not actually come. The Sinaitic version—the oldest in the world now known—renders it simply thus: "Behold the Bridegroom!" With this agrees the Vatican and Alexandrian, the two next oldest New Testament manuscripts extant. These are of early date and high authority. The thought seems to be, "See, the Bridegroom is here; he is come." Just like this was the language used by Christ's attendant and herald at his first advent: "Behold the Lamb of God!" That is, Look at him; he is here. John 1: 36. In neither instance was he yet to come; he had already come.

Sixth—The Diaglott sustains this view and gives this literal translation: "Lo, the Bridegroom." But this is spoiled by introducing the features of a Hindoo wedding, whereas our Lord refers not to a Hindoo, nor a Persian, but to a Jewish wedding. I have presented the main feature and order of this wedding; for the rest, see "Nevins' Biblical Antiquities."

And so I believe that men are not to fulfill Matt. 25: 6. On the contrary, it is a mighty cry, a shout uttered by the angels, the celestial attendants of the Bridegroom. When that cry is made, probably by Michael, (1 Thess. 4: 16), it will be too late to prepare for and obtain access to the home of the Lamb and his chosen. Too late! Unquestionably a great warning of the Lord's near approach is to be made prior to the last day. It has been made. It is being made. It is right to make it. But the cry in the parable is not its divine warrant. Jesus will come suddenly. The cry at midnight may be heard sooner than the virgin's dream; yea at the next moment. Who can say, "Ready?"—Bible Banner.

ARMAGEDDON.

We sometimes hear in sermons or exhortations, or read in some of our papers and publications, the expression—"The battle of Armageddon." Now we should like the authority for calling any battle past or future by that name. "Armageddon" is a term used but once in the Bible. Rev. 16: 16. Expositors say that its signification is the same as the "Megiddo" of the Old Testament; and that as "Megiddo" was the place of many sanguinary, fierce and bloody conflicts in ages past, it represents the place where God will battle with the "kings of the earth and of the whole world" in the "battle of that great day of God Almighty." It is thus made to represent a place, and that place must be known by its appellation, and that appellation is "Armageddon."

Where is the place Armageddon? There is no such place known to modern geography. But we are told that it means ancient "Megiddo." And what, and where, was ancient "Megiddo"? It was a city in that part of Canaan given to Manasseh. It is said that Solomon used the "six score talents of gold" that Hiram king of Tyre sent him, to "build the house of the Lord and his own house, and Megiddo." The Canaanites under Sisera were utterly destroyed by Barak and his "ten thousand," as sung by Deborah:—"Then fought the kings of Canaan in Taanach by the waters of Megiddo." Judg. 5: 19. "The waters of Megiddo" are the "river Kishon." Verse 21 and chap. 4: 7. It is said that king Josiah was slain in the "valley of Megiddo," and that "he came to fight" in the "valley of Megiddo," and was slain there. 2 Chron. 35: 22. Now, the "waters of Megiddo"—the "river Kishon"—was not far from "Mount Tabor," for "Barak went down from Mount Tabor, and ten thousand men after him" on the same day that the great battle was fought; consequently the battle-ground was near "Mount Tabor"; and therefore, the "waters of Megiddo" was also near "Mount Tabor."

What have we learned so far in reference to "Megiddo"? (1) That Megiddo was a city in that part of Canaan given to the tribe of Manasseh. (2) That "Barak" destroyed the Canaanites at the "waters of Megiddo," and that those waters were the "river Kishon." (3) That the "waters of Megiddo" were near to "mount Tabor." (4) That king Josiah was slain in the "valley of Megiddo," which valley must be the valley of the "river Kishon," in which was situated the city of "Megiddo," near the foot of Tabor. Now, with these facts before us we have a query to suggest. If the "river Kishon" was the "waters of Megiddo," the valley of the Kishon the "valley of Megiddo," was not "mount Tabor" the "mountain of Megiddo"? As "Ar—Mageddon" means the "Mountain of Megiddo," what other mountain can be referred to?

As there were many battles fought at Megiddo at the base of Tabor, the notion has obtained, that the last great battle is to be fought there; and hence, is called the "battle of Armageddon" or of "Mount Megiddo." Now, let us examine Rev. 16, and see if anything of the kind is taught there. "And I saw three unclean spirits like frogs come out of the mouth of the dragon, and out of the mouth of the beast, and out of the mouth of the false prophet: for they are the spirits of devils working miracles which go forth unto the kings of the earth and of the whole world, to gather them to the battle of that great day of God Almighty." Here we are shown the parties that are gathered,—the kings of the earth and of the whole world": the agents that gather them,—"the spirits of devils." "Behold I come as a thief." Who comes? Jesus, evidently. "Blessed is he that watcheth and keepeth his garment lest he walk naked and they see his shame. And he gathered them together into a place called in the Hebrew tongue Armageddon." And "he gathered them." And who is "he"? Evidently the same that "comes as a thief," the Lord Jesus. And who are "them" that he gathers. Evidently them that "watch" and "keep" their "garments." And where does he gather them? To "Armageddon." What does "Armageddon" mean? The Mountain of Megiddo. In other words Mount Tabor,—the mount of transfiguration,—where "Peter, James, and John" saw the "kingdom of God" in miniature; and "beheld his glory when they were with him on the holy mount."

Some Bi[illegible] Dictionaries and Encyclopedias tell us that "Armageddon" signifies—"The mountain of fruits"—"The mountain of delights." If this be so, then "mount Tabor" becomes a fit type of that "glorious holy mountain"—"mount Sion," the "kingdom of the ever blessed God," to which Jesus will "gather together his elect," when he comes, from the four winds, from "one end of heaven to the other." The "unclean spirits" gather the kings of the earth to "the battle of that great day," which cannot be in any one particular place, but as universal as the existence of "nations" and "kingdoms," which God will at that day cast down and destroy. The saints are "gathered" to "Armageddon," and not the "kings of the earth." Jesus gathers them, and not the "unclean spirits." Hence, the idea of the "Battle of Armageddon" is unscriptural. As Barak gathered his army on Tabor from which to discern with his "ten thousand" and destroy the Canaanites,—so Jesus will descend with "ten thousand of his saints to execute judgment upon all" the "heathen round about"—the "armies of heaven will follow him."

The foregoing has been written to direct thought and investigation to this matter. Who will investigate, and enlighten, and set the truth before the people? Let truth prevail.

THE PAST, PRESENT, AND FUTURE OF OUR WORLD.

M. M. PARKER.

Believing the Scriptures to be of divine origin, and designed by their author to be a lamp for our feet, and a light to our path, we shall, doubtless, if we follow their teachings, be led aright; and by carefully studying them for the purpose of finding out their teachings, we shall attain to correct views upon any and all subjects which their author has given light and knowledge concerning.

Upon examining them in regard to the history of our world, and its inhabitants, we learn that in the beginning, God created the heavens and the earth, and all things therein; and he pronounced all, as they existed fresh from his hand, good; and as such, we conclude that all was uncorrupted and undamaged; nothing had yet been brought to bear which had produced an evil effect upon the creation of God; all was emphatically in a state of salubrity, and all seemed in harmony with the mind and will of the great Creator, and also worked in harmony with each other. No jarring discord, no variance and strife, no seeking of self-exaltation, or self-emolument, and thus robbing their Maker of the honor and praise which alone belonged to him, as the supreme Ruler of the universe, which he had caused to exist.

Truly the first estate of man was one most enviable, surrounded as he was by every thing beautiful and ennobling, and in every way adapted to the wants and requirements of beings possessed with intelligen and refined natures, and those capable appreciating and enjoying the grandeur and loveliness of their surroundings.

In this condition also, all seemed to conspire to the advancement of man in knowledge and beneficence, and calculated also to inspire his heart with confidence in, and love for God, who had thus wisely provided for his comfort and happiness.

Thrice happy would it have been for man if he had thus been led by the goodness of God to give him his entire trust and confidence, and become so allied to him that it would have been impossible to have drawn him into sin and transgression.

But as God saw fit to establish government in the universe, and issue a command by which to test the character of man, or rather cause him to develop a character, and also suffer him to be tempted, in order that he might test his loyalty to him, we find that upon the first temptation of which we have any record, man yielded, and transgressed the law of God, notwithstanding the heavy penalty which annexed thereto—even death. And as God had placed in the garden of Eden (the residence of man prior to his fall) a tree, the fruit of which was designed to give a nature in opposition to the one which he had promised to man in case he disobeyed—that of life, instead of death, he therefore expelled him from the garden, in order to prohibit his access to this tree. Man had forfeited his right to life, in the very day in which he set his heart to do evil in the sight of God, by refusing to submit to his law and to be governed by it.

In this the wisdom and goodness of God was manifest; for if man had been left to partake of the fruit of the tree of life, God's promise with regard to the penalty for sin would have been rendered null and void; for man would have become immortal, and therefore not susceptible of death.

So we see that by the simple act of expelling man from the garden of Eden, and closing the avenue to the tree of life, God evinced his power and determination to carry out his own plans and fulfil his threatenings in regard to his dealings with man.

Sin did its work in the case of our first parents, and has continued to work to the pollution and degradation of man, and will ultimate in the final and everlasting destruction of all who persist in allowing it to hold sway in the human heart. Disease and death have followed in its track ever since it entered our world; but Scripture informs us that at some future time God will destroy sin and sinners, also death, and him who has the power of death; and that Christ, the promised Redeemer, will yet triumph gloriously, and come off victor over all his foes. At that time there shall no place be found for the rebellion against God to be carried on. When the plan of salvation is consummated, Christ will then bring in everlasting righteousness by himself, becoming Governor of the universe, and establishing a government which shall endure as long as God himself shall endure. But in order to enjoy this blessed reign in the future, sin must be exterminated, and Christ allowed to rule the heart and affections now.

LIGHT AND LOVE.—Christian, lift up your head, and behold the fulness of Jesus' love. Why need you trudge along life's pathway with but a faint and glimmering view of the adorable Redeemer, when it is your glorious privilege to emerge into the broad dawn of spiritual day? Will you not henceforth let the sun of grace be a light-bearer to your soul, that the enlightenment already transmitted by God's Spirit may spread out more widely, so that you will realize it to be a tangible reality to your experience? Then will you be enabled to comprehend the wonderful plan of salvation with greater perspicuity, your life becoming a continual flood of holy illumination. To every inhabitant of God's footstool the injunction is sent, "Let there be light."

THE cultivation of such manners as shall express all the best feelings, the noblest thoughts, the refinement and grace of the mind and the heart, is a thing which cannot be too highly thought of, nor set about too soon.

THE LAST ACTS OF PAPACY.

The Papal hierarchy has had a long history as a great and dictatorial power, performing a variety of acts of world-wide importance to all the nations of Christendom, and especially to the true church of Christ. Those acts have involved the dearest earthly interests of uncounted millions of our race, from the mightiest kings to the lowest peasants. It has summoned before its judgment bar, by its supreme mandates, emperors and marshalls, senators and plebeians. It has passed through dark days of defeat and overwhelming opposition, but it has never yielded in despair to its enemies; but it has always exercised an indomitable will and purpose to put its heel on all opponents to its cherished purpose of ruling the world, politically and ecclesiastically, by its deified head.

Its long chapters of varied history are before us, but where is the prophetic history of its future? and who can tell what its present programme in boastful words and threatening acts will result in?

Human sagacity and foresight might give a variety of suggestions as to its next phase of development, but they all would lack proof to sustain them. But when we turn to the Word of God we find that he has given us a perfect history of the principal acts of this power, affecting the nations and true church from the time it assumed to take the place of Deity on the earth and govern the world in the name of Christ, to the day of its doom, when it shall be thrown into the sea of everlasting destruction.

Every item of that history has been perfectly duplicated by its official acts down to the present date. There is such a remarkable correspondence between the inspired history and the uninspired, that it is very easy to find that part of the prophecies now being accomplished. When this is found, it is easy to learn from the prophetic connection of events what may be expected of this threatening power in the future. We can clearly trace its progress through the various stages of its rise, triumphs, associations with kingdoms, and its bloody persecutions, down to the time when it should be divorced from its kingly husbands, and it should be said to it—"There is no longer for thee a throne." This has clearly been its position for the last few years. There is not a kingdom upon the earth whose throne it can control as in former times. The prophecies show that when it should be thus dethroned, it would make a most united and desperate effort to regain its former position as dictator of kings, and corrector of heretics. They also show that, in making the effort to regain lost power, the daughter of Babylon will meet its final doom, and sink in everlasting ruin.

We think it very plain that the Papacy is now performing these prophetic acts of laboring to again ascend the throne as political arbiter of the world, and to correct heretics as in former times.

This subject seems to be very truthfully and clearly presented in an appeal made to Protestants by a converted Catholic priest, by the name of Chiniquy, published in the Christian Times, from which we quote as follows:

Dear Brethren:—In a few months a General Council will be held in the City of the Seven Mountains, on which the Mother of Harlots and abominations sitteth. The Pope has called the generals of his almost innumerable legions to meet at the headquarters of his empire.

I have been twenty-three years tied at the feet of the Man of Sin.

When among his blind and devoted slaves, I have had every opportunity to know his dark and giant plans, and I feel that if this does not give me the right, it imposes upon me the duty of raising my warning voice at the approach of this portentous event.

The Pope has a mission, a most terrible mission, to perform towards you, my brethren. The Pope does not make a secret of his mission; he boasts of it—since more than a thousand years he proclaims it in every way. His mission is to curse your Bible, and destroy it every time he can lay his hands upon it: his mission is to blot out the Word of God from the hearts and intelligence of men, to make room for his traditions; his mission is to shed the blood of the disciples of Christ. Here is his law: "Let the secular powers be warned . . . that they publicly take an oath that they will study in good earnest to exterminate, to their utmost power, from the lands subject to their jurisdiction, all heretics denoted by the Church."

"And the Pope made public rejoicings in Rome for the slaughter of the thousand heretics thrown down from the top of the high mountains of Piedmont on the naked stones. And the Pope got all the bells of Rome rung, and all the cannons of his city shot, in public tokens of his gratitude to God when he heard that seventy-five thousand Protestants had been slaughtered in a single night (the night of St. Bartholomew) in France!"

The Pope has repeatedly proclaimed that "his mission is to destroy 'liberty of conscience:'" and I know what I say, my brethren, when the Pope will find his opportunity, the Roman Catholics will destroy "liberty of conscience," if even they have to walk to their knees in your blood.

We have too much talking about the power and intelligence of the Protestants, as a security against the general apostacy of which we see so many signs in the horizon. No human power, no human intelligence, will stand, when God, in order to chastise his own children, will take away their lamps to deliver them into the hands of the merciless instrument of his vengeance, the Pope.

What eloquent phrases have we not heard these last fifty years about the intelligence and the power of the English people being a bulwark against Popery! But see how the God of the Gospel is, to-day, extinguishing the lights in the midst of those so 'wise' Protestants of Great Britain! See how their dukes, their counts, their duchesses, and their lords, and their Gospel ministers, are turning their backs on Christ, in order to follow the Pope! Protestants, you exaggerate to yourselves the losses to the Pope, etc. The Roman Catholics smile at your illusions on that subject. Your mistakes in this matter are the subject of their daily joy; it prepares their triumph by putting you asleep. These illusions, which are so dear to you, prevent you from preparing yourselves for the impending conflict.

The Roman Catholics believe that it is their Virgin, or their God, who has put a veil upon your eyes to prevent you from putting yourselves upon your guard. They cannot understand that you do not see at what extraordinary speed they have increased in wealth, in number, and in moral power, within these last fifty years.

Not long ago, I was speaking with a learned and influential Roman Catholic priest on what the Protestant press calls the losses of the Roman Catholic Church in Italy, Spain, etc. I told him, "Rome will go out from your hands at the death of Napoleon, and Italy is evidently giving you the cold shoulder."

"Yes," said the priest, "we know that very well; but we don't care a straw for Rome, when we have New York in our hands. Is not New York five times more populous, a thousand times richer, and ten thousand times more important, than Rome? And for the rags of Italy, we can afford to let them go into the hands of the fillibuster Garibaldi, when we are just now taking possession of the United States and of Great Britain.

"When Rome was ruling the world, it was necessary that we should govern Rome in order to rule the world; but the day that Rome loses her prestige, she becomes to us as as a rotten ship; we must get out of her.

"Great Britain and the United States are evidently marching to the conquest of the world; then we must conquer this mighty republic with her haughty and powerful mother, England; and that man is very blind indeed who does not see that these two mighty nations will belong to the Church of Rome before long. Through them we will conquer the world a second time.

"Look on our innumerable nunneries and splendid colleges towering on every hill, and raising their lofty spires in every valley. You do not ignore that they are filled with the daughters and sons of the most influential and wealthy Protestant families of this republic. You know very well that if we have been able to have these young trees planted into our gardens in order to cultivate and train them in our ways to-day, it will be still easier to keep them in our own hands when they will bear their fruits.

"We confess that the wind is not very favorable in Italy and Spain, but the good mariner does not care much about unfavorable winds; he is prepared for them; he knows they must come; he trims his sails for them, and on the ship goes. As long as the wives and daughters of the demagogues of Italy and Spain will come to confess as they do, we have not so much to fear from these revolutionists as you think. After the stormy days, calm will come again. These fierce republicans who seem ready to eat up and devour all the Jesuits and priests of Rome, will be easily tamed by their wives and daughters; and if some of them are unmanageable, you have been in our midst long enough to know that through their wives, we know all their plans, their secrets, and that we have in our hands every means of paralyzing their plans, embarassing their work, dividing and confounding their councils, and forcing them in the end to compromise with us.

"See that wild and dumb bear who is ruling over France. He feels that Rome is a stone to his neck; he would like to get rid of it. But his wife goes to confess every week, and Rome is safe under the protection of the French bayonets.

"Have not the Protestants long since given up their aggressive war against us? Their intestine divisions evidently take up all their time and energies; with the exception of a few angry words here and there, which fall as lost shots in our midst, who is thinking of attacking us in a serious manner among the Protestant ministers?

"Are you not the only one to-day who makes a successful aggressive war against the church of Rome in the U. States? You are the only one who can show the thousands which you have taken from us to make them Protestants. But what have you gained for yourself in persuading so many of your countrymen to leave our church to become Protestants? Nothing but a moral grave, in which you would have been long since dead and buried, if the Canada churches had not come to your help.

"The politicians are almost all in our hands, and at our feet, to get our votes. Great is the number of your merchants and doctors who have given us their daughters and their sons, to induce us to buy their merchandize and their pills. And for your lawyers, the greatest part of them are ready to go with those who pay them the best.

"England is a ripe fruit for us. There are thousands of Protestant ministers who do more than all the Jesuits of the world to prepare the English people to submit themselves again to the Pope.

"Even sturdy Presbyterian Scotland has to confess to-day that we have taken a foothold in her bosom, from which we cannot be plucked.

"The next Council will show to the world that we are stronger than ever, and that we can carry everything before us. This council is to prepare the irresistible advance of our front of battle, in order to break the lines of our disunited enemies, and scatter them to the four winds."

So speak the priests of Rome; and that assurance of a prompt victory over us, my brethren, is partaken by the 150,000,000 of Roman Catholics whom you will have, sooner or later, to confront and conquer, if you want to bring the world to Christ.

It is not in a fit of terror and despair, as too many Protestants think, that the Pope is calling his great council of war. It is to show his power, and strike a most deadly blow at us.

Like a skillful general, who feels that he has gained many precious advantages, though he has met with serious losses, in a bloody battle, at the end of the day he musters his whole strength, and consults his generals, to find the best means of entirely crushing his enemies.

Evidently the Pope means mischief to the gospel cause by that council, and it would be a want of christian wisdom if we remained idle and indifferent at the approach of the coming crisis.

Let us gird our loins and prepare ourselves as valiant soldiers of Christ at the approach of danger.

When the parricidal Absalom was mustering his armies and consulting his generals as to the best way of attacking David, what did the prophet of the Lord do? He cried to the Lord, "O Lord, I pray thee, turn the counsel of Ahithophel into foolishness."

Ministers, and prophets, and people of the Lord! there is no time to lose. Let us go the mercy-seat. Let us raise our supplicating hands to the God of our salvation. Let us say with David "O Lord, I pray thee, turn the counsel of Ahithophel into foolishness."

Yes, let a day be chosen every week, in which all the prophets of the Lord, all the ministers of Christ, all the disciples of the gospel, forgetting their past differences, forgiving their past errors, will rally around the great Captain of our salvation, to cry to him, "O Lord, I pray thee, turn the counsel of Ahithophel into foolishness."

And in those gatherings of all the children of the gospel, let a true christian spirit of Protestantism be revived. Let the children of the martyrs be told when, where, and why the blood of their fathers was shed. Let the origin, the tendencies, the errors, the crimes, the idolatrous worship of Rome be brought under the eyes of the people, with their true colors; let the Protestants be told what will become of their Bible if the Church of Rome prevails; let the citizens of this young and great country be warned of what will become of their liberties, if the Pope succeeds in conquering this continent of America and England.

With this new General Council at Rome, there will be a revival of Romanism. That false religion will put on such airs of truth that many will be in danger to be deceived.

More than ever it is necssary to form everywhere, a strong gospel current in order to resist the aggressive tide of Romanism, which will make a supreme effort to overwhelm everything.

If there ever was a solemn hour in which all the children of God ought to rally around the banners of truth and light, it is now come.

If there ever was a day on which the soldiers of Christ ought to close their ranks and present a united front to the enemy, that day is now come.

Let all those for whom the blood of Jesus has been shed, and to whom the gift of God has been sent, become one at the feet of the Lamb, in whom and by whom alone we can be saved from the deceiver's snares and from the lion's jaws. Your brother in Christ,

C. Chiniquy.

St. Anne, Kankakee Co., Ill., March 4, '69.

What these priests saw prospectively, seven years ago, has been wonderfully and rapidly developed since that time. There can be no longer any doubt about the designs of the Jesuitical party to make an immediate and desperate effort to crush all opposition to the Pope's assumption of infallibility, as the arbiter of all earthly power. But, thank God, Christ will certainly triumph in the awful struggle for earth power, and take the crown of his father David, and rule the world from henceforth as the King Eternal.

BOASTING STILL.

The spirit that would cause the Roman woman to boast,—"I sit a queen, and am no widow," seems to be now developing itself very plainly. As John saw in vision, this is one of the last manifestations before her last plagues come upon her, to produce her utter destruction. Of course, she would not make this boastful declaration, unless there were events transpiring which led somebody to say that she had lost her husband, her dominion, her power, and would not be allowed to control the nations again. There is a very lively feeling among the Catholics at the present time, in view of the present state of things relating to their church.

February 29th, 1876, a Catholic priest, known as "Father Burchard," delivered a lecture in Sacramento, Cal., expressing the sentiments of the Roman Catholic church, in relation to Protestants. When speaking of the opposition now being manifested towards the church of Rome, he says:

"We conclude that the Church of Rome, as of yore, still moves the world; still stirs human society from end to end of earth. We thought the old church had grown weak; that her power was fast waning; that the clamminess of approaching death had gathered on her aged brow. We expected, according to the oft-repeated prophecies of certain would-be seers, that the world would, in our own day, have a grand 'wake' over the corpse of the Mother Church. Were they false prophets? Or did they miscalculate? Or has the spirit that inspired their predictions deceived them? And if so, what manner of spirit was it? We learn from holy writ that false prophets would arise, but of course we ought to be too charitable ever to suppose, and if we did suppose, ever to express our opinion that these would-be seers, who have been predicting the death of Holy Mother Church, and the down-fall of the Pope, should be classed with those who are to come in 'sheep's clothing, and who inwardly are ravening wolves!' Why does not the old church get sick and die just to please them? Why does not the long announced event correspond with their calculations?

No wonder that preacher and demagogue rave and denounce Roman Catholicism as antagonistic to true Republicanism. No wonder that a portion, at least, of the press of the country should send far and wide the startling news that 'Romanism is about to overthrow our present political institutions, and make this mighty Republic a by-word and a reproach throughout the civilized world.' What does all this mean? It means that if the enemies of the Catholic church possessed the political power, we might expect worse attacks than those which disgraced the country in the days of Know-Nothingism.

Before our late civil war, the cry was: 'Destroy slavery first; then rid the country of Romanism,' as they are wont to call the Catholic church. The first part of the work has been accomplished. The crazy fanatics are now nerving themselves for the second. I almost hear their battle cry: "To arms! to arms! Mount the ramparts; scale the walls; storm the old citadel; down with the Pope; crush the church of Rome." Well, let them try it. We, Catholics, intend to complete fairly and honestly with them; not for political power as Catholics, but as American citizens, and for spiritual power, as Catholics; for we mean to plant the Church all over this continent, as her divine founder has commanded: 'Go teach all nations."

NEARING HOME.

The signs of the times indicate that in a little while we may expect to see the dear Savior, who died for us on the cross some eighteen hundred years ago. He has been gone from the world a long time; so long, that many think he will never come back again. They say, "Where is the promise of his coming?" as though his promise to return was not reliable. Yet he has assured us that though heaven and earth pass away, his word will not pass away. He has also assured us that when we arrive in the period of the world where certain signs will be seen, that then we may know his coming is near at hand; that we have entered the last generation of the present dispensation. The signs now declare we are living among those who will live till Jesus comes. The state of the world politically, financially, morally, religiously, and in all other respects, shows most conclusively that soon we may expect the second advent of our Redeemer.

Babylon, Medo-Persia and Grecia have had their day, as declared by the prophet Daniel. The fourth kingdom, the Roman, has done its wonderful and bloody work for a long series of years, since the day of Augustus Cæsar, when Christ was born. The prophetic picture is now about complete. If we go much further we shall go beyond inspired history. But that extends to the coming of Christ, the resurrection of the dead, the judgment, and the setting up of the everlasting kingdom of God.

The condition of the Papal power, the Turkish power, and the general signs of the times, declare most emphatically that we are nearing home very rapidly, and soon we shall see Jesus, the holy angels, and all the saints that ever lived on this earth. Parted friends will meet to part no more for ever; meet to sing the song of Moses and the Lamb; meet where sorrow's tears will be for ever unknown, where pain will never be felt, where none will be poor or sad, where all will be peace and joy eternally. What a "blessed hope"! We owe it all to Jesus. But for him, there would have been no salvation. Let us try to please him in everything. It is our reasonable service.

BRO. MOODY'S MEETINGS.

The interest in Bro. Moody's meetings at the Hippodrome, New York City, continues unabated, and rather increasing. Bro. Moody's preaching is pointed, and eminently practical. He is bold in pointing out the sins of the age, concealed under the cloak of religion. The effect of the Hippodrome meetings is being felt throughout the whole country. Thousands of ministers are being aroused to put forth new efforts to save people, and glorious results are following.

In a late sermon on the gift of the Spirit, Bro. Moody said many good things. He showed clearly that the great want of the church to-day is spiritual power imparted by the baptism of the Spirit. That without this, it is nearly helpless, and unable to lead others to Christ. He said: "God has got a good many children who have just barely got life, but no power for service. You might say safely, I think, without exaggeration, that nineteen out of every twenty of professed christians are of no earthly account, so far as building up Christ's kingdom, but on the contrary, they are standing right in the way, and the reason is because they have just got life, and have settled down, and have not sought for power The Holy Ghost coming upon them with power is distinct and separate from conversion." "When a man is full of the Holy Ghost, he cannot help working for the Lord." Let all christians pray for Brn. Moody and Sankey, that their success in winning souls to Christ may be still more wonderful.

A REMARKABLE WORK.

A remarkable revival is going on in Montreal among the Catholic population. The meetings are conducted by Bro. C. Chiniquy, a converted Catholic Priest. It is said two thousand have been converted through faith in Christ, and have turned away from the church of Rome. Bro. Chiniquy's rooms are thronged night and day by the multitudes who are inquiring what they shall do to be saved. Some of the converts reveal startling things concerning the corruptions of the Catholic priesthood, as manifested at the confessional boxes. The Catholic system and practice is terribly corrupt, and must be exposed. The time has come.

In a letter to the Montreal Witness, Bro. Chiniquy says:

"Since the first of January my house has literally been crammed by the multitudes of Catholics who, disgusted with the ridiculous, idolatrous and impious practices of their Church, wanted to know the true way of salvation through Christ alone. No words can tell you my mixed feelings of joy and compassion at the sight of those multitudes who are thirsting after the water of life. From eight o'clock in the morning to sometimes ten at night, I have to answer their questions, destroy their prejudices, pull down from their intelligences the formidable barriers raised by the priests against the gospel lights, and build up the walls of Zion in their souls, in order that the King of kings, the divine Spouse, may come and rest in them. Though the work is superhuman and the difficulties innumerable—though I have to speak and read and pray with my dear inquirers from eight to ten hours without stopping, till sometimes I feel near fainting from fatigue and exhaustion, I feel so happy, my joy is such, that often I cannot refrain my tears, and they silently flow upon my cheeks. You will easily understand that joy when you will know that the presence of our dear Savior is almost constantly felt in our midst. Yes, the beloved Jesus' presence is felt very often, and the marvelous works of his mercies are seen also in our humble rooms. The mighty Conqueror of souls is doing, indeed, marvelous things before our eyes; the great Captain of our salvation is fighting great battles against his implacable enemy in our presence, and he is gaining glorious victories."

He says more than four hundred turned to Christ in twenty days. Let christians pray for this glorious revival work in Montreal, that it may spread till thousands more are brought to Christ. Candid, thinking people are being aroused to seek the true religion of Jesus, which makes a man a "new creature."

PUBLIC AND SOCIAL EVILS.

Bro. John Parker, an able Brooklyn minister, preached a sermon Sunday evening, March 5th, on the increase of crime in our land. He commences as follows:

"I purpose to speak this evening on a matter that has given me, in common with you all, great anxiety. I refer to the sad prevalence of crime and scandal in our land. We are passing or approaching a crisis in the history of our republic of sufficient gravity to occasion thoughtful anxiety in every patriotic heart. The very air is filled with stories of defalcations, embezzlements, forgeries, robberies, burglaries, suicide and murder, until we hold our breath, and with sick heart and pale, thoughtful cheek we are appalled, and wonder what next? We are becoming familiar with great crimes. Men of good standing, surrounded by families occupying the highest social position in the community, are falling, and a fear has possession of the public mind of the possible disclosure of something yet more startling, and we nervously clutch the paper each morning expecting to hear of something yet more astounding and more humiliating to our kind and to our country.

The confidence of men is shaken in their most trusted friends. No character, however sacred, no reputation, however laboriously earned and diligently sustained, is today any protection from the suspicion which is unsettling all confidence. Confidence is the bond and strength of society; suspicion is its weakness, and unless removed must prove its overthrow."

This is not a picture drawn by a sensationalist, but by a candid observing man, who is reluctantly driven to this sad conclusion. Facts compel us to submit, and say it is true. The picture is not overdrawn, it is free from exaggeration. While a few are turning to Christ, the great mass are plunging deeper and deeper into the cesspools of iniquity. This is in harmony with the prophetic picture of "the last days." The end must be near.

M. G.

THE EAST.

It seems as if the news from the East—news which, from personal sources of information which I know to be entirely trustworthy—were very grave indeed. You have doubtless heard by telegraph that another considerable battle has been fought between the Turks and the insurgents, and that the former were worsted, as usual. This battle took place just after the interviews which Baron Rodich, the Governor General of Dalmatia, had with the insurgent Sclavic chiefs, and in which he is supposed to have informed them at the end of March they would be looked upon almost as enemies by Austria if they continued to fight the Turks. The insurgents refuse point-blank to accept the promises which the Turkish Government has made since the publication of the Andrassy note. All the persuasion and threatening of Baron Rodich, with the Austrian Government at his back, cannot make these simple yet brave chiefs lay down their arms. They reason that if they stop now they will be compelled to begin over again in a few years, and they wish to drive out the Turk this time. They care nothing about the exterior relations of Turkey in Asia; nothing, in fact, about Turkey in Asia at all. What they desire is to drive the Turk away from their borders. Baron Rodich is a Sclave himself, and has strong sympathies for the Herzegovinian insurrection; but his orders are in the highest degree peremptory; he is commanded to summon the leaders to a cessation of hostilities, whereupon they respond by going out and inflicting upon the Turks a loss of eight hundred men. What does this look like?

Austria and England are much more thoroughly agreed on the Turkish question than are Austria and Russia. This is very significant. The other day at Vienna Sir Andrew Buchanan, English Embassador at the Austrian Court, called on Count Andrassy to notify him of the action of the English Government in the matter of the purchase of the Suez Canal. Andrassy on this occasion made use of the following phrase: "I rejoice to see that there is not a single question in the Orient with regard to which the interests of Great Britain and Austria are not identical."

This was at once a hint and a sincere phrase. The Austro-Hungarian monarchy has more than once found itself annoyed and perplexed by a forced adherence to the policy of the two powerful northern courts of North Germany and Russia. England, next to Austria, has the most potent reason for wishing to maintain the statu quo in the East. Neither Russia nor Prussia can gain by tranquility in the "sick man's dominions." Who dares to say that out of the troubles in Tukrey in Europe may not yet grow a war in which the "triple alliance" theory would melt away like "the baseless fabric of a vision."

The loss of eight hundred men by the Turks in the last fight is confirmed to-day by dispatches from W. J. Stillman, the able writer who has spent so much time in the East, and who has been residing this winter in Dalmatia. He has been very frequently in personal communication with the insurgent chiefs, and has facilities of observation which enable him to get at the exact truth.—Boston Journal..

NOTES BY THE WAY.

H. B. SEVEY.

For a few weeks I have been confined at home by reason of sickness in my family; and having sprained my foot, am yet confined. In the meantime I have been holding meetings in our neighborhood and Mt. Vernon Village, I trust with some good results. A few are interested in the Bible hope. Some have started anew to follow their Lord and Master. This will explain why I have not filled my engagements. Let us watch, for the Master is at the doors.

THE TRACT FUND.

The Advent Christian Publication Society, at a meeting on Springfield camp-ground, August 11th, 1875, voted to raise Two Thousand Dollars for the free distribution of Tracts the ensuing year; and they invite the help and co-operation of all lovers of the Lord and of his truth, in the furtherance of the good cause. The times are ominous of coming events, and admonish us to diligence in the Master's work. The Lord is at the door, and what we do must be done quickly. Let the contributions be prompt, hearty, and liberal. The Lord will reward the liberal giver.

WISCONSIN ANNUAL CONFERENCE.

The meetings connected with this Conference were good. The attendance from abroad was far better than many looked for, considering the state of the roads and the financial pressure. Preaching by Brn. Gladding, Adams, Wilcox, Barnes, Graves, Hitchcock, and Sheldon. The most of the time was spent in business deliberation; and all the meetings were characterized by the spirit of kindness in spite of the various opinions expressed.

The following officers were elected for the ensuing year: Geo. Howard, President, and Wm. Sheldon, Secretary. Business Com.: B. Meigs, S. J. Adams, A. M. Gladding. Ordination Com.: N. A. Hitchcock, E. P. Graves, G. W. Barnes, Wm. S. Shears, Geo. Dyson. Preaching Com.: G. C. Meigs, A. Kunce, and B. Meigs.

Some time was spent in hearing the annual report of ministers and churches, too lengthy for publication. The Conference received three new ministers—N. Dutton, G. W. Wilcox, and A. Angell; the latter having been a Methodist minister for several years.

The question of systematic effort on the part of the ministers and churches was a theme of much kind discussion, calling out various profitable remarks, too lengthy for report, which finally called out the following resolution:—

Resolved, That a committee of five be appointed by the Chair, of which the Secretary of the Conference shall be Chairman, and the President of the Conference a member, to inquire into the feasibility of a definite plan of organization for the promotion of the cause of truth.

This was carried unanimously.

The committee, when fully appointed, was composed of the following members: Wm. Sheldon, George Howard, Nelson A. Hitchcock, Alvirus N. Hitchcock, Wm. S. Shears. This committee took time to interchange thoughts, and not thinking it possible to reach the desired end in one step, presented the following preparatory suggestions:—

1. Inasmuch as we have a goodly number of churches that are destitute of preaching, we recommend that they do all in their power to secure regular preaching, both for their own good and the good of the community; and that where one church alone cannot pay a minister, that two or four unite, sharing both the expenses and services of the minister; and further, that where your first choice in preachers cannot be secured, that the second, third, or fourth choice be made, but by all means get a minister, if not of the greatest talent.

2. Inasmuch as we have a number of inactive ministers, who would labor regularly if they could be supported, we recommend that such ministers enroll their names in a list for the Secretary of the Conference to hold, stating what amount will be necessary to support them in their work yearly, and then let such churches as need help correspond with the Secretary and learn who is at liberty to correspond to such calls, and how much it will require to support them yearly; then if they cannot secure their first choice, let them take their second, third, or fourth choice, and thus secure a shepherd to care for the flock.

The Conference consumed some time in deliberating, and although this was not at once securing all that could be desired by some, it was thought to be the best step that could be taken for the present. Accordingly, after a free interchange of thought, the following preamble and resolutions were passed unanimously:—

Whereas, There is a felt need among us of a better organization of forces and of a more systematic and harmonious distribution of ministerial labor; therefore, be it by the A. C. Conference of Wisconsin

Resolved, That we hereby instruct the Secretary of said Conference to take a list of all its ministers who are willing to devote their time to the gospel ministry, provided they receive a support, and to request them to state as accurately as possible the amount needed for the same, of which he shall make a minute.

Resolved, That we instruct him to correspond with each church of the Conference, urging the expediency of its uniting with one or more contiguous church for the purpose of obtaining and supporting the labors of a pastor.

Resolved, That we also instruct him to ascertain what churches wish to unite, and what amount they will pledge for the support of a pastor. The Secretary shall receive from the churches an expression of their choice of ministers from the enrolled list, but shall urge upon them the duty of accepting a second, third, or fourth choice, if they fail to secure their first.

Resolved, That, finally, we instruct him to inform each minister where his labors are desired, recommending a correspondence; that the Secretary shall be empowered to choose any help in this matter which he may desire; and that he shall send a general statement of his plan at the outset to the A. C. Times and World's Crisis for publication.

Preachers who were unemployed then enrolled, stating the sums needed to support their families for a year; so all churches who wish aid can learn who is at liberty to supply destitute churches, and on what terms, by addressing the Secretary (Wm. Sheldon) at Brodhead, Wis., and thus open a correspondence between the parties. Let other unemployed ministers also send their names for enrollment on the same terms.

Delegates appointed to the Western Advent Christian Publishing Society were as follows: Wm. Sheldon, Nelson A. Hitchcock, and E. P. Graves. Also Wm. Sheldon was chosen as delegate to act for the Wisconsin Conference in the (Eastern) Second Advent Christian Association, at its next annual meeting. The following Brn. were elected as a Campmeeting Committee: O. Thomas, Wm. Sheldon, and J. F. Grott.

GENERAL STATEMENT.

We are in earnest in the matter of getting the gospel machinery into working order in Wisconsin. We cannot at once manufacture just such preachers as we could wish to put into the field; we can simply use such as we have on hand, who are rusting for want of use. We do not blame any church for having a choice in ministers, but we do blame them for not securing some help, if not the best. Without shepherds, most churches dwindle, and are devoured by theological wolves.

Several contiguous churches can easily secure a preacher, even if they are poor and few in number, and that is the way to become stronger. Let the officers of the church learn by a subscription list how much can be raised for regular preaching half or quarter of the time, if not for the whole time. Then learn from the Secretary who is ready to supply you. Make your choice from the enrollment of unemployed ministers. If several select the same man, he must determine which call he will answer. Write the Secretary what you can do, etc. Do not wait till we write you before acting. Unemployed ministers are waiting to serve unsupplied churches. If you can't get a Paul, take up with a fisherman. Try it. Don't let the little flock starve because you cannot have your first choice.

Our plan is to stir up the little churches to sustain regular meetings, by calling to their aid home ministers. We intend to write to those who wish aid, and inform them who can serve them, and at what cost, giving them a list of the enrolled ministers, from which they can make their first, second, or third choice. Other unemployed ministers can at once send their names for enrollment, subject to calls from churches.

Wm. Sheldon, Secretary.

Correspondence.

From Bro. F. Philbrick.

Dear Brn. and Srs.:—This cold, dreary morning, the 19th of March, while the bleak winds are howling and the snow is drifting around us, it makes me homesick. The confused elements seem to be spending their fury, all creation is groaning for deliverance. I can say in the language of the Revelator, "Come, Lord Jesus, and come quickly."

After thirty-three years experience in looking and waiting for the coming of my blessed Lord, it never looked more glorious than now. Therefore, cheer up, ye tried and tempted ones; let us never be discouraged, for deliverance will soon be here. I am cheered to think so many are being gathered into the fold of Christ at this late hour, East, West, North and South. The good news is being wafted us how wonderfully the blessed Lord is pouring out his Spirit and reviving his work. Sinners are being converted unto God and his truth. Blessed be his name for what he has done and is still doing in our vicinity. In Freedom and Eaton there has been a glorious revival. About thirty have been hopefully converted and quickened. The whole community is stirred. At South Hiram the Lord has been at work. Notwithstanding prejudice seemed to be so strong at first, it gave way, and the result was, about twenty-five or six came over on the side of truth. Several were brought from the enemy's ranks, others were reclaimed from a backslidden state. A very marked change has come over that place. Meetings are still interesting. The Lord blesses the labors of our dear Bro. Stevens. To God be all the glory.

Pray for your brother and companion in hope and tribulation.

Freedom, N. H.

From Sr. M. J. Pratt.

Dear Brn. and Srs.:—Let us not be weary in well doing, for in due season we shall reap if we faint not. Gal. 6:9.

We all want an eternal home in the kingdom of God, and we are to seek for it by patient continuance in well doing. We must be willing to give up the pleasures of this world if we would gain an entrance into that which is to come. O why not choose pleasures that are lasting, instead of clinging to this world and its sinful enjoyments that are short at the longest. The way to the kingdom is strait and narrow, but Jesus will lead us if we will go to him in earnest prayer. Can we find a friend so faithful, and who will help us in every time of need, as Jesus?

Let us look to him continually, and hold fast the profession of our faith without wavering, for He is faithful that promised. We should cast all our care upon him, for he careth for us, and strive to please him in all things, that we may be accounted worthy of a home in his kingdom. We cannot en gage in worldly amusements and be ready to meet the Lord with joy. We cannot serve God and mammon.

The night is far spent, the day is at hand; let us therefore cast off the works of darkness, and put on the armor of light. And let us not be weary in well doing, but let us strive to do the Master's will, and fight the good fight of faith, that we may lay hold on eternal life.

Holbrook, Mass.

From Bro. W. W. Hobbs.

Dear Brethren:—A glorious work has begun here in South Livermore, under the labors of Bro. Jesse Gay, who began meetings on the evening of the 10th inst., and continued over ten days. When we commenced there were only a few believers, and some of them almost discouraged about ever seeing God's work revived in the hearts of the people in this place. But thanks be to God who giveth us the victory, we have been blest beyond our expectation. The second evening the ice began to melt, and one requested prayers. Since that, backsliders have been returning and sinners converted, until over thirty have come into the glorious liberty of the gospel.

The work still continues, and bids fair to be extensive and thorough. I pray the Lord this living fire may spread all about, that angels may rejoice with us over returning prodigals and sinners repenting and turning to the Savior. We bless God for his goodness to us in these last days, in bringing so many to see the light of the gospel.

Dear reader, are you in the right way? The right way is simply to trust in the Lord Jesus Christ. Come to him this day, with all your sins and wickedness, with all your feelings of unfitness and unworthiness, and he will not cast you out. "Him that cometh to me I will in no wise cast out." Glory to God for his promises and for the hope of eternal life. Pray for us, brethren and sisters, that the Lord will add to our numbers such as shall be saved.

South Livermore, Me.

From Bro. W. Wiles.

Dear Brethren and Sisters scattered up and down the earth, Greeting: Having a desire to communicate with you, I have selected the words of the 35th chapter of the book of Isaiah for the purpose: "Strengthen ye the weak hands, and confirm the feeble knees. Say to them that are of a fearful heart, Be strong, fear not: behold, your God will come with vengeance, even God with a recompense, he will come and save you. Then the eyes of the blind shall be opened, and the ears of the deaf shall be unstopped. Then shall the lame man leap as a hart, and the tongue of the dumb sing, for in the wilderness shall waters break out, and streams in the desert. And the parched ground shall become a pool, and the thirsty land springs of water. In the habitations of dragons, where each lay, shall be grass with reeds and rushes, and a highway shall be there, and a way; and it shall be called The way of Holiness. The unclean shall not pass over it, but it shall be for these, the wayfaring men, though fools, shall not err therein. No lion shall be there, nor any ravenous beast shall go up thereon; it shall not be found there. But the redeemed shall walk there: and the ransomed of the Lord shall return, and come to Sion with songs and everlasting joy upon their heads. They shall obtain joy and gladness, and sorrow and sighing shall flee away."

We say in the language of Bro. Peter—"Master, it is good for us to be here." Now let us see to it that we be found of him in peace, and enter into the joy of the Lord. Pray for me and mine. Your brother in Christ.

Nashville, Tenn.

From Bro. G. Blish.

Dear Brn.:—There is a small church of Advent christians five or six miles from here. I see some of them once in a while. I have never been there, though I have purposed to do so several times, but have been hindered hitherto. I don't know as they have any particular one to break the bread of life to them, but they keep up the interest of their meetings, in reading portions of Scripture, exhorting one another, singing songs of praise and thanksgiving, and in praying to the Giver of all good and thanking him for his tender mercies to the sons of men. They would like it much if they could have some one, filled with the Holy Spirit, to go in and out among them, to give them "meat in due season."

There is a large field open here in Oregon for the truth as it is in Jesus, and as the Bible teaches. That the Lord, by his Holy Spirit, may guide the preachers of this country into all truth, and grant them boldness to proclaim it, is my prayer. Amen.

West Union, Washington Co., Oregon.

From Bro. A. F. Cressey.

Dear Editors of the Crisis:—Through the kindness of some friend, I am receiving the Crisis for three months; and may the God of love bless the donor. I am living far from those of like precious faith. My health is poor, and the Crisis revives my hope in the soon coming of the King of saints, to take to himself his great power and reign King of kings and Lord of lords. Glory be to his name!

In looking over the Crisis I see the names of many of the dear brethren with whom I have held sweet counsel in days past. Its pages are full of interest to me. It is a reminiscense of the blessed time when I used to hear the voices of Brn. Pratt, Hemenway and Grant, in western Mass., far up on the Hoosic Mountain, proclaiming the near coming of our Lord. O how my heart rejoiced then in the hope of deliverance; and to-day I am twenty-two years nearer than when I first believed. Thanks be to God! "Come, Lord Jesus, and come quickly."

Oxford, Ct.

From Bro. R. Snow.

Editors Crisis:—Dear Brn.,—I came to this place four weeks ago, and have held meetings ever since, and we are having an outpouring of the Spirit. Some twenty have come to the Lord, several backsliders have been reclaimed, four have been baptized, and others are going forward soon. To God be all the glory. The interest continues unabated. Saints are rejoicing in hope of eternal life, and sinners are trembling. I love the service of Jesus Christ more and more every day, and I rejoice to know the kingdom of God is at hand. May we all be ready to enter in at Christ's coming.

Indian River, Me.

From Sr. P. A. Berry.

Dear Brn. and Srs.:—A few weeks ago I was taken sick with pneumonia. When the physician told me, I said the Lord would take care of me. I was very sick for a few days, but I, with others, took it to the Lord in prayer, and, thank his name, he heard and answered. Oh, how forcibly this passage—"The prayer of faith shall save the sick"—came to my mind. Death did not trouble me; I felt as if I should be raised up, and I rested in Jesus.

I thought if my peace had not been made with God, I might have died and been lost. O sinner, prepare now to meet God. Tomorrow is not yours. Behold now is the accepted time; now is the day of salvation. I want to do my Master's will here, that I may be numbered with his jewels when he comes.

Rye, N. H.

From Bro. S. D. Deyo.

Dear Brn. and Srs., who send the Crisis to the poor, accept my thanks for its heart-cheering weekly visits. It is like cold water to a thirsty soul. How much I have been fed by it! Old age, infirmities and poverty compel me to retire, yet I feel the preach like fire shut up in my bones, and I give now and then a chimney corner sermon. I am looking forward to the day when I shall be perfected in the kingdom of God. I am happy to learn that soldiers are enlisting to fight for Jesus and his cause. May the blessing of God be upon you all. Pray for me.

TERRY—GRAY. In Providence, R. I., March 24th, 1876, by Elder A. W. Sisley, Mr. EDGAR E TERRY and Miss LILLIAN A. GRAY, both of Providence

Obituaries.

JARVIS. In Danville, P. Q., March 7th, 1876, Deacon George Jarvis, aged forty-two years.

Bro. Jarvis was an exemplary and devoted christian, faithful to God and to every trust and responsibility, both in public and private. He was a deacon in our church, the superintendent of our Sunday-school, and a teacher there. He served the cause of his Master well, and he was always at his post in the prayer meeting, ready with his testimony for Jesus. He loved the coming of the Lord and the resurrection of the dead, and dwelt on these themes with devoted interest. Paralysis brought him low, and he said to us while in his last hours of suffering. "Death will get a shock by and by that it cannot get over. I look into the grave, but I can look out again immediately." How blest the righteous when he dies.

A large congregation attended his funeral, and showed their appreciation of a man of whom no one could say a word of harm. Sermon by the writer, from words quoted by our brother in his sickness on the "shadow of death" and "death swallowed up in victory." L. C. MCKINSTRY.

NNAESS. In Kendall, N. Y., March 12th, 1876, of consumption, Sister Nnaess, aged forty-two yrs.

A few days before her death she gave evidence of her acceptance with God. Her husband was brought into the faith of the Bible under the preaching of Sr. Stoddard, three years ago. He is an afflicted brother, with three children, that need a mother's care. Funeral attended by the writer. M. R. MILES.

KINGSBURY. In Rawsonville, Vt., Feb. 24th, 1876, of bilious fever, Bro. Ward Kingsbury, aged seventy-five years.

He was a firm believer in the second coming of Christ, the sleep of the dead, and the resurrection. He died in the hope of life and immortality at the coming of Christ. He leaves a widow and seven children, and a large circle of friends to mourn their loss. CHARLES N. WOOD.

JONES. In Kittery, Me., Feb. 21st, 1876, William Edwin, youngest son of Bro. James A. and Augusta C. Jones, aged seven years, eight months.

In a fit, with little or no warning, little Eddie was rudely snatched from the fond embrace of parents and family. No wonder their grief was almost uncontrollable. May God abundantly bless and sustain them. "Is it well with the child?" "And he answered, It is well." E. OWEN.

COLOMY. In New Durham, March 1st, 1876, Rebekah Colomy, wife of the deceased Daniel Colomy, aged seventy-six years.

We trust our sister died with the armor on, and is waiting for the morning when she will come forth in the likeness of her Lord.

J. T. LIBBEY.

TOWER. In North Adams, March 11th, 1876, Riley C., son of Sidney and Lucinda Tower, aged one year and three months.

"They shall come again." Services by the writer. MARY L. TOWER.

FOREIGN NEWS.

LONDON, March 25. The St. Petersburg correspondent of the Augsberg Gazette says that the report that the Czar intends to retire practically, though not nominally, from the conduct of public affairs gains ground rapidly.

It is also stated that he intends to reside abroad some length of time, staying temporarily at Malta, whither the Duchess of Edinburgh will shorty proceed. The Czarowitch will be appointed regent during his absence. The correspondent asserts that statements from high and well informed quarters corroborate this report.

DOMESTIC NEWS.

Providence, March 31. This morning at twenty minutes before seven o'clock, as the engine of the Fletcher mill on Back street was starting, four of the sixteen boilers exploded, utterly wrecking the two story brick boiler house, but damaging the main mill very little. Thomas Fay, blacksmith, and Bartholomew Coffin, a helper, who were in the boiler room, were killed. The engineer was blown out, but not seriously hurt.

Chas. W. Field, who was passing along the street, was caught under the falling roof and severely but probably not fatally injured. Several other persons received slight injuries. The cause of the explosion is not known. The boilers were twelve years old, and were said to be in good condition, and had plenty of water just before the catastrophe. The loss of the Fletcher Manufacturing Company is estimated at $20,000.

THE WORCESTER FLOOD.—The Worcester reservoir, which gave alarming evidences of its weak condition Wednesday night, finally gave way at about six o'clock last evening despite the great efforts made to prevent the threatened catastrophe. The waters swept everything in their path, destroying an immense amount of property. Mills and manufactories, bridges and dams were swiftly enveloped in ruin; and among the heavy losers will be the Boston and Albany Railway corporation. A large portion of the track has been washed away, and a considerable delay will probably be experienced in transacting the regular business of the road. The flood was so long in getting ready for its work of destruction that the people were prepared for it, consequently we do not hear of any loss of life, nor any of those harrowing scenes attendant upon the Mill River disaster, where the people were taken by surprise. The loss will undoubtedly exceed a million dollars, and will be keenly felt by many manufacturers whose property lay in the path of the waters. We are gratified to learn that the city of Worcester will not be likely to suffer so keenly as might be supposed from the lack of water for domestic or manufacturing purposes, having other sources than the big reservoir to depend upon in an emergency.

Milford, Mass., March 20. Claflin & Coburn's large boot factory in Hopkinton, together with stables, barn, etc., were burned at 4 A. M. Loss $200,000. The horses, carriages and part of the stock of the factory were saved. The machinery, tools, etc., were a total loss. The Town House was slightly injured. Supposed incendiary.

Harrisburg, Pa., March 31. This morning on the Tyrone and Clearfield Railroad, a locomotive exploded its boiler near Sand Ridge. Three men were killed, and another badly injured.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

As the Mass. Annual Advent Christian Conference is soon to convene, and as at its coming session there are Delegates to be chosen to attend the National Meeting of the Second Advent Christian Association, it is necessary, in order to determine the number of Delegates to which the Conference is entitled, that there be sent to the Secretary by each church the number of members therein. It is therefore earnestly requested and hoped that each church within the bounds of this Conference will without delay send to the Secretary its present membership, so that at the Conference it may be certainly known how many Delegates are to be sent by this Conference to the meeting of the Association. Let every church do this at once, and so be represented in the Conference. Direct—Boston, Mass., Drawer 5140.

S. G. MATHEWSON, President.
I. I. LESLIE, Secretary.

A Meeting of the Board of Managers of the S. A. C. Association will be held in Boston, at the Crisis Office, on Tuesday, April 11th, at eleven o'clock A. M.

S. G. MATHEWSON, President.
C. E. BARNES, Secretary.

Notice.

The next Annual Meeting of the Mass. Advent Christian Conference will be held with the church in Lynn, High Street, commencing Tuesday, April 11th. The Conference will continue over the following Sunday.

Important business is to come before this meeting of our Conference, and it is hoped that every church in the State will be represented by one or more delegates to which it may be entitled by the Constitution of the Conference.

I. I. LESLIE, Secretary.

☞ AGAIN.

We would again request every Second Advent church in Mass. to send to us, before the 11th of April, the number of its members. The number of Delegates from this Conference to the Annual Meeting of the Second Advent Christian Association must be determined by the number of members in the churches in the Conference. Please do not fail, brethren, to send us the number of the flock where you worship. I. I. LESLIE, Sec.

Drawer 5140, Boston, Mass.

☞ IT is hoped that at the coming Conference in Mass., to be held in Lynn, commencing April 11th, each church in the State will be represented by the number of Delegates to which it is entitled. According to the revised Constitution of the Conference, every church is entitled to one Delegate, and one additional Delegate for every twenty-five members above the number twenty-five. Let every church in the State be represented, and a more united effort made to get all ready for the Coming One. I. I. LESLIE, Sec.

☞ ALL those wishing to attend the Conference at Lynn, commencing April 11th, going from or through Worcester, can procure tickets via. Nashua R. R. to go and return for one fare. Tickets to be had by calling at E. G. & F. W. Higgins', No. 3 Maple Street, a few steps from the depot. Tickets good from April 11th to April 17th inclusive. E. G. HIGGINS.

Conference Notice.

The Lord willing, the Connecticut A. C. Conference will meet with the Church at South Windsor, Wednesday evening, April 26th, through the week, and over Sunday, April 30th, It is hoped that all the churches will send delegates, and that all who are interested in the cause, which calls us out as a people to meet the coming Bridegroom, will make an effort to come. Earth's dreary night must soon close; the hosts of sin are let loose; the darkness is great; temptations are mighty; iniquity abounds; pride stalks forth; some are drawing back, and oh how few are enduring in this fatal hour. Who, but the people with the light of prophetic truth touching the coming One, can discern the signs of the times? We are favored with this light. Graciously have its rays been scattered, and loudly are the events speaking. Fear attends the outlook from a human standpoint; but a little in the distance the eye of faith discerns the morning light of eternal glory.

Shall we falter, or grow cold? It is too late. With the truth of God as our accompaniment, and tuned by the Spirit of the divine Master, victory must soon be ours. Let the weak ones come as well as the strong; let every voice be heard in encouragement. Come in the name of the Lord.

Take the cars to Burnside Station, on the H. P. and F. Railroad, where teams will convey those coming to the chapel. The business session, if any, will be on Thursday, May 4th, at 10 o'clock A. M. O. D. WOODRUFF, Sec. and Treas.

Hoosick Valley Conference.

☞ TIME CHANGED.

The next Quarterly Session of the Hoosick Valley Conference will be held with the church at North Adams, Mass., commencing Wednesday evening, April 19th, and continue with three meetings each day over the following Sabbath. It will soon be said "It is done." We are having our last meetings; we are doing our last work. The Father by his Spirit is bringing to light and to our remembrance numerous evidences of the approaching end.

Brethren in the ministry, do come to this meeting with the light you have, that we may feed and be fed with the pure Word of God. We do earnestly hope that the churches will be represented by delegates, and as many others as can come. Do not wait to be blest at the meetings, but come filled with the Holy Spirit, to work for the salvation of others. The meetings will be held in Millard's large Hall, a short walk only from either of the depots. Those who are dwelling in God and God in them, will you pray for this meeting?

H. K. FLAGG, Pres.
R. CANDLISH, Sec.

Conference.

The Delaware Dist. A. C. Conference is hereby called to meet and hold its fourth annual session at the Advent Christian Church, Eighth Street, above Noble, Philadelphia, Pa., commencing on Thursday evening, April 20th, and continue over the following Sabbath. All the officers for the year ensuing will be chosen at this session. It is earnestly hoped that every church sympathising with us will be represented, either by letter or delegates. All letters of correspondence for the Conference can be addressed to Edwin King, 1716 Francis St., Philadelphia, Pa.

WM. ASHMAN, President.
E. KING, Secretary.

NOTICE.—Bro. Charles W. Helme is to take charge of the meetings at North Abington, Mass. Brethren wishing to come to Abington to preach will please correspond either with Bro. C. W. Helme or with Henry M. McPherson, Clerk.

Appointments.

☞ APPOINTMENTS MUST BE RECEIVED AS EARLY AS TUESDAY MORNING (as our paper goes to press about noon) to insure insertion for the coming week.

☞ The following RESOLUTION was passed at the late meeting of the A. C. P. Society:—

"RESOLVED, That no appointments be published in the CRISIS henceforth for persons unknown to the Editorial Board (by which is understood the Editors, Editorial Committee, and Business Agent), unless satisfactory reference shall be given."

The Committee appointed by the Adv. Chris. Association, at its last Annual Meeting, to advise with the Editorial Board "in relation to the publication in the World's Crisis of the appointments of men unworthy of recognition as preachers," having attended to the duty assigned them, recommended, and the Editorial Board have adopted, and ordered to be published, the following resolution:—

"RESOLVED, That when the Editorial Board is properly notified by any of our Churches, or Ministers, or responsible persons, by a written allegation that a certain minister, or ministers, lack moral character, that they be instructed to notify such minister, or ministers, of the information received as a reason for withholding their appointments till after a proper trial and acquittal."

All communications in relation to this matter should be addressed to the Secretary of the Board—GEO. T. ADAMS, Boston, Mass.

THE BIBLE DOCTRINE OF THE SOUL.

An answer to the Question: "Is the Popular Conception of the Soul that of Holy Scripture?"

BY CHAS. L. IVES, M. D.

Professor of the Theory and Practice of Medicine in Yale College.

This is a book of 119 pages, in which the Author discusses the above question in an interesting and able manner,—showing the material nature of, the mortality and destiny of the Soul,—A future immortality to be the special portion of the Righteous,—What the Bible teaches as to the future of the Wicked,—The intermediate state,—The Resurrection,—That of the Righteous and of the Wicked, etc.

The Author claims that the doctrine set forth,—"Honors God, exalts the Bible, insures preaching of future punishment, subverts Universalism and Infidelity, errors of Romanism, of Spiritualism and Swedenborgianism, helps in work of Missions, rightly values the body, brings Christian unity, and promotes personal holiness."

We are much pleased with this work. It is having a wide circulation. We have just received a quantity of the pamphlet edition, and can now fill orders at the following prices: Pamphlet, 25 cts. per copy; $2.25 per dozen by mail; $15.00 per hundred by express. Bound in cloth, 30 cts. per copy by mail; $3.00 per dozen by express.

THE TRUE SABBATH.

WHICH DAY SHALL WE KEEP?

AN EXAMINATION OF

MRS. ELLEN G. WHITE'S VISIONS.

BY MILES GRANT.

ISSUED

BY THE ADV. CHRIS. PUB. SOCIETY,

A NEW WORK

On the Sabbath of the Old Covenant. An investigation of Mrs. E. G. White's Visions, showing that they are not from God.

All who have accepted Mrs. White's visions as coming from heaven, or who have been led to rest on Saturday instead of the Lord's day, should read this work. Let those who live among our Seventh-day brethren send and get a number of the books to give away. If the reader has friends at a distance who have received Mrs. W.'s Visions as true, have a copy of this work sent to them.

It contains 106 pages, and we will send it at the following prices: Single copy, 20 cts.; per doz., $1.75 by mail; per hundred, $10.00 by express. AGENT.

PRICE REDUCED.

The great Map of History, twenty-two feet long, and about thirty inches wide. This valuable work, of which mention has been made in the Crisis, we now have a supply of, and will send to those who may order at the publisher's reduced price of $12.00 per copy, by express. We have them on rollers, and in book form, and can supply either way.

The best method of using the chart or map of history is to hang the frame on the wall of the room (the map being in the frame, of course), by the two hooks in the upper bar of the frame, high enough to stand, or sit, in front of it, and there examine or study it.

Students and beginners in history should occasionally look over the map in its entire length—drawn out on the wall, or tables, or on the carpet—until they are well acquainted with the entire outlines, plan and compass of the map, which embraces all history.

"I WILL COME AGAIN."

J. M. DUCKER.

Our Savior once more upon earth shall appear
In person, as literal as when he was here;
The clouds be his chariot and glory his throne,
While myriads of angels his majesty own.

Ten thousand bright saints with the Lord shall descend,
Their strains of hosannas the heavens shall rend;
While angels who sung the glad song of his birth,
Shall gather his saints from the ends of the earth.

The kingdom shall come and the graves shall give way,
And his saints be redeemed from their prison of clay;
For the trumpet shall sound and the dead shall come forth,
From the east, from the west, from the south, and the north.

All the nations of men are before him conveyed,
His bar of tribunal in justice arrayed;
Each tongue shall confess, while the Judge on his throne
Shall the wicked condemn and acknowledge his own.

Each eye shall behold him in awful attire;
The saints shall be glad and their Savior admire;
But those who condemned him to die on the tree,
Shall wail when the glorious Messiah they see.

'Twill comfort the saints to reflect on the day
When sorrow and sighing shall vanish away;
When their bodies though vile shall be fashioned aright,
And robed in a costume of glory and light.

Creation convulsed to her centre shall quake;
At His voice the foundations of heaven will shake;
The sun and the moon shall grow dim and decay,
And the earth from his presence shall vanish away.

But celestial heaven and earth shall be made,
All garnished with glory that never shall fade;
The redeemed shall rejoice in that blissful abode,
Where sorrow shall never their pleasure corrode.

But the wicked shall sink into darkness and gloom,
Everlasting destruction their sentence and doom;
From the presence of God and the Lamb they shall flee,
And the glory of paradise never shall see.

THE ATONEMENT.

I. C. WELLCOME.

With these remarks upon the tree of life we will now consider the tree of the knowledge of good and evil, the eating of whose fruit has brought so much suffering and death into the world.

Various opinions have been put forth on this subject. Some have taught that God intended that man should eat of its fruit, notwithstanding he forbade him to eat, because they can see no other way in which man could obtain the knowledge of good and evil; and they cannot admit that God would keep man in ignorance all his days, not knowing that he was naked, etc.

Without stopping to examine these opinions, we will give our readers what we think is the true light on this subject. Although the Scripture account of this tree is very brief, yet enough is revealed to give a just clue to the true idea.

First, then, we remark that the name of this tree, like that of the tree of life and many other Scripture names, is expressive of its peculiar characteristic in its relation to man, as Abraham is a name expressive of his relation to all nations: "For a Father of many nations have I made thee." Gen. 17: 5. The name Ishmael is expressive of God's care for him; that is, "God shall hear." Gen. 16: 11. Israel is a name expressive of his relation to God; i. e. "a prince of God." Gen. 32: 28. So the tree of life is expressive of its effect on man if permitted free access to its fruits. Thus the tree of knowledge of good and evil also is expressive of its design to give man the knowledge of good and evil. Gen. 3: 22. But here comes the grand secret: says the objector, How could man obtain the knowledge embodied in the tree without eating its fruit? And if it was designed to give man that knowledge, why was he forbidden to partake of it? These are fair questions, and we will endeavor to give them a candid answer, in the light of truth, premising first that there are two ways of obtaining property or knowledge; as when a friend exhibits to my view a purse of gold, with the proposition that I should serve him a term of years for its possession. He hangs it up on his premises, and forbids my touching it on pain of forfeiting my claim. Now I may obtain the purse by an honest, faithful performance of the duties imposed, enduring the trial to the end of the term; and this would be the legitimate influence of the sight of the purse and the prospect of obtaining it; or, refusing to endure the trial in the prospect of the good, I may break the contract, steal the purse, and suffer the consequences.

Again, my friend may have an amount of useful knowledge, and commit it to paper, with the intention of giving it to the public in a legal manner; but I, in my covetousness, may steal his manuscript and put myself in possession of the knowledge it contained, at the risk of the consequences; or I may wait and receive it lawfully, upon the terms he has the right to prescribe.

All just law is designed to give the knowledge of good and evil, and it is our duty to obtain that knowledge by a careful study, observation, and conformity to that law, and not by transgressing and suffering its penalty. In the first case it justifies, in the latter it condemns us. A prudent man [by study and right reason] foreseeth the evil and hideth himself, but the wicked pass on and are punished." Prov. 22: 3.

Adam, before he was placed in the garden, had no means of knowing good and evil, like the children who came out of Egypt having no knowledge (Deut. 1: 39) between good and evil; but when placed in the garden, under law and restriction, to discipline and test his fidelity to his rightful Sovereign and Law-giver, the way was open for him to obtain the knowledge of good and evil, gradually and lawfully, by bringing his intellectual and moral faculties into requisition and trial. See Heb. 5: 14. "But strong meat belongeth to them that are of full age, even to those who by reason of use [exercise] have their senses [reasoning faculties] exercised to discern both good and evil." This text fully confirms the position we have taken.

The child cannot know good and evil until he is brought into contact with, or placed under law (See Deut. 1: 39, Isa. 7: 15, 16, also 2 Sam. 19: 35), nor can an old man in his second childhood. We think that no well-enlightened mind will ever claim that one must disobey a just law and suffer its penalty in order to learn the difference between good and evil. This he should learn by a careful study of the nature and intention of just law.

Adam was subjected to the government of law, with its penalty before him, to test his fidelity to his only rightful Law-giver: he was tempted; he transgressed that law, and fell. Gen. 3: 17. Jesus was placed under similar circumstances when on earth in the commencement of his work. "God sent forth his Son, made of a woman, made under the law," Gal. 4: 4, "He was tempted of the devil," Matt. 4: 1, "He was in all points tempted like as we are, yet without sin," Heb. 4: 15. He passed the ordeal in triumph, and therefore "he is able to redeem them that were under the law," (Gal. 4: 5), and hence to restore that which was lost by the fall.

Having shown, as we think, that the tree whose fruit Adam was forbidden to eat, was designed to give the knowledge of good and evil in a lawful manner, we now inquire, What was the penalty of that law which Adam transgressed in eating its fruit? The Lord declared that penalty to be death. Adam was formed of the dust of the ground; he did not live until he received the breath of life from God; but when he did receive it, he became literally a living soul (Gen. 2: 7), as all animals were. Gen. 1: 3. Margin. It was this living soul that God placed in the garden, and to whom he said, "Thou shalt surely die." Gen. 2: 17. This is the first time the word was ever used in this world, so far as the record shows; and if it ever has its literal and primary signification in the Bible, we think it must be here. Adam's life was literal, and death is its opposite; God so defines it. Gen. 3: 19. "In the sweat of thy face shalt thou eat bread till thou return unto the ground; for dust thou [living soul, Adam] art, and unto dust shalt thou return."

If this is not death in its most literal sense, we fail to see what language can express it. This is the whole penalty of the law—"The wages of sin is death" (Rom. 6: 23), the living soul being deprived of that life which he had received from God when he breathed or blew into his nostrils the breath of life, which gave him life literally; and to this agrees the whole tenor of Scripture. "Thou takest away their breath; they die and return to their dust." Psa. 104: 29. This text is spoken not only of man, but of all flesh; this is the definition given by Inspiration. We know of no lexicon which gives any other as the primary definition of the term death. "If he [God] gather unto himself his spirit and his breath, all flesh shall perish together, and man shall return again unto dust." Job 34: 14, 15. "When lust hath conceived, it bringeth forth sin [as in Eve when tempted to eat the forbidden fruit], and sin, when it is finished, bringeth forth death." James 1: 15. This is the fruit, the finality, the entire fulfilment of the penalty of the broken law. This death penalty fell alike on Adam and all his posterity, they being a unit in him. This is fully shown by Paul in his triumphant argument in defence of the literal resurrection of the dead. 1 Cor. 15th chap.

After showing that Christ literally died, and as literally rose from the grave and lived again, he says, "For since by man [Adam] came death, by man [Jesus Christ] came also the resurrection of the dead [living again]; for as in Adam all [men] die [the race being a unit in him], even so in Christ [he assuming their position in death for their redemption, Gal. 3: 13], shall all [men] be made alive [raised from death], but every man in his own order." Compare the above with Paul to the Romans: "By one man [Adam] sin entered into the world, and death by sin, and so death passed upon all men." Rom. 5: 12.

If these Scriptures do not prove the penalty of the law which Adam incurred for himself and his race to be literal death, the extinction of literal life, the returning of the living soul to the dust from whence he was taken (Gen. 3: 23), then we conclude there is no force in the doctrine of the death of Christ as an atonement for our race.

We have thus summed up our losses in Adam, under these four general heads, which we think involve the whole consequence of the first transgression; this brings us to consider their recovery by the death (not by the blood) of Christ, in the first branch of the atonement, which we now proceed to show in the following articles, after which we shall show the importance of the shedding of the blood of Christ.

PURE MILK.

ARTHUR A. WAITE.

In order to have healthy lambs, the sheep must be well fed; and in matter of food sheep differ widely from goats; the latter will eat with apparent relish such things as brown paper, rags, etc., whereas, sheep require good substantial food.

I was reading the other day of a minister who preached the word successfully in a certain part of Yorkshire, Eng.; but he was the cause of great vexation to a neighboring minister, who could not restrain his church from "running after" the faithful preacher. At length he made the complaint to the preacher himself, and received this reply—"Feed them better and they will not stray." Sheep will go into the pastures where they are fed. How many have cried for bread, only to receive a stone; how many are "a hungered yet receive no meat." The world today is hungering for the gospel, and woe be unto me if I preach not the gospel. Let others deal out "red pottage" if they will, but may we take heed how we feed the flock, and give them "meat in due season."

Have we not seen a revival sweep our neighborhood, and heard scores of "new born babes," with lisping tongues, telling the glories of first love? and after the excitement is over and meetings discontinued, have we not seen every place full of "dead bodies"? yes! the babes die! Why is this? "They have begotten strange children." They have not had the "sincere milk of the word" to nourish and strengthen them. Men who should have dug deep into the soil, and planted the "seed," then cultivated it, have been satisfied to "sow on the rock"; on the wayside, among the thorns. God nerve us to take the sword and make a stroke for Bible converts; beget sons, not strange children, who talk "Ashdod" and finally die. God strengthen us to declare his eternal Word—the great Bible truths, and we will see fruit unto eternal life.

"Is not my word a hammer, saith the Lord, to break the rock in pieces?" Yes. Then feed the word, and the lambs will have a continual flow of the milk of the word, and grow thereby. But with godly wisdom: "Take heed HOW we feed the flock," "lest any root of bitterness spring up," as that will stop the flow of milk on which the lambs grow.

While with the tent last summer, I went into a cheese factory in Vermont. I was invited to help myself to milk, which I did from a faucet at the end of the pans. Going in one day at an unusual hour, I turned the faucet but no milk came, although the pans were as full as ever. The proprietor seeing me look confused, stepped up and informed me that he had just put some rennet in, which had turned the milk into curd. He then explained the process of cheese making. How much I have thought of this. In my former experience as an evangelist, I have come to churches who had their "sincere milk of the word" manufactured into cheese. A root of bitterness got in, the milk soured, was divided up, pressed into cheese; and some had kept it on hand so long that it had turned green and mouldy. Now is that a nice thing to raise a "babe" on? They want "pure milk," and when you "feed" your cheese it chokes them.

VERMONT CONFERENCE REPORT.

The Second Quarterly Session of the Vermont Conference, including the Special Conference, met as per appointment, at North Springfield, March 8th, 1876. President, A. A. Hoyt, in the chair. One of the Committee on resolutions being absent, B. B. Chedel was chosen to fill the vacancy. The following revision of the Constitution was then considered, article by article, and unanimously adopted.

Constitution
OF THE
Conference of the Church of God worshiping in the State of Vermont.

ART. 1. This Conference shall be called the Conference of the Church of God.

ART. 2. The object of this Conference shall be the propagation of the gospel of Christ, the establishment of gospel order among believers in Christ, and the saving of the perishing by all scriptural means.

ART. 3. This Conference is also constituted a Home Missionary Society, for this State; whose object shall be to aid in the support of mission meetings in places where proper support cannot otherwise be given.

ART. 4. This Conference shall accept the word of God as its Covenant and Confession, and shall discourage and disfellowship those who divide and distract the churches by the introduction and advocacy of notions and side questions, thus hindering the great and good work which God has given us to do, as set forth in Art. 2.

ART. 5. The members of this Conference shall consist of all co-operating ministers and delegates from churches, in good standing, as prescribed in the Covenant and Confession, mentioned in Art. 4.

ART. 6. Each church shall be allowed one delegate, duly appointed and provided with a certificate, signed by the Elders or Deacons of the church, or those chosen to officiate as such. A church consists of a body of believers, who worship in one place, whether few or many.

ART. 7. No person shall be a member of this Conference who is co-operating with any secret, oath-bound society, or is an habitual user of intoxicating drinks, tobacco or opium, in any form; for the Scriptures (our Covenant) teach us not to be unequally yoked together with unbelievers, and that our bodies are the temple of the Holy Ghost, which, if we defile, God will destroy.

ART. 8. Any church that cannot send a delegate, conveniently, to the annual meeting of this Conference, shall have the privilege of forwarding their vote for officers of the Conference to its Secretary; and then, provided there is no election by the first ballot, the election shall be decided by vote of the members present at the meeting.

ART. 9. The officers of this Conference shall consist of a President, Vice President, Secretary, Treasurer, Ministerial Committee of three, and State Committee of five.

ART. 10. All officers of this Conference shall be chosen by ballot at its annual meeting. Vacancies occasioned during the year by deaths, removals, or resignation, shall be filled by the official board.

ART. 11. The duties of the President, Vice President, Secretary and Treasurer, shall be to officiate as prescribed by parliamentary rules.

ART. 12. It shall be the duty of the Ministerial Committee to examine, thoroughly, concerning the faith, calling and character of all applicants for ordination, and for membership to this Conference; try all cases of disorderly conduct, and decide all differences among and between its members, and also among churches, when applied to by vote of the church.

ART. 13. The State Committee shall appoint and superintend the holding of the various sessions, protracted meetings and Campmeetings of the Conference, and shall receive and disburse all funds collected for its work.

ART. 14. This Conference reserves the right to revoke the ordination certificate of any of its members, when they fail to comply with its Covenant and Constitution. This Conference shall not ordain, as a Conference, any who are not members of it. All ministers applying for membership to, or ordination by this Conference, who, upon thorough examination, do not give sufficient evidence of their calling, etc., shall be advised to further prove their gift; and the Ministerial Committee shall provide such with a certificate for that purpose, which may be revoked at any time by said committee if such persons fail to give evidence of proper qualifications.

ART. 15. Ministers and churches shall be required to report to this Conference at its annual sessions only. The State and Ministerial Committee shall also be required to report, at the same time and place.

ART. 16. Seven members shall constitute a quorum for the transaction of business at every regular meeting. No article of this Constitution shall be amended except by a two-thirds vote of its members present at its Annual Sessions. All ordinary questions brought before this Conference for discussion shall be decided by a majority vote of its members present.

ART. 17. The Annual Meeting of this Conference shall not be held in connection with any Campmeeting, or any other meeting that would hinder or hurry its business deliberations.

Voted, That this Constitution take effect from its passage. The following resolution was then presented and adopted.

Whereas, This Conference consists of churches located both sides of the Green Mountain Range, as a matter of convenience to its churches, therefore

Resolved, That it be divided as pertains to location, to be called the Eastern and Western Divisions of the Vermont Conference, and its various sessions be equally divided in location as far as practical. Adjourned to Friday, 10 o'clock, A. M.

Met as per adjournment Friday, 10 A. M., and voted the following:

Resolved, That this Conference adopt and recommend to the churches of the State the following order of Church Order and Government, as being in our judgment the Scriptural rule:

The Church of God, worshiping at ——, set in order ——, 187—, mutually and unanimously agreed to accept the Bible as our only rule of faith and law of discipline, from which we deduce the following:

1. OFFICERS.

The Bible provides that the officers of the church be Evangelists, preaching Elders (or Pastors, Bishops, Presbyters, Overseers—all meaning the same) Church Elders, Deacons, and Women Helps.

2. DUTIES OF THE OFFICERS.

1. Evangelists. These are to be appointed by the union of various churches desiring their labors, by the laying on of hands (2 Cor. 8: 18, 19; 1 Tim. 4: 14). Their duties are to visit the various churches under their charge, preach and teach (Acts 18: 25–27), reprove (1 Tim. 5: 20, 21; Tit. 1: 13, 14), reject heretics (Tit. 3: 10, 11), supervise and correct both elders and churches (1 Tim. 1: 3; 4: 11–13; 5: 1–19; 2 Tim. 4: 2–5), ordain and appoint teachers (2 Tim. 2: 2; 1 Tim. 5: 22; Tit. 1: 5), and do such other duties of the kind as the necessities of said Conference (or union) of churches may demand.

2. Preaching Elders (or Bishops, Presbyters, Pastors, Overseers). These are ordained as local preachers (Acts 16: 23; Tit. 1: 5), to have the oversight of their respective churches (Tit. 1; 9–11; 1 Tim. 4: 16; 6: 3; Tit. 2: 1; 1 Pet. 5: 1–3; Acts 20: 29; James 5: 14), and must possess the required qualifications (1 Tim. 3: 1–8), thereby claiming respect and obedience (1 Thess. 5: 12, 13; 1 Tim. 10: 17; Heb. 13: 7, 17), ruling, teaching, etc. (Tit. 1: 9–11; 1 Pet. 5: 1–3; Acts 20: 28.

3. Church Elders and Deacons. These Elders are not expected to labor in word and doctrine, as preachers; but their duties are to officiate, in the absence of a Pastor, as leaders and teachers. The deacons are to be men of good report, having faithful wives and orderly children (1 Tim. 3: 8–15), as prescribed by the Scriptures. They are to serve in the breaking of bread, have the care of the poor (Acts 7: 1–6), and do all necessary serving of the church.

4. Women Helps. These are expected to act as helps in the service of the church, to look after the sisters, prepare the Lord's table, robes for the baptismal candidates, relieve the afflicted and such-like duties (Rom. 16: 1–12; 1 Tim. 10: 9, 10.)

In case a church has not men possessing the needed qualifications, Scripturally required, they can appoint some one to act as such, till the Lord shall raise them up men of suitable endowments. No other church officers are required, except it may be for a special occasion, and then they may be appointed temporarily.

All church records and church correspondence should be done by the ruling church officers, Elders or Deacons as they may be, and the church duties should not be taken from them, and given to clerks and committees, as the Bible provides no such officers; and no man should be appointed as Elder or Deacon unless he is Scripturally qualified to have charge of the above named duties.

The ruling officers of the church may keep a list of the names of the brethren and sisters, if they wish, as a matter of convenience, but not by legislation, nor by necessity for Church Order, as the Bible provides the necessary steps to be taken, if any walk disorderly among you; and if he will not hear the church (by which is always understood a majority voice) "note that man, and have no company with him, that he may be ashamed." 2 Thess. 3: 14.

Agreeable to notice the meeting then balloted for delegates to be sent to the National Annual Association, which resulted in the election of A. A. Hoyt, A. Damon, and H. B. Quimby. It was then voted this report be sent to the World's Crisis for publication, and that this meeting raise funds to publish the Constitution and form of Church Government in pamphlet form, separately, to be sent to the churches. Adjourned to the call of the chair.

This meeting was one of interest, and the house was well filled every evening, and over Lord's day was crowded.

H. B. QUIMBY, Assist. Sec.

[In arranging the foregoing Constitution, the Committe endeavored to adhere closely to Bible principles, and in the form of Church Government, tried to follow not only Bible principles, but the Bible form of Church Order. Should any, who walk with God, observe errors in the arrangement, they would do the Committee a favor by communicating the same to its Chairman, A. A. Hoyt, Waterbury, Vt., that all necessary corrections may be brought forward for the action of the Conference at its Annual Session. A. A. H., for Com.

THE MEETING.

What bitterness of parting comes to us in our pilgrimage. Our families are broken, our friends go far away; our loved ones die and are buried out of sight. Hearts throb, bosoms heave, eyes overflow, and memory brings back the grief again and again, through many a long and weary year. Oh, could we see, and meet, and greet the loved ones, we would cross the sea, and traverse the wilderness, and circumnavigate the globe to reach the place where we might gaze upon their faces, and clasp them in our arms once more! But this may not be. The eyes must yet swim, the heart throb, and the soul yearn in vain for the loved that come to us no more. And so we grow old, and wan, and weary, and lonely, and forsaken, and at length go down in sorrow to the sepulchre.

We shall meet again! "The trumpet shall sound, and the dead shall be raised incorruptible, and we shall be changed." 1 Cor. 15: 52. "The Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout; the dead in Christ shall rise first, then we which are alive and remain, shall be caught up together with them in the clouds, to meet the Lord in the air; and so shall we ever be with the Lord." 1 Thess. 4: 16, 17.

What a meeting shall that be. Abraham, and Isaac, and Jacob, and all the prophets shall be seen in the kingdom of God. The Thessalonian brethren shall be the apostle's "hope and joy, and crown of rejoicing," "in the presence of the Lord Jesus Christ at his coming." 1 Thess. 3: 14. And as at the battering down of some old prison's walls, men come from far and near to look among the liberated ones for those they love, so when death's dungeons are destroyed, shall the redeemed of God, gathering within the celestial gates, look for, and greet, and welcome in glad reunion, those from whom they have been separated by the hand of death. I have somewhere read a story of "some English miners who, not many years ago, when working far under ground, came upon the body of a poor fellow who had perished in the suffocating pit forty years before. Some chemical agent to which the body had been subjected in the mine, had effectually arrested the progress of decay. They brought it up to the surface, and for a while, till thoroughly exposed to the atmosphere, it lay, the image of a fine, sturdy man. No convulsions had passed over the face in death—the features were tranquil; the hair black as jet. No one recognized the face; a generation had grown up since the miner went down into the shaft for the last time. But a tottering old woman who had hurried from her cottage at hearing the news, came up, and she knew again the face which through all these long years she had not forgotten. The miner was to have been her husband on the day after that on which he died. There were no dry eyes when the gray headed old pilgrim cast herself upon the youthful corpse, and poured into his deaf ear tender words of endearment unused for forty years. It was a touching contrast—the one so old, the other so young. They had both been young these long years ago, but time had gone on with the living and stood still with the dead."

Ah, broken-hearted one, there is a meeting for you! Not with a dead corpse which comes back with all the freshness of its youth, after being hidden for years within its grave, but still lies lifeless, pulseless, and passionless before you, hastening to swift and inevitable decay;—but a meeting with living, redeemed, immortal saints, from whom the pains of death, and the powers of corruption, are fully and forever removed, living then, radiant, glorious, glad and free! Weary one, lonely one, broken-hearted one, look forward to that meeting, and be ready when it comes.—The Common People.

THE SIXTH VIAL AND TURKISH EMPIRE.

P. ALLING.

The impression seems prevalent with many that the overthrow of the Turkish empire and the fall of Constantinople, are events to occur prior to the coming of Christ. I think if such would carefully keep in mind the order of events as revealed in the 2 chap. of Daniel, they would see that the two feet of the great metallic image, seen by Nebuchadnezzar, are to exist and be broken together, with the other parts of the image, by the kingdom of God, after the advent of Christ.

Nearly all expounders of this chapter are agreed that the two legs and feet of this symbol represent the two divisions of the Roman kingdom, which occurred early in the fourth century under the emperor Constantine, who removed the imperial throne from Rome in the west, to Constantinople in the east; the feet of both are to be in existence to the end. Hence, when we examine the New Testament prophecies, and particularly those of Revelation, this fact should be kept in mind, and no conclusion should be drawn that will conflict therewith. If these facts are properly applied, we shall be greatly aided in our understanding of Revelation 13: 1–10.

The points I wish kept in mind are these: 1. That after the removal of the empire to Constantinople, through all succeeding time, that city was the seal of imperialism, alike under the Catholic and Mohammedan emperors to the present day. Now as the emperor Justinian was a Catholic, and did, by his laws and decrees, give to papal Rome (the ten-horned beast) "his power, and his seat, and great authority," it follows that imperial Rome in the East (under a Catholic emperor) was at that time the dragon of verse 2.

Again. We read in Rev. 16: 13, under the events of the sixth vial, which is poured out on the great river Euphrates, that one of the unclean spirits that go forth to prepare or gather the nations "for the battle of the great day, come out of the mouth of the dragon"; that is, out of the imperial throne at Constantinople. 2. Another of those spirits "came out of the mouth of the beast"; viz., the papal throne at Rome.

Is it not a fact patent to the world, that in the days in which we are now living, the sixth vial has been in progress of pouring out upon the Turkish empire, which is now so far absorbed, as no longer to be a hinderance to the extension of European improvements and thoroughfares across that empire to the kings of the east" (or towards the rising sun). And also that through influences emanating from Constantinople and from Rome, that the kings of the earth and the whole world have been, and are still stirred up to prepare for war on a scale never before witnessed since the world began.

These events connected with this subject brings practically to our minds the importance of carefully observing verses 15–16, which reads thus: "Behold I come as a thief. Blessed is he tht watcheth, and keepeth his garments, lest he walk naked, and they see his shame. And he gathered them together unto a place called in the Hebrew tongue Armageddon."

This testimony accords with Daniel 2, and defines the order of events, and makes Christ to be the gatherer after his coming, and leaves no room for other prophetical events to occur in this line, prior to the consummation. Hence let all watch and keep their garments, lest we be found wanting in that day.

Norwalk, Ohio, March 18th.

A CONSTANT union with Christ is a source of enjoyment. From him we draw life, health, strength, nourishment, and all our comforts. He is the only fountain of true happiness, and as long as we abide in him, he communicates to us all these blessings. Separate ourselves from him, and like the branch, we will wither, die and perish. We may still retain a position in some church, and palm ourselves off upon the world as christians, while we are upon the high road to eternal ruin.

STAND WHERE THE FIRE HAS BEEN.

One time a party of travelers, with their guide, were traversing one of the vast prairies of the west. The day was exceedingly hot and sultry, and in the evening they were glad to encamp for rest and refreshment. So the wagons were wheeled up to afford shelter and serve as a covering. The guide, however, seemed uneasy and restless, and sat upon his horse gazing intently at a far distant object. The size slowly though surely increased, until a red tinge obscured the sky. The guide at once divined the cause; it was one of those awful fires which form the terror of both traveler and guide. Yes, the prairie was on fire! One vast sheet of flame came rolling along in every direction; the dry, half-scorched grass feeding and fanning the awful conflagration. Nothing was safe; man and beast, flowers, trees, and grass must be alike burned. The terrified beasts were rushing from the scene; the birds were flying with all the speed they could command. Is there no shelter for our travelers? Alas! none. Can they not save themselves by flight? No; the fire is gaining upon them. It comes rolling along, and unless some remedy is devised, some means of escape provided, they must perish.

But now the guide quickly calls upon the travelers to cease their efforts to get away. They cannot escape by flight. At once the guide strikes a light amongst this dry brushwood and tall grass, and another flame, fanned by the wind, almost instantly burns a space around the travelers, while the guide shouts aloud to the party, "Stand in the place where the fire has been!"

The command is at once obeyed; the waggons, horses, and baggage are at once removed to the still smouldering, cleared space of ground, and the whole party are safe. But a few minutes longer and all would have been consumed, but that charmed circle secures them. On rushes the fierce flame; but its fury is stayed where the travelers stood, for there is nothing to burn; all has been already consumed. The party are safe, for they stand in the place where the fire has been.

Reader, this is a picture of a sinner's danger—exposed to the flames of perdition, and of the foolishness of hoping to escape except by God's remedy. God has kindled a fire; it burned on the cross; it consumed the victim thoroughly. Even as the sin-offering of old was burned outside the camp, so Jesus suffered unto death. God's wrath and judgment, due to the sinner, fell upon him. And now God is satisfied—perfectly so—with what Jesus has done and suffered. All is finished, and Christ is risen from the dead. No wrath for the sinner now believing on Jesus. And no wrath either for you, if Jesus and his love are believed in. O stand in the place where the fire has been!

Where is that do you say? Calvary is the the place; there the fire burned. Christ has been made sin, but is now risen from the dead to die no more. Wrath unto the uttermost, is coming quickly upon all the unbelieving. Come, then, to Christ to-day and be saved.—Messiah's Herald.

PREACHERS WHO CANNOT PREACH.

Why is it that so many pulpits are filled by men who cannot preach, and so many churches guided by leaders who only lead to defeat? Why is it that the history of the labors of so many individuals is a history of conflict and overthrow, of decay and failure; so much so that unless foreign aid is invoked, and other laborers introduced, multitudes of churches would steadily decline under the labors of those who are appointed and expected to be their leaders and their guides?

In some instances the trouble is in the people themselves, who are intractable, unreasonable, and unchristian in their lives and conduct. The minister of the gospel is burdened by a worldly, carnal, backslidden church. Whether he has any right to be thus burdened; whether God has called him to such a position, and to the endurance of such trials, is another question, worthy of his most careful consideration: for while blame may be laid upon those who seem to be hinderers of his work, it may be possible that he himself has departed from the path of providential guidance, and entered upon a course for which he has no warrant in the teachings of the Scripture, the openings of providence, or the leading of the Holy Ghost.

But aside from such instances as these, there are unquestionably many men who profess to preach the gospel, who signally fail in what they undertake. They do not know the word of God. They do not understand the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ. The careful reader of the Scriptures will detect blunders in everything they undertake. Their sermons have little of God's word or God's Spirit connected with them. Rarely do they quote from the Living Oracles, and when they do, a large proportion of the passages are either misquoted or misapplied. It is positively shocking for a careful student of the Bible to listen to the perversions, misquotations, and misapplications of the plainest passages of God's word, which are introduced by ministers in their pulpit performances in such a way as to demonstrate that they have not read, nor examined, nor weighed the import of the words they quote. And if preaching of the Word be the great work of the ministry of Christ, then they most certainly fail to accomplish that work. They lack not only the word of truth, but the power of God, and the armor of righteousness on the right hand and on the left. They may be educated, but they are not anointed. They may be called of men, but they are not sent of God. They may be polished and refined, but they are not mighty in the Scriptures, and do not have that broken and contrite heart which God will not despise.

The fact is, people are hungry for the Word of the living God. They thirst for the waters of salvation. The deep needs of the human heart can be satisfied by nothing else. Men go to and fro seeking the Word of the Lord. Now and then arises some man at whose feet multitudes gather, and for whose words listening assemblies earnestly wait. And what is the peculiarity of such men as these? Is it learning? Is it eloquence? Is it refinement? Is it culture? No, none of these. In all these respects the unsuccessful men excel the men whose ministry is a glorious success. In all these respects the barren fig trees excel the trees that bear fruit. But in one respect they differ. The successful men are men of God. They are men who deeply study the word of truth. They are men whose Bibles bear marks of constant, patient, earnest, prayerful perusal. They are men whose souls drink in the living waters that flow from the smitten rock. They are men of prayer; of fervent, earnest, importunate supplication; and herein is their strength, the word of God in their hearts; the Spirit of Christ dwelling in them; the presence of God going with them; and hungry souls, starved upon husks of human eloquence, wearied of the finely wrought essays and rounded periods wherewith men charm their ears and cheat their souls, come at last pouring out by multitudes from their costly shrines and gorgeous synagogues, to see some rugged prophet of the wilderness standing in his hairy garment and crying, "Prepare ye the way of the Lord!" "Repent, for the kingdom of God is at hand!"

If men who are dissatisfied with themselves and with the results of their labors; who find their words are empty and their toils are vain, would turn to God with purpose of heart, taking his word with prayerful reverence, and making it the man of their counsel; digging deep into it, as for hidden treasures, and pouring forth its joyous messages to the perishing around them; if they would but walk in close communion with their God, spurning the bribes, and charms, and cheats of earth; standing above the craft and guile and worldly policy that curses and blights the church to-day, they would find that the Lord's arm is not shortened that he cannot save, nor his ear heavy that he cannot hear; but that his word that goeth forth out of his mouth does not return to him void, but accomplishes the thing which he pleases, and prospers in that whereto he sends it.—Wayside.

GOD'S MERCIES.—They are unbounded, and they are tender. Our mercy is not tender. What little mercy you find in man is often harsh and hard. It is not tender at all. It is a common saying among us, "I forgive, but I do not forget." We "forgive" with an air of superiority, superciliously. There is often harshness, hardness, unkindness, in the way in which our mercy is bestowed. You have often received mercy in such a way as to make you feel that you had nearly paid for it, in having to suffer the rude unkindly manner in which it was bestowed. And even when that is not so, but when man bestows his kindness and vouchsafes his mercy in his blandest way, you could never think of calling it tender. That would be about the last epithet you would think of applying to it. But God forgives, and when he forgives, he does it tenderly. There is no upbraiding. He blots out the transgression, and there is no more remembrance of it at all. He forgets as soon as he forgives. It is done in a gentle way. There is nothing but kindness in the glance of the eye, and nothing but tenderness in the tone of the voice. "Be of good cheer; thy sins are forgiven thee."

HOME AND HEALTH.

WOMAN'S DRESS AND HER DISEASES.—In an address before the Pennsylvania Medical Society, the President, Dr. Atlee, drew attention to the bad effects of the change wrought by absurd fashion in the habits and dress of women. He held, that in proportion as women have departed from simplicity, in the same proportion have their infirmities increased. The confined waist and weighty dress of women were mercilessly ridiculed. Fashionable women were compared to pea-fowls strutting the streets and taking a scavenger like promenade, gathering filth and exhausting strength. The pernicious effect of the fashionable shoe was explained. Nature intended the heel and sole to be on a level, but fashion raises the heel two inches above this level. Woman is thus walking down hill, and as health is concerned may be said to be going down hill all the time.—Health Reformer.

THE LAPPS AND ANIMAL FOOD.—The Lapps are a nation numbering about twenty thousand, who inhabit a small section northwest of Finland, in the northern part of Europe. They live wholly on animal food. We quote the following description of them, from which the reader may judge whether the influence of a carnivorous diet is salutary or not: "They are extremely small in stature, and their hair is black and straight, presenting a great contrast to the tall and blonde Norwegians and Swedes. Their skin yellow, the forehead broad, the head poised on a short and rounded neck, the nose well formed, the cheek-bones protuding, the chin pointed, the cheeks hollow, the lips straight and thin. They are quickly exhausted by labor, rather from bodily weakness than laziness.—Health Reformer.

VIOLENT EXERCISE.—Violent or rapid exertion made by children, and also by stout or aged people, often injures, and sometimes causes disease of the heart, when the same taken in the ordinary way would do no harm. Rapidly running-up stairs, or to meet a train, sometimes causes death. Hence whilst exercise is of the utmost importance to health, it should be taken in a regulated and rational manner, and particularly by those who have passed the period of youth. But disease of the heart even in youth may often be traced to indiscretion in this particular, whether in rowing, running, or jumping.—Ex.

The CRISIS is devoted to the exposition of all Bible truth; especially the doctrine of the immediate, personal coming and reign of Christ on the earth; holiness of heart; the unconscious state of the dead; their literal resurrection, and final destruction of the wicked.

JESUS AND THE RESURRECTION.

C. S. BRANCH.

"Thy dead men shall live, together with my dead body shall they arise. Awake and sing, ye that dwell in dust; for thy dew is as the dew of herbs, and the earth shall cast out the dead." Isa 26:19.

The dead are by far a defenceless majority of the human family; and when we speak of the departed we bow our heads in reverential respect. We will neither applaud nor censure them while in decomposition and profound repose and slumber; for, says the patriarch Job—"His sons come to honor, and he knoweth it not; and they are brought low, but he perceiveth it not of them." And while they are in this unconscious condition, the same writer says their "transgressions are sealed up in a bag, and thou [God] sewest up my iniquity." Says the wise man, that gave his heart to seek and search out by wisdom in relation to the dead and other matters—"For that which befalleth the sons of men befalleth beasts; even one thing befalleth them; as the one dieth, so dieth the other; yea, they have all one breath; so that a man hath no preeminence above a beast; for all is vanity. All go unto one place; all are of the dust, and all turn to dust again." He says, in the hour and article of death, men and beasts are brought on the same level, and all go unto the same place, irrespective of birth or character. We bow our heads in sorrowful assent, and leave our dead in the hands of a just and omnipotent God, and wait for his Son from heaven, who said, when speaking of the dead, "For the hour is coming, in the which all that are in the graves shall hear his voice, and shall come forth; they that have done good, unto the resurrection of life; and they that have done evil, unto the resurrection of damnation."

Here is a point that is worthy of more than ordinary attention; namely, all that have done evil or good shall come forth out of the graves. Here is where Jesus Christ places that part of the human intellect called emanant volition, while in death, in the grave, and declares, "I will raise him up at the last day." We are told that the body can neither exercise reason or volition; and consequently can neither do good nor evil; but that these faculties are the exclusive prerogatives of the soul, the real man, assuming the premises in regard to the reasoning faculties of man, as laid down by our theological opponent. The Savior says, "And this is the will of him that sent me, that every one which seeth the Son, and believeth on him, may have everlasting life, and I will raise him up at the last day."

Here again the same faculty is brought out, that which can believe shall be resurrected from the dead, and shall be given everlasting life. This is the reward for believing. If he had everlasting life when he made the offer, it could have been no inducement to the unbeliever to accept, for he could have told Jesus he was in possession of it already, independent of him.

The wise man says, "The living know that they shall die, but the dead know not anything." That is to say, that part of man that thinks and knows is informed that it must die; and it is told beforehand that it will not know anything when dead. He also says, "Their love, and their hatred, and their envy, is now perished"—after, and in the continuation of death. We read in Deut. 6:5—"And thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thine heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy might." And at a certain time, a Pharisaical lawyer came to Jesus, and said, "Master, which is the great commandment in the law? Jesus said unto him, Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind." Matt. 22:36, 37.

The heart, the soul, the mind, and, in short, all and every faculty of the intellectual orgauism of man is to be drawn out in love to God, which embraces the whole of the law and gospel. But death severs the silver cord, and he that has attained to the highest state of love and holiness, in death all his emotions and love perish; and so with the wicked; their hatred and envy are now perished. Says the Psalmist, speaking of the dead—"His breath goeth forth, he returneth to his earth, in that very day his thoughts perish." He cannot love in death, for it has perished. God spoke to Ezekiel, and said concerning the dead—"Therefore prophesy, and say unto them, Thus saith the Lord God, Behold O my people, I will open your graves, and cause you to come up out of your graves, and bring you into the land of Israel." The grave, and not heaven, is the place where God will find his people. This was the great desire of St. Paul. "If by any means," he says, "I might attain unto the resurrection of the dead." And said Job—"And though after my skin worms destroy this body, yet in my flesh shall I see God. Whom I shall see for myself, and mine eyes shall behold, and not another." Paul and Job looked down the stream of time to the hour that Jesus said, "For thou shalt be recompensed at the resurrection of the just." David rejoiced in this hope, and said, "As for me, I will behold thy face in righteousness; I will be satisfied when I awake with thy likeness."

Since we have been writing this article, it has been said, the dead are in heaven. We are struck with astonishment. Is heaven the receptacle of the dead? This is in direct contradiction of the Revelator, where he said, "And there shall be no more death." When Jesus comes, it is the righteous living that are to be translated and rewarded, and those that are dead and dwelling in dust. There is no provision made for those that are dead and in heaven. And Daniel says, in contradiction of popular theology, "And many of them that sleep in the dust of the earth [not many of them that are rejoicing in heaven] shall awake; some to everlasting life, and some to shame and everlasting contempt." Our text says, "Awake, ye that dwell in dust"; and St. John in vision looked down to the end of time, and heard the living and resurrected saints singing, and saying, "Blessing, and honor, and glory, and power, be unto Him that sitteth upon the throne, and unto the Lamb, forever and ever."

"WATCHMAN, WHAT OF THE NIGHT?"

Many pious people think that all that is required to usher in the sunshine of the millennial day is to improve the church, renovate the State, circulate the Bible, and disseminate tracts; and that the result of this will be a millennial condition such as the world has never reached. I do not believe in ultimate victory by any or all of these things. The darkness, in many respects, has grown intenser from Noah's flood to this nineteenth century of ours. Our blessed religion, so far as we can forecast, indicates a deepening darkness—a wider estrangement from God, and a love of the world and its works and ways unprecedented since the birth of the Prince of peace.

It is in vain that people look for the setting up of Christ's kingdom and the dawn of the millennium as the result of any created plan. God has fixed on a very different way. He makes death the way to life, darkness preliminary to day, and confusion and conflict the road to sunshine and order and joy. We see the clearest preliminaries to the reign and glory of Christ on earth, in confusion, conflict, and darkness.

It is the darkest hour that strikes on the time-piece and best prognosticates the struggling rays of day.

Despondency in this dispensation is the precursor of hope. Summer leaps into life from the midst of gloomy winter. We see the signs of the rapid winding-up of our existing economy in order to make way for that reign that will have no end, and for that happiness which will have no alloy.

We are looking for Christ, and not the mere spread of christianity. "He cometh in clouds, and every eye shall see him." The sun will darken, and the moon will withhold its light; but over all will arise and shine, with inextinguishable splendor, a sunrise which will have no western declension—that of the "Sun of Righteousness with healing under his wings."

The sixth millenary of the world is almost ended; all fingers point to the nearing crisis. He cometh in clouds, and every eye shall see him. Do we look for him? Do we pray, "Come, Lord Jesus?"

The crisis under which we are now living is the greatest that ever occurred in human history. The day before the flood, was not that a dark and terrible day? and yet the sun rose just as usual; men woke up and dressed, and went forth to their pleasure or business as before. But what followed? "The flood came, and took them all away." That was their awful fate, and what will be the fate of the last generation?

"The Lord Jesus shall be revealed from heaven, with his mighty angels, in flaming fire, taking vengeance on them that know not God, and that obey not the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ; who shall be punished with everlasting destruction from the presence of the Lord and from the glory of his power." 2 Thess. 1:7–9.

Dark and ominous changes are taking place in the moral, political, and material world. Institutions once supposed to be lasting as our world, explode in succession. Discrowned kings wander over Europe, and kings that still reign feel the vibrations of approaching change. All things on earth tilt and rock. The upheaval of the masses fills the minds of statesmen with dread, and impels concessions wrung out by terror rather than conceded to a sense of duty. In such times we are impelled to ask, "O my Lord, what shall be the end of these things?" while the wise are led more earnestly to "take heed to the sure word of prophecy, as to a light that shineth in a dark place."

Creation groaneth and travaileth in pain; and death neither mitigates nor ends its sorrow. The cold shadow of the curse projected from ancient paradise lies on its breast, and chills its heart, while the brilliant discoveries of science serve only to hide its sufferings, not to extinguish them. The mysterious whispering wire serves only to make more widely known its ills. In former times tears were dried before they reached us, or we read of them. Now the electric spark spreads them a thousand miles away, in seconds and in showers, deepening the wail of nature and griefs of human hearts.

Earth is weary of being a place of graves, scarred and torn by artillery, and the very air is heavy with the breath of slaves and sufferers, tyrants and oppressors. The sun longs to shine no more on sick beds and wrecks.—The Christian Herald.

LISTENING FOR THE VOICE OF JESUS.

Words by Miss M. V. SALTMARSH. Music by Geo. H. INGALLS.

But when the clouds are disappearing,
And light shines clearly from above,
I see my Savior near me standing,
With looks of tenderness and love.
But while 'tis brightness all around me,
I dare not—cannot go alone.
I listen for the voice of Jesus,
For only he can lead me home.—Cho.

He tells me oft of Eden's glory,
And says that I shall soon behold
The shining portals of the city,
And walk ere long the streets of gold.
His words are full of peace and comfort—
O Savior, let me hear them all;
I'd listen to thy gentle whisperings,
As well as to thy loudest call.—Cho.

Then is my pathway dark or sunny,
It matters not if 'tis His choice;
And as I journey I will listen
For Jesus' sweet and loving voice.
And when at last with all the ransomed,
I stand within the gates of home,
I'm sure my Savior's voice will lead me
Still farther on—up to the throne.—Cho.

BIBLE READING.—NO. 1.

BREAD OF LIFE.

J. R. COOPER.

"I am the living bread which came down from heaven: if any man eat of this bread he shall live forever."—JOHN 6:51.

Wonderful mysteries are contained in the word "Bread." Just as the word "meat" signifies animal food or flesh in our language, so "bread" in Scripture language signifies any nutritious food that satisfies hunger. But it has a deep, spiritual meaning beyond this, to which your attention is called. Please take your Bibles and turn with me to GEN. 2:16.—"Of every tree of the garden thou mayest freely eat: but of the tree of the knowledge of good and evil, thou shalt not eat of it: for in the day that thou eatest thereof dying thou shalt die." Adam did eat, and from that moment became a dying man. Before he might eat for pleasure, the fruit of the garden; hereafter he must eat in order to sustain life. He was excluded from the garden, and from the tree of life; but God in his mercy provided a temporary "set off"—bread." Left alone, he could live only a few days, as death was working in him; but complete corruption was kept off for a while by the new agent,—bread. This living by bread is a merciful expedient. Henceforth, to man, bread is equivalent to life; and the lack of bread is famine and death. This agent—bread—holds man in existence until God brings in life—eternal life—after a new and lasting order. It is "in the sweat of thy brow shalt thou eat bread" now. This bread only prolongs death; it does not give life. We find another bread hinted at—the bread of life. The first hint is in Gen. 14:18, in the record of that wonderful personage, Melchizedek, who met Abraham returning from the slaughter of the five kings, and brought forth bread and wine.

Now look at the great typical famine in Jacob's time. Gen. 47:12–25. "Joseph nourished his father and his brethren, and all his father's household with bread, according to their families. And there was no bread in all the land; for the famine was very sore, so that the land of Egypt and all the land of Canaan fainted by reason of the famine." Joseph by reason of his treasured stores sold bread and gathered up all the money in the land; and when their money failed, the people came to Joseph, demanding, "Give us bread, for why should we die." It was bread or death now. Joseph gave them bread in exchange for their cattle, horses, and flocks that year. The next year they came saying: "Our money is spent: my lord also hath our herds of cattle; there is not aught left in the sight of my lord, but our bodies and our lands: wherefore should we die before thine eyes." And Joseph bought all the land, and the people for servants, for Pharaoh. Jesus said: "All that a man hath will he give for his life,"—and bread was equivalent to life now.

Joseph was a type of Christ, who said, "I am the living bread." There is nothing recorded in Scripture against Joseph; he suffered for righteousness' sake—not for sin. All the bread of the land was gathered up in Joseph, as the true bread is in Christ, and is distributed to dying men by both. How significant!

DEUT. 8:3.—"And thou shalt remember all the way which the Lord thy God led thee these forty years in the wilderness, to humble thee, and to prove thee, to know what was in thine heart, whether thou wouldest keep his commandments or no. And he humbled thee, and suffered thee to hunger, and fed thee with manna, which thou knewest not, neither did thy fathers know; that he might make thee know that man doth not live by bread only, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of the Lord doth now live."

Above we learn that humiliation and suffering and hunger, and feeding by manna, was to teach the children of Israel how to obtain life. Bread alone could not sustain life; it might keep a man from dying, a few years, but beyond that it would fail, and he was sure to die at last, even if he did not eat bread; but God was teaching them that they must live by every word spoken by him. This manna he gave them in the wilderness was only a type of the true manna or bread. "For the bread of God is he which cometh down from heaven, and giveth life unto the world." John 6:33. "Your fathers did eat manna in the wilderness, and are dead. This is the bread which cometh down from heaven, that a man may eat thereof and not die." John 6:58. The manna eaten in the wilderness only sustained the death-life, or living-death, for a while; but the true manna gives ilfe.

Manna represents God's words—every word. God's words, therefore, are "bread" in the teaching of Scripture. Jesus said: "Whoso eateth my flesh, and drinketh my blood, hath eternal life." In what manner do we eat Jesus' flesh? "In the beginning was the word, and the word was with God, and the word was God. . . . And the word was made flesh and dwelt among us." John 1:1, 14. In Revelations Jesus is called "The word of God." He was the "living bread" because he was the word manifested in human life. Many of his disciples said: "This is a hard saying; who can hear it?" It is a hard saying to many now-a-days. The key is given in the sixty-third verse: "It is the spirit that quickeneth; the flesh profiteth nothing: the words that I speak unto you, they are spirit and they are life." The letter of the word is like bread in the loaf; except we eat it, there is no life in it, but when eaten, it is converted into blood, and the life is in the blood. In like manner the words become spirit and life when eaten. As our bodies live by bread, so, exactly, does the soul live by eating God's words which are spirit and life. We cannot eat bread to-day and have it suffice for a week. We eat day by day, and several times a day. Manna bred worms and was useless on the second day. So we cannot eat God's words on the Lord's day to last all the week. We must eat it day by day or our soul's perish. "Give us this day our daily bread" should be our prayer. Show me a man who only eats bread once a week, and I will show you a lean, famishing creature; and the man who only eats the living bread occasionally, will be a lean, half-hearted christian, with no vitality in him.

Jesus was born in Bethlehem, which means "house of bread." Thus the birthplace of Jesus was the house where the bread of life was brought forth to the world. "Then said Jesus unto the twelve, will ye also go away? Then Simon Peter answered him, Lord, to whom will we go? thou hast the words of eternal life." Yes, the words, the words! they are spirit and they are life.

The natural man with all his ideas, thoughts, and feelings, is only flesh. His carnal, fleshly mind is "enmity against God." In Is. 55:5, we read—"For my thoughts are not your thoughts, neither are your ways my ways, saith the Lord. For as the heavens are higher than the earth, so are my ways higher than your ways, and my thoughts higher than your thoughts." Jesus Christ, as the word of God, had not a natural sentiment or opinion of his own. He did not judge of things by his natural eyes or understanding, but accepted instead what God said of them. He said:—"The words I spake are not mine." "The Son can do nothing of himself." "My Father doeth the works." Therefore, when Satan so artfully tempted him, he said only, "It is written," "It is written," "It is written." He as a man lived entirely on God's words. They can get no man's notions from him, but it is God's ideas acting in human life. When we eat God's words we can say, "How precious are thy thoughts unto me, O God," for God's thoughts replace our thoughts just as bread, when eaten, replace our natural flesh.

ISAIAH 55:2.—"Wherefore do ye spend money for that which is not bread, and your labor for that which satisfieth not? Hearken diligently unto me, and eat ye that which is good, and let your soul delight itself in fatness." Man was lost by listening to Satan, he is saved by listening to God. "Hear and your soul shall live." Are there any who are spending their money—rendering their service of any kind—for something they esteem bread, but which is not bread? Are there any who are resting their hopes of eternal life upon the precepts and traditions of men? Upon man-made systems of religion, upon articles of faith, upon religious exercises, creeds, dogmas—anything in fact save the word of God? To have faith in Jesus Christ is to believe the word of God. We cannot receive the word without receiving Christ. The Israelites not only had to be sheltered behind the blood, but they had to feed on the lamb—eat the whole of it. "Ye shall let nothing of it remain." See Ex. 12:10.

We are not at liberty to accept one of God's statements and reject another. We are not authorized to modify, trim down, or pass over any of God's words. It is not for us to accept what appears reasonable, and right, and practicable to our fleshly minds, and turn a deaf ear to everything that seems otherwise—or that conflicts with "our creed." Who are we that we should sit in judgment upon the works of God. Look to day upon the various denominations, sects, creeds, systems, that men are trying to get adherents to, instead of endeavoring to get them into one body—Christ. They are laboring for "our church" "our sect"—spending their money for that which is not bread. "Is Christ divided"? Let us have a reverent care as to the manner we handle the word of God—the bread of life—lest it be corrupted in our hands, lest it become "leavened" by the commandments and traditions of men, "making the word of God of none effect through your traditions." What would it be to us if "bread" should become of none effect? We should starve; we should die. The word of God is life, made of none effect is death. Jesus says in John 6:27: "Labor not for the meat which perisheth, but for that meat which endureth unto everlasting life."

Dear reader, are you laboring for worldly treasures, houses, lands or wealth, or do you daily think more, care more for the "bread of life" than all these? "Heaven and earth shall pass away but my words shall not pass away." "If any man hear my words and believe not, I judge him not; he that rejecteth me, and receiveth not my words, hath one that judgeth him: the word that I have spoken, the same shall judge him in the last day."

To those whose lives are full of trials and sufferings the words of God have blessed meaning. Why, the comfort is all for the afflicted! The joy is all for the sorrowful! The riches are all for the poor! The bread is all for the hungry! And the best of all, it is free as air, and can be had "without money and without price." Therefore eat and live.

THE ATONEMENT.

From the "Plan of Redemption."

I. C. WELLCOME.

THE UNIVERSAL ATONEMENT BY THE DEATH OF CHRIST.

The subject of the atonement is revealed to us, in the Scriptures, in two parts, or branches; the first being accomplished by the death of Christ under the first or old covenant, or law of works (to redeem man from the curse of the law, Christ being made a curse for man), and is unconditional and universal in its application to, and its effects upon all our race. The second is accomplished by the blood of Christ in the new covenant, or law of faith, and is conditional (1 John 1:7, 9), being limited in its application to adults, and in its final blessings to believers.

In the former chapter we have defined the terms atone and atonement, but it will be in place here also. Atone is compounded of at and one, and signifies to unite or agree; to be in concordance; to accord. Atonement,—agreement, concord, reconciliation, after enmity or controversy.—Webster.

Let us now examine the following Scriptures: "For since by man (Adam) came death, by man (Jesus) came also the resurrection of the dead; for as in Adam all (men) die, even so in Christ shall all (men) be made alive." 1 Cor. 15:21, 22; or "As by Adam all die, so by the anointed also will all be restored to life."—Emphat. Diaglott. In this Scripture it is fully demonstrated that as Adam's sin brought literal death upon all his race, so Christ removes that literal death from all that race. But it may be asked, By virtue of what act of Jesus Christ is this penalty removed? The Scripture answers, By his death.

We have before stated that the atonement is revealed to us in the Scriptures in two parts or branches, relating to two covenants. The first branch being effected by the death of Christ, relates to the first or old covenant, and results in the removal of the consequences of the first or Adamic transgression, and is therefore universal in its application to, and its effects upon the race and the lost inheritance. The second branch is by the blood of Christ, and relates to the second or new covenant. We have also stated that our race was a unit in Adam; the sentence of the law against him was therefore equally against the race. "By one man sin entered into the world, and death by sin, and so death passed upon all men, for that all have sinned." Rom. 5:12.

Thus death rested upon the unit and involved the race in him;—all are dead. Death passed upon all. All being prospectively dead, no covenant, contract, or agreement could be made with him, he having no rights but to die; hence the race must become extinct by the execution of the unit. Therefore, so far as anything he could do to rescue himself, all was lost. In this state of the case, the Son of man interposes in man's behalf, covenants with the Father to assume man's original nature and responsibilities, magnify and honor the law which had been broken, redeem him from death, and give him another day of probation, under another law or covenant.

This great fact is plainly set forth in the following text: "Who, being in the form of God, thought it not robbery to be equal with God, but made himself of no reputation, and took upon him the form of a servant, and was made in the likeness of men; and being found in fashion as a man, he humbled himself, and became obedient unto death, even the death of the cross. Wherefore God also hath highly exalted him, and given him a name which is above every name, that at the name of Jesus every knee should bow, of things in heaven, and things in earth, and things under the earth; and that every tongue should confess that Jesus Christ is Lord, to the glory of God the Father." Phil. 2:6, 11. And again, "For God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son [to redeem the world and lay a foundation for hope], that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life." John 3:15. "Surely he hath borne our grief, and carried our sorrows" (shared them with us). Isa. 53:4. "He took part of the same." "We did esteem him stricken, smitten of God [not of man, but in man's behalf], and afflicted [we esteemed him thus treated on his own account]. He was wounded for our transgression, he was bruised for our iniquities, . . . with his stripes we are healed" (redeemed from the curse of the law—death). "As the Father knoweth me, even so know I the Father [showing a perfect agreement between them]. . . .Therefore doth the Father love me, because I lay down my life that I might take it again. No man taketh it from me, but I lay it down of myself [his own voluntary act to redeem Adam, that from his race he might procure a people under the new covenant, washed in his own blood, to inherit the redeemed earth]. I have power to lay it down, and I have power to take it again. This commandment have I received from my Father." "I have authority," etc. "This commission have I received from my Father." "This right or privilege." See Campbell's version, also Emphatic Diaglott, American Bible Union, and other versions on this text. John 10:15, 18.

The above Scriptures and many more which might be quoted, clearly establish the fact that an agreement or covenant was made between the Father and the Son from the foundation of the world, that Christ should come in the flesh (see 2 John 7), fulfil the law (Matt. 5:18), suffer the just for the unjust (1 Pet. 3:18), and thereby redeem Adam, and in him the race, from death, and the earth from the curse, and place him on a second probation, under a law (of faith in Christ, Gal. 3:13, 1 Cor. 9:21), which, when broken, could give life only on repentance towards God, and faith towards our Lord Jesus Christ, and whose penalty is the second death. Rev. 21:8.

In pursuance of this agreement, when it was time, or "when the fulness of time was come, God sent forth his Son, made of a woman, made under the law, to redeem them that were under the law, that we might [under the new covenant, or law of faith] receive the adoption of sons." Gal. 4:4, 5. Thus Adam, and in him the race who had by the first transgression been prospectively stricken from a state of life and probation, and over whom the dark pall of death was cast, were, by virtue of the above-named covenant, reprieved from the immediate execution of the violated law, and their names placed in the Lamb's book of life, of which we shall say more in another chapter. And this redemption forms the first branch of the atonement, and is accomplished by the death (not the blood) of Christ, as we shall now proceed to show.

A GLORIOUS CHURCH.

I. DAMMAN.

"That he might present it to himself a glorious church, not having spot, or wrinkle, or any such thing; but that it should be holy and without blemish."—EPH. 5:27.

This is the sample church that shall live on earth in the last days, when Jesus shall appear in the clouds of heaven to take vengeance on the ungodly.

The church is made up of different members, and each member has his place appointed by the great Head of the church; hence if the body is holy each member must be holy.

How is this body made holy? On this all-important question we wish to lay aside all speculation and come to the best authority, which is the Word of God. How does God cleanse his church? He "loved the church, and gave himself for it, that he might sanctify and cleanse it . . . . by the Word." By this we learn that the Word has power to cleanse. "Seeing ye have purified your souls in obeying the truth through the Spirit unto unfeigned love of the brethsen [or the body], . . love one another with pure hearts fervently. Being born again, not of corruptible seed, but of incorruptible, by the Word of God, which liveth and abideth for ever." No alteration; abiding the same without change. Should we allow ourselves to neglect any of the Word of God, or the doctrines of the Lord Jesus?

We are told by Paul to hold "the faith, and a good conscience; which some having put away concerning faith have made shipwreck." We are told to take heed, and let no man deceive us. Paul when writing to Timothy expresses himself in simple language, warning him to be careful, and take heed unto himself and unto the doctrine; to continue in them, for in doing this he would both save himself and them that heard him.

Will it do? Is it safe to take the Word with us wherever we go? Yes, wherever we carry sanctification, carry the 16th verse of 1 Tim. 4. Can I preach the doctrine of holiness without preaching the Word—"Sanctify them through thy truth"? Can we not unite with those who give but little heed to the doctrine and prophecy? Yes, if the Word of God will unite us and make us clean. "Now ye are clean through the Word which I have spoken unto you." John 15:3.

Well, what particular difference does it make, if I only believe? "Who is he that overcometh the world, but he that believeth that Jesus is the Son of God?" Can two walk in christian fellowship without the Spirit of Christ? No. Can a man have the Spirit of Christ and not have the cleansing Word of God by which we are washed, or sanctified? Will not the doctrine of Christ's coming have a cleansing effect on every heart that believes it, according to the Scriptures?

Paul declares that he preached the gospel to the Corinthians, how that Christ died and rose again, according to the Scriptures. He says they did well to stand, and adds, "By which also ye are saved, if ye keep in memory what I preached unto you, unless ye have believed in vain." Paul confesses that if Christ did not rise from the dead there is no resurrection of the dead, and their faith was vain, and his preaching was in vain.

Admitting Paul did preach the truth when he preached the resurrection of Christ from the dead, is it not as true that when men embrace a hope, and that faith does not embrace a resurrection from the dead, that their faith is vain? Then all faith that leaves out the resurrection of the dead is false. Can such a faith sanctify one and make him holy? No, not so. Then to be sanctified through the truth we must believe the truth. "Every man that hath this hope [what hope? the hope of a resurrection from the dead,—that when Christ shall appear we shall be made like him] purifieth himself." This hope purifies the man that has it, and makes him Christ-like. How can we understand the true character of Jesus Christ without believing the gospel of Christ? Inasmuch as there is a nature in Christ, the same nature must be in the gospel of Christ.

Now, then, when we believe the gospel which contains the great and precious promises of God, we partake of his divine nature, and can no other way. Then how can man be sanctified through a false hope? It is as necessary to believe that Jesus will come again as it is that he ever came to die. The man that loves Jesus loves his coming. According to the Scriptures, it cannot be hard to have a union on this wise, for the union is already made, in the nature of the gospel by which we are sanctified. This gospel reconciles the believing Jew and believing Gentile to Christ, and to each other; so they are all one. So, then, if men want union that will stand in the day of judgment, they will find it in the gospel of Christ.

POWERS OF HEAVEN SHAKEN.

The more thought and investigation we give to the true import and application of the Savior's wonderful prediction of the shaking of the powers of heaven, the more thoroughly are we convinced that he referred to solar disturbances, which would effect our world, scientifically, in every department, producing phenomenal currents and combinations in all animate and inanimate earthly matter, resulting in the signs which should precede the ending of the gospel age, and finally in the coming of Christ and the dissolution of the mundane structure.

God governs the universe by certain laws, and executes his changeless decrees by his own appointed agencies. He has, according to his Word, decreed a future radical change in the earth, when its present combinations shall be dissolved, and new compounds and organizations shall be produced, restoring its original perfections in the animate and inanimate departments. To accomplish this grand purpose he will, according to his own laws and by his own appointed agencies, bring it to pass.

As true science explains those laws and determines those agencies, we may understand that when God begins to arrange the powers by which he is to accomplish a new and mighty change in the earth, the scientist may discover the new action of those agents; or in other words the powers controlling the heavenly bodies; and the earth will be so changed as to produce new and alarming results, manifestly tending to bring to pass revolutions foretold.

Science clearly demonstrates the fact that the heavenly bodies—the planets—exercise a controlling power over each other, and that in our system the sun is the most central and powerful in its influence. To produce, therefore, a shaking or derangement of the "powers of heaven" we might suppose that those changes would be seen, especially in the sun, which would effect the other large planets, and be fearfully manifested in the earth.

It is now admitted by the most learned savants in the world that the sun has for the last decade exhibited wonderful changes, and that these changes are powerfully affecting the earth, principally through electrical currents. We are told that these solar currents of power greatly disturb the molten sea in the bowels of the earth, producing an alarming increase of earthquakes; that it causes atmospheric disturbances, resulting in tornadoes, fearful floods, cyclones, terrible thunder and hail, alarming showers of blood and flesh in many places in Europe and America, meteoric ashes and broken stones, "storms of electrical fire" in America and Asia, with fearful sights and strange sounds, as if nature was convulsed in the spasms of its final dissolution. The atmospheric currents are deranged, so that the mariner is perplexed and often wrecked and destroyed in the "roaring" sea and waves. Scientists confidently assert that these "solar disturbances" are producing fearful changes in the vegetable and animal kingdoms, resulting in new and threatening diseases among the beasts, fish and fowl, also among men, which demand new treatment and remedies.

These savants also say that the currents are perceptibly affecting men mentally and morally, making them more nervous and excitable, rendering children more difficult to govern, and adults more treacherous, jealous and warlike. That it is changing the physical propensities of men, making them selfish, extortioners, defalcators, dishonest in business, disloyal in government, factious in society, infidel in domestic relations; husbands and wives parting, children abusing parents, and finally producing everywhere and in all classes abnormal and strange developments, threatening all social order, stability and happiness in family, church and state.

That such fearful changes are taking place is patent to all. The statistical tables, which present the relative crimes in all the civilized countries, show that they have increased in a much larger ratio than the populations for the last twenty years. These crimes are not only increasing in numbers, but they are being terribly intensified in the enormity of their guilt. Men, who for many years had manifested the most perfect integrity of character, now suddenly exhibit the most total depravity in business transactions. Murders are cooly and deliberately committed, in the most barbarous and brutal manner, where no possible inducement or provocation can be discovered; as if some mysterious power had taken possession of them, driving them to quickly fill the cup of human iniquity.

This increase of crime is not produced by a decline in education, or a diminution of efforts to improve society; for these have risen while the moral standard has fallen.

Is it not a fact that the Scriptures present, as signs of the last days, great phenomenal changes in the heavens, and also teach that at the same time moral, political and religious signs will appear of crimes just such as are now being perpetrated in connection with, and it may be partially controlled by these solar influences. If God is about to execute his judgments upon this wicked generation, by causing many to destroy each other in war and general butchery, when every man's sword will be against his brother, is it not reasonable to suppose that he will use some means to produce such a state of the unsaved human heart as to result in such a fierce and remorseless conflict? All things earthly seem to be in a changing, dying condition. All governments and human associations, all physical order and established laws are being shaken and threatened with revolution. Inspiration says of the earth and heavens—"They shall perish, but thou shalt endure; yea, all of them shall wax old like a garment; as a vesture shalt thou change them, and they shall be changed." Ps. 102: 26. We will here give a few extracts upon this subject from an article in the New York Mercury:

"The heavens above, the earth beneath, the waters under the earth, and the atmosphere which envelops our planet, have recently exhibited such portentous phenomena as to fill the minds of all Christendom with wonder and apprehension. Men of profound research, like M. Victor Herault, De la Rue, Carrington, and others, who have struggled assiduously to wring the secret of our world's destiny from nature, are no longer treated as mere distempered visionaries. Those cosmical changes that the telescope and the spectrum reveal in the heavens and the terrible meteorological demonstrations that dotted our coast-line with shipwrecks, lead us, by solemn steps, back into the Infinite. There is not an astronomer or scientist worth the name living to-day but accepts the statement that 'both the earth and its inhabitants have passed the prime of their development,' as a self-evident fact. They predicate this condition as respects the earth just as confidently as we popularly predict a man of sixty is past his physical prime.

The subject of the death of the earth may not be a pleasant one; but some of the foremost minds of the age have said death may occur to the earth at any moment, just as to the individual who has entered upon 'second childishness and mere oblivion.' It may be by slow process of natural decay, or it may be sudden. The fact of the globe having entered into its death period, it will be remembered, has nothing whatever to do with the intellectual development of man. The earthquake, the volcano, the thunderbolt, and the hurricane spread havoc and destruction irrespective of man's wishes or man's prayers, and the globe's final destruction, we are assured, will overtake us 'as a thief in the night.' 'Then we which are alive,' says St. Paul, 1 Thess., 4: 5, 17, 'and remain shall be caught up together with them in the clouds to meet the Lord in the air.' This does not seem much like a peaceful millennium. In the same belief Bishop Heber writes,

> 'The Lord shall come! The earth shall quake,
> The mountains to their center shake;
> And withering from the vault of night,
> The stars shall pale their feeble light.'"

. . . "Professor Leverrier has been assiduously pursuing this solar investigation, and he states that these astounding solar protuberances change their forms as rapidly as clouds, and that 'they sometimes appear to be formed at an elevation above the surface of the sun and to descend upon it, as though the material was driven backward into the solar atmosphere, and there took shape and fell back.' One prominence resembled the smoke of a locomotive as seen on a frosty day. 'Half an hour afterward it had literally gone up'—the highest portion being over 200,000 miles above the solar surface. I saw myself," says the Professor, "particles ascending 100,000 miles in a very few minutes, appearing to go over 200 miles per second, though it must really have been some 400 or 500 miles per second. That velocity would throw iron clear off from the sun, so that it would never return to it." * *

"Prof. Leverrier concluded his remarks with the remarkable suggestion: "It seems to me, if I have approximately estimated the gigantic force of this solar disturbance, that we may expect a series of fierce tornadoes to sweep over and devastate certain portions of the earth's surface in the immediate future." How accurate this vaticination has proved our experience during the present month sufficiently demonstrates.

An Austrian scientist, commenting on Prof. Leverriers's observations, remarks: "Whether this extraordinary solar action is due to the motions of Mercury, Venus and Jupiter' as De la Rue supposes, or to an organic change in the sun's constitution, does not at present appear. The spots near the sun's equator are undoubtedly cavities, but whether they are holes piercing the actual body of the orb is another question. It might almost seem that under the cloudy surface of the sun there is an ocean of liquid, and slags are formed at the present in this ocean, and there is a blowing out of matter which gives rise to the extraordinary penumbral phenomena witnessed by Prof. Leverrier. There is undoubtedly an immense underfeed from the outside towards the center, but whether by a rush downward from the centre of the focii of disturbance cannot be determined. The present action, at all events, has had the effect of showering upon the earth a large additional increment of solar heat. So far the effect has not been objectionable, but in the immediate future the consequences may prove disastrous. The sun has emitted an enormous amount of extra heat, and this emission may jeopardize his very existence, as well as the stability of the system he controls. By comparing, as it were, his own vitality, his reciprocal action upon our globe will be materially diminished. The restraint hitherto exercised upon the molten ocean that surges within our planet has been chiefly solar, and if this influence has been lessened, as there are too many grounds to believe, a series of terrific earthquakes in regions hitherto comparatively free from them may inaugurate a final and comprehensive convulsion."

☞ THE Church in Lynn earnestly request the brethren and sisters throughout the State to be with them at the Conference held there this week. Arrangements have been made to entertain all who come.
I. I. L.

IS IT RIGHT?

We are astonished at the carelessness of some churches in relation to their care for their pastors, or those who may preach to them. One might suppose they thought that it cost nothing, or next to nothing to support ministers and their families, and that they can keep a horse, or travel on the cars, without any expense. We know of a very faithful, true man in the ministry, whose labors have been much blest, and yet we have known of his traveling twenty-nine miles to preach the word, and receive but fifty cents. Is this right? This same dear minister left a business that afforded him a thousand dollars a year, to go and preach the gospel of the kingdom for a mere pittance of pay. Nothing but love for Jesus and sinners could induce one to make such a sacrifice.

But is it right that such self-denying, faithful men should be almost starved out by those to whom they administer heavenly things? Those who give so sparingly cannot expect to prosper spiritually. The Lord loves a "cheerful giver." The Scripture informs us that "there is that that scattereth and yet increaseth; and there is that which withholdeth more than is meet, but it tendeth to poverty. The liberal soul shall be made fat; and he that watereth shall be watered also himself." Prov. 21: 24-25. Is it not time for a reform? Let all christians lay by something every week for the preacher, and they will receive much more benefit from the preaching, and feel richer every way.
M. G.

CONFESS BLESSINGS.

When special blessings are received from the Lord, it honors him to confess them publicly. He who refuses must not expect to keep them long, or to receive new ones. Satan will do all in his power to keep us still, as he knows that when we publish what the Lord does for us, it leads others to seek after deeper things in the well of salvation. When young converts refuse to tell what the Lord has done for them, they soon wither away and die, like a plant pulled up, and deprived of nourishment. So, when one receives the gift of the Spirit, after conversion, he should confess it, if he would keep the blessed gift in his heart. Fletcher says he lost the gift four times, because he would not profess it. It is common for Satan to suggest that we had better keep still, and see if we can live it publicly. He well knows we shall not live it, if we keep still. The Lord does not give special blessings long, where the receivers are ashamed to own the giver. The confession honors Christ, and leads others to seek the fulness there is in him. It is sometimes a heavy cross to confess the rich blessings received from the Lord, because some may accuse the person of boasting, or of claiming to be better than others; whereas the fully consecrated one is further from the spirit of personal boasting than ever before. He only wishes to tell what Jesus has done for him. His boasting is only in the Lord.
M. G.

THE FIRST RESURRECTION.

"We read (Rev. 20: 5), 'But the rest of the dead lived not again until the thousand years were finished. This is the first resurrection.' How can this class of the dead, of whom it is said: 'The rest of the dead lived not again until the thousand years were finished,' be called 'the first resurrection?'"
J. EMERSON.

We do not see any evidence that those who were not raised were called the "first resurrection." Such would be an absurd idea. It is said in Rev. 20: 4, that christians who had been dead "lived and reigned with Christ a thousand years." The Revelator then refers to those who were not raised, and said, "But the rest of the dead lived not again until the thousand years were finished." This is thrown in as a parenthesis. He then refers back to the raised ones again, and says of that body: "This is the first resurrection; on such the second death," hath no power." The first death must be before "the second death," and there must be a living between the two deaths; but those who have "part in the first resurrection" are free from the second death. Those who are to die the second death do not live again till a thousand years after the resurrection of the saints. Those who are raised at the coming of Christ are those who have part in the first resurrection, and put on immortality.
M. G.

ARE THE DEAD ALIVE?—Is there any evidence that a dead person is alive in any sense?
X.

We have not one scrap of evidence to show that any part of a dead man is alive. We cannot find it in the Bible, in physiology, philosophy, facts, science, or common sense. These sources of evidence all unite to say that no part of a dead man is alive between death and the resurrection. Why teach the opposite, and thereby sustain all the false systems of religion in the world, at the same time making the teachings of Jesus, apostles, prophets, and Moses, contradict history? We think the time has come when good christian people should take the Bible for their teacher, instead of the creeds and opinions of uninspired men.
M. G.

LEXINGTON.

The meetings in Lexington, Mich., are becoming very interesting. We found it quite a hard place to move in religious matters. Pleasure parties had been common among members of the different churches, and but few had kept separate from the spirit of the world. At the present time (April 3d) the town is much stirred, and many are under conviction. Several have been converted, and professors have been much quickened. We have large audiences, and frequently the house is much crowded, including platforms, aisles, and standing room. The revival tide is daily increasing, and we are looking for heart-cheering results. We visit daily with Bro. Wright from house to house, talking and praying with every family. The principal work is done in this way, and in the inquiry meetings. Preaching has its place, but the personal efforts with individuals is a very important part of revival work. Bro. Moody and his fellow-laborers estimate that four-fifths of the success comes from the inquiry meetings. The church or individual that does not make efforts to save others must not expect to keep a clear evidence of acceptance by the Lord.
M. G.

CHRISTIAN CONVENTION.—The Christian Convention called by Bro. Moody, and held at the Hippodrome, in New York, March 29th and 30th, was a happy success. Between three and four thousand ministers and delegates assembled to consider the best plans for conducting revival meetings, evangelistic work, prayer-meetings, church music, inquiry meetings, and how to reach those who do not attend church. Nineteen States and three hundred and forty towns were represented. The reports of the doings of the convention, as given in the New York Daily Witness, are very interesting and profitable reading. There seems to be no abatement in the revival interest in Bro. Moody's meetings. The great hall at the Hippodrome is crowded almost every night, and hundreds upon hundreds are yielding to Christ.

Reports from Europe show that Bro. Moody's meetings in Scotland, Ireland and England, have resulted in a continued revival interest up to the present time. It is very rare that such permanent benefits follow revivals, as are seen in those conducted by Bro. Moody. One chief reason consists in the fact that he has a remarkable faculty to get professors and young converts to work for Jesus.
M. G.

WILL YOU HELP?—We would like to ask the reader, if he has sent the Crisis to one or more for three months? Blessed results are proceeding from the influence of the papers thus sent. Many have become deeply interested in the truth set forth in their columns. They wait with ardent longing for their weekly arrivals. Thousands of others would be equally interested, could they but have the reading of the Crisis for a short time. Will you help? Do it for Jesus, who has done so much for us. It may be the means of adding another to those who will be ready to meet him at his coming.
M. G.

SHALL WE KNOW THEM?—A Bro. writes: "Shall we know our friends in the kingdom?"
O. J. PIPER.

We have no reason to give why we shall not know them. They will be the same persons, the same bodies, only immortalized, incorruptible, and glorified. We are not aware that there is any direct scripture on the subject, either way. It is said, "Ye shall see Abraham, and Isaac, and Jacob, and all the prophets, in the kingdom of God." This indicates that they will be known as these patriarchs, about whom we have heard and read so much. No doubt Abraham will know his wife Sarah, and his son Isaac. Paul will know Peter, and Peter will know John. We believe we shall know those whom we have known in this life.
M. G.

"TAKE HEED!"—A short time since, we made some extracts from a tract entitled "Take Heed!" intimating that it had its origin among those who have embraced views set forth by Bro. W. C. Thurman. A Bro. writes from Lake Village, N. H., that he thinks Bro. T. should not be made responsible for the issue of the tract. We cheerfully make the correction. That tract advocated that Jesus would come at twenty minutes past 4 o'clock, April 1st, 1876. It is too bad that good men should be led into such wild and unscriptural notions. When will they learn to believe the word of the Lord, instead of the dreams, visions and opinions of fallible men.
M. G.

SEARCH THE SCRIPTURES.—One special reason why there are so few living christians in the churches, is because but few study and search the Scriptures to learn how to live, and what to do. The truth in the Bible is as necessary to keep a person alive in Christ, as food is essential for the health of the physical constitution. Those who neglect the study of the Bible, soon become weak, poor and blind. They lose their interest in the salvation of the unconverted, and become stupid as to christian work, having a name to live, while they are but dead branches of the heavenly vine. Study the word.
M. G.

I GO AWAY.—Please give me a little information on John 16: 5-10. When were these things spoken, before or after his resurrection?
S. M. BROWN.

It appears evident that Jesus spoke these words before his crucifixion and resurrection. He was declaring to his disciples what should come to pass; but the time had not then come for their accomplishment.
M. G.

THE TRACT FUND.

THE ADVENT CHRISTIAN PUBLICATION SOCIETY, at a meeting on Springfield camp-ground, August 11th, 1875, voted to raise Two Thousand Dollars for the free distribution of Tracts the ensuing year; and they invite the help and co-operation of all lovers of the Lord and of his truth, in the furtherance of the good cause. The times are ominous of coming events, and admonish us to diligence in the Master's work. The Lord is at the door, and what we do must be done quickly. Let the contributions be prompt, hearty, and liberal. The Lord will reward the liberal giver.

MORMONISM EXAMINED.

Under the leadership of the second prophet, Joseph Smith, who repudiates polygamy, and disfellowships all who practice it, thus paving his way to the people, Mormonism is taking a new start, and has received a mighty impetus, and the people are not prepared to meet it on its own grounds. The various publications against the Salt Lake Mormons entirely fail to meet this new phase of Mormonism which is now spreading like wild-fire. Our examination of this system of faith, containing over one hundred strong proofs of its fallacy, is now about ready for the press. Probable price 50 cts. in paper.

Last year four sample copies were printed in the Crisis, which called forth a feeble reply from a prominent Mormon apostle, which reply is answered in this work, besides the addition of six new chapters of strong arguments, which pull up the tree of Mormonism by the roots. It is unlike any work ever issued against it, showing its fallacy from its own inspired books, and invalidates the fundamental claims of every phase of Mormonism. It is no surface work, but a book of research, and a strong antidote.

Those who may wish the work in quantities, at reduced figures, to circulate, are requested to write me at Brodhead, Wis., that I may determine how large an edition to strike off.

Correspondence.

From Sr. R. P. Eldridge.

Dear Brn. and Srs. in Christ:—I will accept the privilege of speaking to you through our much loved Crisis, though it is with a sad heart I write to-day. Little did I think when I last took my pen, on the first of January, to write an article for the Crisis, that in a few brief days death, sad death, would enter our peaceful home, and bear away our dear earthly father, thus leaving my mother and myself sorrowful and lonely, and both invalids.

Father's death was very sudden, as was stated in his obituary notice in the Crisis of Feb. 16th. I was the daughter who saw him pass away without a moment's warning, and saw his Bible, in which he was reading, drop to the floor. Oh, how heart-rending was the sight! How great our grief! Once before had death robbed me of my earthly father; now I have been called to drink from the same bitter cup again. But it is God's loving hand that inflicts the wound, and I know he doeth all things right. Though he takes away earthly props, yet he has promised his "rod and staff."

This is indeed a night of weeping—a day of darkness; but, thank God, this darkness will not always last, for we expect ere long a brighter morning will dawn, when sorrow and sighing will forever flee away. Then let us, who are mourning the loss of our loved ones, remember that Jesus will watch their precious dust till he shall appear to awake them from their slumbers. Then we shall behold them clothed with immortality and eternal life, to fade and die no more.

How soul-cheering the thought of that home—that glorious home in Christ's coming kingdom, where loved ones will meet and never, never part. The Lord help us to look towards that home; and though the storm-clouds sweep over us, and burst upon us, let us listen to the sweet whisperings—"Fear not, I am with thee." "And as thy days, so shall thy strength be." "My grace is sufficient for thee." Precious promises! how they have cheered my heart in my life of suffering and deprivation. When I have felt that life's burdens were greater than I could bear, how sweetly have the whisperings come—"Cast thy burden on the Lord and he will sustain thee"; and my heart has replied, I will, Lord, for thou hast been my burden-bearer, and I will trust thee still. Oh! how blessed to know that we have such a dear, loving Savior; one who knows all our trials, and is acquainted with our griefs. Soon we hope to see him as he is, and then he will wipe the tears from off all faces, and give his faithful ones a crown of glory, that shall never fade away.

Pray for us in our great affliction; and should any brother or sister, who has not written to us, feel like writing, their letters would be gratefully received. Your sister, hoping to soon "behold the King in his beauty."

Chatham, Mass.

From Bro. E. N. Bliss.

Dear Editors of Crisis:—Thinking you would like to know how the cause is prospering out here, I will say, that I closed meetings at Solon, Jewell county, on the 26th of Feb., and started for Cawker City, by way of Belleville, with six inches of snow on the ground. It drifted, and I had to break my way. I got to Cawker City on Saturday, and found Brn. Dawson and McCarty filled with the Spirit and contending for the faith once delivered to the saints. They had got the use of a hall and lumber to seat a part of it for me to preach in.

I commenced on Saturday evening, March 4th, and held meetings over the two following Sundays. There had been so much quarrelling in the religious community, that the people had become disgusted with religion, and but a few came out to hear at first; but our congregation increased till the close. Many were quite interested to hear the truth, and I believe there has been much good done. Bro. McCarty was to preach on Monday evening, and he is going to hold a meeting once in two weeks.

I would say to all good brethren, who love the Lord's appearing, as you pass through Cawker City please call on these two brethren and make their acquaintance. Brn. D. and C. are earnest workers for Jesus; and if the brethren would send them some doctrinal tracts they would make good use of them.

I started on Monday morning for the church on Salt Creek, and to-day I am snow-bound at Bro. Henry's. He was formerly a Sabbath-keeper, but having no faith in E. White's visions he turned back to the world; but he is now rejoicing in the truth.

While I have been writing Bro. McHays has called, whom with his wife I had the privilege of planting in the likeness of Christ's death. He was a wicked man, but now he is a hard worker for Jesus. It does me so much good to see them stand up for Jesus. Thank God for these faithful workers; through them much good will be done. They seem to have lost their love for this world, and are looking for Jesus to come to change their vile bodies and make them like his most glorious body. I remain your Bro. in Christ.

From Sr. T. B. Weaver.

Dear Ones in Jesus:—I take my pen with a very trembling hand to write a few lines for your perusal, that you may know that I have received the kind and good letters you have written me during the past five weeks of my most severe sickness. I have never been so sick for years, and it has almost made me a wreck of my former self. I had a very severe attack of what the doctor calls "putrid erysipelas," and the suffering was awful. To be moved at all caused me suffering beyond expression. I felt for two weeks that I faced death all the time; and oh, how I did long for Jesus to come. It has increased my longings for his coming twofold. When I got better of the erysipelas, the pleurisy set in. I could not draw a full breath, it was so terribly painful. How I did long for a land where no pain can ever come. Yesterday the doctor called to see me, but said my blood was so low and poor that I must never expect to feel much better.

Brethren, and sisters, pray for me. God bless you all for the kindness you have done me, and for what you have sent me, and I pray God to bless and reward every one of you for it. You can never know how I appreciate it. Do pray for me, and write to me, for I do feel the need of it so much; but forgive me if I do not answer all letters promptly, for it hurts me to write. Every time I try to write, I have to stop and rest at almost every word. I know you will not expect it, but I do want your kind words of cheer and hope; so do not forget poor Thera.

My brother-in-law (Elder G. A. Streeter) and family are intending to go to Lewiston, Me., in a few weeks, and then another sister (Thayer) I expect will come to take care of me. We shall be almost alone, but Jesus will be with us, and I hope the dear ones in Jesus will not forget to come and see me as often as the Lord will. Could they be in my situation for a few weeks, they would know the pleasure of seeing dear ones in Jesus, and hearing words of comfort, songs of praise, and prayer. May God bless and reward you all. I love you and hope soon to see you at home.

No. Dana, Mass., March 21st, 1876.

From Bro. A. S. Rounds.

Dear Editors:—I have never seen any article in the Crisis from this place, and I thought a few lines might be of interest to some of the flock; so I have taken the liberty to send you this.

There are a few of us here that stand up to warn a lost and ruined race of their soon coming doom. The opposition to the truth is very strong, but of course we expect it, for the truth never did have many friends.

Last year there were five added to our number, such as we hope will be saved in the great gathering day. We have just had a course of lectures on the prophecies by Bro. Simpson, which lasted over a week; they were very interesting and instructive. The attendance was large, the chapel being nearly filled every evening. Our dear brother proved to us that Christ, who is our life, would soon come to take his dear ones home. O what a thought! Soon to rest at home!

The audience paid strict attention, and we hope and pray that they may receive benefit. God grant that they may take a bold stand for the truth. There are many here in the different churches who are satisfied we have got the truth; but they are afraid to come out and declare it, because it is not popular. O may God have mercy on them! I often think of what our dear Savior said in Mark 8: 35, "Whosoever shall be ashamed of me, and of my words, in this adulterous and sinful generation, of him also shall the Son of man be ashamed when he cometh in the glory of his Father with his holy angels." I never mean to be ashamed of Jesus, for I do want a home in the soon coming kingdom. As for me and my house, we are determined by divine help to serve the Lord.

We have preaching three-fourths of the time, and generally have a good congregation to hear. May the Lord send out more to hear the truth, who can be profited by it. Pray for us that we may hold fast the profession of our faith, and always be found in the way of duty, and at last with you and all the faithful be accepted of Christ at his coming.

Bristol, R. I.

From Bro. W. H. McCarty.

Dear Brn. and Srs. in Christ:—It is with emotions of gratitude that I attempt to write a few lines for the Crisis. There are but four of us of like precious faith in this place; myself and wife, and Bro. P. D. Dawson and wife; and we have to bear the taunts of many, but this only makes us stronger in the faith of the soon coming of the blessed Savior.

Eld. E. N. Bliss came to this place the first Lord's day in March, and stayed over the second Sunday. He preached for us from prophecy and the signs of the times. There were but few in attendance, as the weather was very bad. I preached on Monday evening after Bro. Bliss left, and there was a very large attendance and good interest. The next day the people offered to get me a house if I would preach for them, and I think God will bless us at this place. I feel that I am very weak, but God can strengthen all them who put their trust in him. God has helped us to build up a church this winter, six miles east of this place, of about fifty members.

My dear brethren and sisters, pray for us. About six months ago my eyes were opened to the truth, after I had spent the best of my life in sin and folly; but I thank God that I gave heed to the wooings of the Holy Spirit. Since that time I have preached some forty sermons, and God has wonderfully blest my efforts; and I trust that I have been the instrument in the hand of God of winning souls to Christ. I expect to spend my life in the cause of the blessed Redeemer, for there is no pleasure in sin.

Cawker City, Mitchell Co., Kansas.

From Bro. H. M. Williams.

Dear Brn. and Srs.:—After so long a time I attempt to write a few lines to you, to stir up you minds by way of remembrance, that you may be mindful of the word of our Lord Jesus Christ, who said, "Blessed are ye when men shall revile you, and persecute you, and shall say all manner of evil against you falsely for my sake. Rejoice and be exceeding glad, for great is your reward in heaven."

If there are any people of the present day who are reviled, persecuted, and have all manner of evil spoken against them for Christ's sake, it is the Adventists. This I speak both from experience and observation. Only a few weeks ago I attended a series of professedly union meetings, but I, being an Adventist, was not permitted to preach. Indeed, some threatened to leave the church if the minister did not stop calling on me to lead in prayer. Brethren, it will not be so in the kingdom, thank the Lord. While the god of this world rules in the children of men, I expect to suffer persecution.

I would love to attend those meetings I read of in the Times and Crisis. I am now preaching every Sunday where an opportunity will permit; but many of the people are turned away from the truth unto fables. Pray for me, brethren, that I may live faithful to my King.

Arkansas City, Kansas.

From Bro. C. W. Russell.

Dear Editors:—The Crisis is a welcome visitor. Each number contains a rich feast. How different from what is found in most of the religious papers published at the present day. There seems to be a tendency on the part of a majority of religious teachers to float with the current, and the faithful watchman finds very little sympathy among the majority of christians. I have met with a great deal of opposition in the churches here; but of late things have changed somewhat. Yesterday, the pastor of the M. E. church invited me to preach for him to-day. I found quite a large and attentive congregation. Many of them were surprised to see me in their pulpit. Times are very hard out here. My work among the people thus far has been without pay. I feel like being more in earnest and more diligent in the future than I have been in the past. My thanks are due the Missionary Society for the money and books they sent me.

Ogden, Iowa.

From Bro. W. C. Peck.

Beloved Brn. and Sisters:—You who are waiting, watching and praying for the return of Jesus, hold fast the faith once delivered to the saints," and "contend earnestly" for it. "Be not weary in well doing, for in due season we shall reap if we faint not." Look at things as they are, not as some would try to make us believe. In order to do this we must take God's Word, which the Psalmist says is a "light to my feet and a lamp to my path." It effectually dispels the darkness on every side, and we can see clearly things past, things present, and things to come.

There is not the slightest cause for discouragement. Everything is on our side. "Be strong." It is unnecessary to enumerate the mountains of evidence that tell us of the coming of Jesus, and of speedy redemption. We know them. "Therefore we ought to give the more earnest heed to the things which we have heard, lest at any time we should let them slip." "Behold the Bridegroom cometh, go ye out to meet him."

From Bro. Thos. Fitzsimmons.

Dear Editors:—We write briefly to say that the Delaware District A. C. Conference holds its fourth annual session at the Advent Christian Church in our city, commencing on April 20th, and continue over the following Sabbath. The indications are that a large attendance of sisters and brethren will be present. We extend a cordial invitation to all. Our church in this city is increasing in membership, and doing good work.

We ask the prayers of the readers of the Crisis for the restoration, at the hands of God, of our health, which for some time has been impaired, and hindered us from working in the cause of the Lord as we have desired. Our faith has been much strengthened in reading in the Crisis the answers to prayers for afflicted brethren in their restoration. Dear sisters and brethren, earnestly make this petition to the dear Lord in our behalf; we kindly ask it as a particular favor.

QUARTERLY MEETING.

The third Quarterly Meeting of the Iowa Christian Conference was held at Traer, Tama Co., commencing Friday, March 24th, 1876, and continuing until the following Tuesday evening.

In the absence of the President, the Conference was called to order by the Secretary, Saturday P. M. After prayer we proceeded to the election of a President pro tem, and Bro. P. S. Converse was elected. The proposition of Bro. Deyo to obtain a new tent to replace the one he has had in use came up, was duly considered and approved. The church at Traer expressed a willingness to aid in this laudable enterprise also.

No written reports of churches were sent in, yet I am enabled to give a general report from various sources, showing the condition of the cause. The New Hartford church, under the labors of Brn. F. H. Kenny and C. C. Ramsay, has been greatly revived. About fifty made a start for the kingdom, twenty-seven were baptized, and twenty-one admitted to the church. They expect to have regular preaching by C. C. Ramsay, F. H. Kenny and E. A. Marsh. The church in Traer has also been greatly revived under the united and earnest labors of Sr. Branaman, Brn. I. B. Talmage and M. A. Newcomb, the past winter. They have received several accessions to their number; others have been reclaimed, and some are desiring to confess their faith in Christ by baptism.

The Ettie church has been prospering greatly under the persevering labors of Bro. P. S. Converse, and feel greatly encouraged. The Conference meeting throughout was interesting and profitable, and we rejoice in our present brightened prospects.

E. A. MARSH, Sec.

GET WISDOM.

THOS. FITZSIMMONS.

Speed the day, and let us get wisdom of these things. It will not be long before the righteous people of God, like Daniel of old before Belshazzar, will be called upon by an affrighted world to read the handwriting on the wall; and to qualify ourselves for this work, as God's interpreters of the signs, seals, vials and trumpets, we must now begin to lay up in store a solid amount of learning.

Among the best prophetic text books and expositors to instruct Adventists, we may mention those of Baxter, Bickersteth, Cummings, Duffield, Seiss, Hastings, Elliott, Grant, Taylor, and others, writers and scholars, who have piously devoted a large portion of their lives in investigating and elucidating the latter day prophecies.

All Second Advent believers should now go into rigid training, to prepare them for those duties of the Lord, as he says—"And those of understanding, and who do know the Lord, shall instruct many," and also the divine promise and reward that "Those that are wise shall shine as the brightness of the firmament, and those who turn many to righteousness, as the stars forever and ever."

Philadelphia, Pa.

A SUGGESTION.—It came into my mind that the subscribers of the Crisis might do some good in this way: Let every subscriber that will, take two papers, then he will have one to give to others at any time. The second paper might come cheaper than the usual price, perhaps. Think of it. We have only a little while to work. The Lord is coming soon. JOHN F. EMERSON.

Obituaries.

DENHAM. Died in New Bedford, Mass., Feb. 1st, 1876, of congestion of the brain, Bro. Asa Denham, aged fifty-eight years.

For forty years Bro. D. was a faithful follower of Christ. Since 1842 he has been a firm believer in the Lord's soon coming. For more than thirty years he was a member of the Second Advent Church in this city. He was one of the few who have ever been at their post, always bearing testimony to the truth. Not only in the church, but in all his business transactions he was ever faithful to the principles of truth and justice.

The present strength and prosperity of this church is largely the result of our dear brother's faithfulness. The bereaved wife and daughter, with the church and a large circle of friends, feel the loss of this dear servant of God. He now sleeps, but soon will awake to life and immortality.

An appropriate discourse was delivered at the funeral by Bro. M. Batchelor, from 1 Thess. 4: 13—"That ye sorrow not even as others which have no hope." H. V. DAVIS.

CORSON. Fell asleep in Jesus, in Dover, N. H., Feb. 27th, 1876, Bro. Charles W. Corson, aged forty-eight years.

Our Bro. was converted in 1843, and embraced the blessed doctrine of Christ's soon coming, with other kindred truths, in 1854, and like every one that believes God's word and lives it, could rejoice in prospect of the christian's hope. His sickness of some eight weeks was very severe, but the strong arm of the Lord was his support, and he went down expecting to sleep but a little while. The evidence to his mind was so clear that Jesus would very soon come, that he felt the importance of a constant preparation. He was blest with a good gift, and would have been glad to have spent more of his time in exhorting his fellow men to prepare for the judgment if the way had been clear; but his work is done, and many in different places will remember his sweet testimonies. He could not bear to see the banner of truth trail in the dust; for he believed whatever truth was worthy of a God to give, should never be ignored, especially the last judgment warning. He leaves a wife and three children, who deeply feel their loss, for he was an affectionate husband and a kind father. He was brought to Farmington for interment, when a discourse from Job 14: 14 was given on the occasion by the writer, assisted by the F Baptist minister. J. G. SMITH.

TENNEY. In Auburn, Me., March 23d, 1876, Edith May, infant daughter of Warren N. and Mary E. Tenney, aged one year, four months.

Our dear Bro. and Sr. have a right to mourn the loss of their little Edith, for it is the work of the enemy; yet they mourn not without hope, for if there is any doctrine true in the Bible it is that children shall come again from the land of the enemy. The writer was glad he could hold out this hope to comfort the bereaved parents.

GEO. A. STREETER.

SMITH. In Surry, Me., Sept. 28th, 1875, Sadie Brown, wife of Lewis Smith, and daughter of Horatio and Julia Milliken, aged twenty-three years.

After seven weeks of severe illness our dear Sadie fell asleep, as we trust, in Jesus. She made no profession of religion, but was religiously inclined. During her sickness she often requested us to pray with her. She seemed resigned to the will of God, and manifested love and humility. She had no choice to live or die, but believed she should enjoy an endless life beyond the grave. She leaves a kind and affectionate companion, father, mother, brothers and sister, and a large circle of friends, who deeply mourn their loss.

Oh, how hard it was to be reconciled to this deep affliction; but we have laid her away, hoping she will rise again clothed with immortality and eternal life, to die no more. Words of comfort were spoken by Eld. Tripp, Baptist minister.

Gently beside her sad tears were falling;
Softly around her strong arms were thrown;
Fondly she whispered, "Weep not for me;
The morning will dawn and I shall go home.

J. A. MILLIKEN.

WHEELOCK. Fell asleep in Jesus, Sr. Rowena T. Wheelock wife of Elder Silas Wheelock, of Calais, aged seventy years.

Sr. Wheelock experienced religion at the age of sixteen, and united with the Congregational church; but in the movement of '43 she was led to see the truths of the bible more clearly, and with her husband embraced the Advent faith—sleep of the dead, literal coming of Christ to raise the dead, judge the world, reward the wicked with death, and the righteous with everlasting life on the earth renewed. She has ever been a true and shining light. Truly a mother in Israel has fallen. When her husband has taken his life in his hand and gone out to win a bride for his Master she has retired to the closet to implore and beseech God to stay up his hand. She selected her own text in Luke 10: 42—"Mary hath chosen that good part," etc.

E. N. MORSE.

DAY. In Wesley, Me., Dec. 26th, 1875, Sister Josephine B. Day, wife of John W. Day, aged thirty-three years.

About two years ago Sister Day became interested in the blessed hope of the gospel, and was baptized with her husband and two others at the same time. She died in the triumphs of faith, having a bright view of the better land. Cheering indeed were the last words of counsel to her friends. It was an affecting scene as she called her six little children to her side, and gave them the parting kiss, imploring the blessing of God upon them and other friends, beseeching them to be faithful and meet her when Jesus comes. She sleeps, but not forever. Words of hope and comfort were spoken from 1 Thess. 4: 17, 18, by the writer. M. W. COTLISS.

AUSTIN. At Smith's Cove, Digby Co., Nova Scotia, March 10th, 1876, after a short illness of croup, Ella, eldest daughter of Robert and Catherine Austin, and grand-daughter of Bro. E. W. and Sister E. A. Potter, aged nine years.

Little Ella is gone. Death claimed her for his victim. She was a good child, beloved by her companions and schoolmates. Before she died she gave evidence of her acceptance of Christ, bidding those around her bedside "good bye," telling them to meet her in the kingdom. She fell asleep sweetly in Jesus. Blessed sleep! This blow falls heavily on the family. May the God of heaven bless and sanctify this visitation of the enemy to their eternal good. Funeral services were conducted by Bro. Jared M Tozier, pastor, Bear River church. JOHN W. MCAULIFFE.

REED. In Hinesburgh, Vt., Feb. 23d, 1876, Katie E., daughter of Perry and Martha J. Reed, aged eight months and eighteen days.

This is the second time that the cruel enemy death has entered this family and rendered these parents childless. Although their grief is deep, and the stroke hard to bear, yet they look forward to the time when their little ones will come again from the enemy's land, blooming with immortality to bask in the presence of God forever. May the blessing of heaven rest upon them. Funeral attended by the writer.

WM. C. STEWART.

HAGGETT. In Pembroke, N. H., Oct. 18th, 1875, of dropsy and heart disease, Emma May, eldest daughter of Benjamin B. and Sarah E. Haggett, aged one year.

Our little Emma was taken from our fond embrace, but we sorrow not without hope, for we know that she will come again from the land of the enemy, and be made immortal to die no more. A few more pains and sighs, and we too shall be free from this world of care and sorrow. Thank God the end is near. Soon Jesus will come, and bring to life our sleeping ones. Come, Lord Jesus, and come quickly. B. B. HAGGETT.

GLIDDEN. In Corrinna, Me., March 23d, 1876, Rose Angie, youngest daughter of William S. and Rosanna Glidden, aged eleven years.

She was sick only one day and a half; thus suddenly was she cut down in the morning of life by the ruthless hand of death. May the Lord bless the dear family thus bereft, and in their affliction may they fly to the "rock that is higher than they." "How long shall death the tyrant reign?" O. S. FRENCH.

COLLINS. In Craftsbury, Vt., of consumption, Dec. 21st, 1875, Sarah A., wife of A. C. Collins, aged fifty years.

This faithful handmaiden of the Lord died in the triumphs of faith, and leaves a father, mother, husband and three children to lament her absence; but have hope in God that

Soon the trumpet blast will wake
Her slumbering dust to life again;
The bands of death will Jesus break
When on the earth he comes to reign.
Then in the arms of mourners here
Will she be gathered ne'er to sever;
And fondly clasp the loved ones dear,
To part no more forever.

A. A. HOYT.

WARREN. In Hardwick, Vt., Feb. 28th, 1876, Sarah H. Warren, aged seventy-nine years.

Our sister, though unable to attend meetings, was a faithful christian. The family have lost a kind-hearted wife and mother, and the church have lost a mother in Israel. Funeral services by Y. S. Dutton. H. B. QUIMBY.

FOREIGN NEWS.

PARIS, April 4. La Republique Francaise says that a majority of the Assembly intends to put an end to the clerical agitation and confine the priest to his proper sphere—his church—and will inflexibly repress any encroachments, whether open or disguised.

DOMESTIC NEWS.

San Francisco, April 1. The statement is authorized, on semi-official authority, that frauds on customs amounting to from $5,000,000 to $7,000,000 per year have been perpetrated here. A large proportion of the smuggling is by way of Panama, dutiable merchandise being ostensibly shipped from here to New York, and vice versa; but on the arrival of the steamer at Panama other packages are substituted containing goods answering the description in the manifest.

Montgomery, Ala., April 3. A storm has prevailed over nearly the entire State, commencing from the east and lasting nineteen hours without intermission, accompanied by unusually heavy thunder and continuous wind and lightning.

It is considered the heaviest rain ever known here, seven inches of water having fallen. Great damage was done to the planting interest. The Alabama river has risen fifty feet, and is now rising at the rate of 4½ inches per hour. No deaths are reported, but many houses were blown down.

THE new Catholic Cathedral in Boston, which was recently dedicated, is larger than the Strasbourg, Pisa, Salisbury, Vienna, and Dublin Cathedrals, being 364 feet in length, and 170 feet wide at the transept. It was begun in 1867, and though the work has been continued uninterruptedly ever since, it is not quite finished yet. The great tower will be 300 feet high, and the small one 200 feet. The pews can seat 35,000, and there is standing room for as many more. The organ is next in size to that of Music Hall. There is a child's chapel in the basement which will seat nearly two thousand.

Conference Notice.

The Lord willing, the Connecticut A. C. Conference will meet with the Church at South Windsor, Wednesday evening, April 26th, through the week, and over Sunday, April 30th. It is hoped that all the churches will send delegates, and that all who are interested in the cause, which calls us out as a people to meet the coming Bridegroom, will make an effort to come. Earth's dreary night must soon close; the hosts of sin are let loose; the darkness is great; temptations are mighty; iniquity abounds; pride stalks forth; some are drawing back, and oh how few are enduring in this fatal hour. Who, but the people with the light of prophetic truth touching the coming One, can discern the signs of the times? We are favored with this light. Graciously have its rays been scattered, and loudly are the events speaking. Fear attends the outlook from a human standpoint; but a little in the distance the eye of faith discerns the morning light of eternal glory.

Shall we falter, or grow cold? It is too late. With the truth of God as our accompaniment, and tuned by the Spirit of the divine Master, victory must soon be ours. Let the weak ones come as well as the strong; let every voice be heard in encouragement. Come in the name of the Lord.

Take the cars to Burnside Station, on the H. P. and F. Railroad, where teams will convey those coming to the chapel. The business session, if any, will be on Thursday, April 27th, at 10 o'clock A. M. O. D. WOODRUFF, Sec. and Treas.

Hoosick Valley Conference.

☞ TIME CHANGED.

The next Quarterly Session of the Hoosick Valley Conference will be held with the church at North Adams, Mass., commencing Wednesday evening, April 19th, and continue with three meetings each day over the following Sabbath. It will soon be said "It is done." We are having our last meetings; we are doing our last work. The Father by his Spirit is bringing to light and to our remembrance numerous evidences of the approaching end.

Brethren in the ministry, do come to this meeting with the light you have, that we may feed and be fed with the pure Word of God. We do earnestly hope that the churches will be represented by delegates, and as many others as can come. Do not wait to be blest at the meetings, but come filled with the Holy Spirit, to work for the salvation of others. The meetings will be held in Millard's large Hall, a short walk only from either of the depots. Those who are dwelling in God and God in them, will you pray for this meeting? H. K. FLAGG, Pres.

ADVENT CHRISTIAN TIMES.

This is an ably conducted weekly paper, edited by Elder Frank Burr, and published under the auspices of the Western A. C. Publishing Society. It gives prominence to the personal coming of Christ, the resurrection of the dead, the final destruction of sinners, and the eternal salvation of saints on the renovated earth. It also insists on a holy life as essential to an admittance into the coming kingdom. $2.20 a year. Address Advent Christian Times, 91 South Green St., Chicago, Ill.

The World's Crisis and Adv. Chris. Times sent postpaid to subscribers who will take both, at the reduced rate of $4.00 per year in advance for both papers. Address World's Crisis, Boston, Mass.

THE BIBLICAL MESSENGER.

New Arrangement for 1876.

This live monthly, now greatly improved, is well printed on excellent paper, and is a bold advocate of Bible truth. It makes prominent purity of heart, and the personal speedy return of Christ to resurrect the dead and set up his everlasting kingdom. A skillfully prepared sermon is inserted in each paper.

EDITORS: A. A. Hoyt and Wm. C. Stewart.
Corresponding Editor: Wm. Sheldon.

TERMS: Sixty cents a year. Agents wanted. Send for sample copies. Address the "Biblical Messenger," Waterbury, Vt.

The Biblical Messenger and World's Crisis will both be sent to one address for $2.60. Address all orders for both papers to World's Crisis, 144 Hanover Street, Boston, Mass.

Appointments.

☞ APPOINTMENTS MUST BE RECEIVED AS EARLY AS TUESDAY MORNING (as our paper goes to press about noon) to insure insertion for the coming week.

☞ The following RESOLUTION was passed at the late meeting of the A. C. P. Society:—

"RESOLVED, That no appointments be published in the CRISIS henceforth for persons unknown to the Editorial Board (by which is understood the Editors, Editorial Committee, and Business Agent), unless satisfactory reference shall be given.

The Committee appointed by the Adv. Chris. Association, at its last Annual Meeting, to advise with the Editorial Board "in relation to the publication in the World's Crisis of the appointments of men unworthy of recognition as preachers," having attended to the duty assigned them, recommended, and the Editorial Board have adopted, and ordered to be published, the following resolution:—

"RESOLVED, That when the Editorial Board is properly notified by any of our Churches, or Ministers, or responsible persons, by a written allegation that a certain minister, or ministers, lack moral character, that they be instructed to notify such minister, or ministers, of the information received as a reason for withholding their appointments till after a proper trial and acquittal."

All communications in relation to this matter should be addressed to the Secretary of the Board—GEO. T. ADAMS, Boston, Mass.

THE BIBLE DOCTRINE OF THE SOUL.

An answer to the Question: "Is the Popular Conception of the Soul that of Holy Scripture?"

BY CHAS. L. IVES, M. D.

Professor of the Theory and Practice of Medicine in Yale College.

This is a book of 119 pages, in which the Author discusses the above question in an interesting and able manner,—showing the material nature of, the mortality and destiny of the Soul,—A future immortality to be the special portion of the Righteous,—What the Bible teaches as to the future of the Wicked,—The intermediate state,—The Resurrection,—That of the Righteous and of the Wicked, etc.

The Author claims that the doctrine set forth,—"Honors God, exalts the Bible, insures preaching of future punishment, subverts Universalism and Infidelity, errors of Romanism, of Spiritualism and Swedenborgianism, helps in work of Missions, rightly values the body, brings Christian unity, and promotes personal holiness."

We are much pleased with this work. It is having a wide circulation. We have just received a quantity of the pamphlet edition, and can now fill orders at the following prices: Pamphlet, 25 cts. per copy; $2.25 per dozen by mail; $15.00 per hundred by express. Bound in cloth, 30 cts. per copy by mail; $3.00 per dozen by express.

THE TRUE SABBATH.

WHICH DAY SHALL WE KEEP?

AN EXAMINATION OF

MRS. ELLEN G. WHITE'S VISIONS.

BY MILES GRANT.

ISSUED

BY THE ADV. CHRIS. PUB. SOCIETY,

A NEW WORK

On the Sabbath of the Old Covenant. An investigation of Mrs. E. G. White's Visions, showing that they are not from God.

All who have accepted Mrs. White's visions as coming from heaven, or who have been led to rest on Saturday instead of the Lord's day, should read this work. Let those who live among our Seventh-day brethren send and get a number of the books to give away. If the reader has friends at a distance who have received Mrs. W.'s Visions as true, have a copy of this work sent to them.

It contains 106 pages, and we will send it at the following prices: Single copy, 20 cts.; per doz., $1.75 by mail; per hundred, $10.00 by express. AGENT.

PRICE REDUCED.

The great Map of History, twenty-two feet long, and about thirty inches wide. This valuable work, of which mention has been made in the Crisis, we now have a supply of, and will send to those who may order at the publisher's reduced price of $12.00 per copy, by express. We have them on rollers, and in book form, and can supply either way.

The best method of using the chart or map of history is to hang the frame on the wall of the room (the map being in the frame, of course), by the two hooks in the upper bar of the frame, high enough to stand, or sit, in front of it, and there examine or study it.

Students and beginners in history should occasionally look over the map in its entire length—drawn out on the wall, or tables, or on the carpet—until they are well acquainted with the entire outlines, plan and compass of the map, which embraces all history.

MY SAVIOR.

L. J. BARTLETT.

A manger cold his place of birth,—
Yet angels welcomed him to earth,—
The Savior babe of Bethlehem,
Who brought salvation down to men.

A boy of twelve, with holy eyes,
Disputing with the learned and wise,
Who wondered at the words of flame
Which burning from his spirit came.

Upon the mountains, bleak and bare,
Chilled by the winds that wander there,
By Satan tempted; yet that hour
Shines out refulgent with his power.

He calmed the sea disquieted;
On Judah's hills the thousands fled;
Walked the dark wave of Galilee,
And anguished in Gethsemane.

His dying form the cross upbore;
His limbs divine rude irons tore;
No tender hand sustained his head
When Jesus passed down to the dead.

But o'er the day night shuddering came;
The temple's vail was rent in twain;
Earth's centre shook when heavenly grace
Expired to save a guilty race.

The dawn, prophetic, brought the day,
"And Peter saw where Jesus lay";
The empty tomb, the napkins white,
The beings near in robes of light.

To die were only half the deed,
For Christ must rise as well as bleed;
And heaven receives the holy one
Till all the work of grace is done.

When from the throne his sovereign voice
Shall bid the righteous ones rejoice;
The guilty fill with awful dread,
And call from earth the mouldering dead;—

Amid the terrors of that day,
When earth and sea shall flee away;
When like a scroll the heavens are furled,
And ashes glow where once were worlds,—

My dust shall not forgotten be,
I know Christ will remember me;
Were drearest sands my place of rest,
Or swell the wave above my breast;—

His eye shall see, his hand shall trace
The secret of my hiding place;
And he shall bring me from the dead,
With life and bloom transfigured.

LAST JOTS AND TITTLES OF PROPHECY.

S. S. BREWER.

The days in which we are now living are most definitely foretold in the Holy Scriptures. The broad outlines of prophecy have long since been fulfilled, and the jots and tittles are completing the prophetic portrait in the most minute and astounding manner.

The closing of the period assigned for the "sixth angel" (Rev. 9: 13–15), we still think closed in 1841; since then we have been in the days of the voice of the seventh angel. We are now occupying the solemn season of suspense predicted in Rev. 6: 13, between the falling stars and the departure of the heavens as a scroll when it is rolled together. We are, beyond doubt, witnessing the last phase predicted under the seventh vial.*

The next event in prophetic order under this symbol is thus written: "And great Babylon came in remembrance before God, to give unto her the cup of the wine of the fierceness of his wrath." This event in the predestined purpose of the Holy One must be specially near.

We are now amid the closing moments of the Laodicean state of the church. The Judge is standing knocking at the door, making every effort that infinite love and mercy can possibly conceive, to awaken apostate Christendom and alarm a guilty world before it is eternally too late. We are now amid the financial perplexity predicted by the apostle James.

I was deeply interested in reading an article in the Boston Journal of Sept., 1873, under the caption of "Financial Terror." In that the writer says: "A menagerie in a thunder storm, or a lot of wild beasts let loose, would not have been madder or more excited than have been the men in Wall street during the panic of Thursday and Friday. . . . . The wealthiest men of New York stood in file by the hour covered with mud, with faces pale as death, and when spoken to their teeth chattered so that they could not articulate. The Stock Room was a scene of the wildest excitement; it was jammed to suffocation. As house after house went down, the announcement was received with howls that were perfectly terrific." Here was certainly weeping and howling, and since then there has been misery and perplexity, particularly among the rich men.

The gospel of the kingdom has been preached in all the world, for a witness unto all nations, and the Almighty has accomplished his predestined purpose, as written by the apostle (Eph. 2: 7)—"That in the ages to come he might show the exceeding riches of his grace in his kindness toward us through Christ Jesus." The ages that then were to come have past, and this generation is now on the eve of the great day of God's wrath.

We are living in an age when there have been "great earthquakes in divers places, and famines and pestilences, and fearful sights and great signs from heaven." We witness the fulfillment of the prediction uttered by Joel—"The press is full; the fats overflow, and their wickedness is great."

Defiance to the laws of God and man seems to be developing in such amazing rapidity, and with such brazen impunity, that it causes us to believe that we are now amid the closing moments of THE TIME of the harvest. Matt. 13: 30. The vintage appears to be ripe. The end must be near. We see the perils of the last days, predicted in 2 Tim. 3. All the peculiar phases described by the apostle are now manifested, and are becoming so astounding in their magnitude and character that it seems as if the foundation of social order was breaking up, and anarchy must ensue. O come, Lord Jesus, come quickly!

We are now living in a time of epidemical calamities, on land and water. The rapid means of transit have become fearful instrumentalities of instant death to multitudes, and prolonged, intense suffering to others. Nature is in an abnormal condition. It breeds multitudes of destructive insects and agencies hitherto unknown. One writer in the Boston Journal of 1871 said of that year: "And thus we have experienced summer weather in winter, and winter weather in summer, with the four seasons turned topsy-turvey, and end for end, mixed up in inexplicable confusion, and ofttimes the distinctive features of each and all crowded into a day." "There were storms of rain, storms of sleet, storms of snow, storms of hail, and sometimes all these in an hour; and there were storms of meat, storms of stones, siroccos, and storms of electrical fire."

We are now living amid the extremities of the symbolic image of Dan. 2, when we must expect the Almighty very soon to arise and shake terribly the earth, destroy sin and sinners, and bring in everlasting righteousness. Amen, even so, come! We are at the close of an age of unrest. Everything seems to be in a transition state. The present Satanic carnival of every species of iniquity is but the rallying of all his agencies in the closing contest of the ages, on the eve of the cremation of Satan and all his hosts. Never have the tints of the autumnal foliage indicated more conclusively the approach of winter, than do the religious, political, natural, social and financial elements the fact that we are now in close proximity with the end of this world and the immortal age so clearly foretold in the Holy Scriptures.

In conclusion, let me exhort the weary, worn, tempted and tried ones to be encouraged, obedient, faithful, and live in readiness and expectation of the crowning consummation of your glorious hope. We shall soon meet in a world eternally free from suffering, tears, groans, sorrow, sickness and death. O merciful Redeemer, hasten thine appearing, is the unceasing prayer and desire of thy waiting servant in the patience and hope of the gospel.

AS IT WAS AND AS IT IS.

A. M. SMITH.

In penning a few thoughts on the spirit of the age, I do not expect to exhaust the subject, or speak of facts unnoticed, but there can be no harm in giving it a passing notice.

This wicked world has gone through some wonderful changes in the last thirty-five years, and what wonderful strides the churches have made from their holy, pure standard of practical christian life that characterized them then to the loose and low standard of christian deportment by which they are characterized to-day. This is seen in her multiplied festivities, pride, and frivolity, that are apparent to all. The glaring contrast between the professed church of thirty-five years ago and the present is comprehended by many of the aged and middle-aged, but alas for the young! How little they know about it! How hard to make them understand but what the world and church have always lived in wedlock together, and that this present loose spirit and conduct that sway the church to-day, has always characterized it. They are so thoroughly schooled, from their infancy up, by the churches, to indulge in an endless variety of frivolous sports, such as oyster suppers, strawberry festivals, dramatic concerts, etc., conducted by the leaders, that they settle down under the conviction that this is really a part and parcel of Christianity; and that all their foolish Satanic practices have a saving influence, which tend to prepare them for an honorable membership in some popular church, where they can have a grand time, and become perfectly satiated with all the fun and frolic their carnal minds desire, flattering themselves that they will live happy, get rich, die shouting, and go up to a sky kingdom.

Thirty-five years ago I knew the Methodists to exclude ladies from their communion because they wore flounced dresses, ear-jewels and finger-rings; but as it is we find ladies covered with flounces, ruffles, ribbons, laces, costly jewelry on their fingers, wrists, neck, and fastened in their ears, with heady and high looks, draw around the Lord's table, and no one daring to dispute their rights.

As it was thirty-five years ago, I knew the Methodist people to build plain, cheap, and comfortable houses of worship, without bell, steeple, organ, cushioned pews or pulpits, and pay for them without gambling or begging; and when dedicated to God were ever after regarded as holy and sacred, and were never used for anything but religious meetings. As it is, we see them building gorgeous temples, with lofty spires and high-toned bells and organs, and every other picture of modern invention to gratify the pride of the rich who congregate within their walls, to display their finery and advertise the latest fashion.

When these massive walls are dedicated to God, the doors are thrown open for ready cash, for all kinds of carnal festivities (the pure gospel excepted), such as exhibitions, dramatic concerts, tableaux, and secret lodges of various kinds, all for money to pay for church extravagance; and scores of the brotherhood will be found at these unhallowed gatherings, while half a dozen of them will be found at the weekly prayer meeting. They would much rather pay a dollar for fun than a dime for Christ. Well, Paul speaks of just such a bogus Christianity in the last days, when they should be "lovers of pleasure more than lovers of God; having the form of godliness, but denying the power thereof." From such we are commanded to turn away. Amen.

As it was thirty-five years ago, I knew ministers to be men who were consecrated to God, living epistles, and they kept themselves unspotted from the world; having their conversation in heaven, devout, self-denying, and filled with the Holy Ghost. As it is to-day, we see many of these gloved dignitaries go dressed in fine linen, driving fast horses, faring sumptuously every day, standing in the way of sinners, sitting in the congregation of the ungodly, and eating and drinking with the drunken.

But I must close this dreadful tale, although the half has not been told. What I have said I know to be true. Certainly we are in perilous times. No wonder the world is full of scoffers and sceptics. No wonder the tide of iniquity is rising, and crime of every shade floods the world. Yet these solemn facts are predicted—found on the page of prophecy; given as signs of a better day soon to dawn.

The true lovers of Jesus never had more reason to rejoice in prospect of speedy deliverance than they have to-day. The signs of the coming of the Lord never were so clear and satisfactory as at present. The wicked were never more blasphemous and heaven-daring in their scoffing than they are to-day. The churches were never more overrun with pride, covetousness, frivolity, backsliders and hypocrites than they are to-day. The perplexity and distress among nations, especially as it relates to the Eastern question, was never more ominous to the student of prophecy than it is to-day. All these facts speak with the most thrilling assurance that we are upon the eve of beholding our King in his beauty.

For the last fifteen years I have regarded the dismemberment of the Turkish empire as the last mile post on our pilgrimage journey; and the present critical condition of that dying monster speaks in thunder tones to the waiting Bride, "Behold the Bridegroom cometh; go ye out to meet him." "Even so, come, Lord Jesus, and come quickly. Amen."

Prarieville, Mich.

DOING WHAT LITTLE I CAN.

S. B. CHILDRESS.

I am working for Jesus, and doing what little I can, by the help of the blessed Master, to bring people to a knowledge of the truth. I am determined to work while the day lasts, for surely the days of preparation are almost ended. There are many who are inquiring after truth, and knowledge is increasing. I have been preaching about one year, and what the fruit of my labor is I cannot tell; the Lord knoweth, and he will give me the reward of my labor when he comes. My companion and myself are both laboring for the cause of the Master, and hope to do some good. We do not feel discouraged when we view the future prospect, having Jesus by our side, and his Word of truth in our hand. We have to bear the scoffs of many, and be evil spoken of by many who profess to be the people of God; and we truly hope that if they are not his people they will come to repentance and a knowledge of the truth as it is in Jesus.

On the second Sunday in March we visited the people of Carroll Co., south of us, and found a goodly number of the same precious faith. We delivered three discourses; the first on the signs of the times, from Matt. 24; the second on the resurrection, and the third on the inheritance of the saints. At the close of the meeting a good deal of interest was manifested by quite a number who belonged to different denominations. We left a promise that we would return again the next month. We hope that some of the seed sown will fall upon good ground, and bring forth fruit unto the Master.

Dear brethren, we are strangers to you in this life, but it will not be so in the life to come. Allow us to claim an interest in your prayers, and all the dear ones in Jesus, that our faith fail not and that we may be enabled by divine assistance to go forth in the labor of love, and speak boldly, and testify for the Master, of his goodness and power to save, and of his speedy coming to redeem his people. We shall then all be changed, in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, at the last trump: for the trumpet shall sound, and the dead shall be raised incorruptible. For this corruptible must put on incorruption, and this mortal must put on immortality: then shall be brought to pass the saying that is written, Death is swallowed up in victory. O death, where is thy sting? O grave, where is thy victory? Thanks be to God who giveth us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ. What a blessed thought, to be made conqueror over death.

Meadville, Missouri.

THE FIERY STORM AND BEYOND IT.

In a sermon recently preached by the Rev. C. H. Spurgeon we find the thought expressed that "fire will win the day;" and this is true as far as man's works are concerned. But beyond the storm, as God's word teaches, there will be a glorious, everlasting calm. Earth will rise from her fiery baptism to bloom in fadeless beauty beneath the smile of her great Regenerator. Spurgeon holds to that himself, but we will let him describe the storm and call on others to speak of the glory that shall follow:

"It is clearly revealed in Scripture, that as the world was once destroyed by water, it will a second time be destroyed by fire. Perhaps they are correct who tell us that the centre of the earth is all a molten mass, and we dwell upon the cool crust thereof. Perhaps it may be so, that these great volcanoes are the ventilators of subterranean fires; but surely is it predestined that earth and all the works that are therein shall be burnt up, and the elements shall melt with fervent heat. Fire will win the day. Old ocean, thou mayst roll on in thy pride, and laugh at fire, but fire will lick thee up with its tongue of flame. Men, you may erect your machinery with which to protect your cities, but there shall not be a wreck of all your cities left. Like old Babel's tower, of which only a heap of dust and ruins remaineth, your pompous cities shall utterly vanish away."—Spurgeon.

"And now you may well ask in reference even to this fair visible frame work of creation. But is that all? And is this indeed in the words of the dying statesman [John Quincy Adams], 'the last of earth?'—of that earth which God made in the beginning 'very good'—from which in every age have ascended to his throne the prayers and thanksgivings of believing souls—the birth-place and the grave of his own incarnate Son? Is it, after all—yea, though it has been baptized with the Savior's most precious blood—to be reduced to perpetual ashes, or an everlasting chaos, if not perchance put out of existence altogether? And will not such an issue be the triumph of Satan the destroyer, rather than of Christ the Redeemer? It cannot be denied that just such wild notions as these have long been floating for want of better, in the common mind of Christendom, and that in some quarters the church is still taught to anticipate, as a matter of praise, the time when 'the universe shall burn, and God shall destroy his own works,' instead of those of the devil. But the idea of the future annihilation, or eternal desolation, of this world of ours, has absolutely nothing to sustain it in the analogies of nature, the deductions of science, or the teachings of Scripture."—Rev. John Lillie, D. D.

"The new heaven and earth which John saw were no doubt still future. He saw the future as if it were the present. Yet this new creation shall not be shadowy, but real—as real as that described in Genesis. The former creation passes away, and the new creation comes; new heavens, new earth, new sea. The old creation is not annihilated, but only purged and renewed. It passes away as the gold passes into the furnace, to come out purified. It passes away as the 'vile body' does into the grave, to come forth glorious and immortal, yet the same body. The 'restitution' of all things' is to do for earth and heaven what resurrection is to do for the body. What a change! What a perfection! What a holy blessedness! O when shall the day break, and the shadows flee away!"—Rev. H. Bonar, D. D.

"The first Adam lost Eden, innocence, and happiness, and dragged down with him to degradation all surrounding nature. The second Adam, who is the Lord from heaven, recalls, restores, reconstructs the lost inheritance. Therefore resurrection bodies will be perfect, pure, glorious, such as Adam's and Eve's never were, and He will raise on this earth an Eden, overspreading it with a brighter, and a lovelier, and a more lasting sunshine; and in proportion as redemption work is greater than creation work, and passion week mightier and more momentous than creation week, so will the glory of the second Paradise, and the second advent, and the approaching restitution, be greater than the glory that faded six thousand years ago. . . . Shall we meet and mingle in the rejoicing throng on that nearing, rapidly nearing day? What a blessed meeting! We shall be in the presence of our heavenly Father; kneeling at the footstool of our kinsman Redeemer; angels ministering to us, glorified men our companions; no care to cast its chill shadows upon the soul, no sting to agonize the heart; no forebodings of to-morrow, no fears for to-day; the hours of the age, like the hours of the sun-dial, measured not by shadow, but by sunshine. If that is to be the issue, what should be the lesson for us? The lesson that Peter inculcates: 'Wherefore, beloved, seeing that ye look for such things, be diligent that ye may be found of him in peace, without spot, and blameless,' at that day."—Rev. John Cumming, D. D., F. R. S. E.

ASPIRATIONS.

Our aims are all too high: we try
To gain the summit at a bound,
When we should reach it step by step,
And climb the ladder round by round.
He who would climb the heights sublime,
Or breathe the purer air of life,
Must not expect to rest in ease,
But brace himself for toil or strife.

We should not in our blindness seek
To grasp alone for grand and great,
Disdaining every smaller good;
For trifles make the aggregate;
And if a cloud should hover o'er
Our weary pathway like a pall,
Remember, God permits it there,
And his good purpose reigns o'er all.

Life should be full of earnest work,
Our hearts undashed by fortune's frown;
Let perseverance conquer fate,
And merits seize the victor's crown.
The battle is not to the strong,
The race not always to the fleet;
And he who seeks to pluck the stars,
Will lose the jewels at his feet.

REPORT OF THE NEW YORK STATE CONFERENCE.

The Third Quarterly session of this Conference was held with the church at Kendall, Orleans Co., Thursday evening, March 9th, 1876. Quite a large delegation of brethren and sisters were present at the first meeting, and the right key was sounded, when from all hearts came up the cry, "What shall we do to save the perishing?"

The following ministers were present: M. R. Miles, R. H. Bateman, W. J. Hobbs, E. F. Sergisson, Chas. P. Greenman, Jas. E. Wells, A. H. Dunbar, and Sr. L. M. Stoddard. The following churches were represented: Kendall, Martville, Ontario, Pineville, Springwater, Darien, Penfield, Lockport, and Honeoye.

The collections sent in from the various churches amounted to $10.75. Only four of the nine churches represented contributed anything the last quarter towards sending the gospel of the kingdom into new places. Brethren and sisters of New York, do we want to meet this record? We hope that at our June Conference you will give evidence in a more practical manner of your love for the truth we are called upon to proclaim to this generation. It cost somebody something to send the truth to you. You have had reason to rejoice that the tent ever came to your place; now you ought to cause some other hearts to leap for joy, by helping send the glorious proclamation of our coming King into new fields. Do not lay this paper aside and forget this duty that you owe to God and your fellows.

The order of business was as follows:—Devotional Committee—Brn. O. Spicer, D. C. Higgins, — Andrews. Business Committee—W. J. Hobbs, R. H. Bateman, Jas. E. Wells.

Voted, That the Annual Meeting of this Conference be held with the church at Springwater, in the early part of June. Elds. M. R. Miles and W. J. Hobbs were elected to represent the N. Y. State A. C. Conference in the National S. A. C. Association.

Voted, That this Conference secure a tent for the coming season, and that Brn. Jas E. Wells, B. P. Stevens, and — Crofoot, act as a committee in this matter, and report at the Annual Meeting.

The following resolution speaks for itself, and we regret that it was not acted upon immediately after the wrong was discovered.

Resolved, That in the N. Y. Conference Annual Report of 1872, wherein the term "hydra-headed Woman's Rights question" occurred, casting reflection upon Srs. L. M. Stoddard and E. S. Jennings, was a wrong, and to be regretted, and was not the mind of the Conference at that time or any time since; wherefore we pass and publish the following resolution to right the wrong then done:—

Resolved, That this Conference invite Sr. L. M. Stoddard to labor the coming season with the tent in the missionary field, in company with such other efficient co-laborers as this Conference may see fit to appoint.

The reports of ministers and churches were cheering and encouraging. Over two hundred and fifty were converted in the various churches. From the reports given, the cause of truth is rising, and bigotry and sectarianism are giving way; and, if we will be wise as serpents and harmless as doves, we can be a power for good.

We had preaching by Elds. Jas. E. Wells, from Matt. 11: 28; E. F. Sergisson, from 1 John 3: 1; Chas. P. Greenman, from Gal. 6: 7, 8; A. H. Dunbar, from Mark 7: 37; W. J. Hobbs, from John 6: 37; R. H. Bateman, from James 1: 25; and M. R. Miles, from Rom. 7: 24. Ten started to serve the Lord during the Conference. Bro. Miles and myself tarried Monday evening with them, when three more made a start.

Thus closed our last meeting for this conference year, and we all felt that it was not in vain that we met together. At our June meeting we hope to see the largest representation that ever met in conference capacity in Western N. Y. Bro. A. C. Newell could not meet with us on account of being sick. May the Lord bless him.

FROM BRO. GEORGE THOMSON.

To the Crisis family:—Dearly Beloved: As I feel that I am in a special manner a weak and dependent child of the family, duty is enjoined upon me to communicate as often as possible. Would that I were able to do so more frequently, if by so doing I might cheer the heart of one of the least of Father's little ones.

I remain in the same helpless condition, and for the information of those inquiring by letter, I will state that I am unable to raise my hand to my face, to feed, or to help myself in any way. My limbs are all drawn out of shape, and I cannot move without being lifted. It is now over three and a half years since I stood on my feet. In addition to my rheumatic troubles I am severely afflicted with the bronchitis. Lately this has distressed me very much, coughing and raising almost incessantly. But when I reflect how much worse it might be with me, O how thankful I am! Were I to be deprived of sight and could not read, of my speech and could not converse, sad indeed would be my condition. When I remember the sufferings of the Savior, of the martyrs, and of many in the household of faith, such as Sr. Weaver and others, I feel ashamed to think of or mention my own.

And oh, in the midst of all, how many blessings I have received from Father's hand. He has given me his pardoning love, the sweet spirit of grace, bearing the fruit of patience, faith, trust and hope. I think I can say with the Psalmist, "It was good for me that I was afflicted." There are elements in the economy of grace which cannot be fully tested when a person is in the enjoyment of health and prosperity in all its fulness. I once thought I understood and realized the nature and power of faith, and I admit that a christian may from an ordinary experience and the eleventh of Hebrews learn much; but oh, one needs to be cut off from all resource but God; no income from lands or estate; all gone, with no prospect of restoration; then from the deep recesses of the stricken and humbled heart that oftentimes coldly-repeated petition—"Give us this day our daily bread"—will well up in all the warmth of confidence and trust. Not when store-house and barn are groaning with supplies are we likely to understand the import of those words—"Take no thought for the morrow, what ye shall eat, or what ye shall drink," etc., etc.

The Lord has taught me many things here which I could not learn under other circumstances, or perhaps the same things more perfectly—patience, resignation, trust, sweet trust. "The Lord is my shepherd, I shall not want," is not meaningless to some; I fear it is to many.

My experience, dear brethren, resolves itself into this: I suffer much, have sweet peace within, and hope for redemption soon. Praise God!

In the letters of brethren and sisters in the paper we often meet with this statement—"The only preaching we have is the Crisis, and oh, how welcome are the letters and other articles." I know how to sympathize with those isolated ones. Let me say to such, and to all fellow-sufferers, Be of good cheer. The dear Savior is coming soon. Yes, in a little while he is coming to gather home the scattered ones, the suffering ones, the faithful and waiting ones. Then shall we sigh or suffer no more. No more tears. O praise God. Amen.

P. S.—I wish to acknowledge the following, with many thanks: Sr. Harvey Pratt (by the hand of Wm. Sheldon), $5.00. H. Zader (by same), $5.00. Bro. N. C. Newcomb, $1.00. Sister Anne Lowry, $1.00. Bro. Evan Lloyd, $5. Waupon, no name, $2.00. E. Richmond, $1.00. L. R. & M. Kenny, $1.00. [Per Ada Thomson.]

GOD'S PROMISE TO ABRAHAM.

N. M. GROVES.

God told Abraham to look east, west, north and south, and, said he, "All the land that thou seest, to thee will I give it and to thy seed forever. Arise, walk through the land in the breadth of it; for I will give it unto thee. We find as we read the word of God that Abraham never received a foot of land, but bought the field of Ephron which was in Machpelar, and the cave which was therein for a possession of a burial place.

Paul says, "These all died in the faith not having received the promises, but having seen them afar off, were persuaded of them, and embraced them, and confessed themselves pilgrims and strangers on the earth. And they that say such things plainly declare that they seek a country. But they desire a better country, that is an heavenly, wherefore God is not ashamed to be called their God; for he hath prepared for them a city." Esaias saith, A root out of Jesse shall rise to reign over the Gentiles; in him shall the Gentiles trust. And Paul says, that the blessing of Abraham might come on the Gentiles through Jesus Christ. Now to Abraham and his seed were the promises made. He saith, and not to seeds as of many, but as of one, which is Christ. And as many of you as have been baptized into Christ have put on Christ. And if ye be Christ's then are ye Abraham's seed, and heirs according to the promise.

When the fullness of time was come, God sent his own Son, made of woman, made under the law, to redeem them that were under the law, that we might receive the adoption of sons. And because ye are sons, God hath sent the Spirit of his Son into your hearts, crying, Abba, Father. Thou art then no more a servant, but a son, and if a son, then an heir of God through Christ, "whom the heavens must receive until the restitution of all things spoken by the prophets."

John says he heard great voices in heaven, saying, "The kingdoms of this world are become the kingdoms of our Lord and his Christ, and he shall reign forever and ever. And the nations were angry, and thy wrath is come, and the time of the dead, that they should be judged, and that thou shouldest give reward to thy servants the prophets, and to the saints, and them that fear thy name, both small and great, and shouldest destroy them that destroy the earth. And the kingdom, and dominion, and the greatness of the kingdom shall be given to the saints of the Most High, whose kingdom is an everlasting kingdom, and all dominions shall serve and obey him."

Here we have the promise we shall inherit the earth. God has given this promise. Paul tells us how we may inherit it, and John tells us when we shall possess it. May the Lord help us to be ready for the great coronation jubilee, when Christ shall take the throne of his father David and rule the nations. Praise the Lord! the morning is breaking when they shall come from the east, west, north and south, and sit down in the kingdom, with all the apostles and prophets, and God shall be the light of the city, and we shall go no more out forever.

THE NARROW WAY.

J. B. BESSOM.

"Enter ye in at the strait gate; for wide is the gate and broad is the road that leadeth to destruction, and many there be which go in thereat."—MATT. 7: 13.

I was thinking as I sat by the window and saw men, women and children walking to and fro, seemingly regardless of that bright morning which is so soon to dawn upon God's people, when Jesus will come and take his children home, that there are two roads in this world, and that everybody is walking in one of them. There is a gate at the beginning of each road. One of these gates is very wide, and is always open, and the path into which it leads is broad, and looks sunny and pleasant, and very many people are walking there. The other gate is shut, but when any one "knocks," Jesus stands ready to open it unto them. The path to which this strait gate leads is very narrow. People sometimes think it looks very dull and gloomy, and they turn away from it to walk in the broad way. There are only a few walking in the narrow way.

But where do these two roads end? The narrow way leads to a bright, and glorious, and happy land—a land where there will be no more pain or death; where all tears will be wiped away; where we never shall be called to part with our loved ones. But the broad road leads to a very different place. When the people reach there they will cry for rocks and mountains to fall on them and hide them from the face of him that sitteth upon the throne. There will be weeping, and wailing, and gnashing of teeth. Jesus tells us of these two roads, and he bids us walk in the narrow one; for he says, "Wide is the gate and broad is the way that leadeth to destuuction, and many there be that go in thereat."

Dear friends, which of these two roads are you traveling? Choose the narrow one at once, for soon he that is to come will come, and will not tarry.

TO HIM THAT OVERCOMETH.

A. G. BARTLETT.

What are we to overcome? The world, the flesh, and the enemy of all good? How are we to overcome? By faith in Christ's atonement, and faithful testimony to his truth. "And they overcame him [Satan] by the blood of the Lamb, and by the word of their testimony." Rev. 12: 11. "For whatsoever is born of God overcometh the world: and this is the victory that overcometh the world, even our faith." 1 John 5: 4. "Thanks be to God which giveth us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ."

What are we to gain by overcoming? "To him that overcometh will I give to eat of the hidden manna, and will give him a white stone, and in the stone a new name written, which no man knoweth saving he that receiveth it." Christ is the "hidden manna," the bread of eternal life; and by eating (or believing in him, and accepting him as our Savior) we have a living union with him, receiving from him forgiveness, sanctification, and in the end eternal life—"white stone." Such a token was given to the victors at the Grecian games, entitling them to public honors. "If any man serve me him will my Father honor." John 12: 26. "He that overcometh, the same shall be clothed in white raiment; and I will not blot out his name out of the book of life, but I will confess his name before my Father, and before his angels." Rev. 3: 5.

"A new name"—expressive of the new character and privileges bestowed on the hearer—"which no man knoweth saving he that receiveth it." The blessedness of having the love of God shed abroad in the heart, and the foretaste of coming glory in God's own presence, is known only to those who possess it. "But the natural man receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God; for they are foolishness unto him, neither can he know them, because they are spiritually discerned." 1 Cor. 2: 14. "Him that overcometh will I make a pillar in the temple of my God, and he shall go no more out; and I will write upon him the name of my God, and the name of the city of my God, which is New Jerusalem, which cometh down out of heaven from my God: and I will write upon him my new name." Thus sealing him as belonging to God, to the city of God, and to Christ who has redeemed him by his own blood, and admits him to share his glory. "He that overcometh shall inherit all things; and I will be his God, and he shall be my son." Rev. 21: 7.

When shall we possess all these things? A hundred fold in this life, and at the resurrection of the just eternal life, with all its blessedness and glory. When will the dead be raised? At the coming of Christ. "For the Lord himself shall descend . . . and the dead in Christ shall rise first. Then we which are alive . . . shall be caught up together with them in the clouds, . . . and so shall we ever be with the Lord." 1 Thess. 4: 16, 17.

When will Christ come? Says James: "Be ye also patient: stablish your hearts, for the coming of the Lord draweth nigh." Signs in the heavens, in the earth, and among the nations, tell us his coming is very near. Says Christ, "Surely I come quickly." "Amen. Even so, come, Lord Jesus."

East Landaff, N. H.

MANY will put to sea in summer weather when the breeze is steady and the tide is fair; but we must pursue our voyage when the gale is furious, and the currents contrary, and the breakers high. Many will start on the journey when the road is smooth, and the prospect pleasing, and fragrant flowers and gushing streams refresh the senses; but we must plod on, bearing the cross through summer torrents, up rocky heights, along weary wastes, in darkness and in gloom. Many will deck themselves in the soldier's dress, and muster on parade, when only the mimicry of war is to be exhibited; but we must stand to our colors, and keep our ranks, when the enemy is drawn up in battle-array, when his fiery darts hiss around us, and his impetuous charge bears down upon our lines. Yes—we must carry the cross! It has ever been the law of the Church militant. Now, as in the olden times, Christ proclaims, "If any man will come after me, let him deny himself and take up his cross and follow me."—Newman Hall.

ARE YOU CONVERTED?

Reader, there is a great question before your eyes. Try to answer it. The Bible says, that without conversion there can be no salvation. Now are you converted?

You attend church perhaps. You go to the Lord's table. You like good people. You can distinguish between good preaching and bad. You think Popery false, and oppose it warmly. You think Protestantism true, and support it cordially. You subscribe to religious societies. You attend religious meetings. You sometimes read religious books. It is well; it is very well. It is good; it is all very good. It is more than can be said of many. But still this is not a straightforward answer to my question, Are you converted, or unconverted?

Have you been born again? Are you a new creature? Have you put off the old man, and put on the new? Have you ever felt your sins and repented of them? Are you looking simply to Christ for pardon and life eternal? Do you love Christ? Do you serve Christ? Do you loathe heart sins, and fight against them? Do you long for perfect holiness, and follow hard after it? Have you come out from the world? Do you delight in the Bible? Do you wrestle in prayer? Do you love Christ's people? Do you try to do good to the world? Are you vile in your own eyes, and willing to take the lowest place? Are you a christian in business and on week days, and by your own fire-side? Oh, think on these things, and then perhaps you will be better able to tell the state of your soul. Are you converted?

Reader, I beseech you not to turn away from my question, however unpleasant it may be. Answer it, though it may prove you in the wrong and expose your fearful danger. Rest not, till you know how it is between you and God. Better a thousand times find out that you are in an evil case, and repent betimes, than live on in uncertainty and be lost eternally. Are you con-converted?—N. Y. Witness.

SATAN.

This personage is represented in the Scriptures as the head of an empire of evil, and possessed of vast but limited powers. He injects thoughts of evil into the mind of Christ, and transports his person from the wilderness to the pinnacle of the temple, and thence to the top of a mountain; so much we are explicitly told; but he cannot compel Christ to the least wrong act, nor awaken in his heart the least unholy desire, nor push his body down from the dizzy height to which he had transported it.

The record of Christ's temptation shows us also the inestimable value of the Holy Scriptures. The one only weapon with which he conquered Satan was "the sword of the Spirit, which is the word of God." He seems to have had no doubt of the absolute authority of those divine records, with which his memory had been so fully stored that it instantly furnished him the exact help he needed in every case. He lays the whole stress of his reply to Satan on a single word; and his arch-enemy has not the impertinence to accuse him of a vain trust in "verbal inspiration." He does this twice—"Man shall not live by bread alone;" "Him only shalt thou serve." This he did as our pattern. The passages he quoted belong to me as well as to him. The sword he wielded fits my hand as well as his.

Suppose, when Satan tempted him to look to him for universal empire, he had cited his Father's promise, "Ask of me and I will given thee the heathen for thine inheritance," etc., or any other promise belonging exclusively to him as the Messiah—the victory thus won would have been just as complete, but it would have been his, not mine. But when I find him conquering as a man, and for men, and in a way which men can imitate, I feel that in contending with the same foe I am not so much waging a battle as pursuing a victory.

O, the reason why we are so often overcome by temptation is that we so poorly obey our Lord's command, "Search the Scriptures." If we had them in our minds, in our hearts, at our tongues' end, as he had, we would oftener conquer as he did.—N. Y. Advocate.

WET SUNDAYS.—Christians are often apt to murmur when a wet Sunday comes, and they are debarred from the spiritual delight they feel in going up to the house of the Lord. But let them remember the wonderful providences which are brought to light by wet Sundays. How many careless ones have been led within the church door for shelter, and there have been unexpectedly arrested by a text or sermon, and been afterwards able to date their conversion from that very rainy day.

NO CHARACTER can be lastingly injured by a fearless discharge of duty. Calumny or prejudice may obscure it for a time, but in the end it will shine the brighter for the clouds which obscured it.

The CRISIS is devoted to the exposition of all Bible truth; especially the doctrine of the immediate, personal coming and reign of Christ on the earth; holiness of heart; the unconscious state of the dead; their literal resurrection, and final destruction of the wicked.

MORE OF GOD.

More of God! "show us thy glory,"
As one pleads in sacred story,
Reveal thyself to us.

More of God! O for that breath
That quickens, saves the soul from death,
Thy Spirit breathed in us.

More of God! O living Spring,
One drop shall cause our hearts to sing,
O let us drink of Thee.

More of God! To us be given
A crumb of thee, thou bread of heaven,
O let us feed on thee.

More of God! 'Tis thee we need,
And still our longing souls shall plead,
For more and more of thee.

More of God! The boon is given,
We find our rest, our joy, our heaven
In more and more of thee.

THE ADVENT WATCHWORD.

By the Rev. E. H Bickersteth, Vicar of Christ Church, Hampstead, Eng.

Some of the benefits and advantages gained by a study of the prophecies of the Old and New Testament may be enumerated as follows:

A deeply rooted faith in the fidelity of God to his promise. The trial of the church's faith is greater year after year, and decade after decade, as the time is protracted. But in this very trial is wrapt up the high honor which her Lord has put upon her. Man was ruined by distrust; he is saved by trust. The calm dignity of faith elevates the soul as nothing else can do. The night is long and dark; but we are children of the day, and are clad in the armor of light. "He that will come, shall come, and will not tarry."

A large-hearted view of God's dealings with his church. We are prone to be wrapt up in our own little circle of friends and work. The personal and ecclesiastical interests with which we are in closest contact, are in themselves so important, and touch so nearly the honor of our Lord, that the danger is great of forgetting, or at least of under-estimating, the vast world-wide progress of his kingdom in every nation under heaven. Whatever form of church government we may consider to be shadowed forth as being most in accordance with the mind of the Spirit in the presiding angels of the seven churches, it is, nevertheless evident, as the visions proceed, that all other distinctions are lost in the stupendous conflict betwixt heathendom and Christianity, between Babylon and Zion, betwixt the dragon and the Lamb. Who is on the Lord's side? who? rings through the Apocalypse. The prophetic student breathes the spirit of the creed: "I believe in the holy Catholic church."

Encouragement to trample the world under foot. "In the world ye shall have tribulation," is written as with a sunbeam across these pages. The triumph of the cross in the enthronisation of Christianity on the throne of the Cæsars in the fourth century, is no sooner described in the prefigurations of the Apocalypse than the bright prospect is clouded over! The woman, after the birth of her first-born, is driven into the wilderness. The Lord's people are the Lord's hidden ones. Wave follows wave, storm succeeds to storm. The furnace is heated seven times. Because iniquity abounds, the love of many waxes cold. But there is a heavenly manna the world knows not of; they feed upon it who hold fast the prophetic word, and hear above the Babel sounds of earth, the clear, unfaltering music of their Redeemer's voice: "Behold, I come quickly." Blessed are they.

Entrance into the very mind of Christ himself. "The Lord," prays St. Paul for the Thessalonians, "direct your hearts into God's love and Christ's patience." Our translation, The patient waiting for Christ, narrows the thought too much. The patience of Christ embraces all that marvellous forbearance which waited for four thousand years, till the fulness of the time was come, ere he descended to our fallen world on his mighty mission of mercy, all that long suffering which in the days of his flesh endured the sorrows of humanity and the contradiction of sinners from the manger to the cross, and all that continued expectancy at the right hand of the Father, till his bride shall be perfected and his foes be made his footstool. Our highest felicity must be in sharing Christ's mind; that is, in desiring that all which Christ desires should take place when and as he pleases. This we shall only attain as we sit at his feet and listen to his prophetic word.

Elevation of our thoughts to things unseen and eternal. The whole of man is only sanctified by the whole revealed truth of God. Being created in His image who inhabits eternity, we cannot help forecasting the future. If we do not cherish divinely inspired hopes, we shall be imagining a thousand vain things, which, instead of bracing, enervate the soul. He who holds fast the sayings of the prophecy of this book, grasps God's thoughts regarding that which is to come. This is in itself a dignity nothing can transcend.

And when all our hopes centre and cluster round the person of our adorable and shortly returning Lord, nothing so purifies the heart and elevates the life. It is a beatitude which must be felt to be appraised aright.

The watchword, when uttered the second time, is closely connected with the reward of the believer according to his works. "Behold I come quickly; and my reward is with me, to give every man according as his work shall be."

Prophetic study is work, and may be the hardest and fruitfullest of work; but we must be careful not to give ourselves to it for its own sake instead of the Master's glory. And this Scripture rings out its warning clearly and faithfully, that the day will try and declare every man's work, of what sort it is. It persistently asks, what daily cross are we bearing for Christ? It reminds us of visiting the fatherless and widows in their affliction, and keeping ourselves unspotted from that world which can exert a carnal influence in the library and the student's chair as well as the ball-room and the stage. It rehearses again and again the words which the Son of man, on the throne of his glory, shall address to those on his right hand: "I was an hungered and ye gave me meat; I was thirsty and ye gave me drink; I was a stranger and ye took me in; naked and ye clothed me; I was sick and ye visited me; I was in prison and ye came unto me."

The promised glory is so great and ravishing that present duties may easily seem insignificant. Will the trumpet shortly sound? shall I be caught up to meet my Lord in the air? shall I be an assessor with him on his throne? shall I judge angels? Then can I now, if a child, slave over my hard, dry lessons; if a servant, be so diligent in such menial work; if a mechanic, be so anxious to turn out well-made articles; if a teacher, be so patient with dull scholars; if an author or a preacher, put so much toil into that I write or utter? Is it not cramping, degrading, vexatious?

Now this watchword scatters such thoughts to the winds. The Master is coming—coming quickly to take account of his servants—who says, "He that is faithful in that which is least is faithful also in much, and he that is unjust in the least, is unjust also in much. If, therefore, ye have not been faithful in the unrighteous mammon, who will commit to your trust the true riches? and if ye have not been faithful in that which is another man's, who shall give you that which is your own."

But the question recurs to many, Can I pursue with the same zest the ordinary routine of work, much of which is seed sowing for results, which can only be developed in future years, if I believe Christ may return to-night? Some prophetic students feel so confident that certain events must first precede and usher in the second advent, that they deny that Christ may return to-night. They say, Babylon has not yet fallen, nor has the church passed through the great tribulation, nor has Israel been restored to her own land; all these and others connected with them must imply a lapse of at least some years; and they all intervene betwixt us and the longed for return of our Master.

For myself, I should be very jealous of affirming that any period, how short soever, must intervene betwixt our present position and the descent of the Lord from heaven with the shout of the archangel and with the trump of God. Of that day and hour knoweth no man.—Christian Herald.

"WATCHMAN, WHAT OF THE NIGHT?"

JAMES L. THORNBERRY.

Paul writes (2 Tim. 3: 1)—"This know also, that in the last days perilous times shall come." The last days here spoken of cannot mean the last days of the Jewish economy, for that institution had already waxed old, and as a religion was gone. That the great angel, mighty and strong, will some day swear that time shall be no more, is certain. That Jesus will come again to save his people, and in flaming fire take vengeance on them who know not God, and obey not the gospel, is certain. This seems to have been prominent in the mind of the apostles.

As the Messiah's first advent was the great theme of the old Scriptures, so his second advent seems to be the great theme of the apostles. The apostle to the Gentiles referred often to the second advent with joy. Certainly the present routine—birth, life, suffering and death—is not the ultimatum of the great drama of human existence. God our Father certainly will bring order out of the confusion of this state; virtue will be rewarded, and sin punished. The dead, small and great, shall stand before God, be judged in justice, and receive according to their work. Both love and justice demand it.

Many have set a time for his advent and failed, and have by this produced prejudice. The great point is to be ready. The blessed One said—"Watch; for in such a day as ye think not the Son of man cometh." "As a snare shall it come on all the world." Then let us be ready. If we are ready to meet Christ, we are ready to die. The Savior gives some signs for the wise, and says—"As it was in the days of Noah, so shall it be at his coming." These were then enjoying sensual pleasures. Paul says, "Perilous times shall come"; and proceeds to say they shall be boasters, proud, money lovers, unthankful, etc.; having a form of religion, but denying the power thereof. That is, they will deny the gospel, which is "the power of God unto salvation." In 1 Tim. 1, Paul says, "Giving heed to the doctrines of devils"; that is, doctrines of demons, or consulting the spirits of dead men; plainly spirit rappings. He says that before Christ comes the man of sin will be destroyed. Ever since the Ecumenical Council (in 1870), when the Pope declared his infallibility, he has been going down.

We have signs also in the raging of infidelity; in what is called science. The devil certainly is loose. It is now time to heed the cry—"Come out of her, my people." The stirring, confused state of sects shows that the systems of men are to give way to the Bible.

Let all the lovers of Jesus' word give up opinionism, read the pure testimony, take it as it reads, obey it as it reads, distribute freely to the poor, and watch.

BIBLE READING.—NO. 2.

ABIDE IN ME.

J. R. COOPER.

"If ye abide in me, and my words abide in you, ye shall ask what ye will, and it shall be done unto you." —JOHN 15: 7.

It is, beloved, whilst joined to him in communion, that he, the blessed Lord, begets prayer in us, the answer to which is sure. Hence a single word spoken while the soul is in communion, will have more power than volumes of words when the soul is out of communion. Ps. 119: 11, 105, 129: "Thy word have I hid in my heart, that I might not sin against thee." "Thy word is a lamp unto my feet, and a light unto my path." "The entrance of thy words giveth light; it giveth understanding unto the simple." If you place a man in a dungeon where every ray of light is excluded and all is total darkness, he could not possibly drive the darkness from that room by any efforts of his own. The only way darkness can be expelled is by admitting light. Open a shutter to that dungeon and admit the light, and where will the darkness go? It will go where the darkness in a sinner's heart goes when he receives the word of God by faith. "The entrance of thy words giveth light."

1 John 1: 6, 7: "If we say that we have fellowship with him, and walk in darkness, we lie, and do not the truth; but if we walk in the light, as he is in the light, we have fellowship one with another, and the blood of Jesus Christ his Son cleanseth us from all sin." It is only as we abide in Christ, in his words, that we sin not. "Whosoever abideth in him sinneth not." Not that we have no sin; for that would imply absolute perfection, and would be contrary to the word. "If we say that we have no sin, we deceive ourselves, and the truth is not in us." What the passage says is, that "whosoever abideth in him sinneth not." The word "abideth" is the chief one in the sentence, and determines its meaning; namely, that abiding in him (in communion) absolutely we do not sin. The evil root and Christ alike are in us. If our souls are joined to the evil root, sin will be the fruit; but if to Christ (in communion) we shall not sin. This is the plain statement. The two Scriptures must be taken together. In him is no sin; and whosoever abideth in him sinneth not." The truth is, that joined in communion to him, from him can come no sin. The branch cannot bear fruit of itself. A tube, for example, is useless to give sweet water unless applied to the sweet spring. Let it be applied to a bitter spring, and it will give forth bitter water. So if the soul be applied to the flesh, or walk according to the flesh, the result will be corruption. If, in realized communion, it will be applied to Christ, the result will be good fruit.

Rom. 6: 7: "For he that is dead is freed from sin." Now every believer is judicially dead, and buried, and is risen again, and is now, by faith, and in spirit, on the other side of the grave, and God hath raised us up together (with Christ) and made us sit together in heavenly places in Christ Jesus. Eph. 2: 5, 6. There is a vast difference between what we are in God's sight, in Christ's, and what we are in our state and experience. The believer's standing before God is one thing, his state another, and his experience another. What is our standing before God, in Christ? The believer is "complete" in Christ; he is "perfect" in Christ; he is "without spot or wrinkle or any such thing" in Christ. He has been washed and made clean and is whiter than snow in Christ. That is the standing of every believer in God's sight.

If I look into a mirror I see myself; but if I look into God's looking-glass, his word—the perfect law of liberty—I see Christ. And what he is in holiness and completeness before God, I am. I shall never get into the kingdom on the ground of my own growing sanctification, that is on the ground of my growth or improvement in my own life or character; and for this simple reason, in order to appear in God's presence, I need an ifinite perfectness, and this I can find nowhere but in Christ. In him I get all that I can possibly need, or that God can require. I need to be perfect, and Jesus is my perfectness; I need to be righteous, and Jesus is my righteousness—a perfectness, a righteousness which puts me in the very presence of divine holiness. In Christ we have a divine casket; and in it we find four jewels of inestimable value, wisdom, righteousness, sanctification and redemption.

Heb. 8: 13, 14: "For if the blood of bulls and of goats, and the ashes of a heifer sprinkling the unclean, sanctifieth to the purifying of the flesh, how much more shall the blood of Christ, who through the eternal Spirit offered himself without spot to God, purge your conscience from dead works, to serve the living God." See also Heb. 10: 1, 2, 3, 14. A Jewish worshipper was never perfect, for it was impossible that the blood of a bullock or goat could ever give a perfect conscience. He could never say that his conscience was perfectly purged, because he had not yet reached a perfect sacrifice. With the christian worshipper, however, it is different. He has, thank God, reached his moral end. He has arrived at a point, so far as the state of his conscience is concerned, beyond which it is utterly impossible for him to go. He cannot go beyond the blood of Jesus Christ. He is perfect as to his conscience. As is the sacrifice, so is the conscience that rests thereon. If the sacrifice is perfect, so is the conscience; if imperfect, so is the conscience. They stand or fall together. Nothing can be simpler, nothing more solid. It is not a question of what I am; that has been fully and forever settled. I have been found out, judged, and condemned in myself. "In me, that is in my flesh, dwelleth no good thing." I have got to the end of myself, and there I have reached the blood of Christ. I want no more. What could be added to that most precious blood? Nothing. I am perfect, as to the state of my conscience. I do not want an ordinance, a sacrament, or a ceremony, to perfect the condition of my conscience. To say so, to think so, would be to cast dishonor upon the sacrifice of the Son of God.

The reader will do well to get a clear and firm hold of this foundation point. There are many believers who do not enjoy the unspeakable blessing of a perfect conscience. They look in at self, and not finding aught there to rest upon—who ever did?—they think it presumption to be perfect in any respect whatever. But thank God, we are not talking about perfection in the flesh, through any process of improvement, moral, social, or religious. To look for perfection amid the dust of the old creation were a hopeless task. And yet many are thus engaged, they are seeking to improve man and mend the world; and yet they actually deny the simplest aspect of christian perfection, namely, perfection as to the state of the conscience in the presence of God. The entire matter hinges upon the question of sacrifice.

What has God found in this sacrifice? Perfection. Well, then, that perfection is for you, anxious one, and you should at once and forever, enjoy it. Remember, it is not a question as to what you are, nor yet as to what you think about the blood of Christ. No, the question is, what does God think about the blood of his own Son? This makes all clear. Is it clear to you? Can you, now, rest in it? Is your conscience set free, by being brought into contact with a perfect sacrifice?

It is while we are walking in the light of God's word, as he is in the light, that we have fellowship, and the blood cleanseth from all sin. Not when we are walking in darkness. It is while we abide in Christ, and his words abide in us, that our prayers are answered.

Let me illustrate our standing before God. Suppose A. T. Stewart, the Merchant Prince, of New York [since deceased], should come to Rochester, to establish a large dry goods house with a capital of $25.000.000. He comes to me and asks me to accept an equal partnership with him in said house. Suppose I should say to Mr. Stewart that I had several times during my life attempted to carry on business for myself, and each time I had utterly failed and was now involved in debt to the amount of several thousand dollars, and, therefore, had not a farthing to put into the firm he proposed. He says to me, "never mind your failures or your debts. I will pay all your indebtedness and make you an equal partner with me, if you will only accept the position, and enter into the business with your whole heart. I know all about you, just what you are, and all about your failures. I am not doing this for my own benefit, but for yours." I readily accept the position, and writings are drawn and executed, making me an equal partner, with a capital of $25.000.000. The name of the firm is A. T. Stewart & Co. Now what is my standing as a member of that firm in the commercial world? Is it not first-class? Certainly it is. A. T. Stewart, having a world-wide reputation as a business man, his standing is of the highest order. I, being one with him, in that firm, stand on the same platform he does. I can now go to New York or Europe, and purchase a million dollars worth of goods, on credit, in the name of that firm. Why is this? Is it because I have proved myself to be an expert, sound business man? No; but because the head of the firm is a sound business man, and able to meet all demands brought against the firm. I could not, perhaps, after my many failures, buy ten dollars worth of goods in my own individual name.

Now God, my heavenly Father, knew all about my failures to meet the demands of his holy and just law, and he saw I was a ruined man, and he so loved me as to send Jesus Christ, his Son, down here to earth to take me into partnership with him. I put all my sins, all my iniquities, all my debts into the firm, and Jesus paid them all, and gave me in exchange his righteousness, his perfection, his standing before God. Therefore whatever he is, I am; "because as he is, so are we in this world." 1 John 4: 17. We are as near to God as Christ is, for we are made nigh by his blood. We are as dear to God as Christ is, for Jesus says, "Thou hast loved them as thou hast loved me." John 17: 23. Now just as I should buy all goods in the name of the firm, A. T. Stewart & Co., and not in my own name, so now we go to the Father in the name of Jesus, because now we have a right to use that name. Being baptized into that name, we have put on Christ, and therefore when we come to the Father in the power of that name, he will answer our prayers, for it will be as though Jesus were asking himself, and he never asked the Father for anything without his prayer being answered. Therefore "If ye abide in me and my words abide in you, ye shall ask what ye will, and it shall be done unto you."

When I commenced this article I had no idea of writing what I have above, for my mind was on an entirely different train of thought; but I hope the Holy Spirit has directed me in the matter, and I pray that it may be the means, in God's hands, of setting some burdened heart free from bondage. For "if the Son therefore shall make you free, ye shall be free indeed." John 8: 36.

JUDGING.

M. TRASK.

"Brethren, if a man be overtaken in a fault, ye which are spiritual restore such an one in the spirit of meekness; considering thyself, lest thou also be tempted."

Paul entreats them to deal mildly with a brother that hath slipped, and to bear one another's burdens. According to the rule of christian love already mentioned, if any one among you, through ignorance, unwatchfulness, human frailty, plausible temptation, or enticing examples, fall into an erroneous notion or immoral act, I beseech those of you who are more advanced and confirmed in knowledge and grace, to do your utmost in a meek, patient, and tender manner. Convince and reclaim him to repentance, and restore him to his proper place in the mystical body of Christ.

Ponder seriously your own weakness and sinfulness, and the danger of meeting with and falling before temptation ourselves, and be not too severe upon others. Instead of imposing heavy yokes on the one hand, or refusing any offices of kindness on the other, sympathize with, pray for, and assist one another; and, by lightening and relieving one another under burdens, grievances, and trials, practice Christ's great commandment of loving your neighbors as yourselves. For if any of you have high thoughts of your own abilities to resist temptation and to do great things in religion, and so judge and find fault with others, you deceive yourselves. But to prevent your being forward to judge and censure others, and deceive yourselves, let every one of you narrowly search and try his own principles, motives, ends, temper and behavior; and if they be thus found correspondent to the truth of the gospel, and your profession of it, you will have great matter for joy in what God has done for you through Christ.

"But why dost thou judge thy brother? or why dost thou set at naught thy brother?" Why should any of us judge, condemn, and think hard or enviously of our christian brethren about matters which are in themselves indifferent, when all of us shall in a little time appear before the judgment seat of Christ, where all our own faults will be known? The servant of the Lord must not strive; but be gentle unto all men, apt to teach, patient. "Follow peace with all men and holiness, without which no man shall see the Lord." "Give none offense, neither to the Jews nor to the Gentiles, nor to the church of God." "Wherefore let him that thinketh he standeth take heed lest he fall."

Beloved brethren and sisters, let us strike for fulness in Christ. Let others do as they may. We will serve the Lord with a full purpose of heart. Soon, very soon our probation will run out; then shall we be found in our rags, finding fault with our neighbor because he is not doing as we think he ought? Let us set a godly example for others to follow, and leave the result with God. How much need we have of more charity.

A gentleman was passing a house where a little boy was cleaning out the door-yard. The gentleman saw how well the work was done, and wanted to get the little boy to clean his door-yard. The little boy made answer, If I keep my own door-yard clean, I will have all I can attend to. Let us see if our own hearts are clean, then we will not have time to search our neighbor's. God bless us all.

LOVE ONE ANOTHER.

C. DAGGETT.

Love is the fulfilling of the law. We are to love the Lord with all our hearts, and our neighbor as ourselves. By this shall all men know that we are Christ's disciples, because we love one another. How can we love God whom we have not seen, if we love not our brethren whom we have seen? "In this the children of God are manifest and the children of the devil. Whosoever doeth not righteousness is not of God, neither he that loveth not his brother." John says—"This is the message that ye heard from the beginning, that we should love one another. Not as Cain, who was of that wicked one and slew his brother, . . . because his own works were evil and his brother's righteous." The Cain spirit still lives, and it is taking possession of all that have not made a full consecration to God; that have not laid all on the altar. For all who have done this the Lord owns, and blesses with his free and full salvation and free Spirit. When people make a whole sacrifice, the Lord knows it, and owns and blesses them as he does not those who refuse to make the sacrifice.

Like Cain, that same envious and jealous spirit rules in the hearts of many, and if they do not kill they will hate in their hearts, and that is murder; for Jesus says, "He that hateth his brother is a murderer, and no murderer hath eternal life abiding in him." The Bible tells us not to marvel if the world hate us; "but we know we have passed from death unto life, because we love the brethren"; and "he that loveth not his brother abideth in death."

How can we tell when we love God? 1 John 3: 17—"Whoso hath this world's goods, and seeth his brother have need, and shutteth up his bowels of compassion from him, how dwelleth the love of God in him?" So he tells us what kind of love; not to love only in tongue,—that is, to just tell them we love; but in deed and in truth; that is, to administer to their wants,—feed them if hungry, clothe them if they need it. If you love to do it, you may know that you love them, and have done what is pleasing to the Lord. Whatsoever we ask of God we receive, because we keep his commandments, and do those things that are pleasing to him. "And this is his commandment, that we should believe on the Son of God, and love one another, as he gave us commandment. Beloved, let us love one another; for love is of God; and every one that loveth is born of God."

We are living in the last moments of time, and one of the ruling elements of the day is hatred. It reigns everywhere—in families, and in all kinds of society; and in churches it scatters and divides. It is also among the nations, and it will gather them to battle for the last great day. It separates husbands and wives, children and parents; and the worst of all is, it gets into the hearts of professors, and they will bite and devour one another, and if not stopped it will take all but the very elect. We are living in a time when the foolish virgins are hating the wise, for they have oil in their vessels, and light in their path; and it is shining more and more, and will until Jesus comes. How true it is that the evil servant is saying in his heart, "My Lord delayeth his coming," and is beating the true servant who is preaching that the Lord is coming. Those who are preaching his coming, a preparation, and the signs and fulfillment of prophecy, have the Lord with them in power; he lifts them above the world, men and devils. He will honor and glorify them with himself, and they will love God and one another; for they love to do his will and rescue all they can from this doomed world.

The Lord help us to love in word and in deed, and love to obey God and keep his commandments, like Noah. He preached the truth, if people would not believe; and he will get his reward—eternal life, and a home in the kingdom when Jesus comes. Let us pray for and love one another, and do the whole will of God.

HERE IS ANOTHER.

G. W. STETSON.

A few weeks since I sent you an extract from the learned Dr. Mede, on the controversy between Jesus and the Sadducees, concerning the resurrection, in which Mede points out the force of the Savior's logic; viz., that Abraham, Isaac and Jacob are dead, and not alive; and to-day I send you another from Olshausen's Commentary on the New Testament, as translated from the German by A. C. Kendrick, D. D.

The comment is on Rom. 6: 1-4. (Vol. 3, pp. 592-595.) "THE BELIEVER IS DEAD TO SIN." "What shall we say, then, in this state of things (as set forth in chapter 5)? That is, since justification through faith in the redemption by Christ, in its specific operation, is essentially the sanctification of believers, shall we, therefore, yet think of continuing in sin? The apostle then prosecutes the refutation of this error in such a manner, that the principal idea of the section, the vicarious atonement of Christ, to the collective body, always continues in the foreground, and forms the substance of the argument. . . . Many construe the doctrine of justification as allowing them to live on quietly in sin; as if Christ would make a man blessed with sin, which yet is itself unblessedness, and not from sin. . . . The apostle proposes the question, . . . whether sin could be continued in, in order to let grace have its full power? He answers negatively by designating believers as those who are dead with respect to sin, who cannot therefore live in it any more.

"This idea of believers being dead Paul carries through to verse 11, and in such a manner as to regard the death of Christ not merely as a symbol of the death of believers, but as a real event in them of which, through faith, they are partakers, as also of his resurrection. Here . . . Paul conceives and applies the vicarious office of Christ. He is mankind; what occurred in him occurred virtually in all; in him are all dead, have all suffered death for sin; in him are all risen again, and have received the new life (i. e., believers). The history of Jesus, therefore, is a living, abiding history, since it is livingly repeated in every one. (1 Pet. 2: 24.) . . . .

"The Pauline idea doubtless is, that our Lord, in those words upon the cross, 'It is finished!' declared the work of atonement and redemption to be accomplished not merely for himself, but also for all believers of all times, so that whoever believes in him as surely died with him,* and with him rose again. In proof, . . . Paul appeals to the consciousness of his readers with regard to their own experience. They had gone through (he says) in baptism the death, nay, the burial of Christ with him, as also the awakening to a new life. (Note, by Ruckert—'The apostle is not saying here what christians have done at their baptism, but what has been done to them in baptism.') In this passage, also, we are by no means to refer the baptism merely to their own resolutions, or see in it merely a figure, in which the one half of the ancient baptismal rite, the submersion, merely prefigures the death and the burial of the old man; the second half, the emersion, the resurrection of the new man. We are rather to take baptism in its interior and spiritual character, as a process in the soul. That which was already objectively fulfilled on and in the person of Jesus, the same is through him in faith appropriated subjectively to man; he experiences the power as well of the sufferings and of the death, as of the resurrection of the Lord. (Phil. 3: 10.) Accordingly this efficacy can only be ascribed to the baptism of adults, and in their case coincides with regeneration. . . . .

"Buried with, is only a stronger expression for (thanatos) death. Burial withdraws the dead person entirely from view, AND IS EQUIVALENT TO ANNIHILATION."

[Note by G. W. S.—If such be the fate of "the old man" in the believer's case, where shall "the old man" of the unbeliever appear? ☞ The italics are Olshausen's.]

Edinboro, Pa.

* The old man is not to be gradually sanctified, but must die as a sinner, as Luther aptly says: "Flesh and blood abideth ever and ever unclean, until they fetch shovel strokes upon it;" i. e., until it is dead and buried. So "we must scourge the old man and strike him on the face, pain him with thorns, and pierce him through with nails, until he boweth his head and giveth up the ghost."

BROTHERLY LOVE.

The duty of brotherly love is imperative. We are to "love as brethren," as brethren of the same family, or as christian brethren. To be "kindly affectioned one to another with brotherly love," or in love of the brethren, and to be "of the same mind one toward another," is to answer Christ's prayer, "That all may be one." The measure of Christ's love to us, is the measure of our love to the brethren; as the measure of the Father's love to Christ, is the measure of Christs love to us. "As the Father hath loved me, so have I loved you;" and this is my commandment, that ye love one another, as I have loved you." So important is this holy affection, that should we "give all our goods to feed the poor, and our bodies to be burned," and have it not, "it would profit us nothing." Its possession is one of the strongest evidences of our love to God. "He that loveth God, loveth his brother also," and "he that loveth not his brother whom he hath seen, how can he love God whom he hath not seen?"

This is the badge by which true christians are to be distinguished. Some are distinguished by wealth, or learning, or fame, or country, or color, or office, or sect. Military men and distinguished officials, are known by some peculiar insignia. Members of secret associations are known by some badge of their order. But "brotherly love," by which christians are distinguished, scorns all these distinctions, and forces the world to say, "See how these christians love one another," for "By this shall all men know that ye are my disciples, if ye have love one for another."

Brotherly love is frequently periled by the spirit of selfishness—advancing our own personal interests at the expense of others. This spirit is inborn in human nature, requiring no ordinary degree of grace to eliminate it. It was seen in the apostles before Pentecost. Two of the brethren were so anxious for official position, that they employed their mother to electioneer for them. But the fire of Pentecost—perfect love—so burned this spirit out of them that it was never seen afterwards.

When grace is on the ebb, self-seeking is at the flood, and its overflow sweeps away charity. This spirit is not rare in the ministry. Place seeking is the curse of these times. Just as though the church of Christ is the place where the "loaves and fishes" are to be dealt out to men of brains without piety; men who scorn to "save souls with fear, pulling them out of the fire," as not sufficiently dignified; men who claim to be teachers, not humble, toiling soul-savers. In our own church it is seen in electioneering for the episcopacy, editorships, agencies, secretaryships, or anything under heaven but soul-saving in the trenches. In the conflict, brotherly love is slaughtered. A Pentecost to such men would be a god-send to the church. It would rid them of unholy ambition, and fill them with a love which would "esteem others better than themselves."

Brotherly love is periled by ignoring personal responsibility. The church is a copartnership. No person can of right, claim to be a partner, receiving his full share of the profits, while he assumes no personal responsibility. There are thousands who join the church, share its profits, and claim their full proportion of its honors, and yet feel as little personal responsibility in sustaining the holy cause as the man in the moon. The church claims more than mere membership; she needs the consecrated purse, the sanctified tongue, and the purified heart of each member of the firm. Any disposition to act contrary to these high and holy demands creates friction, engenders strife, encourages indifference, fosters disunion, and will, if persisted in, put an end to charity.

Brotherly love may be promoted by cultivating in ourselves a Christly spirit. As Christ comes in, this earthly, devilish spirit selfishness—goes out. When Christ is fully formed within, no place remains for self-seeking. We sink self and elevate Christ. No matter what becomes of us if Christ can be glorified. With many it is; "No matter whose interests are periled, provided mine are secured; no matter who sinks, if I float; no matter who goes down, so that I go up." Such a spirit is as unlike Christ, as Christ is unlike Belial; and if persisted in, perils every spiritual intent, and puts an end to brotherly love.

If we cannot fight with the army, let us not create insubordination in the ranks. The forces of hell are united; we cannot afford to be otherwise. The alien hosts of earth are upited against Christ and spiritual Christianity; surely the saints must be one. Let us follow after charity, seek peace, and pursue it evermore.—Christian Standard.

ALL CLASSES WARNED.

God has never suffered any destructive judgments to be sent upon men without first giving all exposed to those judgments timely warning, using all necessary means to convince the intellect and impress the heart with the importance of making speedy preparation for the coming events. The principles requiring this action on the part of God are universal in the divine economy, and have been applied in every individual case in the past. We cannot suppose, therefore, that God will bring the last judgment upon rebellious men, the most destructive and awful found in the catalogue of divine executions, without first providing all the means necessary to give all classes in all places warnings timely and sufficiently definite to give all an opportunity to find the prepared shelter from the approaching storm.

When such judgments have been approaching in the past, God has invariably made it a specific and imperative duty of his church to be used instrumentally in giving that warning by echoing the prophetic voice, calling the public mind to consider God's testimony as evidence of their approach. God never executed a judgment upon any class of men without especially requiring his servants, who were so situated that they could reach that people with their warnings, to especially and faithfully notify them of their danger and the way to escape it. It is also a fact which should seriously impress us that God has not, in a single case recorded by Inspiration, justified or sheltered from the storm a single servant who neglected or refused to give the required warning. If God's watchmen fail when the sword is coming npon the people to warn them of approaching danger, they shall be destroyed, and the watchmen shall be accountable for their blood.

This is a subject of awful importance to God's servants. We feel an agony of earnestness upon this subject when we consider that God has, as we view the matter, called all his watchmen of this generation to echo the most sublime and inspired forewarnings ever given by Heaven to perishing men. Those so faithfully sounded by Noah, Lot and Moses related to typical and temporary judgments, but this embraces all of them, as the grand antitypical, judicial finality in God's government of humanity.

These arguments cause us to feel that we, as an associated people, whose denominational existence was produced by our profound convictions that God had made it the specific and imperative duty of his people of this generation to warn the world that the last judgment is impending, should continue to make this duty the central theme in our christian labor. We feel that God is causing this judgment warning to be sounded at the present time, from this fact, that, as we near the end, the instrumentalities to carry the message to different classes are being rapidly multiplied, and the interest in the subject wonderfully intensified. Learned men of world-wide reputation, who have never before been known as advocates of the speedy advent of Christ, are many of them now testifying to the vitally important truth that the great prophetic lines of our world's history are rapidly converging to a focal point just in the future, when the divine administration of human affairs must experience its final change. The unparalleled and astounding events in the physical, moral and political world, for the last decade, has greatly changed the thought and faith of many of these men relating to the incoming events of the immediate future.

We quote below from an article written by one of the most influential Bishops of the American M. E. Church:—

PROPHECIES FULFILLING.

BY BISHOP SIMPSON.

"Peter talked of the nearness of Christ's coming, and said the day was at hand. He knew the day of Christ would come; he said it was at hand. He appears to have lived under the impression that that day was, in comparison with human life, very near. 'What manner of persons ought ye to be?' He pressed on his audience that, as Christ was coming, they ought to be always ready. And he predicted that men would say, 'Where is the promise of his coming? for since the fathers have fallen asleep, all things remain as they were; the sun rises and sets, the seasons change as they used to, there is the same succession, and no modification.'

But Christ is coming to be honored in those who love him, and to take vengeance on them that obey not his gospel. And there is a power in this thought that men scarcely estimate.

About 1843 some men fancied that the day of Christs personal coming must be very near; and those of you who remember that period know what a wonderful influence fell upon the minds of men. They did not fully believe in it, and yet there was the thought, 'I wonder if it is possible!' and the possibility that Christ might be about to make his appearance on earth made men look at signs and interpret mysterious phenomena as if they might be precursors of that time; and very many adopted a better course of life under those impressions, because they took in the great and valuable thought, although they were mistaken at the time. But the day will come, and it will come as a thief in the night. The heavens shall pass away, and the elements shall be dissolved, and then shall come the new heavens and the new earth, wherein dwelleth righteousness; but the day may be very near.

When Jacob was about to die, he called his sons around him and said, 'The sceptre shall not depart from Judah, nor a lawgiver from between his feet, until Shiloh come.' There was the first indication of the time; it was to be when the tribeship of Judah was about to give way; when the nationality of the Jewish people was about to fall. And now, how strange! They were conquered by the Romans. And at the time of the birth of Christ there went out the decree that all the provinces of the world, as it was called, should be taxed, and the Jews were enrolled among the Romans at that time; and the very day Joseph and Mary arrived at Bethlehem to give in their names, to be enrolled as part of the Roman empire, Christ was born.

Thus the sceptre was just departing, and a lawgiver was going, when Jesus came. Who could foretell such a time but God alone? At the time the prophecy was given, Rome had no existence. Such a people had never been heard of—such a government never anticipated; and yet, the very time that government was to lay its hands to mold this people as one, Christ came so wonderfully, born of a virgin in Bethlehem of Judea, the place the prophecy foretold, coming as if by accident, just at that time, and at the very time that prophecy had declared Shiloh should come. . . . .

Then there was Tyre, whose merchant princes did the shipping of the world. The prophet saw in vision that she should become a rock for the fishermen to dry their nets upon, and that her timbers were to be carried away. To-day that once-flourishing city, the Queen of the East, the centre of commerce, is a miserable village; the old, crumbling buildings are on the edge of the sea, and the place is scarcely regarded. Wherever you go through the world you will see the hand of God in the fulfillment of prophecy. . . . .

Then, again, there are prophecies which told of the rise and power of the opponents of Christianity, that no man had previously dreamed of, such as the Mohammedan and Papal power. The prophet Daniel saw them rising as beasts of magnitude and power, given to them for a time, times, and half-time (Dan. 7 : 25; 8 : 14; 12 : 7); but the very days were named when destruction should come upon them, and, for the last hundred years, men of God have been calculating that somewhere about 1866 the Papal power would be broken; and the prophet saw that the power should be broken without hands. Who can forget the mysterious circle in which we have been living for the last few years? Who can fail to see the wonderful changes that have taken place? God's power has been moving over the earth, and among the nations. At the very time when the Pope had his own infallibility proclaimed, and he sat as God in the temple, immediately afterward the temporal power was swept away without a single battle.

This happened in 1870, only four years from the time when the old commentators, who have been sleeping in the dust for generations, had looked forward to, and said, 'about that time it shall be.' The Mohammedan power is following fast after it. Turkey has been called 'the sick man' for years past. Scarcely a new mosque is built, and there is very little sign of life. Christianity is laying its hand on the East; and there are men living to-day who shall see Christian worship in the mosque of old Saint Sophia, and songs that were once offered to Christ will be sung again.

If all this is so, is not Christ very near us? He is working in our midst, in our land, and in our day, and the nations are obeying him. The prophecies that are yet to be fulfilled are just as sure as any of the predictions that have been already fulfilled. Christian, be of good cheer. Raise your eyes to heaven, and trust in God. He is in the world. He steps on the mountains, and they smoke; he walks over the valleys, and they bloom; he holds the elements in his hands, and they do his bidding. Trust in him, and he will be a wall of fire round about you.—Christian Herald.

LEXINGTON.

The meetings in Lexington, Mich., have become very interesting. Though the traveling is bad, the house is crowded every night, and often many are unable to get even standing room. The interest is said to surpass any that has been there for fourteen years. Lexington had come to be considered one of the hardest places in the State for revival work. Several efforts had been made with feeble success. Many church members were strangely mixed up with the world and its pleasures, causing the unconverted to think it was no advantage to be a professor of religion. One church was in the habit of having dances, and other secular amusements, for pleasure and profit. Apparently, Satan had but little trouble in keeping religious interest at a very low ebb in this town. He was carefully rocking professors to sleep in the cradle of carnal security, while they were destitute of present, true christian experience.

With Bro. Wright, we visited all the hotels, saloons, stores, shops, and other places of business, the jail, and most of the dwelling houses, conversing with all on the subject of salvation by faith in Christ. Only one family refused us the privilege of praying, and that was a church member. The Lord blest us very richly while engaged in the visiting. We were thus enabled to get at the hearts of the people, and help them to seek Jesus. We find it makes a vast difference whether we go to them personally, with kind, earnest entreaties to accept Christ as their Savior, or talk to them in general terms by sermons and exhortations in a promiscuous audience. It requires special individual efforts to reach people at the present time. It is like "pulling them out of the fire;" compelling them, by love-efforts, to come to the Supper of the Lord, so freely prepared for all hungry souls.

We have a prayer-meeting each evening at seven o'clock, preaching at half-past, followed by an inquiry meeting, closing about nine o'clock. We also have a meeting in the afternoon, from four to five. Important work is done in the inquiry meetings. These are daily increasing in interest and power. About twenty have started in the service of the Lord during the last twenty-four hours, and many more are almost persuaded to be christians. One prominent gentleman, who had been a bold, skeptic, disbelieving in a God, is now a happy, praying man. His wife is also converted, and they are rejoicing together in the blessed hope. We visited this man's family, and prayed with them some days before they were converted, but he was not present at the time. He said to us after he was converted, "It is well I was not there, for I should not have allowed you to pray; not because of any disrespect to you, but because I was unwilling to have any thing so foolish done in my house." The people who have known him are astonished at the change. He and his wife now take an active part in the meetings.

Quite a number of the converts are heads of families. Strong men are bowing at the feet of Jesus to obtain pardon and purity. Between fifty and sixty have started in the service of the Lord, yet, apparently, the work is only well begun. We leave to-day (April 10th) for Boston, but the meetings will be continued every day and evening under the direction of Bro. Geo. W. Wright, the pastor, who is a very faithful laborer in the vineyard of the Lord. We expect to hear of blessed results. We have seen no better prospect any where this year, for a sweeping revival, than now exists in Lexington. Pray that Bro. Wright may be wonderfully blest and prospered in the good work of leading the people to Jesus.

"UNLAWFUL THING."

Each particular party, association, sect or denomination, usually adopts or enjoins certain rules or regulations, which are considered lawful, or proper by that body of people, and things opposed to these are deemed unlawful, or improper. It is usually considered unlawful, or disorderly, to do or say any thing opposed to the interests of the party to which one belongs, no matter how much it may benefit others outside of his sect, or association. This is natural, or in harmony with the carnal mind, and only the pure Holy Spirit of God can remove it from the human heart.

It will be remembered, that on a certain occasion some of the disciples met the Savior, and made a report of their doings. Among other things, they spoke of meeting some one who was at work in the name of Jesus, but, said the disciples, "he followeth not us, and we forbad him, because he followeth not us." The Master replied, "For bid him not; . . . for he that is not against us, is on our part."

It is to be presumed that human nature is now as it was then, and will lead to similar results. To those disciples, it seemed unlawful for any one to be at work for Jesus, who did not follow them, but the divine Master rebuked that Spirit. It was a bit of carnality, or sectarianism. Of course we may expect to see the same spirit manifested at the present day, but it should not be encouraged. It is to christianity what a wart is on the human face, a defect, not pleasant to behold. It mars the beauty of the possessor.

It would be considered "unlawful" for a member of one political party to show any sympathy for the other side, or vote their candidate, even though he was most fully satisfied he was the best qualified to fill the office. So, a sectarian man would consider it "unlawful" for a member of his denomination to go to work with another, to help on a revival, because the converts might join where the meetings were held, and in that case, his own denomination would not be enlarged. If one is only converted to a party, or sect, why, then, of course, he will seek to build up that denomination, and whatever does not advance the interests of that body, will be considered "unlawful" by its sectarian members. Such would not think it proper for different denominations to unite in a series of union meetings to save sinners.

Not long since, where we were holding revival meetings, a minister of another denomination was desired to unite in the work. He refused, on the ground that it would be giving sanction to some points of doctrine, which he did not believe; because he knew we thought they were taught in the Bible. Had he united with us, probably some of his sectarian brethren would have accused him of making a "compromise," unless he had come in and made it a point to expose what he believed to be our heresy; but would he have been acting wisely to do the latter, provided he wished to unite in leading sinners to Christ?

A contention, or cross-firing, on doctrinal points in a revival making, would be pretty sure to break it up if begun, or to prevent its commencement. The first, and most important thing is to get a sinner to come to Christ, and that is best accomplished by union meetings, where every true christian can take hold unitedly to help rescue the perishing. Afterwards, the young converts can search the Scriptures, to find what doctrine they teach, and be assisted also by those competent to instruct them.

When one is unsectarian, and at work only for Christ, instead of a party, or sect, then he can labor freely any where with all the friends of Jesus. It is lawful. And if he find others at work to accomplish the same object, though believing a little different on some doctrinal points, he will not forbid them, or refuse to assist them in their good work of trying to save the perishing. We are too near the coming of Christ to be seeking to build up any party interests. Let us do all in our power to get people ready to meet Jesus.

NEW HYMN AND TUNE BOOK.

At a meeting of the Advent Christian Publication Society held April 17th, 1876, it was voted, that the Society publish a new Hymn and Tune Book, not to exceed 200 pages, and that the following brethren be a committee to arrange and prepare said book for publication: J. Hemenway, S. G. Mathewson, and A. W. Sibley.

Those persons having hymns or tunes that they would like to have inserted in the new hymn book are requested to forward the same to the Business Agent of the Society—Bro. G. T. Adams—immediately, and he will send them to the committee.

PREVAILING.

When speaking of the "little horn," that was to have great power, and "wear out the saints of the Most High, and think to change times and laws," Daniel says: "They shall take away his dominion, to consume and to destroy it unto the end;" and in the same connection he says, this "little horn" "prevailed . . . till the Ancient of days come. The question arises, How can the "little horn" lose his dominion, and at the same time be prevailing? This seems like a contradiction of terms; and if we find both actually taking place at the same time, it will be a remarkable occurrence, affording very strong evidence that the prophecy is of divine origin, as no one would guess out any such results, so apparently contradictory. The one who gave the prophecy, certainly read the future, as we now read the past.

Let us look a few moments at the strict fulfillment of these prophecies. They are both to be fulfilled just before the coming of the Son of man. First, the dominion is to be taken away, a short time before the end of the present dispensation. This is already done. The 20th of Sept., 1870, the last vestige of temporal power, or dominion, was taken from the Pope, and the Italians have declared it shall never be restored. November 1st, 1870, the Italians issued the following decree: "All the political authority of the Pope and the Holy See is abolished, and will remain so." This part of the prophecy appears to be fully accomplished.

Second. At the same time, when the dominion is taken away, it is to be prevailing. To prevail is to spread, or extend influence. We have only to look to this country to see this part of the prophecy literally fulfilled. The Papal influence is spreading, or prevailing in a remarkable manner in the United States. Thus we have both the prophecies, so opposite, being fulfilled at the same time. These are bright tokens that our great King is about to set up his kingdom, that is to "stand for ever." Its possessors will never be dispossessed, for the prophet Daniel was instructed to say, "the kingdom shall not be left to other people." Babylon was left to Media, and Persia, Media and Persia to Grecia, Grecia to Rome, Rome and all the earth "to the saints of the Most High;" but they will have no successors. They will hold it during their life-time, which is eternally. Praise the Lord for such a "blessed hope."

SHOCKING FIGURES.

Says the Southern Presbyterian Review:—"The government statistics for 1871 may well cause every honorable man to hang his head with shame, and may well fill every patriot's heart with alarm. They are as follows. Let them be pondered by every lover of his country:

Salaries of all ministers of the gospel..	$6,000,000
Cost of dogs..............................	10,000,000
Support of criminals......................	12,000,000
Fees of litigation........................	35,000,000
Cost of tobacco and cigars................	610,000,000
Importation of liquor.....................	50,000,000
Support of grog shops.....................	1,500,000,000
Whole cost of liquor......................	2,200,000,000

And these are the facts in this 'enlightened' nineteenth century and in these United States! One might infer from them that we are fast becoming, if not already, a nation of drunkards. And then consider this country's estimate of the gospel ministry, the ministers of all denominations costing a sum, less by millions than the very dogs of the land?"

Can a nation prosper, when wasting money so lavishingly for things which only serve to ruin health, home and happiness? This whole nation may well be represented by the prodigal son, wasting his goods in riotous living. If time lasts, it may soon be no better off than the prodigal among the swine. Its prosperity may prove to be one chief cause of its ruin. It has become proud, arrogant, and manifests a spirit quite like that of Nebuchadnezzar, when he said: "Is not this great Babylon, that I have built?" The Lord cannot smile on a nation after it has become corrupt, and refuses to be governed by the pure principles of christianity. The corruption of men in high places is now most notorious. Startling facts are coming to light almost daily. The papers are crowded with the accounts of the dishonesty and wickedness of prominent public men. The nation is fast being turned over to Satan, and the word of the Lord, justice and righteousness are fallen in the streets, with no one to help them up, and give them support. This is no fiction of the imagination, but the sober truth.

HUMAN OR DIVINE.

Was the sacrifice of Christ human or divine? Was he composed of two kinds of flesh, mortal and divine? A READER.

In Christ was a union of the human and divine. The flesh was human, the spirit divine. He had but one kind of flesh. In him was a union of the divine and human natures. These two natures were not two beings, but the two were blended in one person, as the nature of the father and mother are united in their son. But in the latter case two human natures are united. Sometimes the nature of the father prevails, and sometimes the nature of the mother is most prominent. But the two natures are not two children, one of which may live when the other is dead. So in Christ the two natures are blended, but he resembled his Father—God—more than his mother Mary. This was because the divine nature was the ruling element in his life, by means of which the human was kept in subjection.

Christ, the second Adam, died as truly as did the first Adam; but God raised him from the dead." Acts 4 : 10. The apostles teach very plainly that the Father raised up his Son from the grave. After Jesus had been raised from the dead and returned to the Father, he says: "I am he that liveth, and was dead; and, behold, I am alive forevermore." Rev. 1 : 18.

THANK THE LORD.—Let us all thank the Lord that so many have made a sacrifice to send "our paper" to new readers. The results already known are heart-cheering. Let us take hold of this blessed work with more earnestness than ever. Let us deny ourselves for the benefit of others. The more we sacrifice for Christ and his cause, the richer the results. Let us spare no effort that can be made to save others.

WHO WILL HELP?

The proposed new Tent for our Pittsfield (Me.) Campmeeting and Mission work is now finished, and as we have promised to pay for it the first of May, we now make an earnest appeal to all who feel like helping. It is to be used for mission work in the eastern part of Maine, and wherever the Lord may seem to direct. The balance needed besides what is pledged is about $125. Will not our brethren and sisters make up this amount by sending at once, either in cash or pledges, that we may be able to fulfill our promise, and thus have a first-class tent for our campmeeting and to use through the tenting season as the Lord shall direct? Ever so small an amount will help. Please let us have a prompt response to this call. Direct to Jer. Carr, South Albion, Me.

JER. CARR, Chairman of Camp and Tent Meeting Committee.

REQUEST FOR PRAYERS.—Sr. Zelia Libbey, well known to the brethren and sisters in and out of Canada as a faithful worker for Jesus, is now in feeble health, being afflicted with disease of the kidneys, and dropsy about the heart; and she requests the earnest prayers of the children of God, that she may be raised up, if it be his will and for his glory, that she may have a little longer time to work for the Master. Her address is Milby, P. Q. L. C. MCKINSTRY.

FROM BRO. B. SPAULDING.

Brn. Editors:—I am here in Aroostook at work in the vineyard of the Lord in my usual way, reproving, rebuking, exhorting, comforting and instructing as I have opportunity. I have attended an Advent Conference at Washburn, in the Crouse schoolhouse. We had a blessed good meeting. It began good, and it was good all the way through; union, harmony and brotherly love prevailed. There was no strife nor controversy; none of the outside questions which trouble our churches came up. All were free, and about all gave their testimony to the truth.

There is a good company of brethren and sisters in this place. The Advent doctrine was taught there and took deep root before any other doctrines had taken root. They have but little preaching, and yet they are well informed, and would not suffer in comparison with our city churches without it. It is a new country, but they have good farms and comfortable houses. There is a good field in towns around here for me to labor. I feel it is the place for me. I am seventy-six years old. My greatest infirmity is in my feet, which are partly paralyzed.

A few words to the brethren scattered abroad. We live in perilous times; iniquity abounds, and the love of many waxes cold; knowledge increases, and signs there's no mistaking proclaim Messiah near. Let your lamps be trimmed and burning, and your wedding garment on. Soon he that shall come will come, and will not tarry.

Now, brethren, stir up each other's minds, walk together as heirs of the grace of life; be pitiful, be kind, be courteous, bear each other's burdens, help each other's joys, and so fulfill the law of Christ. Think and let think; speak and let others speak; be honest in your judgment of what God means in his Word. Don't make a hobby of any of the outside questions; have your own views, and let others enjoy theirs; don't be over-anxious to establish your own views; salvation does not depend upon any of our peculiar theories. Salvation depends upon our repentance for sin, and forsaking it, and believing in Jesus Christ. Having yielded to these conditions, get the best light you can, make the Bible your rule of faith and practice, and let others do the same. Remember we have not got to the end of the Bible. Every jot and tittle of God's Word will be fulfilled—literally fulfilled.

Washburn, Me.

THE Bible contains more true sublimity, more exquisite beauty, more pure morality, more important history, and finer strains of poetry and eloquence than can be collected from all other books, in whatever age or language they may have been written.—Sir Wm. Jones.

THE TRACT FUND.

THE ADVENT CHRISTIAN PUBLICATION SOCIETY, at a meeting on Springfield camp-ground, August 11th, 1875, voted to raise Two Thousand Dollars for the free distribution of Tracts the ensuing year; and they invite the help and co-operation of all lovers of the Lord and of his truth, in the furtherance of the good cause. The times are ominous of coming events, and admonish us to diligence in the Master's work. The Lord is at the door, and what we do must be done quickly. Let the contributions be prompt, hearty, and liberal. The Lord will reward the liberal giver.

Correspondence.

From Bro. L. B. Cummings.

Dear Crisis:—Last summer the Seventh Day Adventists pitched their tent in this place, and it had been so long since I had had the privilege of going where I could hear anything about the coming of the Lord that I attended the meetings. They preached a great many things I loved to hear. They at last brought up the Seventh Day theory, and tried very hard to convince the people that they were constantly breaking God's commandments by working on the Seventh day and keeping the First day. After conversing with them on this subject considerable, and reading their works, I partly believed they were right. I had got into a backslidden state, was rather indifferent, but found the Savior had not left me entirely. His Spirit was still gently whispering—"Come to me." I made up my mind from this standpoint to start anew in the service of the Lord. I began keeping the Seventh day, and praying constantly and earnestly to God to lead me into all truth. I had the Review lent me, and tracts, and Mrs. White's Visions, and a great deal of reading matter.

The "Visions" of Mrs. White began to open my eyes, and I asked myself, Is this of the Lord? Oh God, I am in darkness; do, I pray thee, bring me into the light! Let me know the truth. I then began to go to my closet to pray to Him who will answer prayer whenever we come to Him in earnest, and the Lord knew I was in earnest. I began also to search the Scriptures, like the Bereans, to see if these things were so. I was in great darkness and distress; but very soon the light began to dawn, and, oh my God, can I ever praise thee enough! What joy and peace I received! About this time I went to Lowell, and found an Advent society there. They were holding meetings. I went. How happy I did feel that once more I had got out of bondage into the glorious liberty of the gospel. The brethren here sympathized with me, for some of them had been in the same place.

My business has called me to Lowell considerably this winter, and I have become somewhat acquainted with Eld. Phetteplace and other brethren. The Lord permitting me, I shall be there more. They are having glorious meetings. The Spirit of the Lord is with them, and sinners are coming to Christ. To my mind the whole matter of the Seventh Day is very plain, and I feel perfectly at rest on the subject. I have no fears that it will ever become the mark of the beast, as taught in Mrs. White's Visions. Jesus is my all. In him is all fullness. I love him all days alike, and he is able to save to the uttermost all that come unto him. Bless the Lord, oh my soul, for this glorious light, and for hearing my prayer when in darkness!

Friends of Jesus, be careful and not be led away by divers and strange doctrines. The enemy is busy, and our only safety is in keeping close to the Lord. Hoping and praying that others may be brought to see the light, and put all their trust in Jesus, who alone can save, I remain truly yours, trusting in Jesus.

Milford, N. H.

From Sr. C. E. Gierlow.

Dear Brn. and Srs. in Christ:—Owing to the diseased condition of my eyes, it is a long time since you received any communication from me. I have been afflicted with amaurosis for some four years, which the physicians say is likely to result in total blindness, at any moment. This, however, does not give me much uneasiness, for so long as God has anything for me to do, he can prolong my sight. It is difficult for me to write, and I cannot read long without pain.

I have not forgotten you, my friends, in Lowell, New Bedford, Mass., Augusta, Me., and many other places where I have sojourned during the last twenty years of my life. I cannot often address any of you individually; so I trust I shall be excused for taking this medium through which to express my sincere regard for you all, and to ask you to write me, and let me know your prospects for time and eternity. I have to ask you, my dear Bro. and Sr. H. P. W., of Chicago, to excuse me (for the reason I have given) for not replying to your very welcome epistles of last autumn. Please let me hear from you again. And you, my dear friend, Mrs. Marion B., of Mansfield, Ohio. I wrote you some two months ago, but have received no response. Lastly, my dear Mary C., Augusta, Me., I owe you a letter. Please excuse me, and write again.

You will be pleased to hear that I am giving Bible readings, on Sunday afternoons, at the Hall of the Young Men's Christian Association, of this place. An allusion to one of these readings was given in the Crisis not long since. But the report of it, as presented to that paper, was not quite correct. I did not say that the great coming struggle would "not effect this country," nor that we were "living under the seventh wrath," but under the "7th vial" of Rev. 8. Hundreds of people of the different denominations together with their ministers, attend these meetings, and appear to be very much interested. The latter treat me with great courtesy and politeness, giving notice of the readings to their congregations, and telling them to attend. I am asked many questions which are calculated to bring out the great truths of the Bible. One of the most prominent members of the Episcopal church, of which my husband is pastor, gives me his support by taking me in his carriage to and from the meetings, and remaining through the same. He does not quite agree with our views, but never opposes me in public.

I expected to meet with a good deal of opposition from the people, but am happily disappointed. Reporters from this place and Louisville, Ky., always give the readings a favorable notice, and the people say, "We wish you to continue them."

Our subject is the speedy coming of Christ and the restitution of all things. I believe God has called me to this work, and I feel greatly blessed in doing it. Pray for me that I may be faithful to the end, and that the seed sown may take root, and bring forth much fruit unto eternal life. Your sister in hope of redemption when Jesus comes.

New Albany, Ind.

From Sr. N. A. Purrington.

Dear Brn. and Srs. in Christ:—As I have been a reader of your valuable paper for twenty years, and a subscriber nearly fifteen years, I thought perhaps a few lines might be interesting to its readers.

I prize it next to the Bible, and hail its coming with joy and gladness, as it comes from week to week laden with such rich letters from the Editors, and Brn. and Srs.; those who are looking for our blessed Lord to return to earth again, and restore it to its Edenic beauty. Our loved ones who are now sleeping in the dust of the earth will come forth then, never to die.

Last spring my companion was taken suddenly sick, and the cruel enemy, death, laid him in the grave. But he fell with the armor on, and I expect, if faithful, to meet him in the morning of the resurrection, in that land where death can never come, and the inhabitants will never say, "I am sick." The cares of this life press heavily upon me, but I look beyond this vale of tears, trusting in Jesus, knowing that when he comes his own soft hand shall wipe away tears from off all faces.

Hear the prophet Isaiah: "Thy dead men shall live, together with my dead body shall they arise. Awake and sing, ye that dwell in dust: for thy dew is as the dew of herbs, and the earth shall cast out the dead." Let us all be faithful, that we may at last receive a crown of life that fadeth not away.

Bath, Me.

From Julia M. Colten.

Dear Editors of the Crisis:—As God has put it into the mind of some precious friend to send us your valuable paper, I must here send many thanks. We appreciate it very highly indeed. It truly comes filled with good tidings, and it is all the preaching we get.

We moved from Genoa two years ago, and we find the more we talk to the people the more darkness they show. I often think that if I could get some tracts, and distribute them, it might do much good. Oh, that some one who can give meat in due season would come this way and proclaim the gospel in its purity. We have been trying to read and learn the truth by ourselves for twenty years; but we are of that "poor" class whom Jesus said "Ye have always with you."

When we were in Genoa we often had Bro. and Sr. Marshall McCullock, and others, to preach for us, but those good times have gone when we could make a pilgrim home for God's children. Nothing would please us better now than to send you the pay for your paper, but it is impossible. We will toil on, and still look for Him who will give abundantly when he makes up his jewels. Yours in hope of eternal life when Jesus comes.

From Bro. E. McCullock.

Dear Brn.:—The light and truth is spreading in this place as never before. We have calls in all directions to come and preach upon the great themes relative to the nature of man, and the coming and kingdom of our Lord and Savior; and many are receiving the truth and boldly defending it. The cause in Sparta, Marrow Co., is advancing, and noble hearts are embracing the truth as it is in Jesus. We expect to see still greater works in that place, as our brethren and sisters spare no pains to get the truth before the people. There seems to be a willingness to hear and receive it. We expect to go into another new field in a short time to do battle for God and his truth. The Lord is still blessing us greatly in Nevada. Last Sabbath evening two prominent men with their wives united with our church, making sixty additions since the beginning of the year. "Still there's more to follow," as quite a number more have decided to unite with us. Pray for us.

Nevada, Ohio.

From Bro. H. S. Mitchell.

I thought I would inform the readers of the Crisis what the Lord is doing in St. George, Me. I came to this place in November, by invitation of Bro. N. Andrews, to hold some meetings; and the Lord commenced to move upon the people in the first meeting, and has continued to do so until some forty have been converted and reclaimed, and I have baptized thirty-two, and others are to go forward soon. We have organized a church, and there are thirty-seven members. We have reason to praise God for his loving-kindness toward the children of men.

By urgent request of the church at St. George and Rockland I have consented to become their pastor, preaching the first and third Sunday at Rockland, the second and fourth at St. George. My P. O. address will be St. George, Me. The Lord is at work, blessing the church and people at Rockland. Pray for us that he will keep us in perfect peace and waiting for his coming.

Liberty of Worship in Spain.—The attitude of the Roman Catholic clergy of Spain in the recent elections is very clearly shown by a letter sent by the bishops of Catalonia to their clergy who had consulted them as to the course they were to pursue. The bishops replied very succinctly to the following effect:

That liberty of worship is condemned in the 77th, 78th, and 79th propositions of the Syllabus of the reigning Pontiff, the immortal Pius IX.; that no Catholic can vote for this disastrous liberty, nor send, by his vote to the Cortes, those who are determined to establish such liberty of worship in Spain; that we are bound in duty to employ every legal means in our power to drive from the Assembly and Senate all who cherish such a design; and that we must have recourse to every legitimate and honest instrumentality at our disposal to secure that the Spanish people shall be represented in the legislature only by men who, setting aside all political opinions, are firmly resolved to re-establish, and, in case of need, to defend religious unity in our dear native country.—National Protestant.

SWIFT—AKINS. In Sandy Hill, N. Y., March 31st, 1876, Mr. Merritt Swift, of Fort Ann, N. Y., and Miss Clara C. Akins, of Sandy Hill.

Obituaries.

Scott. Sr. Mary E. Scott, wife of Bro. Amos E. Scott, died in Tekousha, Calhoun Co., Mich., March 29th, 1876, aged forty-three years.

Her funeral services were held in the Methodist church at Burlington. As the family were some of the first settlers in the place, a very large concourse of people were in attendance to listen to words of comfort from 1 Thess. 4: 18. Sr. Scott embraced the Savior and the "blessed hope" some nineteen years since, and was, by the writer, buried with Christ in the likeness of his death at that time, since which she maintained her christian integrity to the end of her mortal life. She died in hope of a blissful immortality at the return of the Life-giver; and although sorrow and sadness broods over the bereft, yet they mourn not as do others without hope. May the God of all grace render to this afflicted family unspeakable consolation, and may this stroke of Providence tend to rivet their affections more than ever on things heavenly and eternal. Discourse by the writer. A. N. Seymour.

Manning. Dr. Wm. C. Manning died of confluent small pox in Weld, Me., March 28th, 1876, aged about sixty years.

The subject of this notice experienced religion and embraced the Second Advent faith in early life, and preached the same two years. Previously he had become a skillful physician, and he yielded to the solicitations of the people to resume the practice of medicine. He practised with success in Stoneham, Me, and other towns, and the last two years in Weld. His nature and general deportment were such that his enemies were few and his friends numerous. He raised up a family of two sons and two daughters, who are acting well their part in the great drama of life. By this dispensation a wife is bereft of a kind and affectionate husband, the children of a kind father, and the community of a skillful physician, a good citizen, and a christian. His widow and two daughters are now sick with small pox, and in their terrible bereavement and calamity ask the prayers of God's people. E. S. Lamb.

Knapp. In Colebrook, N. H., March 30th, 1876, Fanny Chandler, wife of Joseph Knapp, aged seventy-nine years.

She went down like a shock of corn fully ripe. Both she and her husband were converted early in life. Soon after they were joined together in holy matrimony they joined the Methodist church, and have been not only living members, but consistent christians up to the present time; and like the primitive Methodists were looking for the blessed hope of the coming of the Lord. She leaves a husband, and a uumber of sons, and a large circle of friends to mourn her loss. The aged sire wept as he looked upon her for the last time; and when they moved slowly away, leaving him behind, being too feeble to go, he wept aloud. It was his last fond look upon one he had cherished for fifty years. May the Lord bless him in his declining years, and fully prepare him for the everlasting rest. D. N. Chadsey.

Downs. In Woodford, March 24th, 1876, Mr. Isaac Downs, aged fifty-two years.

Deceased had never made any profession of religion previous to his last illness. A few weeks before his death he felt that he was a sinner, and began to read the Bible, in which he found that Jesus had died for him. In conversation with him he confessed his faith in Jesus. His prayerful utterances were—"Lord, have mercy"; "Wash me in the blood of the Lamb." May we not hope that he who listened to the prayer of the publican, and the dying request of the penitent thief, also heard the dying prayer of our brother? Funeral attended by the writer, in the A. C. Chapel.

W. O. Higley.

Green. In Butler, N. Y., of apoplexy, Bro. Griffin Green, aged eighty years.

Bro. Green enjoyed uncommonly good health for a man of his years up to within four days of his death, which was sudden and unexpected. He leaves Sr. Green, who is in very poor health, with numerous children and friends to mourn his sudden departure. May the grace of Christ be their strength now and ever. We tried to comfort them from the words of Paul in 1 Cor. 15: 19. He died as he lived, believing in Christ the Savior.

B. P. Stevens.

Duvall. Fell asleep in Jesus, in Warren, Ct., March 15th, 1876, Edward F., son of George and Altana Duvall, aged one year.

Death has entered this family group and bound in his cold, icy fetters one of its choice flowers. The father and mother feel sad, but mourn not without hope. They know Jesus is the resurrection and the life. He will soon come.

Stephen Duvall.

Hayes. Fell asleep in Jesus, in Alton, N. H., Jan. 15th, 1876, of apoplexy, Ezekiel Hayes, aged sixty-five years.

Father has for many years believed in Christ as his Savior, and in his soon coming to redeem his people and restore the earth. He sleeps in Jesus, we humbly trust, to awake to immortality and eternal life in the final resurrection. He has left a wife and five children to mourn his loss. May God sustain us in this hour of affliction, and may we all be ready to meet him when the Lord comes. B. F. H.

Lemaster. Fell asleep in Jesus, March 4th, 1875, Mr Joseph Lemaster, in the fifly-sixth year of his age, at his residence in New Philadelphia, McDonough Co., Illinois.

He was a firm believer in the second coming of Christ and the resurrection of the dead. He was a great sufferer, but patiently endured to the end. He has left a dear devoted son, and many friends and relatives to mourn his loss.

"He has fallen asleep, but soon will awake;
The shadows are flying, the day soon will break;
Not long now the sleeping will wait for the call
That cometh from heaven and awakeneth all."
P. A. H.

Griswold. In Somers, Conn., April 4th, after a short illness, Mrs. Hannah Griswold, aged eighty-five.

Another mother in Israel is laid by to rest. The record of her faith and works is in God's book of remembrance. Aunt Hannah (as she was familiarly called) was known and loved by all. "Ye are dead, and your life is hid with Christ in God. When he who is our life shall appear, then shall ye also appear with him in glory." H. C. Smith.

Forbes. Near Villisca, in Taylor Co., Iowa, Feb. 26th, 1876, infant child of S. and M. E. Forbes, aged two months and eleven days. Services attended by D. Q. Kent.

Also at the same place, March 17th, 1876, Luther Forbes, only son of Bro. and Sr. Forbes, aged three years, six months.

Words of comfort from 2 Kings 4: 26, "Is it well with the child?" by Peter S. W. Deyo.

Bangs. In Stanstead, P. Q., March 23d, 1876, Georgie F., eldest son of G. W. and R. A. Bangs, aged twelve years, four months.

Farewell, dear Georgie,
Sleep on, and take your rest,
Till Jesus bids you welcome come
And be his honored guest.
G. W. B.

Daily. In Pittsburg, N. H., March 28th, 1876, of spinal meningitis, Jos. S. Daily, son of Richard and Susan Daily, aged four years, five months.

Words of comfort were spoken by the writer, of the soon coming kingdom, when Rachel will cease weeping, and the children will come again to their own borders. D. N. Chadsey.

Lane. Freddie E. Lane, son of D. A. and Martha E. Lane, died in West Burlington, Pa., March 17th, 1876, aged two years.

Sermon by G. S. Transaw. Text, Luke 18: 16–17.

The dear delights we here enjoy,
And fondly call our own,
Are only favors borrowed now
To be repaid anon.
S. J. W.

Evans. In Newhampton, N. H., March 24th, 1876, Emily P., infant child of John H. and Susan F. Evans, aged seven months.

This little one yielded to the grim monster, Death, and "it is well with the child." Funeral service by the writer, from 2 Kings 4: 26.

D. Eastman.

Caswell. Malvina Caswell, of Conquest, wife of Bro. Caswell, died April 9th, 1876.

She was beloved by all who knew her. She sleeps in Jesus. Bro. Caswell deeply mourns his loss. Funeral by the writer. M. R. Miles.

Easton. In Woodford, Feb. 18th, 1876, Mr. Pliny Easton, aged sixty-seven years.

Funeral services attended by the writer, in the Union Christian Church. W. O. Higley.

FOREIGN NEWS.

London, April 12. The Times reports that during a heavy storm yesterday four vessels stranded off Helsingborg. The crew of one were saved. Those on the other vessels are still in danger. A fishing boat in attempting to rescue them capsized, and four men were drowned. Great loss of life is feared, as there is no life boat at Helsingborg, or other means of rendering assistance.

Madrid, March 28. The Epoca declares that the Cortes will approve the principle of religious toleration. The Vatican will be compelled to accept it. The Espana says it is authorized by Papal Nuncio and the Archbishop of Toledo to deny the statement that the Vatican ever granted Senor Sagasta's ministry the least concession in relation to the liberty of public worship.

Snow is nine feet deep in Austria.

DOMESTIC NEWS.

The States and Territories west of the Missouri river, including British Columbia and the western coast of Mexico, yielded $81,000,000 of gold and silver during the year 1875, an excess of $6,500,000 over that of 1874, the greatest previous annual yield in the history of the coast. The present prospects indicate a yield of $90,000,000 for 1876. Where does it go?

Notices.

Maine Special Notice.

Please attend to this at once. The Secretary, Deacon, or Elder, of each Second Advent Church in Maine should give the number of members in their respective churches, by postal card or letter, at once, to the Secretary of the Maine A. C. Conference, that we may know how many delegates we are entitled to in the S. A. C. Association, chosen at our Annual Conference in June next. Address I. C. Wellcome, Sec., Yarmouth, Me.

Notice.—To the Brethren of Iowa Christian Conference:—You are all aware that we are nearing the time for Tent Meetings. The Iowa Mission Tent is not fit to put into the field this season. There is but about one fourth promised that is needed to put into the field a 50×80 tent, which we much need. Camp and Tent Meetings very much depend on your decision. There are many who are amply able to help if this matter was laid before them. I cannot go all around and see you; I should spend more time than is needed to get the tent I have contracted for. Will some one lend a helping hand, and do it promptly? Tent work must stop if this fails, and the blood of souls must be found in some one's garments. I do not want it to be mine. Come, Brn., wake up, and let me hear promptly from any State of all who wish to help the cause in Iowa, that I may know what to do. P. S. W. Deyo, Charles City, Iowa.

Kansas State Conference.—The fourth Annual Session of the A. C. Conference of Kansas will convene with the church near Centropolis, Franklin Co., Kansas, Friday, May 19th, 1876, at 10 o'clock A. M., and hold over the following Sunday. We hope to see a general attendance of those who are looking for the return of our Lord and Savior. Will not all the churches throughout the State send delegates to this meeting? Homes will be provided for all who come. Come with the Spirit of the Lord, praying that he may direct in all things. C. Crowell, President.
Levi S. Smith, Secretary.

Notice.—We purpose, the Lord willing, to commence a series of meetings in the new Limington meeting-house, Sebago, Me., Tuesday evening, April 25th, and continue them over the following Sunday. We say to every lover of "the present truth" in that region, "Come over and help us."
C. H. Sweet.
G. F. Haines.

Conference.

The Delaware Dist. A. C. Conference is hereby called to meet and hold its fourth annual session at the Advent Christian Church, Eighth Street, above Noble, Philadelphia, Pa., commencing on Thursday evening, April 20th, and continue over the following Sabbath. All the officers for the year ensuing will be chosen at this session. It is earnestly hoped that every church sympathising with us will be represented, either by letter or delegates. All letters of correspondence for the Conference can be addressed to Edwin King, 1716 Francis St., Philadelphia, Pa.
Wm. Ashman, President.
E. King, Secretary.

The Lake View Campmeeting, Magog, P. Q., Canada, will be held, as per vote of Conference, immediately after the Alton Bay meeting. Time hereafter definitely given. Let those who have promised to build cottages be in time with their preparations. Lots free, and all welcome.
C. P. Dow, for the Committee.

Conference Notice.

The Lord willing, the Connecticut A. C. Conference will meet with the Church at South Windsor, Wednesday evening, April 26th, through the week, and over Sunday, April 30th. It is hoped that all the churches will send delegates, and that all who are interested in the cause, which calls us out as a people to meet the coming Bridegroom, will make an effort to come. Earth's dreary night must soon close; the hosts of sin are let loose; the darkness is great; temptations are mighty; iniquity abounds; pride stalks forth; some are drawing back, and oh how few are enduring in this fatal hour. Who, but the people with the light of prophetic truth touching the coming One, can discern the signs of the times? We are favored with this light. Graciously have its rays been scattered, and loudly are the events speaking. Fear attends the outlook from a human standpoint; but a little in the distance the eye of faith discerns the morning light of eternal glory.

Shall we falter, or grow cold? It is too late. With the truth of God as our accompaniment, and tuned by the Spirit of the divine Master, victory must soon be ours. Let the weak ones come as well as the strong; let every voice be heard in encouragement. Come in the name of the Lord.

Take the cars to Burnside Station, on the H. P. and F. Railroad, where teams will convey those coming to the chapel. The business session, if any, will be on Thursday, April 27th, at 10 o'clock A. M. O. D. Woodruff, Sec. and Treas.

Hoosick Valley Conference.

☞ Time Changed.

The next Quarterly Session of the Hoosick Valley Conference will be held with the church at North Adams, Mass., commencing Wednesday evening, April 19th, and continue with three meetings each day over the following Sabbath. It will soon be said "It is done." We are having our last meetings; we are doing our last work. The Father by his Spirit is bringing to light and to our remembrance numerous evidences of the approaching end.

Brethren in the ministry, do come to this meeting with the light you have, that we may feed and be fed with the pure Word of God. We do earnestly hope that the churches will be represented by delegates, and as many others as can come. Do not wait to be blest at the meetings, but come filled with the Holy Spirit, to work for the salvation of others. The meetings will be held in Millard's large Hall, a short walk only from either of the depots. Those who are dwelling in God and God in them, will you pray for this meeting? H. K. Flagg, Pres.
R. Candlish, Sec.

Notice.—The Alton Bay Campmeeting Committee are notified to meet at Alton Bay Tuesday, May 9th, 1876. J. Couch.

Notice.—The subscriber having changed his place of residence from East Penfield to Seneca Falls, N. Y., is at liberty to supply (occasionally) any church in Central New York that may desire his services. Wm. Ingmire.

Notice.—There will be a Woman's National Union Campmeeting holden at Seabrook, N. H., commencing June 28th, and continuing till July 10th. Any wishing to build tents can correspond with C. A. Barton, Seabrook, N. H. Particulars hereafter. A. E. Smith.

The Beebe Plain Advent Campmeeting will commence Saturday, June 24th, and hold over two Sabbaths. Particulars hereafter.

Some of our preaching brethren whom it is desirable to hear will be present to preach the Word. Brethren who intend to build, can have lumber of the committee at cost. Please let us know how much you will want. Spruce lumber roughs $9.00 per thousand United States money.
L. C. McKinstry, Sec. for Com.

Quarterly Meeting.—The first Quarterly Meeting for the Southern District of Wis. will be held at Adams, Green Co., near the residence of Bro. Day, beginning on Friday evening, May 5th, to hold over Lord's day. All are invited to come early, and come to work for God.
Wm. Sheldon.

Notice.—By an urgent request of the churches of Rockland and St. George, Me., to become their pastor, I preach one half the time at each place. First and third Sunday at Rockland, second and fourth at St. George. H. S. Mitchell.

Notice.—Bro. Charles W. Helme is to take charge of the meetings at North Abington, Mass. Brethren wishing to come to Abington to preach will please correspond either with Bro. C. W. Helme or with Henry M. McPherson, Clerk.

The Pittsfield, Me., Campmeeting will commence Sunday, Aug. 27th. O. S. French, Sec.

The Mechanic Falls Campmeeting will commence Saturday, Sept. 2d.
R. R. York, for the Committee.

Any person wishing to preach for the Second Advent Church in Worcester, Mass., are requested to correspond with some one of the preaching committee before sending their appointments.

ADVENT CHRISTIAN TIMES.

This is an ably conducted weekly paper, edited by Elder Frank Burr, and published under the auspices of the Western A. C. Publishing Society. It gives prominence to the personal coming of Christ, the resurrection of the dead, the final destruction of sinners, and the eternal salvation of saints on the renovated earth. It also insists on a holy life as essential to an admittance into the coming kingdom. $2.20 a year. Address Advent Christian Times, 91 South Green St., Chicago, Ill.

The World's Crisis and Adv. Chris. Times sent postpaid to subscribers who will take both, at the reduced rate of $4.00 per year in advance for both papers. Address World's Crisis, Boston, Mass.

Appointments.

☞ Appointments must be received as early as TUESDAY MORNING (as our paper goes to press about noon) to insure insertion for the coming week.

☞ The following Resolution was passed at the late meeting of the A. C. P. Society:—

"Resolved, That no appointments be published in the Crisis henceforth for persons unknown to the Editorial Board (by which is understood the Editors, Editorial Committee, and Business Agent), unless satisfactory reference shall be given."

The Committee appointed by the Adv. Chris. Association, at its last Annual Meeting, to advise with the Editorial Board "in relation to the publication in the World's Crisis of the appointments of men unworthy of recognition as preachers," having attended to the duty assigned them, recommended, and the Editorial Board have adopted, and ordered to be published, the following resolution:—

"Resolved, That when the Editorial Board is properly notified by any of our Churches, or Ministers, or responsible persons, by a written allegation that a certain minister, or ministers, lack moral character, that they be instructed to notify such minister, or ministers, of the information received, as a reason for withholding their appointments till after a proper trial and acquittal."

All communications in relation to this matter should be addressed to the Secretary of the Board—Geo. T. Adams, Boston, Mass.

A NEW BOOK.

"LIFE IN CHRIST:

A STUDY OF THE SCRIPTURE DOCTRINE
ON
The Nature of Man; the Object of the Divine Incarnation,
and the
Conditions of Human Immortality.

BY EDWARD WHITE,
Author of the "Mystery of Growth," etc.
LONDON:
ELLIOT STOCK, 62 PATERNOSTER ROW.
1875."

The above is the title of a book of 590 pages octavo—perhaps the most comprehensive and exhaustive statement of the arguments in favor of the non-eternity of future suffering yet published.

As many as can, should possess themselves of this work. Just received from the London publisher, and for sale at this Office. Price $4.00. Sent by mail on reception of the same. Ag't.

VALUABLE ENGLISH WORKS
JUST RECEIVED.

Hades, or the Intermediate State of Man. By Henry Constable, A. M. This is an able work of 367 pages. Second edition. Price $1.37. Postage 13 cts.

The Struggle for Eternal Life. By E. Petavel, D. D. The design of this work is to show that "Eternal life, instead of being the natural inheritance of man, is to be striven for and sought by faith in Christ, and patient continuance in well doing, and that at last there is a choice of the fittest for eternal existence, while confirmed sinners are doomed to extinction."

Price: Cloth, by mail, 85 cts.; paper, by mail, 55 cts. Ag't.

"GOSPEL SONGS."

"A choice collection of Hymns and Tunes, New and Old, for Prayer Meetings, Sunday Schools, etc."

This is a new book that has had a large sale at our campmeetings this season, and contains some very choice pieces:—"When Jesus Comes," "More to Follow," etc., etc. For sale at this Office. Price, 35 cts. per copy; $3.60 per dozen by express; by mail, 40 cts. per copy. Agent.

THE BIBLE DOCTRINE OF THE SOUL.

An answer to the Question: "Is the Popular Conception of the Soul that of Holy Scripture?"

BY CHAS. L. IVES, M. D.

Professor of the Theory and Practice of Medicine in Yale College.

This is a book of 119 pages, in which the Author discusses the above question in an interesting and able manner,—showing the material nature of, the mortality and destiny of the Soul,—A future immortality to be the special portion of the Righteous,—What the Bible teaches as to the future of the Wicked,—The intermediate state,—The Resurrection,—That of the Righteous and of the Wicked, etc.

The Author claims that the doctrine set forth,—"Honors God, exalts the Bible, insures preaching of future punishment, subverts Universalism and Infidelity, errors of Romanism, of Spiritualism and Swedenborgianism, helps in work of Missions, rightly values the body, brings Christian unity, and promotes personal holiness."

We are much pleased with this work. It is having a wide circulation. We have just received a quantity of the pamphlet edition, and can now fill orders at the following prices: Pamphlet, 25 cts. per copy; $2.25 per dozen by mail; $15.00 per hundred by express. Bound in cloth, 30 cts. per copy by mail; $3.00 per dozen by express.

THE TRUE SABBATH.
WHICH DAY SHALL WE KEEP?
AN EXAMINATION OF
MRS. ELLEN G. WHITE'S VISIONS.
BY MILES GRANT.
ISSUED
BY THE ADV. CHRIS. PUB. SOCIETY,
A NEW WORK

On the Sabbath of the Old Covenant. An investigation of Mrs. E. G. White's Visions, showing that they are not from God.

All who have accepted Mrs. White's visions as coming from heaven, or who have been led to rest on Saturday instead of the Lord's day, should read this work. Let those who live among our Seventh-day brethren send and get a number of the books to give away. If the reader has friends at a distance who have received Mrs. W.'s Visions as true, have a copy of this work sent to them.

It contains 106 pages, and we will send it at the following prices: Single copy, 20 cts.; per doz., $1.75 by mail; per hundred, $10.00 by express. Agent.

PRICE REDUCED

The great Map of History, twenty-two feet long, and about thirty inches wide. This valuable work, of which mention has been made in the Crisis, we now have a supply of, and will send to those who may order at the publisher's reduced price of $12.00 per copy, by express. We have them on rollers, and in book form, and can supply either way.

The best method of using the chart or map of history is to hang the frame on the wall of the room (the map being in the frame, of course), by the two hooks in the upper bar of the frame, high enough to stand, or sit, in front of it, and there examine or study it.

Students and beginners in history should occasionally look over the map in its entire length—drawn out on the wall, or tables, or on the carpet—until they are well acquainted with the entire outlines, plan and compass of the map, which embraces all history.

HOLD THE TRUTH, FOR CHRIST IS COMING.

WM. SHEPHERD.

A New Version of Moody and Sankey's Hymn of "Hold the Fort," giving a more correct idea of what the author there attempts to bring out, showing what we are commanded, by the great Captain of our salvation, to hold, and why, and for how long a time. The popular hymn is founded upon an incident in the late war; this one on the Word of God, and adapted to the times in which we live.

Tune—"Hold the Fort."

Lo, He comes! see yonder signal
Blazing in the sky;
Signs portending his appearing
Now is even nigh.
Keep the truth, prove ever faithful,
And despise the shame;
Wave the gospel banner higher,
Nor deny his name.

Satan and his host advancing,
Ready for the fight;
Upward, onward, Christian soldier,
Put the host to flight.
By His grace alone we conquer,
Victory is sure;
They receive a crown of glory
Who the cross endure.

Lo! the Mighty Chief appeareth,
Clad in robes of light,
With the armies of the heavens,
Traveling in their might.
Courage, pilgrim soldier, faint not,
Nor thy steps retrace;
Reinforcements—you shall find them
At "the throne of grace."

How the conflict fiercely rages,
Booming cannons roar,
Bayonets glist'ning, swords are clashing
In this holy war.
See the smoke of arms ascending
Round the battle plain,
While the hosts of hell are falling,
Thousands, thousands slain.

Earnest for the faith contending,
"Watch" with zealous eye;
"Hold the fort" of gospel treasure
As the foe is nigh.
Listen to the great Commander—
Orders from the throne:—
"That which (now) ye have already,
Hold fast till I come."

Now with John we'll sing responsive
As we onward go;
"Send the answer back to heaven"—
"Amen. Even so."
Come, Lord Jesus, O come quickly,
Claim the kingdoms thine;
Take the throne and reign triumphant
By thy right divine.

THE RICH MAN AND LAZARUS.

In conversation with a prominent member of the Medina Baptist Church, I asked him to give me his views in writing at some convenient time, on the above subject, which he consequently did as follows, and which I forward to you for publication if you choose to do so. A. Parmalee.

Medina, N. Y.

At the close of the 11th chapter of Luke, Christ in his public address pronounced several woes on the Pharisees, including the scribes and lawyers of that sect. At the beginning of the 12th chapter we are informed that a great multitude had gathered to hear him, and in the 12th, 13th, and 14th chapters he states many direct points of teaching, and illustrates them by various figures, which evidently impressed the minds of the publicans and sinners that his teaching contained something of interest to them; for, at the commencement of the 15th chapter it says—"Then drew near unto him all the publicans and sinners for to hear him. And the Pharisees and Scribes murmured, saying, This man receiveth sinners and eateth with them;" upon which Christ spake the parables of the "lost sheep," the "lost piece of silver," and the "Prodigal son," intending, no doubt, to teach them that the Pharisees, although they were the descendants of Abraham, were not the only ones who were interested in his mission here on earth, or the great work of redemption; and then, as in the 16th chapter, he addresses himself to his disciples, in the parable of the "Unjust Steward."

One great object in addressing this parable to his disciples no doubt was, as they were to be the teachers of his doctrines, he designed by it to show them the false position held by the Pharisees, and the false practices to which it led; the one as cause, the other as effect, and in the 13th verse gives the moral of his teaching—"no man can serve two masters" etc.

In the 14th verse we are informed that the covetous Pharisees who had been his listeners "derided him," and then he spoke personally to them in the parable of the "Rich man and Lazarus," which parable is thought by some to be positive evidence of a conscious, intermediate state, as the language represents the discourse between the rich man and Abraham as occurring while the brethren of the rich man were here on the earth, which evidence necessarily grows out of a literal interpretation of the language of the parable, as though he was stating a positive doctrine; or as adopting and teaching a doctrine held by these Pharisees.

Now, are we to suppose that Christ, when he saw the derision made by the Pharisees of his teaching, did as some public teachers do when certain prominent ones of their audience deride them, changed tactics and took up a point of doctrine held by them in which he coincides in order to escape their derision? I apprehend not. Our Savior did not seek the praise of men. On the contrary it seems a fitting opportunity to expose the fallacy of that doctrine, and he improves it to that purpose.

I think it evident that Christ used parables to illustrate the truth or fallacy of a doctrine, or practice, as the case might be, and not for the purpose of stating a doctrine; and as the parables spoken in this connection appear to be designed to show the false position of the Pharisees, both in doctrine and practice, it does not seem probable that he closed this interview by a special recognition of their teaching.

If it is proper to give the language of this parable a literal import, and regard Christ as teaching the doctrine of a conscious intermediate state as a fact not to be disputed, it seems as justifiable to construe the language of the parable of the Unjust Steward in the same manner, and regard Christ as stating a fact not to be rejected and a practice not to be lost sight of or neglected when he says to his disciples "Make to yourselves friends of the mammon of unrighteousness, that when ye fail they may receive you into everlasting habitations;" or, to practice the same act that the unjust steward is represented as practicing.

The scene described as occurring between the rich man and Abraham is perfectly natural and legitimate, and one that might be of frequent occurrence if consciousness between death and the resurrection were a fact. I do not know of any coming from positive teaching, and it appears to me that Christ is showing his auditors that they still adhere to the old doctrine "Ye shall not surely die."

When we take into account the circumstances described by the Evangelist under which these parables were spoken, and the listeners to whom they were addressed, it is unreasonable to suppose that Christ closed his teaching by the advocacy of their doctrine even by misapplication.

THE ATONEMENT.

THE DEATH OF CHRIST.

We remark, then, that this atonement is effected by the sacrifice of Christ in his death.

"Christ our passover is crucified for us." 1 Cor. 5: 7. But now once in the end of the world hath he appeared to put away sin by the sacrifice of himself." Heb. 9: 26. When Paul is speaking of the atoning sacrifices of the law, he says (Heb. 10: 1, 4), they were shadows of good things to come; yet they could never remove the sins brought to view by them year by year; they only shadow forth the sufferings of Christ and the effect of his blood on believers. All sacrifices requiring the slaying of the victim show that the law under which they are offered has been broken, and that its penalty is death; and as the law of works could not give life (Gal. 3: 21), it knew no mercy (Heb. 2: 2; and 10: 28). Therefore it did not require, of necessity, the shedding of blood, but the death of the victim, which might have been accomplished without the shedding of blood. But the atonement of Christ contemplated not only the redemption of our race from death, but also the forgiveness of the sins of the people against the new covenant, which would be an act of mercy through his intercession as high priest by his own blood. "For without the shedding of blood there is no remission." Heb. 9: 22.

The types of the law which shadow forth this atonement are deeply instructive to Bible students. The first one we shall present is,

The Lord's passover, instituted in Egypt; yet other sacrifices had been offered by all the ancient patriarchs, from Abel down to Abraham, all teaching the same grand truths; yea, we suggest that the first sacrifice ever offered was in Eden, where the law was first broken, and the curse pronounced, where the sentence of the violated law was declared, and the first promise of redemption was made. The seed of the woman shall bruise the serpent's head. For we are informed (Gen. 3: 21) that the Lord God made coats of skins, and clothed Adam and his wife, after they had sinned, and saw their nakedness, and were ashamed.

These skins may have been obtained from animals offered under the direction of the Lord, as a sacrifice and shadow of the atonement. Covering their nakedness and hiding their shame may have been suggestive of the protection provided in the atonement. But in the institution of the Lord's passover in Egypt, the subject of sacrifices is clearly emblematical. The passover lamb was slain on the night of the exode from Egypt; the body of the lamb constituted a feast; all the people ate of it. "And thus shall ye eat it, with your loins girded, your shoes on your feet, your staff in your hand; and ye shall eat it in haste; it is the Lord's passover." Ex. 12: 11.

Nothing of this consecrated lamb was to remain until morning; or, if any part did remain, it must be burned with fire. V. 10. Thus all the congregation of Israel were physically nourished by the flesh of the lamb, yet only Caleb and Joshua, of all that vast multitude over twenty years old (Num. 14: 29, 31), entered the promised land. The body of the lamb is a type of the body of Jesus that was broken for sin; it became food for the whole nation; but not so with the blood: that was used for a very different purpose, for thus it is written: "And ye shall take a bunch of hyssop, and dip it in the blood of the lamb that is in the basin, and none of you shall go out at the door of his house until the morning." Ex. 12: 7, 22.

This blood thus sprinkled upon the door of the houses of Israel was to protect (not the whole congregation, for they were not all in danger) the first born in every family from the power of the destroying angel which passed through the land of Egypt to slay the first born in every house in Egypt, both man and beast. Ex. 12: 12. Only a remnant, therefore, of Israel were saved by the blood (see Heb. 11: 28), while all the people ate of the flesh. And this type brings to our mind the Lamb slain from the foundation of the world. In this paschal institution we have the following ideas presented:—

1. The paschal lamb is a symbol of Christ.
2. Its death is a type of Christ's death.
3. Its blood is a type of the blood of Jesus.

It commemorates Israel's exode or departure from Egypt; it anticipates the atonement of Christ and the marriage supper of the Lamb in the kingdom of God (see Rev. 19: 8, 9), for thus it is written: "Jesus said unto them, With desire have I desired to eat this passover with you before I suffer; for I say unto you, I will not any more eat thereof until it be fulfilled in the kingdom of God." Luke 22: 15, 16. "He is brought as a lamb to the slaughter." Isa. 53: 7.

These types have their antitypes thus: As the typical lamb sacrificed at the passover was food for all the congregation; so the flesh or body of the Lamb of God in his death, pledged from the foundation of the world (Rev. 13: 8), became a sacrifice to redeem Adam and all his race from the curse of the violated law. Gal. 3: 13. Not that he forgave the crime and saved them from dying, or from suffering the penalty of that law, for then none would die; but to raise the flesh—the body—from the dark grave to live again. For to this end Christ both died, and rose, and revived, that he might be Lord both of the dead and living. Rom. 14; 9. This is in proof that Christ must die to obtain authority over the dead, and the reason is obvious when we consider that the law knows no mercy. Gal. 3: 21.

The law demanded full satisfaction, but it could not restore life; hence no righteousness, justification, or release could be obtained from it. "Otherwise Christ is dead in vain." Gal. 2: 21. If no other object had been in view but redemption from the grave, no blood need have been shed, for the shedding of blood implies remission of sins (Lev. 17: 11; Heb. 9: 22), and no remission was admitted by that law; if, therefore Jesus had died without shedding one drop of his blood, the law would have been satisfied. We find in the case of Adam's sin and condemnation, the execution of the sentence of the law was suspended under the mediation of Christ, at the time, as illustrated in the typical mediation of Moses. Ex. 32: 9, 14. While Moses was in Mount Sinai, receiving the law on tables, the people made the golden calf. "And the Lord said unto Moses, I have seen this people, and behold, it is a stiff-necked people: now, therefore, let me alone, that my wrath may wax hot against them, and that I may consume them." But Moses pleads in their behalf, and says, "Turn from thy fierce wrath, and repent of this evil against thy people;" and it is recorded that "the Lord repented of the evil which he thought to do unto his people."

This was not forgiveness, but a reprieve, as we shall see; for Moses went down from the mount, and when he saw the people worshiping the calf, he threw down the tables of stone and broke them, called the Levites to him, commanded every man to slay his brother, companion, and neighbor; and three thousand fell in one day, as an exhibition of God's wrath. Moses then returns to the Lord to make an atonement, confesses their crime, asks that they may be forgiven, or, if not, that he may be blotted out of God's book. The Lord replies, "Whosoever hath sinned against me, him will I blot out of my book. Therefore, now go, lead the people unto the place of which I have spoken unto thee: behold, mine angel shall go before thee; nevertheless, in the day when I visit I will visit their sin upon them." Ex. 32: 26, 34. This shows that their sin was not forgiven, but the execution of the sentence was deferred by reprieve, for a time.

In view of this principle, Solomon says, "Because sentence against an evil work is not executed speedily, therefore the heart of the sons of men is fully set in them to do evil." Eccl. 8: 11. The atonement and intercession of Christ, with reference to the Adamic law (of works), does not procure the forgiveness of that offence of Adam, but a reprieve or suspension of execution, to give a second probation, while he offers mercy, salvation, and eternal life, under the law of faith or new covenant, by virtue of his blood.

Thus "God is long-suffering to us-ward, not willing that any should perish, but that all should come to repentance." 2 Pet. 3: 9.

In further proof of the correctness of this view of the atonement and intercession of Christ as set forth by the law, please read 14th chap. of Num. The Lord inquires how long the people will provoke him after all he had done for them, and says, "I will smite them with pestilence and disinherit them;" but Moses pleads for them, and the Lord says, "I have pardoned according to thy word." That this pardon is not forgiveness of their sin, but a reprieve, a delay of execution of the sentence, is established by verse 29, where the Lord says, "Your carcasses shall fall in this wilderness, and all that were numbered of you according to your whole number, from twenty years old and upward. . . . Ye shall not come into the land concerning which I swear to make you dwell therein." Num. 14: 11, 30. To this view all the law types of the atonement agree: the body—the flesh—serves as food for the physical system, or to burn upon the altar; it was never carried into the holy of holies; they pointed only to the resurrection of the physical body, the resurrection of the race, and the lost inheritance. But not so with the blood, as we shall show in its proper place.

LETTER FROM B. CRABTREE.

Traveling around as I am, and having good opportunity to see the working of the professed church, I cannot help exclaiming, When our Lord comes will he find faith on the earth? I pause a moment, and this blessed portion of Scripture comes into my mind, "Fear not, little flock, it is your Father's good pleasure to give you the kingdom."

It is the little flock that is going into the kingdom. One would suppose by looking around over the vast number of churches and professed christians throughout our land that it would be a great flock, instead of a little flock. Our Savior has prepared ample means for all; not one need be left behind. Eighteen hundred years and more the invitation has been going out, but still how few will accept of this free salvation. God has done everything he could do for fallen men. If we do not accept we alone are to blame. But men and women love the pleasures of this world more than they love God. Multitudes have a form of godliness, but deny the power thereof; from such we are to turn away. Christ's little flock will turn away from all evil, and their faith will increase as the dawn of the morn approaches.

Says one, Is not the truth being preached more and more? Are not ministers of all denominations coming out on the truth of the Lord's soon coming? Is it not being heralded far and near? There are instances of this kind, but are the masses coming out and separating themselves from the world? No; they cannot give up the world for the sake of the truth.

The truth will be preached, because our Savior said so; and when this is done he will come. All will have a chance to hear; all will have sufficient warning to escape the wrath and be saved. But if they will not, they must suffer the consequences and be destroyed, for God has declared it.

Brethren, God wants a people to come out and be entirely separate from the world and all its foolish and vain follies. Unless we do, there will be no abundant entrance ministered unto us into his kingdom. Love not the world, says John; for if we do the love of the Father is not in us. Why is there such hatred manifested by the people to the second coming of the Lord? Because the love of God is not shed abroad in their hearts. Will any go into the kingdom with a hatred against God's truth? Never!

Preachers who denounce this truth have no gospel, no power, and no conversions in their churches. O, may we be more earnest for God. Don't let us lack courage and faith to stand firm, that those who are without will have no evil thing to say of us. The Lord is near. Let us lift the standard higher, warn the masses, and then our skirts will be clean.

Do not fail to meet me in the kingdom, dear reader. I shall be there. I have given all for Christ. O, come out and be separate; get rid of that evil feeling in your heart; break up the fallow ground; leave the follies of this world. Be for God; be true, be faithful, be workers, be christians in every way. Who will be one of the little flock? I will.

MY EXPERIENCE.

L. ALLEN.

I thought I would write a little bit of my experience for our excellent paper, the Crisis, to encourage the young in experience. I have been over fifty years battling for God and his truth. About twenty years I fought the enemy among the Methodists, the rest of the time among the Advent brethren, and I would say by the grace of God I am going to fight it out on this line. Glory to God! I never felt of so good cheer, and I have no doubts as to the result. We have come into close action. Let us, brethren, throw away our scabbard, and go into it as though we loved it, and I am sure victory will turn soon on Zion's side.

The Lord is dealing bountifully with me this winter; my cup runneth over. It seems as if the Lord was renewing my age and my strength too. I feel at times as if I could run through a troop and leap over a wall. Sometimes I feel that I am in my teens. I don't want my name put down yet as a superannuated laborer, for I feel good for a few more campaigns. All who know me know I cannot work genteelly, but let me have a jaw-bone of an ass, and I can do something that will tell for God. Bless his holy name!

Chicopee Falls, Mass.

GOD'S WILL.

I worship thee, sweet will of God,
And all thy ways adore;
And every day I live, I long
To love thee more and more.

Men's weakness, waiting upon God,
Its end can never miss;
For men on earth no work can do
More angel-like than this.

He always wins who sides with God,
To him no chance is lost;
God's will is sweetest to him when
It triumphs at his cost.

All that God blesses is our good,
And unblest good is ill;
And all is right that seems most wrong,
If it be his dear will.

When obstacles and trials seem
Like prison walls to be,
I do the little I can do,
And leave the rest to thee.

I have no cares, O blessed will,
For all my cares are thine;
I live in triumph, Lord, for thou
Hast made thy triumphs mine.

ALL REWARDED AT JUDGMENT.

J. MEWSHAW.

"Behold I come quickly, and my reward is with me, to give every man according as his work shall be." Inspiration says every man, and it is our business to take it as it is. Some say that it only refers to the righteous. They tell us the wicked shall not stand before the judgment seat of Christ. But Paul says in 1 Cor. 15: 22, "For as in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive." They tell us that a wicked man is not in Christ, so he shall not be made alive; then I say a righteous man is not in Adam, so he shall not die. But we see men dying around us every day. Yes, and even so in Christ shall all be made alive.

"Therefore by the offence of one judgment came upon all men to condemnation." In Adam we are all under the condemnation of death, but there is no condemnation to them which are in Christ Jesus. We cannot be in Adam and in Christ. We have put off the old man, and have been born of God. The Father had said, Ye shall die. The Son came not to destroy the law, but to fulfil. Jesus says, Whosoever liveth and believeth in me shall never die. He did not speak of the Adamic death, for we know men who believe on Jesus die. Then there must be, according to Christ's own words, another death. The dead, both small and great, shall stand before God, and the books will be opened; and the dead shall be judged out of those things which are written in the books, according to their works. And whosoever is not found written in the book of life shall be cast into the lake of fire. This is spoken of the dead, and not the righteous. 2 Cor. 2: 16. To the one we are a savor of death unto death, and to the other the savor of life unto life. Between this life and eternal life there is an interregnum, and between this death and eternal death. If the first death is eternal it is not death unto death. There must be an intermediate space, and Job tells us what this is. He says that the wicked are reserved to the day of destruction. They shall be brought forth to the day of wrath. If God spared not the angels that sinned, but cast them down to hell, and delivered them into chains of darkness, to be reserved unto judgment, be assured that fire shall come down from God out of heaven, and devour them in the last day.

ANOTHER SIGN.

THOS. FITZSIMMONS.

In the general desire and effort to explain away the present signs, and terrestrial disturbances, by, as St. Paul terms it, "Science falsely so-called," we have all sorts of scientific theories from worldly wise ones, in explanation of the present supernatural occurrences, as storms, floods, tornadoes, earthquakes, and strange conditions of the weather. Men now in their eagerness to account for these phenomena—"Signs in the heavens and the earth" that prophecy explicitly declares shall be a part of the last day wonders,—are now in their arguments running into all sorts of absurd theories and nonsense. Every reason is given but the right one, which few have the wisdom to see, or christian hardihood to maintain. We shall ere long see, how much science has to do with the outbursts of an offended God; and those theorists will soon learn how much "scientific laws" have to do with the higher and measureless laws of God.

Phila. Pa.

We may promote brotherly love by praying much for those we are most inclined to dislike. We cannot keep up a dislike for those we carry to God daily in our closet supplications. Such a course will inspire love, and kill hate.

LETTER FROM BRO. P. MITSON.

Dear Brn., and all who feel that they are pilgrims and strangers:—I can say I am with you, and can say from my heart, with Moses, that I choose "rather to suffer affliction with the people of God, than to enjoy the pleasures of sin for a season." Glory be to God! there is a reality to this language to every one who has placed his affections on the "exceeding great and precious promises" which Paul says "God hath revealed . . unto us by his Spirit." Such can say of a truth with Moses, that they "esteem the reproach of Christ greater riches than the treasures of Egypt; for they . . . have "respect unto the recompense of the reward."

A real heart faith and love placed on the promise that God made to Abram in Gen. 13: 14, 15; 15: 7, and 17: 8, will keep God's little ones from being overcharged with the things of this world, and make them love to follow the blessed Savior, and lead them to serve God from principle. Paul calls it an anchor to the soul. He says—"Wherein God, willing more abundantly to show unto the heirs of promise the immutability of his counsel, confirmed it by an oath; that by two immutable things, in which it was impossible for God to lie, we might have a strong consolation who have fled for refuge to lay hold upon the hope set before us; which hope we have as an anchor of the soul, both sure and steadfast, and which entereth in to that within the veil." By turning to Gen. 22: 15–17, we shall hear what the Lord says to Abraham: "And the angel of the Lord called unto Abraham out of heaven the second time, and said, By myself have I sworn, saith the Lord, for because thou hast done this thing, and hast not withheld thy son, thine only son, That in blessing I will bless thee, and in multiplying I will multiply thy seed as the stars of the heaven, and as the sand which is upon the seashore; and thy seed shall possess the gate of his enemies."

Paul says—"If ye be Christ's, then are ye Abraham's seed, and heirs according to the promise." And also, "If children, then heirs, heirs of God and joint-heirs with Christ, if so be that we suffer with him, that we may be also glorified together."

Dear Brn. and Srs., do we love to suffer with Christ? I can say for one, God being my helper, I will go without the camp and bear the reproach. Paul says again—"Wherefore thou art no more a servant, but a son; and if a son, then an heir of God through Christ. Those words sound lovely to me, as do these: "After that ye believed, ye were sealed with that Holy Spirit of promise."

Dear brethren in the East, with whom I have not had the privilege of meeting for many long years, be faithful. As I look back and think of the blessed meetings we have had together, it fills my heart with weeping; but in a very short time the blessed Savior will come; and my prayer is, Lord, help us to be ready. Love to all.

ZECHARIAH 4: 6.

J. P. MARQUAND.

"Not by might, nor by power, but by my Spirit, saith the Lord."

The Bible will be found to be harmonious and truthful, not one jot or tittle out of the way. But let us get the key to unlock its treasures. Every truth in its place, and a place for every truth. Many mistakes are made by not locating things right. Take, for instance, Jas. 5: 9—"The Judge standeth before the door." This could not apply in the past, but comes right in at the nineteenth century, in the last times or days. We who are now living have passed most all the landmarks, and find ourselves in "the time of the end," and the Judge right at the door. The man of sin, the son of perdition, has been fully revealed; the signs in the sun, moon and stars have taken place; iniquity, corruption and sin abound, both in church and state; the sea and waves have been disturbed; the powers of the heavens are shaken; the people are crying, Peace and safety; professors of religion have a form of godliness without the power; they are lovers of pleasure more than lovers of God. The unclean spirits are abroad, deceiving the nations, prophesying smooth things; the perilous times are here, and we are approaching the great day of God, when the heavens shall be on fire, and the elements melt with fervent heat. "The coming of the Lord draweth nigh," and who may abide the day of his coming?

Under the old dispensation the Jews had a mark or seal by which they were distinguished. It was circumcision. They could not belong to the commonwealth of Israel without it; but what is the mark or seal under the Christian dispensation? Is it not the baptism of the Holy Spirit? "Grieve not the Holy Spirit of God, whereby ye are sealed unto the day of redemption." Eph. 4: 30. "After that ye believed, ye were sealed with that Holy Spirit of promise." Eph. 1: 13. And Peter, on the day of Pentecost, in his memorable sermon (Acts 2: 38) urged the people to repentance and faith, alleging that the Holy Ghost was the privilege of every believer. And, my friends, what will become of us if we do not get a baptism of the Holy Spirit? We shall go back into the world, be carnal, earthly and sensual, renouncing the Lord that bought us, grieve God and the angels, and perish in our sins; and it will be said of us, It were better for that man or woman if they had never been born. But let us hope better things, and that we shall persevere in doing good, living a holy life, looking unto Jesus, who is the author and finisher of our faith; and let us like him endure the cross, despising the shame, remembering the recompense of the reward. "Weeping may endure for a night, but joy cometh in the morning." Amen.

New York City.

Not Careworn.—I cannot tell you how happy this service in which I am engaged makes me. Instead of my being the anxious careworn man as many persons think me to be, I have no anxieties and no cares at all. Faith in God leads me to roll all my burdens upon God. Not only burdens concerning money, but concerning everything; for hundreds are my necessities, besides those connected with money. And in every way I find God to be my helper, even as I trust in him, for everything, and pray to him in childlike simplicity about everything. Be encouraged, dear fellow believer, to go this blessed way, this happy way, yourself, and you will see what peace and joy it affords.—Muller.

Four things indispose us for prayer: inordinate sadness, very high spirits, ill temper, and a carnal, worldly spirit.

HOME AND HEALTH.

LIGHT.

"Let there be light," was the first creative word. The Creator thus places light foremost of all his works. "He dwelleth in light." He "clotheth himself with light as with a garment;" and when the words of inspiration would lift our souls to the highest conception of his purity and glory, they tell us "God is light, and in him is no darkness at all." Christ Jesus is proclaimed as "the light of the world." "In him was life, and the life was the light of men." "He that followeth me shall not walk in darkness, but shall have the light of life." Thus in all the departments of vegetable, animal, moral, and spiritual life, light stands out as the foremost blessing and benefit which God confers.

In physical existence this is especially true. Thousands die for lack of light. No vigorous vegetable life, no healthful animal life, can long exist without light. The pestilence "walketh in darkness." Hundreds of dark kitchens, on the north sides of houses, are responsible for the deaths that have saddened the household and left the home without a mother. Creeping vines, overshadowing verandahs, heavy curtains, closed blinds, all help to increase the death rate, and prevent the recovery of the sick.

"Sir James Wylie, late physician to the Emperor of Russia, attentively studied the effects of light as a curative agent in the hospital of St. Petersburgh, and he discovered that the number of patients who were cured in rooms properly lighted, was four times that of those confined in dark rooms. This led to a complete reform in lighting the hospitals. In all the cities visited by the cholera it was universally found that the greatest number of deaths took place in narrow streets, and on the sides of those having a northern exposure, where the salutary beams of the sun were excluded. The inhabitants of the southern slopes of mountains are better developed and more healthy than those who live on the northern side, while those who dwell in secluded valleys are generally subject to peculiar diseases and deformities of person.

These different results are due to the agency of light, without a full supply of which plants and animals maintain but a sickly and feeble existence. Eminent physicians have observed that partially deformed children have been restored by exposure to the sun and open air. As scrofula is most prevalent among children of the poor, this is attributed by many persons to their living in dark and confined houses, such diseases being most common among those residing in unde round tenements."

Light is the cheapest and best of all medicines. Nervous ailments yield to the power of sunshine. Pallid faces grow fresh and ruddy beneath its glow. The sun's rays have wonderful purifying power. The dairy maid after having done all that she can do with hot water, to cleanse her pans and pails, sets them in the sun to 'scald,' and they are purified as they can be in no other way. So disease is banished and contagion killed by the glow of the flooding sunlight.

How strange that people will exclude the light, and die for the lack of its rays. Housewives darken their parlors to keep out the flies—wise ies! but a room where flies cannot or will not live, must be a poor place for men to exist. Let in the light. Go out into the light. Walk in the sunshine, bathe yourself in this fount of health and beauty, and grow strong and glad.

Men loved darkness rather than light, because their deeds were evil. God dwells in light. Satan is the ruler of darkness. God calls us out of darkness into his marvelous light, and bids us walk as children of the light. In this true light is life, and health, and peace. Light is sown for the righteous and gladness for the upright in heart; and when the ages of gloom and grief are passed away, we shall enter upon the inheritance of the saints in light, in that home where the Lord God and the Lamb are the light of the city of the redeemed.

Let us look for more light, the light of God's Holy Spirit; the light of that sure word of prophecy which shineth in a dark place, until the day dawn and the day-star arise; the light of the knowledge of the glory of God in the face of Jesus Christ. Let us turn our faces towards the light that shineth more and more unto the perfect day. And if we walk in the light as he is in the light, we have fellowship one with another, and the blood of Jesus Christ, God's Son, cleanseth us from all sin.—The Wayside.

SEASONABLE COUNSEL.

To mitigate spring maladies and obviate all possible summer complaints, the hygienic rule is as simple as is the golden rule in relation to human conduct. In both cases do right. But what is right hygenically may be difficult for the wayfarer to understand, amid the interminable din and discord of prevalent teachings.

There are, however, a few common-sense axioms that are always in order, and a few prudential considerations always available in emergencies. Be temperate in all things; be regular in habits of eating; bathe frequently; keep the bowels free by proper diet, but never take drug purgations; avoid all excesses in sensuous gratifications, and all stimulants; especially be moderate in the use of, or entirely eschew, all hydrocarbonaceous dishes or articles—as starch, grease, sugar. They thicken the blood, cause bilious humors, clog the liver, obstruct the skin, congest the head and lungs, and predispose to innumerable ailments.—Science of Health.

The World's Crisis

AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER.

"BEHOLD I COME QUICKLY; AND MY REWARD IS WITH ME."

WHOLE NO. 1067. BOSTON, WEDNESDAY, APRIL 26, 1876. VOL. XLIII.—NO. 2.

The World's Crisis,

The CRISIS is devoted to the exposition of all Bible truth; especially the doctrine of the immediate, personal coming and reign of Christ on the earth; holiness of heart; the unconscious state of the dead; their literal resurrection, and final destruction of the wicked.

"TOILING IN ROWING."

"Until the day break, and the shadows flee away."

We have toiled all night, and our frames grow cold,
As the passing hours are slowly told;
Shadows lie thick on the waters still,
The fitful breezes are damp and chill;
We are rowing hard 'gainst wind and tide,
And dangers thicken as on we glide.

We have toiled all night, but the day seems far,
In vain we look for the morning star;
The storm-clouds gather apace behind,
And lightnings flash 'mid the howling wind;
The mighty thunders afar are heard,
Come, we beseech thee, and save us, Lord.

Ye have toiled all night, ye have done right well,
And bravely breasted each rising swell;
The fierce storms gather, as well ye say,
But for you there comes the promised day.
Be glad, my children, lift up your eyes;
Behold! where your Morning Star doth rise.

THY KINGDOM COME.

S. A. GILMAN.

"Follow peace with all men, and holiness, without which no man shall see the Lord"—HEB. 12: 14.

By disobedience the sentence of death came upon man, and instead of dwelling with God in that happy Eden home he had prepared, enjoying immortal life and blessedness, was driven from the tree of life and presence of the great I AM. So he went forth, sinful, mortal man, upon his career of suffering and death, with naught to light up the darkness but the hope in a future Redeemer, to come through his seed, who should rescue him from the enemy's power. Man had changed his relation to God, but tenderly and lovingly he gave him angels to minister, and the Holy Ghost to teach how restitution and salvation might even then be obtained, and paradise and God's presence once more enjoyed.

Let us seek to learn what the Holy Spirit hath declared respecting it. As we follow holy men, who spoke by inspiration, we hear —"Fear not, I will help thee, saith the Lord and thy Redeemer, the Holy One of Israel." Looking forward they prophesy—"Unto us a child is born . . and the government shall be upon his shoulders; and his name shall be called, Wonderful, Counsellor, The mighty God, the everlasting Father, the Prince of Peace." Through him "the redeemed of the Lord shall return and come with singing to Zion, and everlasting joy shall be upon their head."

How this thought led them to cry, "Sing, O heavens, and be joyful, O earth, and break forth into singing, O mountains; for the Lord hath comforted his people, and will have mercy upon his afflicted." Bless the Lord, ye angels. Bless the Lord, all ye his hosts. Bless the Lord, O my soul; for truly wonderful is our rescue, wonderful the plan, wonderful the character, of him who in due time appeared as our Savior, seeking the lost; "wonderful in counsel," as well as "excellent in working." He came, a wonderful Redeemer and Counsellor. He says, "I am come in my Father's name," and "all power is given unto me in heaven and in earth." "Therefore, let all the house of Israel know assuredly, that God hath made that same Jesus, . . . both Lord and Christ." To every suffering, sinful, dying soul, he says, "Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest. Take my yoke upon you, and learn of me; for I am meek and lowly in heart, and ye shall find rest unto your souls." "Look unto me, and be ye saved, all the ends of the earth, for I am God, and there is none else." All is in my hands. "There is none other name under heaven, given among men, whereby you must be saved." For "I am sent to bless you, in turning away every one of you from his iniquities."

At the beginning it was obedience and life; disobedience and death. Man disobeyed, and death has followed our race. Jesus came, invested with power, purchased the field and the treasure with his own blood, and now we are not our own, for we have been bought with this price; and every soul belongs to him, and before him we shall be brought to judgment. As the Father tested the loyalty of our first parents, so Jesus becomes the "Savior of all men," and all are accountable to him. "He became the author of eternal salvation unto all them that obey him." He was delegated with God's power, acting as the mighty God, to bring back a rebellious world to Paradise again.

Hear the word of God: "For unto the Son he saith, Thy throne, O God, is forever and ever; a sceptre of righteousness is the sceptre of thy kingdom." "Thou didst set him over the works of thy hands. Thou hast put all things in subjection under his feet. For in that he put all things in subjection under him, he left nothing that is not put under him. But now we see not yet all things put under him. But we see Jesus, who was made a little lower than the angels for the suffering of death, crowned with glory and honor, that he by the grace of God should taste death for every man." "Therefore, as by the offence of one, judgment came upon all men to condemnation; even so by the righteousness of one the free gift came upon all men unto justification of life." "But those things, which God before had showed by the mouth of all his prophets that Christ should suffer, he hath so fulfilled. Repent ye therefore, and be converted, that your sins may be blotted out, when the times of refreshing shall come from the presence of the Lord; and he shall send Jesus Christ, which before was preached unto you; whom the heavens must receive until the times of restitution of all things, which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets." "For Moses truly said unto the fathers, a prophet shall the Lord your God raise up unto you of your brethren, like unto me; him shall ye hear in all things whatsoever he shall say unto you. And it shall come to pass, that every soul which will not hear that prophet, shall be destroyed from among the people." "The Father loveth the Son, and hath given all things into his hands," and "now commandeth all men every where to repent; because he hath appointed a day in the which he will judge the world in righteousness by that man whom he hath ordained." "For we shall all stand before the judgment seat of Christ." For "it is written, As I live, saith the Lord, every knee shall bow to me, and every tongue shall confess to God," or, as in another epistle, "That at the name of Jesus, every knee shall bow, of things in heaven, and things in earth, and things under the earth, and that every tongue should confess that Jesus Christ is Lord, to the glory of God the Father." "The Father judgeth no man, but hath committed all judgment unto the Son." "Behold, he cometh with ten thousand of his saints, to execute judgment upon all, and to convince all that are ungodly among them of all their ungodly deeds," and hard speeches which ungodly sinners have spoken against him." "The hour is coming, in the which all that are in the graves shall hear his voice, and shall come forth; they that have done good, unto the resurrection of life; and they that have done evil, unto the resurrection of damnation." I saw the dead, small and great, stand before God, and the books were opened," and "they were judged, every man, according to their works."

"Blessed are they that do his commandments, that they may have right to the tree of life, and may enter in through the gates into the city." No flaming sword, no cherubims now, to keep the way. Thanks eternal thanks, be given, that there is still access to such riches of grace, by faith in our Lord Jesus Christ. He has power and authority to say "unto those on his right hand, Come ye, blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world." "We labor and suffer reproach, because we trust in the living God, who is the Savior of all men, especially of them that believe."

"As in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive. But every man in his own order; Christ the first fruits, afterward they that are Christ's at his coming. Then cometh the end, when he shall have delivered up the kingdom to God, even the Father; when he shall have put down all rule, and all authority and power. For he [Christ] must reign till he hath put all enemies under his feet. The last enemy that shall be destroyed is death. For he [Christ] hath put all things under his feet. But when he saith "All things are put under him, it is manifest that he [the Father] is excepted which did put all things under him. And when all things shall be subdued unto him [Christ], then shall the Son also himself be subject unto him that put all things under him; that God may be all in all."

Then we shall see all things put under him; the kingdom delivered up to the Father, and "death and hell cast into the lake of fire; and whosoever was not found written in the book of life; and the curse removed. "The heavens shall pass away with a great noise, and the elements shall melt with fervent heat; the earth also, and the works that are therein shall be burned up. Nevertheless we, according to his promise, look for new heavens and a new earth, wherein dwelleth righteousness." Then "the holy city, new Jerusalem, cometh down from God out of heaven, prepared as a bride adorned for her husband. And I heard a great voice out of heaven saying, Behold, the tabernacle of God is with men, and he will dwell with them, and they shall be his people, and God himself shall be with them, and be their God." But he comes not till judgment has been executed, and the curse removed.

Where are the unholy ones? Will they ever see him? "Without holiness no man shall see the Lord" (God),—only his representative. But "blessed are the pure in heart; for they shall see God," and "shine forth as the Sun in the kingdom of their Father."

So we raise our hearts and hands to "our Father which art in heaven," and devoutly pray, "Thy kingdom come."

South Windsor, Conn.

EFFECTUAL FERVENT PRAYER.—An arrow if it be drawn up but a little way goes not far, but if it be pulled up to the head flies swiftly and pierces deep. Thus prayer if it be only dribbled forth from careless lips, falls at our feet. It is the strength of ejaculation and strong desire, which sends it to heaven and makes it pierce the clouds. It is not the arithmetic of our prayers, how many they are; nor the rhetoric of our prayers, how eloquent they be; nor the geometry of our prayers, how long they be; nor the music of our prayers, how sweet our voice may be; nor the logic of our prayers, how argumentative they may be; nor the method of our prayers, how orderly they may be; nor yet even the divinity of our prayers, how good the doctrine may be,—which God cares for. He looks not for the horny knees which Paul is said to have had through the assiduity of prayer; we might be like Bartholomew, who is said to have had a hundred prayers for the morning, and as many for the evening, and all might be of no avail. Fervency of spirit is that which availeth much. "The effectual fervent prayer of a righteous man availeth much."—Bishop Hall.

THE ATONEMENT.

From the "Plan of Redemption."

Having shown the bearing of the law of types on this point, we shall now present the direct testimony from the Old and New Testaments. Thus saith the prophet: "Surely he hath borne our griefs and carried our sorrows; yet we did esteem him stricken, smitten of God and afflicted. But he was wounded for our transgressions, he was bruised for our iniquities, and the chastisement of our peace was upon him, and with his stripes we are healed." Isa. 53, 4, 5.

This Scripture clearly teaches that Christ's sufferings and death were to remove our griefs and sorrows, and to heal us from the effects of the fall, by raising all the race from death. "All we like sheep have gone astray [no exception to this rule]; we have turned every one to his own way, and the Lord hath laid on him the iniquity of us all." [Heb. Margin, "hath made the iniquity of us all to meet on him"].

That the sin of Adam and his race was laid on Christ is generally admitted by believers in the Bible; but to what extent the sin of Adam effected his race, and which was laid on Christ, is not so generally understood.

We quote a few texts on this point, which will help the understanding: "Behold, I was shapen in iniquity, and in sin did my mother conceive me." Psa. 51: 5. "The wicked are estranged from the womb, they go astray as soon as they be born, speaking lies." Psa. 58: 3. Job asks, "Who can bring a clean thing out of an unclean? Not one." Job 14: 4. All this is the effect of the first transgression; and this is met and removed by the death of Christ. Paul, in referring to this point, says of Christ, "Who was delivered [to death] for our offenses, and was raised again for [to raise us] our justification." Rom. 4: 25.

If Christ died for our offenses, then the debt was paid, and not forgiven; and the law is satisfied, for Jesus died; and the race is free, for Jesus rose. "The free gift came upon all men unto justification of life." Rom. 5: 18. "He rose for our justification." Peter, in speaking on the same point, says, "Who his own self bare [not forgave] our sins in his own body on the tree, . . . by whose stripes we are [not blood] healed" [not forgiven]. 1 Pet. 2: 24.

It may be claimed that these Scriptures apply only to believers. We will let the Scriptures settle this question. Let us hear Paul: "We trust in the living God, who is the Savior of all men, specially [the Savior] of those that believe. These things command and teach." 1 Tim. 4: 10, 11. If Paul means what he says, then all men are saved, or will be saved, and this doctrine he tells us to "command and teach." We will do so. Yet, beside and above this there is a special salvation to believers. That believers are included in the first salvation mentioned is too plain to be denied. But believers are saved from their sins by the blood of Christ, through repentance and faith. Their sins are remitted, forgiven; consequently the penalty of that law by which we are bound to Christ—the law of faith, not of works,—is never executed on them.

Through what means then, and from what does the "living God" save all men? Do you claim that it is by the blood of Christ, and from the penalty of the new covenant, the law of life? If so, then all men are forgiven, for Christ says expressly, "This is my blood of the New Testament [law] which is shed for many for the remission of sins." Matt. 26: 28. Thus, if your answer be correct, all men are entitled to eternal life, and there is no special salvation. This cannot be true; we will let the Bible answer the question. Jesus says: "And I, if I be lifted up from the earth, will draw all men unto me: this he said signifying what death he should die." John 12: 32, 33. The obvious meaning of this passage is, if he died he would save all men from the power and effects of the first transgression, restoring them to life from the dead (see Rom. 5: 19) sinless in the eyes of the Adamic law—the law of works; not by his blood, but by his death; not by the forgiveness of sins, but by dying and paying the claim, satisfying the law by purchasing them out from death. Paul says, "We thus judge, that if one [Christ] died for all, then were all [sentenced to die] dead; and that he died for all, that they which live should not henceforth live unto themselves, but unto him which died for them, and rose again." 2 Cor. 5: 14, 15.

If this passage the apostle, constrained by the manifestation of Christ's love, judges two things: 1st. If Christ died for all (men), then all were (doomed to die) dead. 2nd. That he did die for all in order that the living might no longer live unto themselves, but for "him who died and rose again on their behalf." Em. Diaglott.

The plain meaning of the apostle's first point is, that the fact of Christ's dying for all proves that the sentence of the first law (law of death) had passed upon all, because "in Adam all have sinned." Rom. 5: 12. And in his second point he declares that he did die for all; that the living (being thereby brought into a probationary state under the new covenant, or "law of life," and made accountable to Christ) should not live to themselves in sin, but should believe on, and live for Christ, who died for them and rose again, and thus they would gain the special salvation.

Once more the apostle affirms, "For there is one God and one Mediator between God and men, the man Christ Jesus, who gave himself a ransom for all, to be testified in due time." 1 Tim. 2: 5, 6. But from whence will he ransom them? The Lord answers, "I will ransom them from the power of the grave: I will redeem them from death. O death, I will be thy plagues! O grave, I will be thy destruction! Repentance shall be hid from mine eyes." Hosea 13: 14. This is one of the things which God has proposed of which he declares he will not repent.

This ransom must include all of the race, for the following reasons: 1. Paul says that Jesus "gave himself a ransom for all." 2. It is from the power of the grave, which covers the race. 3. It is a redemption from death, therefore it is a resurrection. 4. It is the plagues of death; it is the destruction of the grave, which would not be the fact if it was limited to the righteous. It cannot refer to "the second death," for then it would not be a ransom of all; for "the second death has no power over the righteous" (Rev. 20: 5), neither is there any redemption provided for those who suffer the second death.

That this redemption does not turn upon the human volition or will, but is the unalterable purpose of the living God is proved by the declaration at the close of the promise—"Repentance shall be hid from mine eyes."

We will examine a few more passages on this point: "For as in [by] Adam all die, even so in [by] Christ shall all be made alive; but every man in his own order." 1 Cor. 15: 22. This can never be accomplished until all who die shall be raised from death, both of the righteous and the wicked. This only can effect the destruction of death, and is the third point in making men alive by Christ's death. Paul further explains by what means this is done: "Forasmuch, then, as the children are partakers of flesh and blood, he also himself likewise took part of the same; that through death he might destroy him that had the power of death; that is, the devil; and deliver them who, through fear of death, were all their lifetime subject to bondage." Heb. 2: 14. Again: "For when we were yet without strength [helpless under the sentence of death], in due time Christ died for the ungodly." Rom. 5: 6. We are also informed of the same fact further, thus: "God commendeth his love toward us in that while we were yet sinners [made so by the disobedience of Adam, verses 12, 19], Christ died for us. . . . When we were enemies we were reconciled to God [the atonement was made] by the death of his Son. . . . Therefore, as by the offense of one [Adam] judgment [sentence] came upon all men, so also through one righteous act [of Jesus Christ in being obedient unto death, even the death of the cross, Phil. 2: 8], sentence came on all men to justification of life.' Rom. 5: 7, 10: 18. Em. Diaglott. "For as through the disobedience of one man, the many [the race] were constituted sinners [in the eyes of the Adamic law], so even through the obedience [unto death] of the one, the many [the race] will be constituted righteous [in the eyes of the Adamic law].' Em. Diaglott. V. 19.

FEAR.

M. JANE LOCKE.

"Men's hearts failing them for fear, and for looking after those things which are coming on the earth."—LUKE 21: 26.

Are they those who are watching for the signs of the coming of the Son of Man? Are they those who pray and never faint? Are they those who are dead to the world, having their lives hid with Christ in God? If we are fearing, and our hearts are "failing" us, how can we obey this command of Christ—"When these things begin to come to pass, then look up, and lift up your heads, for your redemption draweth nigh"? Luke 21: 28.

According to the Word of God, I have of late been examining myself, whether I am "in the faith"; whether I am on the list of the fearful, or whether God's people are under the necessity of giving place to fear. I find by this self-examination, and by proving myself by the Word of God, that we can rejoice and forever trust, instead of fear. God's Word abounds with encouragement to trust; and if we live in obedience to it, and take it as the man of our counsel and the rule of our life, we need fear no evil, for the promises are yea and amen to them that believe. God is just as able, and I believe just as willing, to deliver his children now as he was to deliver the apostle Peter.

We read in Luke 9: 34, "And they feared as they entered into the cloud"; but, praise the name of the Lord forever, they that are counted worthy to obtain that world and the resurrection from the dead will not fear as they enter into the clouds with Jesus, for then this corruptible shall have put on incorruption, and this mortal shall have put on immortality. Then death will be swallowed up in victory.

"Forasmuch then as the children are partakers of flesh and blood, he also himself likewise took part of the same; that through death he might destroy him that had the power of death, that is, the devil; and deliver them who through fear of death were all their lifetime subject to bondage." Blessed deliverance! when will it come!

"The angel of the Lord encampeth round about them that fear him, and delivereth them." Ps. 34: 7. "I will both lay me down in peace, and sleep; for thou Lord only makest me dwell in safety." Ps. 4: 8. "Behold, the eye of the Lord is upon them that fear him; upon them that hope in his mercy." Ps. 33: 18. "In God have I put my trust; I will not be afraid what man can do unto me." Ps. 56: 11. "I will say of the Lord, He is my refuge and my fortress; my God; in him will I trust." Ps. 91: 2. "Fear thou not, for I am with thee; be not dismayed, for I am thy God; I will strengthen thee; yea, I will help thee; yea, I will uphold thee with the right hand of my righteousness." Isa. 41: 10. "Fear not them which kill the body, but are not able to kill the soul; but rather fear Him which is able to destroy both soul and body in hell." Matt. 10: 28. "Are not two sparrows sold for a farthing? and not one of them shall fall without your Father. But the very hairs of your head are all numbered. Fear ye not, therefore; ye are of more value than many sparrows." Matt. 10: 29–31.

"And when the disciples saw him walking on the sea they were troubled, saying, It is a spirit; and they cried out for fear. But straightway Jesus spoke unto them, saying, Be of good cheer; it is I; be not afraid." Matt. 14: 26, 27. Blessed be the name of the Lord! The voice of Jesus can always calm our fears. "The Lord is thy keeper." Ps. 1: 21–23. "Behold, God is my salvation; I will trust and not be afraid." Isa. 12: 2. "Fear hath torment; but [praise God's eternal name] perfect love casteth out fear." 1 John 4: 18.

There is one kind of fear which, if we keep before our eyes, will ultimately secure to us eternal life. "In the fear of the Lord is strong confidence; and his children shall have a place of refuge. The fear of the Lord is a fountain of life, to depart from the snares of death." Prov. 14: 26, 27. "Let us therefore fear, lest a promise being left us of entering into his rest, any of you should seem to come short of it." Heb. 4: 1. "The fear of man bringeth a snare; but whoso putteth his trust in the Lord shall be safe." Prov. 29: 25.

Brought safely by his hand thus far,
Why should we now give place to fear?
How can we want if he provide?
Or lose our way with such a guide?

THE SAINT'S INHERITANCE.

In John 14, Jesus says, "I go to prepare a place for you. And if I go and prepare a place for you, I will come again, and receive you unto myself." Let us turn to the 21st and 22nd chapters of Rev., and read a revelation from Jesus Christ to the apostle John: "And I saw a new heaven, and a new earth; for the former heaven and the former earth were passed away: and the sea was no more. And I, John, saw the holy city, "the New Jerusalem, descending from God, out of heaven, prepared like a bride adorned for her husband. And I heard a great voice out of heaven, saying, Behold, the tabernacle of God is with men, and he shall pitch his tent among them, and they shall be his people, and God himself shall be among them—their God. And he shall wipe away every tear from their eyes; and death shall be no more, nor grief, nor crying; nor shall there be any more pain: for the former things are passed away. And he that sat upon the throne, said, Behold, I make all things new. And he said to me, Write, for these are true and faithful words. And he said to me, It is done. I am the Alpha and the Omega, the beginning and the end. I will give to him that is athirst, of the fountain of the water of life freely. The conqueror shall inherit all things: and I will be to him a God, and he shall be to me a son. But as for the cowards, and unbelieving, and the abominable, and murderers, and prostitutes, and sorcerers, and idolaters, and all liars—their part shall be in the lake which burns with fire and brimstone, which is the second death. And there came one of the seven angels, who had the seven vials full of the seven last plagues, and spoke with me, saying, Come, and I will show you the bride, the Lamb's wife. And he showed me the city, the holy Jerusalem, coming down out of heaven from God, having the glory of God [its lustre was like to that of a precious gem, even as a jasper stone, clear as crystal], having a great and high wall; having also twelve gates, and over the gates twelve angles, and names written upon them, which are the names of the twelve tribes of the sons of Israel: on the east, three gates; on the north, three gates; on the south, three gates; and on the west, three gates. And the wall of the city had twelve foundations, and on them the names of the twelve apostles of the Lamb.

And he that spake with me, had a golden reed, that he might measure the city, and its gates and wall. And the city is square, and the length is equal to its breadth: and he measured the city with the reed, twelve thousand furlongs: and its length, and its breadth, and its height are equal. And he measured its wall one hundred and forty-four cubits, according to the measure of a man, that is, of an angel. And the wall was built of jasper, and the and the city was pure gold, like refined glass. And the foundation of the walls of the city were adorned with every precious stone. The first foundation is jasper; the second, sapphire; the third, chalcedony; the fourth, emerald; the fifth, sardonyx; the sixth, sardius; the seventh, chrysolite; the eighth, beryl; the ninth, topaz; the tenth, chrysoprasus; the eleventh, hyacinth; and the twelfth, amethyst. And the twelve gates were twelve pearls: each of the gates was of one pearl. And the street of the city was pure gold, like transparent glass. And I saw no temple in it, for the Lord God Almighty and the Lamb are the temple of it. And the city had no need of the sun, neither of the moon to shine on it, for the glory of the Lord enlightened it, and the Lamb is the light of it. And the nations of the saved shall walk in its light, and the kings of the earth do bring their glory and their honor into it. And the gates of it shall not be shut by day [for there shall be no night there]. And they shall bring the glory and the honor of the nations into it. And nothing unclean shall enter into it, nor anything which practices abomination and falsehood; but only those who are written in the Lamb's book of life.

And he showed me a river of water of life, clear as crystal, issuing out of the throne of God, and of the Lamb. In the midst of the broad street, and on each side of the river, was the tree of life, producing twelve kinds of fruit—producing its fruit every month: and the leaves of the tree are for the healing of the nations. And every curse shall cease. And the throne of God and the Lamb shall be in it; and his servants shall serve him. And they shall see his face; and their names shall be borne upon their foreheads. And there shall be no more night; and they have no need of a lamp, nor of the light of the sun; because the Lord God shall enlighten them; and they shall reign forever and ever.

And he said to me, These words are faithful and true. Behold, I come quickly: blessed is he who keeps the words of the prophecy of this book. And he said to me, Seal not up the words of the prophecy of this book, for the time is near. Let him that is unjust, be unjust still; let him that is polluted, be polluted still; and let him that is righteous, be righteous still; and let him that is holy, be holy still. Behold, I come quickly, and my reward is with me. I will recompense to every man according as his work shall be. [Happy are they who keep his commandments, that they may have the privilege to eat of the tree of life; and they shall enter by the gates into the city. Without are the dogs, and the sorcerers, and the fornicators, and the murderers, and the idolaters, and every one who loves and invents a lie.]"

Who would not be an inhabitant of so beautiful, pure, and holy a place, yes, sons and daughters, joint heirs with Christ. All that will may come. "The Spirit and the bride say, Come; let him that is athirst, come; whosoever will, let him take of the water of life freely. And I testify to every one that hears the prophecy of this book, If any man add to these things, God shall add to him the plagues which are written in this book: and if any one take away from the words of the book of this prophecy, God will take away his part out of the book of life, and out of the holy city—the things which are written in this book. He who testifies these things, says, Surely I come quickly. Can we all say with John, Amen. Even so, come, Lord Jesus. Amen"?—Sel. by Sr. W. Johnson, West Burlington, Penn.

SPIRITUALITY versus CARNALITY.

An Extract from a Lecture by the late W. Anderson, D. D., United Presbyterian Minister, Glasgow.

The characteristic doctrine of that system of interpretation which it is the design of the present course of lectures to explain and establish, is that the heavens must receive Christ only for a short time; and that, as the nobleman who had gone to a far country to receive for himself a kingdom, that is, the title of authority to the kingdom, he will return to put that title into force, and set up and administer the kingdom of the millennial age, as its manifested, visible king. Briefly, instead of our feeling that he may delay his coming as long as the end of the millennium, we expect that he will come and introduce the millennium, and continue to regulate it. While those of a contrary opinion expect a millennium without Christ's presence, except such spiritual presence as is just now enjoyed, we, on the other hand, contend that his personal manifested presence will be the great secret of all the happiness and glory, and that without it a millennium of joy could not possibly have any existence, for the very obvious reason that, in absence of the bridegroom, the bride must mourn.

We have Christ's own express authority for maintaining that his personal, manifested, visible presence is necessary to constitute the presence of the bridegroom, for which no merely spiritual presence can prove an adequate substitute. You who think that you enjoy that spiritual presence, are you quite satisfied with it? If you are, your satisfaction convicts you of self-delusion; for a principal evidence of the spiritual presence being enjoyed is that it excites an ardent longing for the personal presence, when the saved shall behold his glory and see him as he is. Is not that your expectation, all of you, that you shall one day see Christ, see him of whom you have heard so much, and on whom you have thought so much, on whom you have depended so much, of whom you have felt I trust so much? Oh that you shall yet see him in the glory of his majesty, in the grace of his love; see him to be saluted by him so familiarly as his well-beloved brethren, who have been faithful to his cause, and welcomed to abide with him forevermore. Is not that your hope for the far distant heaven? Until you have attained to the realization of this hope, you feel that you will never be completely satisfied, that you must see him as he is. And yet how many reprobate us as carnal in our hopes. Once they called us sensual; but in their great charity they have mitigated the accusation these two or three years, and are now in the habit of calling us only sensuous.

When we believe and hope that the same beatific vision of the glorious Redeemer, which you expect will enrapture you far away up and distant in that heaven, when we expect that when the New Jerusalem comes down from the heaven, the heaven will be transferred to mother earth, Christ's mother earth as well as my mother earth, for his human nature is taken out of mother earth; in that day when the tabernacle of God will be with man: not less must you than we be implicated in the charge of sensuousness, since it is the same God we both desire, the seeing of Christ personally. You expect all that, and the intercommunion with Christ, billions of billions of miles away from mother earth; we expect it down here; and if we be sensuous, you are sensuous too. How pretentious the men are to discriminate impartially in the utterance of their revilings. Let them abide by the old English, and say "carnal," and then let the matter be tried by that issue. Whose hope is the most carnal? Theirs. What is their hope? That the millennial church will be happy and glorious without the presence of the divine Bridegroom, and that she will manage the household very well in his absence, by the agency of her pastors and the princes of the earth; being only needful of the influences of the Spirit sent from that distant country whither he has gone; where let him abide. Our hope is that he himself will come, and be present, manifested in his glory, and instead of the kings and emperors of this world replenish the offices of power with his glorified saints; for he has not subjected the world to come to the angels, but to the saints. I demand which of these hopes is the less carnal? Christ coming to take the kingdom of the whole earth, that is spirituality. The church can manage the world well enough in his absence, that is carnality.—The Bible Echo.

WHERE ARE WE DRIFTING.?

"Provide things honest in the sight of all men," is the command of God's word; but many, who read it in these times, seem to leave out or forget the word "honest." They "provide things" in abundance; but in order to do this they follow the advice given to a certain young man, "Get money; honestly, if you can, but get it."

There seems to be a perfect epidemic of embezzlements, defalcations and forgeries, frequently followed by suicide, until people hold their breath and ask, what next? One can hardly help questioning whether there is any honesty left among men. But there is a darker side to this picture, in the fact that very many of these cases occur among men who are professing christians. Time was, when, if a man was a church member it was taken for granted that he was an honest man. But so many have proved to be "wolves in sheep's clothing," and so many real disciples have yielded to temptation and become dishonest, that people are apt to look with suspicion upon those who profess to be governed by religious principles. These sad cases are not confined to any one denomination, all are represented.

A city treasurer absconds with a quarter of a million of the peoples' money, and the fact comes out that for two years he has not paid into the treasury a dollar of the money he has received. Yet he was regarded as so honest, that the affairs of several societies of which he was treasurer, were never looked into; his name being considered guarantee that the funds would be properly cared for. His partner, a member and trustee of another church, confesses that the company's affairs have long been "rotten to the core." Upon what principle of right can these men retain their standing in their respective churches? In the same city, a leading member of a prominent church commits suicide, leaving papers which show it to have been long premeditated. Investigation proves that the terrible deed was done because he could not face the exposure of his crime. He had been carrying on a system of forgeries, at first, as a temporary relief from embarassments and losses, and then, the web became more and more entangled, until exposure stared him in the face, and not having the courage to meet it, he took his own life. Yet he was a man of good intentions, earnest in all good works, one whose piety no one doubted, and even those who lost money by him do not gainsay, while they drop the tear of pity for the mental torture which drove him to the fatal deed. What was the trouble in this case? Not a deliberate intention to wrong any man, but a failure to carry his religion into his business. We are to be "diligent in business, fervent in spirit, serving the Lord." These things which "God has joined together," no man has a right to "put asunder."

An eminent divine has truly said, "The religion which is to convert the world must pay its debts." When men will consecrate their business to the Lord, and let his Spirit lead them in all things, then shall we have honest measures, just weights, promises fulfilled, work well performed, and the golden rule exemplified. May God hasten the day —Ex.

CREATING A REVIVAL.

One of our exchanges, speaking of a certain evangelist and his work in an eastern city, says he is co-operating with the clergy of this city in creating a revival here, holding three meetings daily." If we understand this language correctly, we judge these dear brethren have undertaken a work rather beyond their sphere. We cannot create a revival. That is the work of God. But are we not in danger of drifting into just such a view as seems to be indicated by the language above quoted? The prominence given to such methods and revival schemes, has at length resulted in the impression that man can produce a revival. Hence the large amount of spurious work done during many so-called revivals. O, that God would impart to all of his laborers in the vineyard, the endowment of unctuous power, and cause them to look to him for success and victory. Let none attempt to create a revival. If we have any at all, may it be genuine, spiritual, and from above. The revival needed is not one that man gets up, but one that God sends down.—Christian Standard.

GOD'S WORD SETTLED.

"Forever, O Lord, thy word is settled in heaven."—PSALMS 119 : 89.

God is the legitimate and rightful Ruler of the universe, and proposes to govern all his intelligent creatures by his revealed will which is given in his word. When that word becomes the fixed, unvarying rule by which all acts are controled, it is settled; that is, it is permanently established as the standard of government.

The word settle means "To determine, as something which is exposed to doubt or question; to free from uncertainty or wavering; to make sure, firm, or constant; to establish." Webster.

We cannot put beyond "doubt" that which never could be doubted. It is impossible "to free from uncertainty" that which was never liable to be made uncertain. We cannot make "firm" and "sure" that which in no sense was ever liable to fail or fall. If the word of God, according to the text, is settled in heaven, it follows that there was a time when it could be doubted, and could fail as being the governing rule of all the heavenly beings who were required to obey it as the law of that world.

A being who can doubt that which he ought to believe must be a probationer, having the power of volition, to believe or doubt, obey or disobey, according to his voluntary choice.

The Scriptures teach us very plainly that the angels—the subjects of God's law or word in heaven—were once probationers, and that some of them kept their first estate by settling the word of God; that is, establishing it as the eternal, unvarying law to control their conduct; while others kept not that estate, but fell from their loyalty by doubting and disobeying the word of God, thus unsettling it as the rule of their government.

As the introduction of doubt and rebellion in heaven unsettles the word of God there, the removing of that doubt and rebellion must settle it. To accomplish this God removed the incorrigible rebels from their native location, down to the lower regions of darkness, reserved in chains until the time when all beings who refuse to settle the word of God shall receive their reward.

As God is the supreme ruler of the vast domain of his created universe, he cannot introduce varying and antagonistic principles into his government, but those which will harmonize in themselves, and unify all his subjects in obedience to universal and eternal principles of the divine government. We may understand therefore that the same principles which applied to probationary angels in heaven, in settling the word of God, will apply to probationary men on the earth, in doing the same thing; although the circumstances may be widely different.

The grand difference between heaven and earth to-day is, the word has been settled in heaven and is being settled on the earth. The great work of Christ in his earthly mission may be expressed in the following sentence: He has undertaken to settle the word of God in the earth as it has been settled in heaven. He has called and commissioned his church to labor with him in the accomplishment of the wonderful work, and has expressed the central idea comprehending the glorious subject in the prayer he taught that church to devoutly offer, when he instructed her to pray—"Thy kingdom come. Thy will be done in the earth as it is in heaven." What must take place when the kingdom comes? The word of God must be established as the supreme law and controling principle of the entire dominions, just as it has been established in heaven.

How can the will of God be done on the earth as it is done in heaven until the word of God shall be put beyond dispute as to its truthfulness, and shall be universally accepted as the just and only rule of conduct among men on the earth as it is now by the angels in heaven? Echo answers, how?

The Scriptures represent Satan as being the arch rebel, leading angels and men in the work of disputing and disobeying God's word; therefore we may understand that as he taught man to disregard it, so he unsettled it himself and influenced the fallen angels to do the same. Christ and the devil are antipodes in their relations to this subject. Christ laboring to settle the word of God, and the devil to unsettle it.

Christ taught the unbelieving Jews that they were not Abraham's children. He said to them, "Because ye cannot hear my word, ye are of your father the devil, and the lust of your father ye will do. He was a mur derer from the beginning, and abode not in the truth, because there is do truth in him. When he speaketh a lie, he speaketh of his own; for he is a liar, and the father of it." John 8 : 43, 44.

The devil became very wicked by leaving the truth, for he "abode not in the truth;" that is, he ceased to abide—adhere—to the word of God, because he lied about it, or turned it into a lie by falsely interpreting it. Those Jews did the same by the truth which Christ preached, therefore he said to them, "Because I tell you the truth (and not a lie) ye believe me not." V. 45.

Satan's attack upon man in the garden was designed to make him unsettle the word of God, which had been delivered to him as a divine law. He succeeded in causing man to become a rebel against his God by changing the word of God into a lie, by causing him to believe that God did not mean what he said in stating the penalty, "Thou shalt surely die." Satan taught that man, by eating the forbidden fruit, would "not surely die." Man accepted the serpent's interpretation of the word, which unsettled the testimony of God, causing him to doubt the true and legitimate application of the words God had spoken, which caused man's fall and the plunging of a world into the terrible pit of the curse.

From that dreadful epoch in the history of our race God and Satan have been exerting their powers and agencies as antagonists; God to settle his word and thus restore obedience, and Satan to continue the doubt and uncertainty of God's word in men's minds, and so continue the rebellion and the curse.

In harmony with this, God has made faith in his word the first condition of man's restoration to loyalty and communion with himself. Saving faith in man is credence given by him to God's word, thus settling the word, which reverses the action and results, which raises him out of the pit, and will end in abolishing the curse. The pivot upon which man's relation to his God turns, as a friend or enemy, is faith in the truth of his revealed will. He that believes is saved; he that doubts is damned. God gives his Spirit and grace to those who accept his word, and withholds them from all who reject that word.

We look upon this subject as of infinite importance to our race, and would earnestly entreat all our readers to carefully examine themselves, to see if they have in their hearts accepted all the truth of God's word brought to their understanding, and confessed the same before men, as the evidence of their faith and the rule of their life.

A SCOUNDRELLY PLOT EXPOSED.—The Women's Christian Association of Philadelphia have sent out a circular warning the public of a base letter which has been circulated broadcast over the country addressed to young girls. It purports to come from a firm who profess to be "agents for the Centennial Committee"; and it offers remunerative situations in the Centennial Exhibition, besides expenses paid, and wages in advance. Girls are advised by this letter not to consult their parents, but to come without their knowledge. No such firm as that which signs the circular is connected in any way with the Centennial Commission, and the circular is in reality only a vile scheme to entrap the innocent into ruin. It is to be hoped that the originators of this infamous scheme may be detected and punished; though unfortunately the law does not provide a penalty at all adequate to such a dastardly crime. In the mean time the true character of the circular, and the base purpose of those who send it, should be generally understood; and the press throughout the country should warn the public of a device which is sufficiently plausible to be dangerous, and which, if not checked in time, may work an immeasurable amount of ruin. —Boston Journal.

We commend the above caution to the particular consideration of all our friends, and would urge them to take vigilant precaution to guard themselves, their young girls and young men, against falling into the snares of the devil, which no doubt will be thickly coiled at the great Centennial to catch the simple in the folds of death. Millions of dollars will be expended for this national exhibition, which the poor in all lands are suffering for. We expect there will be a great concentration of wickedness, and that Christ's church and cause will receive but very little benefit.

We hope that, if any of our christian friends go there, it will be for the express purpose of laboring to withstand the overflowing tide of last-day corruption. These great national gatherings are open human craters, which vomit forth the pride and evil lusts of fallen humanity. They are Babel unions, where the unlicensed aspirations and unholy ambitions of depraved hearts attempt to build monuments of fame and confer everlasting glory on those whom God has cursed. Let all the people of God be careful how they mingle in these demoralizing, bewitching elements.

LAST DAY TREASURES.

"Ye have heaped treasures together for the LAST DAYS."—JAMES 5 : 3.

The apostle, as a prophet, predicts that in the last days earthly treasures will be unusually concentrated, possessed by few, they being rich, while the laboring multitudes are comparatively poor. He also shows that this inequality of possessions will disturb the harmony in the relations existing between the two classes. He says the poor will complain that their proper and equitable share of profits from labor have not been received, which will tend to deprive them of a competence for their wants, while the unjust proportion received by the rich will enable them to "heap together treasures" in superabundance.

That the social and commercial world is now being greatly disturbed by these predicted circumstances is clearly seen in all countries and under all governments. The question of proper and equitable distribution of wealth is rapidly rising, as the great and threatening question of the age. A perfect mania seems to have seized a certain class, manifesting a wild and lawless determination to become suddenly and immensely rich. All manner of extortion and robbery is defiantly being practiced. The laboring class are being taxed beyond endurance, while the rich and office-holders are shamefully increasing their salaries and robbing all the treasuries of corporations and governments.

We repeat it, the financial question in its various phases is becoming the alarming question of the age. The rich see that their oppressive rule is being threatened, and they are fortifying themselves for a desperate struggle. On the other hand the lower laboring classes are becoming more and more determined to resist their unjust oppressions, and make a more equal distribution of wealth.

That our readers may see one item of this inequality in England and Wales, we present the following statistical table from the London Times:

"The total number of acres in England and Wales is just under 37,000,000, and of this the following twelve persons hold amongst them 1,064,100 acres:

	Acres.	Valuation
Duke of Northumberland	191 481	£182 560
Duke of Devonshire	132 998	140 405
Duke of Cleveland	102 786	95 769
Sir W. W. Wynne	91 022	47,447
Duke of Bedofrd	87 515	141,550
Earl of Carlisle	78 542	49,603
Duke of Rutland	70 022	90,497
Earl of Lonsdale	68 195	71 334
Lord Leconfield	66,104	67,452
Earl of Powis	61,036	63,331
Earl Bronlow	57 800	85 087
Earl of Derby	56,399	163,327

being about 1-35th of the whole. The population of England and Wales is now about 23,000,000, but the land returns excludes the metropolis, in which the great families have a most dangerous and monstrous share of the land and buildings.

The population of the districts included in the return is not much short of 20,000,000, so that the dozen aristocrats mentioned constitute about 12-20,000,000 of the lot, and hold 1-35th of the soil. Such a twenty-millionth as the Duke of Northumberland has 191,481 acres, and his fellow twenty-millionth, the Duke of Devonshire, 132,998. These personages are not so big as the one twenty-millionth of all the population of England and Wales, but only about one twenty-three millionth; and if we had returns of the metropolis, their acreage would be considerably increased, and the rental value thereof would be seen to be gigantic.

The number of owners in England and Wales, still including the metropolis, having less than one acre, is 703,289, and all the small owners in twenty-three English counties have amongst them only 73,871 acres, so that the lowest of the first six big holders has more land than all the small holders in these counties. In the county of Bedford, the small holders, amounting to 5,302, have only 825 acres amongst them; while 2,382 large holders have 285,250 acres. In Berkshire, 4,172 small holders have 1,000 acres amongst them, and 3,068 large holders have 429,848 acres. In Devon, 21,647 small owners have 2,981 acres, while 10,162 big ones have 1,514,002 acres. In Dorset, where the small farmers and laborers are miserably off, the small owners, 7,494 in number, have 1,631 acres, and the 3,409 large holders have 572, 304 acres. In Essex, a wretched county for laborers, the small owners, 14,833 have amongst them 4,033 acres; while 7,472 large owners have 946,401 acres. In Norfolk, the small owners, 16,552 in number, have only 2,468 acres; while 10,096 large ones have 1,232,-415 acres.

These figures do not give all the facts, as the non-rateable waste lands, over which the great owners have sporting and other rights adding to their influence, are not included."

Such inequalities are abominable, and the governments that will pass laws that suffer or promote such injustice or oppression, are very far from being truly christian. But God, very soon, we believe, will let the meek inherit the earth, and cast the howling rich down to hell. May God gather us with the meek in that day.

TEMPORAL POWER OF THE POPES.

When we read the history of the Church of Rome, we are astonished at the power that has been exercised by the Popes over both Church and State. It has surpassed all other power, ever possessed by any human beings; because kings and emperors have been its subjects, and bowed in humble submission to the orders from the Vatican. The voice of the Pope was received as the voice of God, and as perfect obedience was demanded from the former as the latter.

The following are some of the acknowledgements made in favor of the authority of the Popes. "All the kingdoms of the west regard him as a terrestrial God." Labbe Conc., 28 vol., VIII., 666; and Bruy's Histoire des Popes, 5 vols ii., 100. "All power is given unto thee in heaven and on earth." Labbe, ix., 920, 927. Du Pin Hist., iii., 602. "If the Pope should err by enjoining vices, or forbidding virtues, the church would be bound to believe vices to be good, and virtues evil." Bellarm, Disput. b. iv., c, 5. Daniel said this power, symbolized by the "little horn," would "think to change times and laws; and they shall be given into his hand, until a time and times and the dividing of time." Dan. 7 : 25. We do not see how this prophecy could be more literally fulfilled than it has been by the Papal power.

In the fourth century, the christian emperors were styled, "your Eternity," "your Divinity." "Thou art another God upon earth." Speech of Marcellus in Lat. conc. Julius II. "Thou art not only another king of men, but King of kings." Begminius in same council to Leo X.

The secret order of the Jesuits was organized Aug. 15th, 1534, in the chapel at Montmartyr, by Don Inigo Lopes De Recalde, or Ignatius Loyola. A part of their oath, referring to the Pope, reads as follows:

"He hath power to depose heretical kings, princes, States, Commonwealths, and governmemts, and that they may safely be destroyed. . . . I do denounce and disown any allegiance as due to any heretical king, prince, or State named Protestant, or obedience to their inferior magistrates, or officers. I do declare the doctrine of the church of England, of the Calvinists, Hoguenots, and other Protestants to be damnable, and those to be damned who will not forsake them. I do further declare that I will help, assist and advise all or any of his Holiness's agents in any place wherever I shall be, and do my utmost to extirpate the heretical Protestant doctrine, and to destroy all their pretending power, legal or otherwise."

As the church claims to be infallible in her decisions, her real position is the same now it has been for centuries. She submits only because she dare not resist. Had she the power, Protestants would fare no better now than in the thirteenth or fourteenth centuries. An able writer in The Bulwark says:

"The temporal power of the Popes is one of the most marvelous creations the world ever witnessed. A beginning so small and ending so transcendently and immeasurably great, has not its like again in history. In the first age, we see the presbyter of Rome presiding over a congregation of converts. He is as plain in manners and humble in rank as any of them. He carries no pastoral staff, he makes no special pretensions; and as for a crown, the only crown he ever dreams of is martyrdom; so is he seen in the first century. But look at him in the thirteenth century. His seat towers above that of kings; his shadow covers nations, and his power waxes great toward the east and the west, towards the north and the south, till the globe is not big enough to hold it."

The evidence is now overwhelming to show that this long-existing, cruelly oppressive, wonderfully powerful enemy of Christ, and his true followers, must soon go down like a "millstone," "cast into the depth of the sea," to "be found no more at all." Rev. 18 : 21. It will be a joyful hour for the friends of Jesus. The saints are to be raised from the dead at that time, to see "the smoke of her burning." The instruction to the saints then is expressed as follows: "Rejoice over her, thou heaven, and ye holy apostles and prophets, for God hath avenged you on her." Rev. 18 : 20. "The marriage Supper of the Lamb" follows soon after the destruction of the Roman woman.

Thank the Lord, the day is at hand, when the martyred saints shall live again, to die no more. Should they stand as witnesses to tell of the tortures, and horrid deaths they received from the church at Rome, all the world would say Amen to her eternal destruction. Justice has lingered long, but the hour is at hand for its faithful and final adminstration. No arm can stay its approach. The results will be terrible for the oppressor and the persecutor of the saints of the Most High. Let us be one in Christ, and all will be well.
M. G.

OUR latest news from Europe is very ominous and threatening to the peace of the continent. The "Eastern Question" is again exciting the great Powers alarmingly as to what disposition can be made of Turkey, and how to end the rebellion of its discontented subjects. The rebellion is evidently strengthening and advancing, and it is becoming evident that the rebels are encouraged by secret promises, and strengthened by help secretly given by some strong government, which has a cherished purpose to accomplish by the final overthrow of the Sultan's government.

We think from present appearances that the waiting, watching church may look for some awfully grand prophetic events just in the future. We are confident that we have never seen anything more assuring to waiting faith than the present position of the great antagonistic parties now on the prophetic stage. Wait patiently at your appointed post, brethren, and speedy victory will be yours.

A SENSIBLE ANSWER.—At the New York Christian Convention, many questions were answered by Bro. Moody. Among them was the following:

"Sometimes there is excitement in a community, suppose, for instance, political; can two leading questions occupy the minds of the community at one time? A. The political question might interest the world. The thing I dread more than politics, however, is these miserable church fairs. That bothers me most. More meetings have been broken up by bazaars, church fairs and festivals than all your political meetings."

Satan cares but little about revivals, if he can succeed in following them up by church fairs or festivals. By one fair he may neutralize the results of six weeks' labor to save sinners.
M. G.

LEXINGTON.—Bro. Geo. W. Wright writes from Lexington, Mich., April 14th, 1875: "The revival interest, awakened and continued for three weeks so successfully, is still continuing with unabated fervor, since Bro. Grant left. Some come to Christ every night. Nothing like it has been witnessed in this village for the past twenty years."

REV. HENRY VARLEY held his tenth annual tea-meeting for butchers at Mr. Spurgeon's Tabernacle last week. About 1,600 sat down to tea in the spacious school-rooms underneath, and consumed 1,110 lbs. of meat, 1,100 lbs of bread, 580 lbs. of cake, etc, Mr. W. M'Arthur, M. P. for Lambeth, took the chair, and said he had never witnessed a more interesting spectacle than this magnificent gathering.—Christian Herald.

NEW HYMN AND TUNE BOOK.

At a meeting of the Advent Christian Publication Society held April 17th, 1876, it was voted, that the Society publish a new Hymn and Tune Book, not to exceed 200 pages, and that the following brethren be a committee to arrange and prepare said book for publication: J. Hemenway, S. G. Mathewson, and A. W. Sibley.

Those persons having hymns or tunes that they would like to have inserted in the new hymn book are requested to forward the same to the Business Agent of the Society—Bro. G. T. Adams—immediately, and he will send them to the committee.

OUR CAUSE IN PORTLAND.

In these strange times, so rife with alienation, division and disintregation in all departments of society; when all human compacts seem crumbling to fragments; when the cohesive force of all earthly relations is rapidly dissolving; when even brotherly fellowship is as volatile as air, and the most sacred bonds of christian fraternity melt away before the deadly miasm of jealousy; when all the destructive agencies of society and of nature are breaking loose, as if premonitory of universal disruption and ruin; when, in short, all things seem going swiftly to pieces like ships dashed on the rocks by the storm-driven and relentless sea;—in the midst of this darkness and confusion, anything that looks like union, or savors of brotherly love, may send a fragrant impulse through the desponding heart of the church. So, hoping to cheer a little the many toilers in the great harvest-field, I send out this brief note of gladness.

For five years there have been in this city two Advent churches, whose hostile feeling and frequent unhappy collisions has been a constant menace to all permanent success of the Lord's Word, and a standing and shameful disgrace to our faith. Many good people have been repelled from our meetings by the fierce feudalism of the two Advent bodies. All effort for revival has been neutralized by the under-current of ill feeling that has been kept alive through all these years. There has been real regret in both churches at the division, and desire for reunion. Several methods have been tried for putting the sundered body together, but without effect till now.

At a very large meeting at Union Hall, on the evening of the 18th, the two churches were made one, amid much good feeling and grateful rejoicing. "What God has joined together let not man put asunder." It is hoped and expected that union and tranquility will now prevail, and the public criticisms and taunts so long hurled at us will cease, or at least be without occasion. The new church will sustain the same relation to the State Conference as other churches in Maine.

If this example of re-union shall have an influence in preventing other churches from hasty and disastrous divisions, or in reuniting any already separated, we shall be twice glad. May the time hasten when all the saints, of all realms and all ages, shall be gathered into one pure, happy, glorified family, in a beautiful, tearless, and ever-joyous home, amid the fadeless splendors of the new world.
E. A. STOCKMAN.

THE DELUGE A WARNING.

"As it was in the days of Noah," when once the long-suffering of God had waited a hundred and twenty years for the preparation of the ark, the time of wrath came. The sin of the world was ripe for judgment. The cup of their iniquity was full. Divine patience, grieved by the continued and increasing licentiousness of mankind, returned to the court of heaven, and wrath came forth, wrapped in a misty cloud and armed with thunderbolts, to avenge the insulted majesty of God. His footsteps shook the earth, and broke up the sealed fountains of internal seas; his voice reverberated through the sky, and opened the windows of heaven. The teeming clouds emptied their buckets on the mountains; the swelling tide covered the plains. Waters met waters, rushing, swelling, rising and chasing man and beast from steep to higher steep, and swallowing up all that had life, until the highest hills were covered, and none remained but Noah and those who were with him in the ark. It was a fearful doom to the ungodly of that age and a warning to all who, in every subsequent age, have lived ungodly; it is a warning to this age. It forecasts another day of wrath; for "so shall the coming of the Son of man be."

The world will be just as careless and unconcerned about his coming as those of old time were about the coming deluge. As then, so now, they are eating and drinking, buying and selling, planting and building, marrying and giving in marriage, in utter indifference to the coming event, and careless of any preparation for it. Hence it will came upon them suddenly, even as a snare at unawares or as a thief in the night. At an unexpected moment it will come. The long suffering of God waits until the last of the Gentile complement has entered the ark of salvation. Who can tell how soon that may be? None but the Omniscient knoweth. The time is short. Nature anticipates a coming change. The political and ecclesiastical elements are in ominous readiness for a final fusion. O reader, have you entered the ark? Are you safe in Christ? If so, rejoice; that day will be to you the day of redemption. If not, make no delay. Flee from the wrath to come. Flee to Jesus while you may. Another day may be too late.—Prophetic Times.

A European war about Turkey continues to be apprehended as much as ever, notwithstanding the efforts of diplomatists to smooth down matters. The Sun says:

"If home politics are somewhat dull, foreign politics are likely to become more lively every month. There can be little doubt that the mediation of the great Powers between the Porte and its revolted subjects in Western Turkey has proved a failure. Not only do the Herzegovinians continue to fight, but they also continue to conquer, and the latest news is that Servia and Montenegro are preparing to join the insurrection. Should they do so, it is very certain that Turkey will not be able to suppress the insurrection alone, especially as her financial position becomes more and more desperate, and it is only too likely that the bondholders will have to go without their money next month. In that case the question of foreign intervention will arise, and the Powers will have to consider if they will consent to the presence of an Austrian army on Turkish territory."

THE TRACT FUND.

THE ADVENT CHRISTIAN PUBLICATION SOCIETY, at a meeting on Springfield camp-ground, August 11th, 1875, voted to raise Two Thousand Dollars for the free distribution of Tracts the ensuing year; and they invite the help and co-operation of all lovers of the Lord and of his truth, in the furtherance of the good cause. The times are ominous of coming events, and admonish us to diligence in the Master's work. The Lord is at the door, and what we do must be done quickly. Let the contributions be prompt, hearty, and liberal. The Lord will reward the liberal giver.

Correspondence.

From Bro. G. W. Stetson.

Dear Crisis:—On March 4th and 5th we held our annual meeting, when sixteen enrolled their names to come into church fellowship with us, by receiving the right hand of fellowship. There were several others who were "almost persuaded"; and having written to Sr. L. M. Stoddard, of Lockport, N. Y., to come to our help, and she having consented, and the interest being good, we maintained our meetings as we could, at intervals, so as not to interfere with other stated gatherings in which all sects were interested, until March 19th, when Sr. S. having arrived, we continued from night to night, with a continually increasing interest, until April 9th, when we were compelled by previous engagements to close the series.

Our house was densely packed, and hundreds went away who could not enter and obtain a hearing. Sr. Stoddard knows how to handle the Word of God in sincerity, and her preaching had very much the effect on the people (especially the clergymen) that the coming down of the angel did when he "troubled the waters."

We felt especially grateful to Elders Rogers and Phelps of the Baptist, and Rev. Mr. Suquiers of the Methodist churches, for tendering their more commodious edifices when they saw our crowded condition, which favor we, perhaps unwisely, declined. The christian charity of these three gentlemen was placed in marked contrast with the vocative case of a nameless fourth, whose sectarianism would not permit him to come near us, and who exerted all the influence he was master of to prevent others? with what success he did and will continue to see.

This meeting has developed to all where toleration exists, and where it does not; where human creeds rule, and where God's Word is more potent than sect. "Let the people praise thee, O God, let ALL the people praise thee." May the Lord be gracious to him, and from Aquila and Priscilla may he learn the way of God more perfectly.

Nine more were added to our church roll, and we trust their names are also in the book of life. Twenty-five added in all, some of whom have for a long time been among but not of us until now. On evenings of April 11th and 12th, Sr. S. spoke in Cambridge, in the Congregational house, and on the 13th will be at East Randolph, N. Y. May the Lord prosper her temporally and spiritually.

From Bro. G. A. Streeter.

Dear Brn. and Srs.:—I am away down in Maine at the time of writing this, and I find here a large field of labor. People are anxious to hear the truth, and that consists in more than one point. We are to live by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God. We are certain that we are in the last days. Jesus is soon coming, the dead will soon arise (all of them), and the reward be given. This great head-light must be kept in sight; yet we must "let the lower lights be burning." Jesus and his coming and the connecting events should be the great head-light; holiness and an entire giving up to the Lord in all things "the lower lights." The child of God needs the Spirit of God to help him to live as well as to talk. We have passed the time to stop and discuss points, or pick at each other's faults. Jesus' coming should stir every one that professes faith in it.

If earnestness and diligence are becoming anywhere, surely it is in those who profess to believe in eternal things. Yes, let us be earnest, not shunning to declare all of God's word. In some places where I go I am led to speak wholly on the signs of the times, and in others on holiness and Bible perfection. I love to do it, blessed be God. In some other places both are needed. We need wisdom from on high in these days. My prayer is daily, Lord, give me much of thy wisdom, that I may speak rightly, and be found at last giving meat in due season to the household of faith.

The Lord has led me in ways I little thought of, and I do love to let him lead me. It looks now that my field of labor for the present will be in Maine. Brethren and sisters, pray for me, that I may be led just right. By God's help I am determined to see you in glory, which I expect is not far away. God bless you all, is the prayer of your Bro. in patient waiting for the coming of Christ our Lord.

From Bro. D. Eastman.

Dear Brethren:—Perhaps you would like to hear from one that loves the truth and all of God's children. I have trials, but how can I be discouraged when I see we are nearing our eternal home. We are to be purified, made white and tried, before we can enter our eternal rest. Our hopes and prospects will be blighted, and we come short of the kingdom at last, unless we can stand trials and temptations. We read in the book of God, "Blessed is he that endureth temptation, for when he is tried he shall receive a crown of life, which the Lord hath promised to them that love him." God has purposed to try us, and purify us, and take away all the dross and reprobate silver; then we shall come forth like the pure gold that is tried in the fire. Thus we are to become a peculiar people, zealous of good works. One thought of the glory that will be revealed when our Lord comes makes our trials seem as nothing. O that we could believe that all things shall work together for good to those that love God. Do we not know if we love God? He says, If you love me, you will keep my commandments.

O, may my love for him never grow cold! If others seek to go with the giddy throng, and be rocked to sleep in carnal security, they must; but I will ever be found at my post, doing what I can in the cause of my Master. I know, dear brethren, the Lord has worked with me the past winter; I have seen quite a goodly number hopefully converted to Christ; others renewed their covenant with the Lord. Our warfare is about ended. We can "hold the fort" a little longer; yes, raise the banner a little higher, and never be ashamed to be found fighting in so great and glorious a cause. We will bear the hardships a little longer. We have inscribed on our banner "Eternal Life, and a Kingdom on the New Earth." There is no retracting; it is "victory or death."

Brethren and sisters in the Lord, if you have trials, carry them all to Him who has promised to help you. We will hold fast whereunto we have attained, lest some man take our crown.

East Canaan, N. H.

From Bro. W. S. McFarland.

Dear Readers of the Crisis:—Having read the editorial of Bro. Couch on "Publish the Truth," in No. 1063, I felt, "Here am I, send me." So I thought to follow it with the following statements and requests:

I design starting in a few days to South Eastern Kansas, probably to make my home there. I desire to continue to work for our Master all the time I can spare from making a support for my family. I receive, read and scatter the beloved Crisis, A. C. Times, Bible Banner, and Biblical Messenger, and hope to do so until Jesus comes. I desire to be fully equipped for the work, and my ministerial library is small, consisting only of Bible, Concordance, Greek Testament, and some of our smaller tracts. I would like other publications,—a prophetic chart, Ancient History, etc. Are there any second hand ones unused? As to tracts, I am interested in and will try to be faithful in scattering them. Who has the funds to furnish them?

There are those who are older in the service, and more capable than myself, who probably need help in this way; for this reason I feel some delicacy in making these requests; but unless they are made they will never be known. Let us heed the exhortation of Bro. Couch, and do all we can in the short time we have. My address will be Independence, Montgomery Co., Kansas.

Jefferson, Green Co., Iowa.

BRO. D. E. LYON, Centerbury, O., writes:—"The date of January 8th, 1876, evening, is indelibly fixed in my experience, as the time when I was so surrounded by the mercy and love of our God, that I fully and unconditionally surrendered to him, and he took possession of me. Praise his holy name forever. You remember the time and the circumstances. Since my entire and unreserved consecration, at Nevada, how my experience has widened and deepened, and enlarged; and such a fulness and abundant witnessing I never enjoyed. This morning, my witness is clear and bright, and my heart is full of praise to Him who hath redeemed us by his own precious blood. My growth in grace is very apparent, and I have traveled way out of sight from where I stood when I went to Nevada.

Last Friday night, at a special meeting for the promotion of holiness, I was unutterably full, for I arose and attempted to speak and give expression in words to my feelings; but no language, that would convey even a faint idea of what my heart contained, came to my mouth. Praise the Lord.

Sunday last, at the prayer and class meeting, at Broomfield M. E. church, this very abundant witnessing and fulness was repeated, and I said as I plunged into that ocean of love, Lord, stay thy hand, and let me tell of it to this people. The class-leader invited me to speak, I arose, and opened my mouth, and the Lord filled it. Such liberty I never experienced, and I never talked so before, and never can again, unless I am filled with the same Spirit. May this abundant witnessing continue, is my prayer, and will you pray in my behalf that it may.

There is a band of christians here, who meet Friday evenings specially for the work of entire consecration, and the promotion of holiness; and they are being wonderfully blest all the time. They take high ground. There is no difference between Jew and Greek; and sectarian lines, or differences, are ignored at their meetings. Oh! that the whole church of professed christians could come up on this high ground, where the atmosphere is purer, where we can fellowship each other heartily, the same Spirit witnessing to each, and differences of theology all forgotten. I am satisfied. I rest on his promises. Jesus keeps me."

THEY who doubt the truth of religion because they can find no christian who is perfect, might as well deny the existence of the sun because it is not always noonday.

From Bro. J. Morrison.

Dear Brn.:—Little did I think, in 1843, when I embraced the doctrine of the speedy revelation of the Son of God from heaven, that I should see the year 1876 dawn on this present evil world; but so it is. Those who understandingly rest upon the rock of Inspired Truth clearly see in the prophetic numbers that the coming of the Lord is at hand. The news from distant lands, the waking up of all nations, all confirm God's faithful Word. How thankful we should be to God for a chart that is guiding us safely across the sea of time into the land of eternal rest,—a land where light, life, joy and immortality shall be a perpetual reality.

Let us watch, pray, and keep humble and loving. Jesus is coming in very deed. Soon our eyes shall behold him with all his saints. Yes, Jesus is coming. Think of it. Turn the words over in your mind; take them with you when yon pray; think of them when you work, and you will find them a balm for any wound, a cordial for your fears.

New Glasgow, P. Q., Canada.

THE EASTERN TROUBLE.

It is impossible to say from the current dispatches what the precise drift of the insurrectionary demonstration in Turkey really is. What is reported as a great success of the insurgents on one day is claimed to be a Turkish victory on the next. The Carlist war in Spain was not more prolific in shifting and contradictory rumors than has thus far been the insurrection in Herzegovina. The one thing that is clear, however, is that the rebellion is not only far from being quelled, but is manifestly on the increase. The Turkish commander in the field telegraphs to his minister of war: "The Prince of Montenegro openly made war upon us. About seven thousand well armed and regularly organized Montenegrins had joined the insurgents." The Russian Government has also been informed that the Servians mean to take the field in May. There is every reason to believe, therefore, that all the disaffected provinces are on the point of making common cause in the effort to throw off the Turkish yoke. That the Porte has a vivid apprehension of such a contingency is apparent from the rumors of an intention to raise what is called the standard of the Prophet, that is, to make a fanatical appeal to the Mohammedan population to come to the rescue.

It is very obvious, however, that it is not its own subjects alone that the Turkish Government has to fear. That power that is always in the background of Turkish troubles, which not only bides its time for realizing its traditional aspirations for an outlet through the Mediterranean, but is ever ready to hurry up the moment when Constantinople shall be its own, is hovering on the outskirts of the present complication. It cannot be proved, of course, that Russia is supplying either means or encouragement to the Herzegovinians and other insurgents, but they certainly act as if they had nothing to fear from St. Petersburg. All the efforts of Austria to allay the pending trouble seems to be paralyzed through some mysterious influences, although that Government has the apparent co-operation of Russia.

It is well known that the German policy, as it has been called, has been rapidly on the wane in Russian councils of late, while the Slavic influence, which urges the building up of another nationality on the ruins of Turkey, has spread from the Russian masses to the governing orders. Hence come the rumors of the Czar's intended resignation and the accession to the throne of his son, who is the favorite of the Slavic party. It is not probable that this party will induce the Government to push its policy by means of war at present, but it induces a disposition to keep Turkey in continual dissension and difficulty as the surest means of relaxing the hold of the Mohammedan power in Europe and hastening its escape to Asia. It is the play of these great agencies and contingencies which invests the present disturbances with lively interest, and makes it well worth while to note every change in the unfolding drama.—Boston Joarnal.

The Carlists are utterly defeated in Spain, but the Record justly remarks:

"It is impossible to look to the future of Spain without the gravest anxiety. When the first exultation of the victory is over, political questions will come to the front, and, more ominous still, religious questions—the old, undying conflict between freedom of thought and conscience, and the tyranny of the church of Rome. What will be the character of the forthcoming Spanish Parliament? No doubt the church party will strain every nerve to secure a majority. The intense activity of the priests in every direction is recorded in the recent telegraphic news. What will be the policy of the Government; what the attitude of King Alfonso; what the influence of Queen Isabella and its results; what will be the result of the conflict between a constitutional liberalism on the one side, and Popish intolerance and aggression on another, and revolutionary violence on a third? These are all questions in the settlement of which the interests of Europe at large are deeply involved, and the hurried march of events is fast pushing them on to a solution.—Christian Herald.

Obituaries.

LOMBARD. In Burke, Vt., March 27th, 1876, of gastric fever, Sister Ellen, wife of Elder I. K. Lombard, aged forty-six years.

Sister Ellen commenced the christian life in her early days, and it was always her constant aim to glorify God. She loved the truths of the gospel, and looked for the coming of the Lord and the resurrection of the dead with deep interest. She was always scrupulously careful to be in dress and in life what a christian should be. She was a good companion and help-meet for our brother in his work, and was invariably ready to testify for Jesus when the opportunity was afforded. She clung naturally to life, but when asked if she felt that living or dying she was the Lord's, she sweetly answered, "Yes." She sleeps, we trust, in Jesus.

"Blessed sleep,
From which none ever wake to weep."

She was brought to Canada and buried near the spot where within a few months a sister and niece had been laid; the latter having been taken sick and died while on a visit at Bro. Lombard's only a few weeks before. The aged mother of Sister Lombard was present at the funeral, now ninety years of age, who waits with pious interest for the resurrection of the dead at the coming of the Lord, to bring back her loved ones. Sermon by the writer from 1 Cor. 15: 54, 55.

L. C. McKINSTRY.

MARR. Our much loved sister, Mrs. Phebe M. Marr, of Lemington, Me., died at the residence of her son, in Portland, Me., April 6th, 1876, aged seventy-two years.

She stated to one of her sons a few days before her death that she thought she experienced a change of heart when only seven years of age, but she wandered from the Lord for a time. At twenty she made a public profession, was baptized by Elder James Sawyer, and joined the church. For more than fifty years she has lived a consistent christian life, as all who have known her can testify. She was a firm believer in the second personal coming of Christ, and a literal resurrection of the dead. She was a close Bible student, and a great lover of what we believe to be the "present truth." Her four sons, a large circle of friends and the church all feel that they have met with a great loss. We are sustained by the hope she expressed just before her death—"I will soon come back again." C. H. SWEET.

CROWELL. At his residence near Pleasanton, Kansas, Bro. Chester Crowell, aged fifty-six years.

This father in Israel had lived for many years a consistent christian life. As a member of the church he was always ready to aid in any good work, either with his time or means; as husband he was both faithful and kind; as father, affectionate, seeking the best interests of his children. He was an ardent lover of the blessed Bible; it was indeed the man of his counsel. As a citizen he was much beloved by all who knew him, as was proven by the large congregation attending his funeral. The sermon was preached from 2 Tim. 4: 8—"And not unto me only," etc., by the writer (a Baptist minister and former pastor). The theme of the discourse was, "The climax of Christianity." Thus passed down quietly into the sleep of death a much loved brother on the 4th of April, A. D. 1876.

Slumber on, sweet sleeper,
No noise shall disturb thy peace
Until your Savior comes
To loose the bands of death.

A. C. Times, please copy. J. R. BALDWIN.

NORTHEY. In Lisbon, N. H., March 15th, 1876, Miss Ella J., daughter of Moses and Elizabeth Northey, aged thirteen years.

She loved the doctrine of the resurrection, and wished the following lines published in connection with this notice:

"The once loved form, now cold and dead,
Each mournful thought employs;
And nature weeps her comforts fled,
And withered all her joys.
Hope looks beyond the bounds of time,
When what we now deplore
Shall rise in full immortal prime,
And bloom to fade no more."

Text, Mark 5: 36. N. WHEELER.

WARREN. In Boston, Mass., March 3d, 1876, of pneumonia, Mrs. Maria L. Warren, mother of Angelia Hamblin, of East Boston, aged sixty-five years.

Sister Warren has for many years professed her faith in the Lord Jesus as her Savior, and has been an ardent lover of the doctrine of the Second Advent, and to the last expressed a lively hope in the resurrection of the dead to eternal life at the sounding of the last trump. She leaves many dear friends to mourn her loss. Words of comfort were spoken at the funeral by the writer. B. WOODSIDE.

MEAD. At Norwalk, Ohio, April 6th, 1876, Edmund Mead, aged eighty-eight years.

Our brother was one of the earlier settlers in this community, and was widely and favorably known For more than fifty years he had been an exemplary church member. For twenty years or more he had been looking for the coming of the Son of man, and died in hope of a glorious immortality, to be received in the resurrection morn. Services by the writer.

Times, please copy. C. MENDENHALL.

CONGDON. In North Fort Ann, April 2nd, 1876, Eunice Congdon, aged sixty-three years.

She had been a member of the Baptist church forty years. In Sept., 1874, she heard of the soon coming of Christ to call his children home, and embraced the doctrine and died in the faith that she should soon awake in his likeness. She bore her sickness with christian fortitude. She leaves a kind husband and six children to mourn her loss, five of whom profess to love the Lord.

LEAVITT. In Dorchester, N. H., April 11th, 1876, Mary H., wife of Joseph Leavitt, aged seventy-five years.

She died in the triumph of the christian's faith, which was manifest in all her painful illness as well as in her daily walk in life; thus leaving a memory fragrant with love and kindness to her afflicted family and many kind friends. Services by the writer. D. EASTMAN.

FOREIGN NEWS.

TURKEY.

VIENNA, April 21. The Taggsblatt says that Baron Rodich has tendered his resignation because he objects to publishing the reform decrees.

PARIS, April 21. The Russian Telegraphic Agency is informed that the Porte has declared Count Andrassy's programme exhausted. The Grand Vizier consequently finds himself in danger of being carried away by the military party, which appeals to the fate of arms. This last phase will clear up the situation. The task of diplomacy will only be more urgent. Cabinets are deliberating on the common cause to be proposed to Europe for the pacification of the East and the maintenance of peace.

LONDON, April 21. The Times Berlin dispatch says the Cologne Gazette, Weser Zeitung, and other leading German papers, continue to criticise Russia's policy, and assert that all Andrassy's measures against the insurrection in Turkey are opposed and rendered futile by the United Sclavonic, Ultramontane, Military and Conservative parties in Austria, who for various reasons are bent upon annexing Servia and Bosnia. The apprehensions of the Germans are increased because Austria is arming the Danube steamers, and Servia is purchasing quantities of war material.

The Moscow Gazette says the Turkish soldiers receive neither pay nor provisions, and sell cartridges to the insurgents for bread.

A telegram from Vienna to the Daily News says the foreign ambassadors at Constantinople have remonstrated against the Porte's bringing into Europe troops from Bagdad, on account of the plague.

A special from Berlin says that Austria has instituted fresh negotiations with the great powers as to the proper course to be pursued if the present attempts for the pacification of the Turkish provinces prove fruitless.

HULL, Eng., April 18. The loss of the Victory from Shields for San Francisco now appears beyond a doubt. She had besides Captain Jones, whose body was found yesterday, twenty-five hands and the pilots. All were undoubtedly drowned.

VIENNA, April 19. The three northern European powers have intimated to the Porte, that if a massacre should follow the arming of the Mohammedan population, a military expedition, composed of Austrian and Russian troops, into the Turkish territory will certainly be undertaken.

DOMESTIC NEWS.

Montreal, Ca., April 18. Advices from Gaspe state that there is great distress on the coast. The supply of flour and hay is giving out. Unless navigation opens early it is feared that many will die of hunger. One woman died at Pierce last week from starvation, and at Malbie de Bierachais several families are starving. Horses are dying and farmers are already killing off their whole stock.

The President has vetoed the bill reducing the salary of the President of the United States to $25,000.

The overflow of the Mississippi at Quincy, Ill., and at Bolivia, Mississippi, has caused much suffering among the inhabitants of those localities. Houses, barns and other property have been swept away, and the damage is roughly estimated at a million dollars.

A BLACK HILLS PARTY KILLED.—A party from the Black Hills to-day say that about ten days ago three wagons were found at the entrance of Buffalo Gap, on the Yankton route, destroyed. The stock was gone and signs of a fight were numerous. The wagon covers had been shot to pieces, and parts of the materials with which the wagons had been loaded were lying around, some with marks of balls on them. Indians had undoubtedly attacked and destroyed the entire outfit.

Conference Notice.

The Lord willing, the Connecticut A. C. Conference will meet with the Church at South Windsor, Wednesday evening, April 26th, through the week, and over Sunday, April 30th. It is hoped that all the churches will send delegates, and that all who are interested in the cause, which calls us out as a people to meet the coming Bridegroom, will make an effort to come. Earth's dreary night must soon close; the hosts of sin are let loose; the darkness is great; temptations are mighty; iniquity abounds; pride stalks forth; some are drawing back, and oh how few are enduring in this fatal hour. Who, but the people with the light of prophetic truth touching the coming One, can discern the signs of the times? We are favored with this light. Graciously have its rays been scattered, and loudly are the events speaking. Fear attends the outlook from a human standpoint; but a little in the distance the eye of faith discerns the morning light of eternal glory.

Shall we falter, or grow cold? It is too late. With the truth of God as our accompaniment, and tuned by the Spirit of the divine Master, victory must soon be ours. Let the weak ones come as well as the strong; let every voice be heard in encouragement. Come in the name of the Lord.

Take the cars to Burnside Station, on the H. P. and F. Railroad, where teams will convey those coming to the chapel. The business session, if any, will be on Thursday, April 27th, at 10 o'clock A. M. O. D. WOODRUFF, Sec. and Treas.

NOTICE.—The Alton Bay Campmeeting Committee are notified to meet at Alton Bay Tuesday, May 9th, 1876. J. COUCH.

NOTICE.—The subscriber having changed his place of residence from East Penfield to Seneca Falls, N. Y., is at liberty to supply (occasionally) any church in Central New York that may desire his services. WM. INGMIRE.

Maine Special Notice.

Please attend to this at once. The Secretary, Deacon, or Elder, of each Second Advent Church in Maine should give the number of members in their respective churches, by postal card or letter, at once, to the Secretary of the Maine A. C. Conference, that we may know how many delegates we are entitled to in the S. A. C. Association, chosen at our Annual Conference in June next. Address I. C. WELLCOME, Sec., Yarmouth, Me.

NOTICE.—To the Brethren of Iowa Christian Conference:—You are all aware that we are nearing the time for Tent Meetings. The Iowa Mission Tent is not fit to put into the field this season. There is but about one fourth promised that is needed to put into the field a 50×80 tent, which we much need. Camp and Tent Meetings very much depend on your decision. There are many who are amply able to help if this matter was laid before them. I cannot go all around and see you; I should spend more time than is needed to get the tent I have contracted for. Will some one lend a helping hand, and do it promptly? Tent work must stop if this fails, and the blood of souls must be found in some one's garments. I do not want it to be mine. Come, Brn., wake up, and let me hear promptly from any State of all who wish to help the cause in Iowa, that I may know what to do. P. S. W. DEYO, Charles City, Iowa.

KANSAS STATE CONFERENCE.—The fourth Annual Session of the A. C. Conference of Kansas will convene with the church near Centropolis, Franklin Co., Kansas, Friday, May 19th, 1876, at 10 o'clock A. M., and hold over the following Sunday. We hope to see a general attendance of those who are looking for the return of our Lord and Savior. Will not all the churches throughout the State send delegates to this meeting? Homes will be provided for all who come. Come with the Spirit of the Lord, praying that he may direct in all things.

C. CROWELL, President.
LEVI S. SMITH, Secretary.

THE LAKE VIEW CAMPMEETING, Magog, P. Q., Canada, will be held, as per vote of Conference, immediately after the Alton Bay meeting. Time hereafter definitely given. Let those who have promised to build cottages be in time with their preparations. Lots free, and all welcome.

C. P. DOW, for the Committee.

NOTICE.—There will be a Woman's National Union Campmeeting holden at Seabrook, N. H., commencing June 28th, and continuing till July 10th. Any wishing to build tents can correspond with C. A. Barton, Seabrook, N. H. Particulars hereafter. A. E. SMITH.

THE BEEBE PLAIN ADVENT CAMPMEETING will commence Saturday, June 24th, and hold over two Sabbaths. Particulars hereafter.

Some of our preaching brethren whom it is desirable to hear will be present to preach the Word. Brethren who intend to build, can have lumber of the committee at cost. Please let us know how much you will want. Spruce lumber roughs $9.00 per thousand United States money.

L. C. McKINSTRY, Sec. for Com.

QUARTERLY MEETING.—The first Quarterly Meeting for the Southern District of Wis. will be held at Adams, Green Co., near the residence of Bro. Day, beginning on Friday evening, May 5th, to hold over Lord's day. All are invited to come early, and come to work for God.

WM. SHELDON.

NOTICE.—A meeting is to be held every Sunday at Turner, Me., Chase's Mills school-house, to commence Sunday, April 30th. When there is no preaching, we shall have a prayer meeting at three o'clock in the afternoon. A general invitation is extended to the brethren and sisters abroad to come and labor for the perishing.

For the brethren, C. S. TIRRELL.

NOTICE.—Bro. Charles W. Helme is to take charge of the meetings at North Abington, Mass. Brethren wishing to come to Abington to preach will please correspond either with Bro. C. W. Helme or with Henry M. McPherson, Clerk.

NOTICE.—By an urgent request of the churches of Rockland and St. George, Me., to become their pastor, I preach one half the time at each place. First and third Sunday at Rockland, second and fourth at St. George. H. S. MITCHELL.

REQUEST.—Will Bro. Geo. Thomson, who wrote in "Crisis" of April 12th, give his P. O. address through the same, or write me?

WARREN TEFFT, Otis, Mass.

THE Pittsfield, Me., Campmeeting will commence Sunday, Aug. 27th. O. S. FRENCH, Sec.

THE Mechanic Falls Campmeeting will commence Saturday, Sept. 2d.

R. R. YORK, for the Committee.

NOTICE.—A Quarterly Meeting will be held the last Sabbath in this month at Norwalk, Ohio. Friends are cordially invited. Come.

C. MENDENHALL, Pastor.

ADVENT CHRISTIAN TIMES.

This is an ably conducted weekly paper, edited by Elder Frank Burr, and published under the auspices of the Western A. C. Publishing Society. It gives prominence to the personal coming of Christ, the resurrection of the dead, the final destruction of sinners, and the eternal salvation of saints on the renovated earth. It also insists on a holy life as essential to an admittance into the coming kingdom. $2.20 a year. Address Advent Christian Times, 91 South Green St., Chicago, Ill.

The World's Crisis and Adv. Chris. Times sent postpaid to subscribers who will take both, at the reduced rate of $4.00 per year in advance for both papers. Address World's Crisis, Boston, Mass.

Appointments.

☞ APPOINTMENTS MUST BE RECEIVED AS EARLY AS TUESDAY MORNING (as our paper goes to press about noon) to insure insertion for the coming week.

☞ The following RESOLUTION was passed at the late meeting of the A. C. P. Society:—

"RESOLVED, That no appointments be published in the CRISIS henceforth for persons unknown to the Editorial Board (by which is understood the Editors, Editorial Committee, and Business Agent), unless satisfactory reference shall be given.

The Committee appointed by the Adv. Chris. Association, at its last Annual Meeting, to advise with the Editorial Board "in relation to the publication in the World's Crisis of the appointments of men unworthy of recognition as preachers," having attended to the duty assigned them, recommended, and the Editorial Board have adopted, and ordered to be published, the following resolution:—

"RESOLVED, That when the Editorial Board is properly notified by any of our Churches, or Ministers, or responsible persons, by a written allegation that a certain minister, or ministers, lack moral character, that they be instructed to notify such minister, or ministers, of the information received, as a reason for withholding their appointments till after a proper trial and acquittal."

All communications in relation to this matter should be addressed to the Secretary of the Board—GEO. T. ADAMS, Boston, Mass.

A NEW BOOK.

"LIFE IN CHRIST:

A STUDY OF THE SCRIPTURE DOCTRINE
ON THE NATURE OF MAN; THE OBJECT OF THE DIVINE INCARNATION,
AND THE
CONDITIONS OF HUMAN IMMORTALITY.
BY EDWARD WHITE,
Author of the "Mystery of Growth," etc.
LONDON:
ELLIOT STOCK, 62 PATERNOSTER ROW.
1875."

The above is the title of a book of 590 pages octavo—perhaps the most comprehensive and exhaustive statement of the arguments in favor of the non-eternity of future suffering yet published.

As many as can, should possess themselves of this work. Just received from the London publisher, and for sale at this Office. Price $4.00. Sent by mail on reception of the same. AG'T.

VALUABLE ENGLISH WORKS

JUST RECEIVED.

HADES, OR THE INTERMEDIATE STATE OF MAN. By Henry Constable, A. M. This is an able work of 367 pages. Second edition. Price $1.37. Postage 13 cts.

THE STRUGGLE FOR ETERNAL LIFE. By E. Petavel, D. D. The design of this work is to show that "Eternal life, instead of being the natural inheritance of man, is to be striven for and sought by faith in Christ, and patient continuance in well doing, and that at last there is a choice of the fittest for eternal existence, while confirmed sinners are doomed to extinction."

Price: Cloth, by mail, 85 cts.; paper, by mail, 55 cts. AG'T.

THE BIBLE DOCTRINE OF THE SOUL.

An answer to the Question: "Is the Popular Conception of the Soul that of Holy Scripture?"

BY CHAS. L. IVES, M. D.

Professor of the Theory and Practice of Medicine in Yale College.

This is a book of 119 pages, in which the Author discusses the above question in an interesting and able manner,—showing the material nature of, the mortality and destiny of the Soul,—A future immortality to be the special portion of the Righteous,—What the Bible teaches as to the future of the Wicked,—The intermediate state,—The Resurrection,—That of the Righteous and of the Wicked, etc.

The Author claims that the doctrine set forth,—"Honors God, exalts the Bible, insures preaching of future punishment, subverts Universalism and Infidelity, errors of Romanism, of Spiritualism and Swedenborgianism, helps in work of Missions, rightly values the body, brings Christian unity, and promotes personal holiness."

We are much pleased with this work. It is having a wide circulation. We have just received a quantity of the pamphlet edition, and can now fill orders at the following prices: Pamphlet, 25 cts. per copy; $2.25 per dozen by mail; $15.00 per hundred by express. Bound in cloth, 30 cts. per copy by mail; $3.00 per dozen by express.

THE TRUE SABBATH.

WHICH DAY SHALL WE KEEP?

AN EXAMINATION OF

MRS. ELLEN G. WHITE'S VISIONS.

BY MILES GRANT.

ISSUED

BY THE ADV. CHRIS. PUB. SOCIETY,

A NEW WORK

On the Sabbath of the Old Covenant. An investigation of Mrs. E. G. White's Visions, showing that they are not from God.

All who have accepted Mrs. White's visions as coming from heaven, or who have been led to rest on Saturday instead of the Lord's day, should read this work. Let those who live among our Seventh-day brethren send and get a number of the books to give away. If the reader has friends at a distance who have received Mrs. W.'s Visions as true, have a copy of this work sent to them.

It contains 106 pages, and we will send it at the following prices: Single copy, 20 cts.; per doz., $1.75 by mail; per hundred, $10.00 by express. AGENT.

PRICE REDUCED

The great Map of History, twenty-two feet long, and about thirty inches wide. This valuable work, of which mention has been made in the Crisis, we now have a supply of, and will send to those who may order at the publisher's reduced price of $12.00 per copy, by express. We have them on rollers, and in book form, and can supply either way.

The best method of using the chart or map of history is to hang the frame on the wall of the room (the map being in the frame, of course), by the two hooks in the upper bar of the frame, high enough to stand, or sit, in front of it, and there examine or study it.

Students and beginners in history should occasionally look over the map in its entire length—drawn out on the wall, or tables, or on the carpet—until they are well acquainted with the entire outlines, plan and compass of the map, which embraces all history.

AG'T.

THE CHURCHES' WAR SONG.

Sounds the trumpet from afar!
Soldiers of the holy war,
Rise! for you your Captain waits;
Rise! the foe is at the gates.

Arm! the conflict has begun;
Fight! the battle must be won;
Lift the banner to the sky,
Wave its blazing folds on high.

Banner of the blessed tree—
Round its glory gather ye!
Warriors of the crown and cross,
What is earthly gain or loss?

Life with death, and death with life,
Closes now with deadly strife;
Help us with thy shield and sword,
King and Captain, mighty Lord!

King of glory, thee alone,
King of kings, thy name we own!
With thy banner overhead,
Not ten thousand foes we dread.

Spare not toil, nor blood nor pain;
Not a stroke descends in vain;
Wounded, still no foot we yield
On this ancient battle-field.

More than conquerors even now,
With the war-sweat on our brow,
Onward o'er the well marked road
March we as the host of God.

Royal is the sword we wield,
Royal is our battle field,
Royal is our victory,
Royal shall our triumph be. —Bonar.

LETTER FROM BRO. H. N. SMITH.

I have felt that I ought to write my christian experience, thinking perhaps it might be the means in the hands of God of doing good; but I have put it off from time to time, feeling that I was not competent to write for publication. I think it is my privilege as well as duty to confess Christ in every way possible, and with the help of God I will do so.

Eighteen years ago there was a reformation in this place, and I was convicted, and as I supposed experienced religion. I tried to worship God a few weeks, but was not baptized, and soon got back into my old ways, and even worse than before. I lived about seventeen years in sin and rebellion against God; sometimes, however, I would feel my need of him, and would even pray in secret, and it did seem to me as though he heard my prayers sometimes; then I would forget him and wander away. At last I got so hardened in sin that I became a burden to myself and family. One of my great sins was profanity. Sometimes I would swear before my wife and children; then I would feel disgusted to think that I was setting such an example for my children. Many times I tried to break myself of that sinful and foolish habit, but it was impossible for me to do so in my own strength.

For the last four or five years before my conversion I had not been to a religious meeting, nor had any desire to go. The last day of Feb., 1875, I was thinking of my past life, how foolish I had been, and felt as if I had been living for nothing. I desired to live a different life; so I called my wife and told her that I was going to try and live a better life. I also told my eldest daughter that I was going to try and be a christian, and asked her if she would help me. She said she would, but told me I must try and pray for myself. I told her I would, and I did pray in secret, not having courage enough to pray before them.

The next day being Monday, I went to my shop with a determination to try, with the help of God, to leave off swearing, and all my wicked habits. I swore only once that day, and asked God to forgive me as soon as I had spoken, and to help me that I might not swear any more; and I believe he did, for I have not sworn from that day to this. I went home that night feeling quite happy, thinking I had tried to do right one day, and really felt that God would bless me. I had my secret prayer that night,—I call it secret, but it was mental prayer, for I did not dare to pray aloud for fear some person would hear me; nor did I say anything to any one except my wife and daughter.

I thought I would live a christian life in secret. I lived that way about two weeks, then I began to feel my need of a Savior. It seemed as though I could not live a christian life. It was impossible; I had been too great a sinner. God had not and would not forgive my sins. I had taken cold, was feverish, and felt sick in body and worse in mind. I came home, walked the house, felt tired and sick. O dear, how I felt in my mind! If I had been sentenced to be hung by the neck in fifteen minutes, I could have felt no worse. I began to tremble and shake. "The sorrows of death compassed me, and the pains of hell gat hold upon me. I found trouble and sorrow." What could I do? I felt that I was about to die. Must I be lost; forever lost? If I had only been baptized I might have been saved; but now I am lost. Such were my thoughts as I sat bolstered up in a chair, trembling and shaking from head to foot like a leaf in the wind.

My wife stood by my side, but said not a word. Tears were dropping from her cheeks on my face and hands. Then I called upon the name of the Lord; O Lord, I beseech thee, deliver my soul! Yes, brethren, I asked God to spare me. I made a solemn covenant with him that, if he would spare my life, I would be baptized the very first opportunity, and would, by his help, try to live a christian life the rest of my days, whether I was lost or saved. The prayer was finished, and I was calmed in an instant. I was astonished, the change was so sudden and so great. I can explain it in no other way than to call it an unnatural calmness. My wife noticed it and said, "My prayer is answered." She, too, had been praying for me while standing there.

We sometimes hear the religion of Jesus called excitement. I was greatly excited, I know, but it was conviction that excited me, and it was the power of God that calmed me in answer to prayer. I felt like praising God, and I did praise him nearly all night. I felt that God had taken notice of me, even me, and given me an evidence of my acceptance that could not be mistaken. Night after night I would lie awake for hours praising God, and thinking of his goodness and mercy to me. I felt that he was merciful indeed. He had not cut me off in my sins. He had heard and answered my prayer, and all this before I had been to meeting. I had no desire to go to meeting or anywhere else. I wanted to read the Bible continually. I felt it was better for me to read for myself than to hear it preached by others. I knew there were different doctrines, and I wanted to know the truth. I felt that God had called me and converted me without the excitement of any man's preaching, and he could teach me the truth from the Bible by the Holy Spirit, which I believed was working in my heart.

I had not said anything about it out of the family, but people who came into the shop would see the change, and some would ask me if I was sick, or what it was that made me so melancholy. I remember at one time a person was trying to tell me of some of his affairs; my mind left him, and I was thinking of the goodness of God, his mercies, etc., when the man spoke up cross and asked me if I was deaf. He said he had asked me a question three or four times, and I had not answered it. He supposed I must have been deaf or crazy. I told him my mind had wandered to another subject; then answered his question.

Sometimes I had fears that I would not hold out in the way I had started, but my wife said she believed I should if I would continue to strive and ask God to help me. She told me that God had converted me in answer to her prayers. She then made known to me for the first time that she and some of the children had kneeled together at times and asked God to convert me. O, you christian wives, who have unconverted husbands, pray for your companions without ceasing. Do not get discouraged; pray, and learn to wait with patience. God will answer in his own good time.

I had lived in this way four weeks; then I remembered the promise I made to God on that eventful night—a night that will be remembered while I remain in this state of probation. I felt my need of baptism, and went to meeting at the school-house where the First Christian Church of Bangor hold their meetings. Bro. House was the pastor. I then confessed Christ for the first time in public, and told them my desire was to know and do the will of God, and that I wished to be baptized the first opportunity. The time was set four weeks from his next appointment, making ten weeks from the day that I first started. Time went on, and I attended meetings regularly. Other converts were starting at almost every meeting. The day came which had been set for baptism, but it was cold and lowering. They wanted it postponed two weeks. I was very anxious, but believed all things would work for the good of those that love God, and felt to let the Lord direct. It was put off two weeks longer. Those two weeks were hard ones for me. It seemed as though Satan was bound I should not be baptized. Every thing seemed to go wrong, and every body seemed to speak against me. I was dreadfully tempted. The devil told me it was no use for me to be baptized, I could not hold out, and should be lost. Then the thought would come that I promised God to be baptized the first opportunity and would try to live a christian life whether I was lost or saved. I felt it would not do to give it up I did not want to lie to God, and would go and pray to him for help; then I felt better. Sometimes I would have to go nearly a dozen times in a day and pray.

At last the day came, and it was beautiful indeed. I longed for the hour to come in which I could confess Christ before the world, by being buried in the likeness of his death. There were fifteen baptized at that time. It was a happy time. I could truly say I felt that my sins were washed away. God blest me then, and has continued to bless me, although I have trials which all must have who would live godly in Christ Jesus. Praise God for the mercy and care he has for us. The most of the converts were taken into the church, but I did not want to join the church at that time. I wanted to study my Bible and learn from God's Word what he would have me do.

After the afternoon meeting the minister asked those forward who had not been taken into the church, and gave us the right hand of fellowship, and claimed the privilege of looking after us until we had joined somewhere. He also advised us to take the Bible, and especially the New Testament, as the man of our counsel. This I had determined with the help of God to do. I continued to go to the meetings; I loved the Lord, and loved to meet with them, and felt it my duty to confess Christ and exhort others to seek him.

After a time some of the members wanted me to join the church. I hardly knew what to do. I thought it right for christians to band together, and yet did not think it right for me to join with them then. The Elder had said in one of his sermons, "In union there is strength," and he believed a christian would be more apt to live a godly life by belonging to the church, for then they would watch over each other, and feel as though they had a home. I felt that God himself had converted me, and if I should join with them then, it would be like taking myself from the care of God and placing myself under the care of men. I thought if God could not keep me men could not; so I concluded to trust the Lord to make my duty known in his own good time.

As I advanced on the way it seemed that the Bible looked plainer than ever before. I continually asked God to explain the Scriptures to me, and cause me to know the truth. Jesus told certain Jews who believed on him (and what he told them I think is meant for us), "If ye continue in my word, then are ye my disciples indeed, and ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free." May God help us to believe all he has said, and obey his commands; for if we do not obey him we do not continue in his word. These words were impressed so strongly upon my mind that I would not read anything but the New Testament. Some of my friends thought that I was too particular about what I read, and felt somewhat hurt because I would not read certain articles in religious papers; but I firmly believed God would teach me the truth from his word, and I did not want to have my mind mixed up with different points of doctrine.

Soon I began to see that the christian's hope is in the second personal coming of our Lord Jesus Christ; and I can see no way to obtain the reward unless the Lord comes and brings it with him. He says—"Behold I come quickly, and my reward is with me, to give every many according as his work shall be." And Paul, in his epistle to the Thess., speaking of some who had lost friends, told them about the Lord's coming and the resurrection of the dead; then told them to "comfort one another with these words." There are many other places which show us our comfort and hope should be in the personal coming of our Lord.

Well, I had to speak of these things sometimes, after having been advised to take the Bible, and especially the New Testament, as the man of my counsel; and having been very particular not to read anything else, and having found no other hope there, I supposed they would accept it as truth. I will not write what was said; suffice it to say that I was mistaken on that point, and I felt that I did not know much of anything, yet could see no other hope. I went to my chamber and asked God in secret prayer to make the truth known to me, for I did not want to be in error. If I was right, I desired him to give me an evidence, that I might be sure. I then took the Bible, closed my eyes, placed my finger on it, then opened my eyes and read the verse directly under my finger. It was 2 Tim. 3: 14—"Continue thou in the things which thou hast learned, and hast been assured of, knowing of whom thou hast learned them." I was satisfied with that. I felt that the Lord directed me to that verse for comfort, and it was a comfort indeed, because I have always believed the Lord himself brought me out of darkness into light, and caused me to see these things, and also to see that the time is near, even at the door, when the Son of man shall be seen coming in the clouds of heaven with power and great glory. O that we may all live so as to love his appearing, and watch lest that day should come upon us unawares.

THE BABYLON OF THE APOCALYPSE.

S. S. BREWER.

"And she shall be utterly burned with fire."—Rev. 18: 8.

Harlot of Rome! thou golden cup queen,
That in ages of yore in vision was seen,
All dizene'd with gems and gaudy array,
A mistress of kings in her palmy day;
A word from her lips expressing desire,
Would shed heretics blood or burn them with fire.

Thou art shorn of thy strength and hoary with years;
Thy paramours quail and are troubled with fears;
Thy counterfeit mask is now torn from thy face,
Exposing thy lewdness, thy lust and disgrace.
Thy pope's awful curse, that kings once did dread,
Like thy once dazzling charms is withered and dead.

Corrupter of nations! thou canst paint and aspire,
Seducing the votaries with pamper'd attire;
But the rack and the dungeon, and martyr-fire blaze
Stands a witness against thee in humanity's gaze;
And that infallible vote that so lately was cast,
Adds blasphemy to sins and black crimes of the past.

If Infallibility did once make it right
To curse and burn heretics when thou hads't might,
Then Infallibility would grant thee again,
And sanction the same if thou might could obtain.
Thou golden cup harlot, pope, bishop and nun,
Thy reign of dominion and carnage is run.

Oh, how thou hast fallen! once the monarch's proud queen,
Transcendent in power,—none like thee was seen;
When the golden cup wine was prest to the lip,
Of proud cruel monarchs to daintily sip;
Corrupting their morals, debauching their lives,
That thou in thy lewdness might prosper and thrive.

Look back, haughty Rome, to the times of thy might;
Thy brightest days was earth's blackest night;
Thy pope was a tyrant, a blasphemous dread,
Assuming dominion o'er living and dead,
With vatican thunders, and curses and bulls,
Rome's gory cup was wrathful and full.

Proud city, once filled with music and mirth,
Illusively charming the monarchs of earth,
Art now a base relic and close on the brink,
When down like a millstone to perdition will sink.
Thou must drink of the cup of the Almighty's ire—
The dregs of his vengeance, and then burned with fire.

Then, then we shall hear great voices in heaven,
Allelulia to the Lord our God will be given;
When he judges proud Rome, whom his truth did withstand,
And the blood of his servants hath avenged at her hand.
Then the voice of the ransomed shall swell the acclaim—
Allelulia! the Lord God omnipotent reigns.

O then how the martyrs that died at the stake
Will beam with effulgence when to life they awake;
When from pain, so intense, to wrapt ecstasy,
In the likeness of Christ all immortal shall be.
O come, blessed Lord, in thy power and might,
End the conflict of ages and earth's dismal night.

CHURCH FAIRS.

Among many other important questions put to Mr. Moody at the late Christian Convention in this city was one concerning fairs for the swelling of church funds. When Moody talks about the social cup, he uses blunt and truthful words "accursed stuff," which ruins millions yearly. There is nothing like using right words to describe things. When a rebellion breaks out, spreading debt and distress over the entire people, it is called a little unpleasantness. When an official has been found stealing from the public treasury, his accounts are pronounced somewhat irregular. In official life there is the circumlocution way of doing things which is indirect and provoking. That is the way how not to do things. The quickest way to stand an egg on end is to place it on the table with a gentle pressure. So the true way to provide funds for christian work and philanthropic movements, is to unloosen the purse strings and ask how much is wanted. Making fancy work at considerable cost of time and money for replenishing the repleted exchequer of a church, shows that those who follow this plan have only been half converted. They are keeping back a large portion. They talk about entire consecration, but that is a delusion. Where the purse has not been wholly placed at God's service, the work is of a questionable character.

Mr. Moody tells us that the devil is sure to get into the fair in some way or other before it is ended. Observation fully verifies his opinion. When the sons of God were assembled the devil came also among them. When the ancient Jew was building the temple, the funds came pouring in so fast that their contributors had to be restrained. These were manly and whole-souled men. There were no church debts at that time. Shall I make an offering that costs me nothing? was the suggestive question of one of their leaders. In those days it was the habit of God's children to inquire often of those who were administering good things, whether more money were needed. The congregation which resorts to fairs and other devices to make the duty of giving easy, have missed the enjoyment which the liberal giver possesses. We need to be taught from our pulpits that it is more blessed to give than to receive. This lesson we have not yet learned. Our purses are very freely opened for the worldly expenditures of luxury and adornment, but too often closed when the workers on God's side appeal to us for help. Men will not accept and follow the divine plan, but hew out miserable devices of their own.

And who are the managers of these fairs? In many cases is it not the frivolous and the giddy on whose persons is found great value in jewels and apparel, and who are at the fair on exhibition. Consistency, thou art a jewel. The world takes knowledge of us. Our light is surely very dim. We are not walking well toward them that are without. We have adopted the Romish idea, that the end justifies the means. Had we not better retrace our steps in these matters, and get back to solid rock where reason and religion bid us stand. The world points the finger of scorn at us, and says often, we are the worshipers of mammon and not of God. There is no debt hanging over the fashionable club houses where too many church members assemble. This building is free, but on the churches the debts are long past due. This is our reproach. It is not too much to say that the blessing of heaven remains not where the people are indisposed to liberal things for the glory of God and the good of men. Moody is eminently sound on church fairs. We commend his view to all the churches. Let us get the spirit that was in the widow's mite.—N. Y. Witness.

A DREAM OF CHRIST'S COMING.

Eds. Crisis:—I forward for publication in the Crisis an extract from a book entitled "Trials and Triumphs in the life of G. W. Henry." The author, as many of your readers may be aware, was a blind preacher of Christ, but not what is known by the term "Adventist;" and I am glad, because that fact divests his words of all mere denominational significance, and gives them a force that the enemies of our blessed hope cannot so handily attribute to religious fanaticism. They are to me blessed, sweet words, and in reading them I cannot restrain my tears of joy. These are not like the flashy, effervescence of sentimentalism called in these days "religion," but they breathe out that earnest desire for the real and sure inheritance of the children of God.

A. Parmalee.

"It was in the fall of 1843 that we made our contemplated trip to the North. Here I met my dear mother for the first time after losing my temporal vision and receiving spiritual sight; and a happier embrace had never a mother and a son. Like Simeon of old, she might have said, 'Now, Lord, let thy servant depart in peace, for mine eyes have seen thy salvation.' 'For my son was dead and is alive again, was lost and is found.' Who can fathom a mother's love for her child—a love spontaneous, boundless, divine!

After killing the fatted calf, and making merry with my brethren and sisters of this country for a while, we prepared to return to the South. About this time I had a very agreeable dream which I will venture to relate, with no apology to the unbelieving reader who may be disposed to turn up his philosophic nose at the mention of a dream, than, that it is simply a dream, signifying something or nothing, and he is at liberty to attach as much (and no more) significance to it as he may feel disposed; barely reminding him at the same time of the dreams and visions so frequently spoken of in the Bible. God often visited the patriarchs of old in dreams and visions of the night; and man is the same now as then, and God is unchangeable.

I dreamed I was in Masonic Hall, in the village of Frankfort, where the Methodists hold their meetings. I thought I was engaged in a little prayer circle. I looked out-doors and beheld a general wreck of matter; the Hall with other things demolished about me. I thought I began to rise, being clothed in a long white robe; and as I gradually ascended my soul became full of glory, and I shouted aloud, which awakened my wife. I was at this time, as it appeared to me, about one hundred feet above the earth, still ascending, when she broke the gentle spell that bound me, and realized to me that I was still an inhabitant of the earth. Although it turned out to be a dream, I do not know that I was ever much happier in my life than when I awoke. You will recollect the dreams I had while striving to enter into the kingdom of grace which I have related to you. I did not dream myself into the kingdom—I was wide awake, and clothed in my right mind when I entered; so I expect to be in the morning of the resurrection, when the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, and with the sound of the trump and the voice of the archangel, when he shall come to gather up his jewels, when he shall bring up his saints from the beds of dust and darkness, then shall the ransomed drop their death-shrouds, and rise in the image of their Savior, shouting glory! as they are caught up to meet him in the air—a bright army. That will not be a dream, but a sublime and glorious reality.

This dream was about the time that much was said about the second coming of Christ, which no doubt was the occasion of my dream. Many virgins arose that year and trimmed their lamps, and were prepared at midnight, at cock-crowing or at noon-day to go forth with joy to meet their Lord. But alas! how changed are the times, even in the short space of three years. Where thousands were then saying "Come, Lord Jesus, come quickly," we now hear by word or action, "My Lord delayeth his coming."

At the time when Millerism, as it was called, was all the rage, I neither believed or disbelieved Mr. Miller's theory, nor troubled myself much about it; but I will say it was a means of my preparing more oil for my journey, and of trimming my lamp. I love to dwell on the doctrine of the resurrection. Very probably the first thing I shall ever see will be my Lord coming in the clouds in great glory, and all his holy angels with him. The promise is that every eye shall see him. He is the very same physician that opened the eyes of blind Bartimeus and caused him to shout and leap for joy. If the opening of the eyes of the blind on this vain and transitory world should cause so much joy, how much more rapturous shall be that glorified body that shall be permitted to gaze on the Redeemer in his native glory, with all the honors of heaven upon him! Then to turn and gaze upon that blood-washed throng of unnumbered millions, how glorious the scene! 'There shall be no night there,' for the Lord God shall give them light, and they shall reign forever and ever.

Dear reader, by the grace of God even at this moment as for the last six months past, I can in my heart respond to the last words in the Bible, 'Amen, even so, come Lord Jesus;' blessed is that servant that is found watching when his Lord cometh. O Lord, arouse to-day the sleeping, foolish virgins!"

By relying on our own resources we acquire mental strength; but when we lean on others for support, we are like an invalid, who, having accustomed himself to a crutch, finds it difficult to walk without one.

JESUS WILL COME AGAIN.

L. B. WEAVER.

As I read the dear Crisis and other papers from week to week, my heart is made sad at the recital of the woes, miseries, and heart-aches at the parting with loved ones. It does seem as though trials, sorrows, afflictions and griefs of all kinds are on the increase hourly; and as I read the sad accounts of the dear ones suffering, while loved ones are torn from their embrace and laid away beneath the cold, cold ground, I long for Jesus to come again and bring them back from the land of the enemy. I cry with double earnestness, "Come, Jesus, come and reign." Letters the past week have brought sad news that three loved ones in Jesus had fallen asleep. A husband is left weeping with almost uncontrolable grief that the wife of his bosom, the sharer of his joys and sorrows, is no more. Another says—Pray for me, dear Thera; my dear father has fallen asleep. While sitting in his chair, reading, death laid his iron grasp upon him, and he was gone before we knew it. Our hearts are rent, and we want Jesus to come to bring our loved ones back. Another says—"My only sister is gone, and I am alone; and I want to see Jesus, and my dear ones that sleep in him."

O how these sad words waken tender cords in my heart; for I too long to have Jesus come again, and bring to life the dear sleeping ones. In the Crisis I read of my dear sister L. D. Harrington's loss. She is a lonely invalid, with no mother, and no health. My tears flow afresh, for I know too well how her heart is rent with anguish sore at such a loss. But, dear sister, Jesus pities and sympathizes with you in it all. Like as a father pitieth his children, so the Lord pitieth us. I can look over the lapse of years and see it has been all right. He knew there was a "need be." The cup I drank was often bitter, but he has stood by me, and he will never leave nor forsake us. Every trial brings us nearer to Christ. Our fathers, mothers, and all our dear ones will live again, if they went to sleep with the armor on. It may seem sad and grievous for the present, yet afterward, praise the Lord, it will yield the peaceable fruits of righteousness. Thank the Lord, it has.

O, ye heart-broken ones, mourning over the loss of dear ones, look up—up to Jesus; he hears every sob, he sees every tear, and feels it. He loves too deeply to leave us in sorrow's dark, sad hour. He is the one that can and will give comfort. How I long with you all to hear the loud trumpet sound; to see the graves open and the dear ones come forth. What a multitude! what a host of God's jewels lie hidden in the earth, that will then come up. Methinks I can almost hear the trumpet's voice, and see old earth begin to shake and tremble beneath its mighty blast, and hear their shouts of praise over death and the grave. They will come forth conquerors; they will live to die no more. What an army! what a sight! What mortal ever beheld such grand and awful scenes before? What joy! What exultant shouts! What tones of music fill the air! Jesus is coming to earth again!

How can I express my feelings as I write? Joy unutterable fills my soul! "Joy to the world, the Lord has come!" This is not fancy; it is soon to be a reality. Soon, very soon, it will be fully realized, and we shall, if ready, meet him who has done so much for us. How I long to be there! How I long to see my dear ones. I shall soon. Dear mourning ones, you will soon be free from all that afflicts you so sadly now; for Jesus is coming soon. He is near; his coming draweth nigh.

TO OUR CORRESPONDENTS.

We regret that in some instances our "proof-reader" has allowed typographical errors to pass unobserved. If there should happen to be anybody without a similar sin, he will please come forward and "first cast a stone" at whoever he will. But if this prompt individual should happen to be one of our correspondents, he will please remember, only those who have not themselves erred, are invited to this stone throwing party. If upon examining their manuscript, it should be found that to understand their specimens of the chirographic art, an extraordinary degree of wisdom, patience, and perseverance will be required, they will please to wait for a more appropriate occasion for throwing stones, or at any rate find some more suitable person at whom to aim in throwing, than our "proof-reader," who cannot always decipher the hieroglyphics that come to our office, and which frequently have "neither form nor comeliness.

Doubtless the writers, being familiar with their own orthography, and signs of thought, quite well understand, and can readily interpret what they have written and sent. Will all who favor us with their productions be kind enough hereafter to write in a plain good hand, and leave us as few words to guess or supply as possible? We begin to see that we have a grand situation in which we may "possess our soul in patience." That is, here is a fair opportunity for exercising patience." Perhaps all concerned need to be admonished to "let patience have its perfect work."—Christian Standard.

FREEDOM.

C. MENDENHALL.

There is implanted within the bosom of every one, a repugnance to bondage. The lower order of animals love freedom of action. If we go to the most degraded tribes of earth, those who are naked, debased and brutal, the same hatred to slavery is found.

Men desire to control their own actions, be their own masters. Yet men may boast of freedom and not be unshackled. Social freedom is comparatively a small object. Satan has thrown over all a bondage which is more galling than that of a galley slave. Sin and vice bind men with bands of iron. Passions lead men to perdition with clanking chains, far more to be feared than human shackles.

He who is a slave to habit, to lust, to sin in any of its varied forms, is not free, whether he dwells beneath the iron rule of a tyrants sceptre, or in our own glorious Republic, but Jesus says—"If the Son therefore shall make you free, ye shall be free indeed."

The Scriptures borrow from nature and social life illustrations to impress spiritual truths upon our minds. We may picture a poor slave toiling day by day under the lash of the cruel overseer, liberty is proffered him—O how readily he grasps the coveted boon. Now many of us may be just such slaves—to him whose "wages is death;" liberty, freedom—free and full is offered.

Not partial liberty, not a parole, but entire freedom from the thralldom of sin, the conquering of every vitiated habit, and a spiritual freedom from guilt and its power, for "If the Son therefore shall make you free, ye shall be free indeed." The Son makes us free from doubt, from condemnation, from all fear. Is this not then a glorious freedom far above earthly freedom, far above earthly license? And it is ours through Jesus Christ our Lord. By faith in him, by accepting the great work which has been perfected for us, we may enjoy this freedom in Jesus.

Let us then, reader—every one become thus "set loose" from carnal cravings, and evermore be "kept by the power of God." Cast aside every weight, lay every burden at the foot of the cross, accept all the precious promises in their fulness. Let all self sink, and Jesus be exalted. "To the end he may stablish your hearts unblameable in holiness before God, even our Father, at the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ with all his saints.

HOME AND HEALTH.

HEALTH.

J. W. THOMAS.

"This is for your health."—Acts 27: 34.

In erecting a building, the foundation is usually the first thing to be attended to. If this is laid solid and right, then the framework and covering may be safely put on; but if the foundation is weak, or rotten, no matter how beautiful the building may appear, it is unsafe, and in constant danger of falling.

Health is the foundation on which a life of usefulness and enjoyment is to be erected. It should receive the first attention of every individual. There are some, it is true, who are born with weak, sickly constitutions, and are never well from infancy; but the vast majority of those who are sick have become so, I believe, through neglect of attention to the laws of health. Man is under law, physical, as well as moral, and the transgression of law must always be attended with disastrous consequences. No man can sin against God or himself with impunity. We reap what we sow, whether in a moral or physical sense. A great responsibility rests upon parents, or those who have the care and training of children.

At the cradle is the place to begin. It is much easier to impress right thoughts, and inculcate right principles in infant minds, than it is to eradicate erroneous ones from strong minds in after years. Direct the stream right at its very source. Tie the little crooked sprout to a straight stick or post, and it will grow up a straight tree; but neglect it, and it will always be crooked. It is of the utmost importance that children should be taught right habits in regard to health. And in order to this, parents should inform themselves concerning the laws of health that they may be able to impart instruction to their children. We cannot teach what we do not know, and we cannot know much unless we study. God has given us an intellect, and that intellect should be so well informed as to give right directions to the habits of the body, and the body should be so well governed, as to give clearness and power to the intellect. One in a large degree is dependent on the other. A sound mind and a sound body go together.

It is not for me here to specify what I think the laws of health are, but I wish to suggest to the readers of this article, that there are many very excellent books extant on this subject, and with a very little expense and effort they can make themselves possessors of much valuable information. There are a few things, however, so plain and obvious to every common sense person that I will just refer to them.

First, what do you eat? The stomach is the regulator of the whole physical structure. Is it not astonishing to see what abominable messes some fond mothers will put into their little children's stomachs. They stuff them until they are sick, and then they dose them with doctor's drugs until they die. What abominable trash some grown people, too, will crowd into their stomachs. It is no wonder they are sick. A word to the wise is sufficient.

Second, how often do you eat and drink? Some children are brought up to eat at all times in the day, and late at night. Is it any wonder that they are sick?

Third, how often do you bathe? The body should be kept clean, yet there are those who seldom even wash except their hands and face. Water is free.

Fourth, how early do you rise, and how late sit up? One hour's sleep before midnight is worth two after. I hope you retire early, sleep soundly in a well ventilated room, and rise early in the morning.

Fifth, how much do you exercise in the open air? Exercise is very essential to health. Children, and people generally who live in the country, are usually healthy, because they live plainly, keep clean, sleep soundly, are much in the sunshine, and exercise freely in the open air. Religion is friendly to health. The Lord wants our body as well as our heart. Control your passions, temper, and appetite. "This is for your health."

AT HOME.

Religion at home is more precious than at church, or in the world. Every day each family should worship as regularly as they eat. Have they time to eat? Let the soul have food. Open the Bible and have God talk to the family; pray and praise in song, and on bended knees ask mercies. A family without worship is a domestic orphanage, and a school of unbelief, sensuality, and sin. Without spiritual life at home, it will be wholly lacking or exceedingly thin abroad. Children will grow up Christless; physical objects, and carnal life will absorb attention and engross affection. With pure, sincere, tender religion at home, children will begin to be christians so soon as they learn of the Savior's love, and never know rebellion.

Why should the offspring of saints be for one moment exposed to condemnation? Why should they not know the Savior so soon as they know sin? Generally they will if Christ is honored at the family altar. But he is not honored. Thousands upon thousands of church members live like infidels at home. The Bible is unread, praises never sung, prayer never heard. Can they not read? Why not let God speak to them out of his word? Can they not pray? The Lord's prayer can at least be repeated in concert. Is there no time to take counsel of God. It is waste of time and waste of life to ignore God. We can have no real home without him. It requires a heavenly Father as well as earthly parents to make a sweet, healthful, absolute home.—Baptist Union.

FAST LIVING.

We hear the cry on every hand, "hard times." What will the poorer classes do for even the necessities of life? So many heads of families out of employment, and their little ones crying for bread; and truly some of these cases are lamentable, and deserve the sympathy of all who have any thing to bestow. But the question arises, what is the principal cause of this extreme suffering among the poor, while the country is so full of everything which tends to support physical nature? By close examination, I have come to the conclusion that the great underlying cause is fast living. Men of all grades have lived too extravagantly. While the rich could for a time stand the pressure, without making a failure, the poor in their endeavors to imitate them, have brought themselves into straightened circumstances.

Fast living is a growing evil, and is spreading its evil influence over all the world; but more especially in this country, since the last war, has it increased with greater proportion than ever before.

From the President down to the humblest laborer, there is a superficial expenditure of money; money expended for useless purposes, and things which could be dispensed with.

Most men earn enough in the course of a year, with frugal economy, to give themselves and families a good and comfortable support. But instead of practising economy they, in most cases, go in for all the fashions of this foolish age. They must have fine houses, finished with all the modern improvements. The nicest of carpets must cover their floors. A five hundred dollar piano must be bought or hired to adorn the parlor, and from cellar to attic everything must be in the height of style. And the houses are not all that receives attention in this direction. The families, from the smallest child up to the parents, must be dressed in rich and costly apparel. Garments made in such styles that if some good old mothers, of a hundred years ago, should rise from the dead, to behold their children of to-day, they would blush with shame. Then, during the summer months, several extended pleasure trips are made, to the mountains, or to some fashionable watering place, at a sacrifice of time and money.

Now, if men would stop and compute the amount thus unnecessarily expended, they would be surprised at the figures. This money would buy flour, coal, butter, and meat for winter; and then, in most cases, there would be something left to help support the gospel; and hard times, with thousands of families that are now suffering, would become a stranger. Christians especially should guard against this growing evil, and even those who may be able to support such a style of living, should avoid doing so, if only for example; for it is in the nature of most men not to be outdone by their neighbors. The example of Christ was that of frugal economy, for he said on one occasion, when he had been feeding the multitude, "Gather up the fragments that remain, that nothing be lost." Let us all pattern after him, and all will be well.—W. C. L. in Biblical Messenger.

WHAT TO TEACH OUR BOYS.

Not to tease girls or boys smaller than themselves.

When their play is over for the day, to wash their faces and hands, brush their hair, and spend the evening in the house.

To treat their mother as politely as if she were a strange lady who did not spend her life in their service.

To be as kind and helpful to their sisters as to other boys' sisters.

Not to grumble or refuse when asked to do some errand which must be done and which will otherwise take the time of some one or other, who has more to do than themselves.

To try to find some amusement for the evening that all the family can join in, large and small.

If they do anything wrong, to take their mothers into their confidence, and, above all, never to lie about anything they have done.

To make up their minds not to learn to smoke, chew, or drink, remembering these things cannot be unlearned, and that they are terrible drawbacks to good men, necessaries to bad ones.

To learn to save their money, and invest it, from the first penny they earn, and they are sure to be prospered.

To observe all these rules, and they are sure to be gentlemen.

WORDS TO THE WEARY PILGRIMS.

N. W. ADAMS.

O saints of God, fresh courage take,
Work on, win souls, for Jesus' sake;
Yes, blow the trumpet long and loud;
Soon Christ will come in yonder cloud.

The long dark night is nearly past,
We're near our heavenly home at last;
Then saints of God, awake—arise!
Press on and take the glorious prize.

O happy they who work for God,
And walk the path our Savior trod;
Thrice happy, when the Lord shall come,
And take the weary pilgrims home.

Then saints of God fresh courage take,
Endure the toil for Jesus' sake;
Awake—arise! work while 'tis day;
Dear saints of God, oh watch and pray.

Oh, let us take each daily cross,
And count all earthly things but loss;
For what is worldly pomp and pride
Compared with rest that shall abide?

MAN'S STATE IN NATURE.

GEN. 6: 5, 12.—"God saw that the wickedness of man was great on the earth, and that every imagination of the thoughts of his heart was only evil continually. And God looked upon the earth, and, behold, it was corrupt: for all flesh had corrupted his way upon the earth."

What a picture is here presented to our view of man's state by nature. Here God tells us that every thought of man was evil continually—not one good thought—evil continually, without cessation. "All flesh had corrupted his way"—there is no exception in all flesh. Ps. 51: 5. "Behold I was shapen in iniquity and in sin did my mother conceive me." Here we learn that the innocent babe in its mother's arms has sin interwoven in its very nature. Jer. 17: 9.—"The heart is deceitful above all things and desperately wicked: who can know it." Man's heart is so desperately wicked that he does not know himself. But God knows him altogether. Mark 7: 21, 22.—"From within, out of the heart of man, proceed evil thoughts, adulteries, fornications, murders, thefts, covetousness, wickedness, deceit, lasciviousness, an evil eye, blasphemy, pride, foolishness." When we look at this list it is no wonder the apostle says, "For I know that in me, that is, in my flesh, dwelleth no good thing." "That which is born of the flesh is flesh," and it cannot be improved or made better. It may be educated flesh or ignorant flesh; it may be religious flesh or irreligious flesh; it may present a variety of phases, nevertheless you cannot change its nature—it is flesh still. Rom. 8: 7, 8.—"The carnal mind [or rather the mind of the flesh] is enmity against God, for it is not subject to the law of God, neither indeed can be. So then they that are in the flesh cannot please God." Here it is emphatically stated that the natural man cannot please God. This is man's state by nature, now let us see what his state is by practice.

Ps. 14: 3.—"They are all gone aside, they are altogether become filthy: there is none that doeth good, no, not one." "There is not a just man upon earth, that doeth good, and sinneth not." Eccl. 7: 20. "We are all as an unclean thing, and all our righteousnesses are as filthy rags." Gen. 44: 6. "There is none righteous, no, not one." "There is no difference; for all have sinned and come short of the glory of God." Rom. 3: 22, 23.

Man, as viewed in nature, gravitates between two extremes. You may behold him at the top of the ladder in education and refinement, or you may find him in the very depths of ignorance and degradation. There, for example, is a man of such violent temper that he is the very dread of all who know him. He is a plague to his family and a nuisance to society. If you meet him once, you never desire to see him again. Again, there is another man who is just the opposite. He is a kind father, a loving husband, a firm friend. He is the very personification of honor and integrity; his word is as good as gold. If you meet him once you will be glad to meet him again. But his center is self. He is a self-poised man. He studies to control himself and he glories in self-control. But God is not in all his thoughts. Again there is the religious man—you always find him in his pew at church. He is very zealous about all the forms and ceremonies of "his church." He gives liberally for benevolent objects, and is scrupulously exact in all business matters. He expects to go into heaven by his own efforts. Again there is an unprincipled scoundrel. He is a thief and robber. He would not scruple to take your life for five dollars. He is the bane of society. Now what is God's estimate of these four classes of men judged from his standpoint of holiness? "There is no difference; for all have sinned and come short of the glory of God."

Suppose I should advertise for twenty-five men to go to work for me, and agreed to give them $100 per month. The only qualifications required being that they should not be less than 5 feet 10 inches in height, and to weigh not less than 160 pounds. I have penty of applications. The first man weighs 160 pounds, but is only 5–6 inches in height. The next is 5–10 in height, but only weighs 159½. In fact, they are all short of the mark, and therefore all rejected. So every one born of the flesh has been rejected, for "they that are in the flesh cannot please God." "There is no difference; for all have sinned and come short of the glory of God." Rom. 5: 12.—"By one man sin entered into the world, and death by sin; and so death passed upon all men, for that all have sinned." 1 John 1; 8, 10.—"If we say that we have no sin, we deceive ourselves, and the truth is not in us: if we say we have not sinned, we make HIM a liar."

Now as "the wages of sin is death," and "they that are in the flesh cannot please God," no matter how hard they try—what are they going to do? That is our important question, and one that requires our serious consideration. Man was lost by hearing Satan; he is saved by hearing God. "Without faith it is impossible to please God." "Faith cometh by hearing, and hearing by the word of God." Listen then to God's word: "Ye must be born again." "Except a man be born again, he cannot see"—"he cannot enter into the kingdom of God." "The natural man receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God, for they are foolishness unto him: neither can he know them, because they are spiritually discerned." 1 Cor. 2: 14. If the "natural man" can neither "receive" nor "know" the things of the Spirit of God, then how can that "natural man" be improved, made better, or be sanctified?

Let me illustrate. Suppose two young men should come to America—one from England, the other from Ireland. The young Englishman gets the best education our country affords, and becomes one of the most prominent men on the continent—perhaps one of the ablest statesmen. The Irishman goes to work as a day laborer in our streets. There is about to be a presidential election, and all eyes are turned on the Englishman as a proper candidate. He looks just like an American, he talks like one, he dresses like one—but still he is an Englishman. Now which of these two men would stand the best chance to become President of the United States—the Englishman or Irishman? Everybody would at once say the Englishman. But hold! The Constitution of the United States says no one but a native-born citizen can become President of the United States. Now under these circumstances is it not evident that the Irishman stands just as good a chance to be President as the Englishman, seeing that neither have the requisite qualifications, and are not, therefore, eligible to the office? Just so it is in reference to becoming a citizen of God's kingdom. A man may look like a christian, he may act like one, may be very religious, and be a good church member, but unless he has been born again, he cannot "enter God's kingdom," nor understand "heavenly things."

Dear reader, have you been born again? If not you are still "in the flesh" and cannot please God. "Ye must be born again." How are you to get into that position where the Holy Ghost says "Ye are not in the flesh but in the Spirit"? How did we get in the flesh? By being "born of the flesh." How do we get in the Spirit? By being "born of the Spirit." I must be taken off the ground of the first Adam, who "is of the earth, earthy," and placed on the ground of the second Adam, who "is the Lord from heaven." Paul says, "I have been crucified with Christ: and it is no longer I that live, but Christ liveth in me." Had Paul really been crucified on the cross, and had he been buried and raised again to a new life? Had he been taken off the standing of the old Adamic creation, and placed on the standing of a new creation in Christ? Hear him in Rom. 6th: "How shall we that are dead to sin live any longer therein? Know ye not, that so many of us as were baptized into Jesus Christ were baptized into his death . . . that like as Christ was raised . . . even so we also." I am sorry to say there are a great many christians who don't "know" that they "are dead" and "buried" and "raised" with Christ. They don't grasp this great truth—don't see the deep significance it contains. "Our old man is cruci fied with him," "dead with him." "For ye are dead, and your life is hid with Christ in God." In the 5th of Romans we are delivered from the guilt of sin; in the 6th we are delivered from the "dominion of sin;" in the 7th we are delivered from the "law," in the 8th we are delivered from the "flesh." Here is a complete deliverance from the old Adamic standing of "sin and death," and being placed upon a new resurrection standing of "life."

Just as really as we are commanded to be "alive unto God through Jesus Christ our Lord," just so really are we to reckon ourselves to be "dead to the law by the body of Christ." God judicially put an end to the old man on the cross, as far as every believer is concerned, and no longer takes any recognition of the old Adamic man, but only sees the new man in Christ Jesus. Just as really as Christ "poured out his soul unto death" and "bore our sins in his own body on the tree," just as really as he laid down his human life, to which our sins were attached, that he might satisfy the demands of the law and eternal justice; that he might satisfy every claim against our Adamic nature; just as really as "the life is in the blood," and that Christ shed his blood on the cross for us, and therefore forfeited his blood-life, and did not take it again, but was raised up by the divine, the eternal life—just so really is that eternal life the property of every believer who has been "raised together with Christ"—just so really every believer now "lives unto God" by that eternal life. Therefore every believer "hath everlasting life, and shall not come into judgment, but is passed from death unto life." John 5: 24.

In the words of another—"Christianity starts, as it were, from the open grave of the second man, to pursue its bright career onward to eternal glory. It is emphatically a new creation in which there is not so much as a single shred of the old thing—for "all things are of God." And if "all things" are of God, there can be nothing of man. What rest! What comfort! What strength! What sweet relief for the poor burdened soul that has been vainly seeking, for years perhaps, to find peace in self-improvement! What deliverance from the wretched thraldom of legality, in all its phases, to find out the precious secret that my guilty, ruined, bankrupt self—the very thing I have been trying by every means in my power to improve, has been completely and forever set aside—that God is not looking for any amendment in it—that he has condemned it and put it to death in the cross of his Son.

76 Mt. Hope Av., Rochester, N. Y.

TURKEY'S DECLINE A SIGN OF THE ADVENT OF CHRIST.

Passages from the Rev. Canon Hoare's new book, "Rome and Turkey."

The condition of the Turkish Empire is one of the greatest interest at the present day, and is engaging more than any other public subject the grave thoughts of thinking men. I propose, therefore, to consider three questions: (1) Has the present state of Turkey been foretold in prophecy? (2) Does it teach us any lessons respecting our spiritual position? (3) Does it throw any light on our hope of the coming of the Lord?

With reference to the first question,—Has the present state of Turkey been foretold in prophecy? I have not the least hesitation in expressing my own conviction that it has been foretold in a most remarkable manner, and that the present state of things is nothing more than the fulfilment of what God predicted little less than one thousand eight hundred years ago.

Turkey in Africa has almost ceased to exist. Turkey in Europe may last a little longer, but is going fast. As for Turkey in Asia, it has ceased to be a power to any distance east of the Euphrates; and I fully believe that on the west of the river, the drying-up process will be steadily continued till the floods recede from Palestine, and that beautiful land is set free from the blight of Turkish misgovernment, and handed over to be once more a land flowing with milk and honey to its rightful possessors, the seed of Abraham, the nation to which God has given it.

THE THREE FROG-SPIRITS OF EVIL.

Now there are two events, apparently quite distinct in themselves, which are connected with each other under the sixth vial—the drying up of the Euphrates, and the appearance of certain most dangerous and seductive spirits going forth to gather men together for the battle of Almighty God. If, therefore, it be a fact that the Euphrates is now being dried up, then it follows as a sure and certain consequence that the unclean spirits are soon, if not already, going forth to do their deadly work. Whenever the Euphrates is drying up, there is to be a time of great spiritual seduction; or, in other words, the exhaustion of the Turkish Empire will be accompanied, or quickly followed, by a remarkable development of mischievous spiritual power.

This is described in Rev. 16: 13, 14: "And I saw three unclean spirits like frogs come out of the mouth of the beast, and out of the mouth of the false prophet. For they are the spirits of devils, working miracles, which go forth unto the kings of the earth and of the whole world, to gather them to the battle of that great day of God Almighty."

There is not one spirit only, but there are three acting together. We are taught, therefore, at the time of the drying up of the Euphrates we must be prepared for subtle and seductive powers of various forms and characters. If there were only one spirit the danger might assume only one form; but as there are three spirits acting together, we should be on our guard against every possible combination. We are not merely to look out for three distinct and separate forms of error, but, as all the three act together, they may combine in every conceivable variety. One may act on one mind, two on another, and all three on a third, and so produce the most remarkable and inconsistent combinations.

These spirits are predicted as gathering men together for battle. When they are abroad truth and error will be thrown into antagonism. The Lord Jesus Christ will be collecting his forces, and Satan his; there will be on both sides the mustering of the host. Those that are on the side of the Lamb, will rally round his banner, "called, and chosen, and faithful;" and those that are under the influence of any of the seductive spirits will throw themselves into the ranks of open opposition. The characteristic of the day will be, not sloth or indifference, but zeal, eagerness and conflict.

Now no one can have watched the progress of men's minds during the last half-century, without observing that this has been most remarkably the case. The two processes have gone on side by side. Turkey has been drying up, and almost every State in Europe has been aroused to religious conflict.

THE SECOND ADVENT OF CHRIST.

What light does the decay of the Ottoman Empire throw on the prospect of the near approach of our Lord's return? Has it any bearing on our christian hope? and may we regard it as a signal from God that the time is come when we may soon expect the second advent of Christ.

I believe that we are at this present time living under the sixth vial, and that the great public, political event of the sixth vial is the drying up of the Ottoman Empire, which we can all see to be in progress. There can be no doubt about the great public, political fact; it is confirmed by every newspaper, and is forced on the attention of England by the sore distress brought on many families through the Turkish bankruptcy. Then it follows that, if we are living under the sixth vial, the seventh vial is all that remains of the great prophetic series.

The seventh vial is the close of the series, and under it we are to expect the final victory of the Lord Jesus Christ (Rev. 16: 17.) The conclusion, therefore, is plain that, if the exhaustion of the Ottoman Empire is the event symbolized by the drying up of the Euphrates, it is high time that we awake out of sleep; and we must soon expect to behold Christ himself, with all the joys of his kingdom and all the terrors of a crushing victory.

We appear to have reached what Daniel terms "the time of the end;" so that now it is high time to awake out of sleep, for we already begin to see the first streaks of morning dawn. We have already witnessed some of the great events that must very shortly precede the advent, and we may begin to look out full of hope for the actual return of the Lord himself.

This conclusion is confirmed by the words of our Lord himself. I need not stop to prove that he is the speaker in Rev. 16: 15, but we must carefully observe his words. What does he say when the sixth vial is poured out, and the Euphrates is drying up, and when the three evil spirits are gone forth through Christendom? What is the warning voice which he himself then gives out with reference to his coming? What lesson would he have us learn from these great events? Of what are they his signal? Does he not say, "Behold, I come as a thief?" Rev. 16: 15). Does he not call us to a double watchfulness, and teach us not merely to watch against the seductive influence of these foul spirits, but to watch also for his own appearing, and for the bright hope of joyfully meeting him? But if this be the case, and if the prophecy of the sixth vial is really being now fulfilled, as we believe it to be, by the drying up of the Turkish power, then every fresh symptom of decay in that power, every loss of territory by the Turks, every fresh insurrection, and every proof that the empire is reduced to homeless bankruptcy, is like a clarion blast of the trumpet of God ringing through the ears of Christendom; and proclaiming, with a distinctness which cannot be mistaken, "Behold I come as a thief."

It is the world that will be found asleep, and to whom Christ will really come as a thief. But some man may say, "If there be these signs beforehand, will they not arouse the world as well as believers? Will they not awaken society? Will they not compel men to prepare?" I answer that by another question, Do they? There are certain signs already given; do they wake up society? Have they produced such an impression as to arouse the great mass of worldly men?

There are the Jews preserved as a separate people, in fulfilment of a prophecy given more than three thousand years ago; what effect has such a fulfilment of God's word had in the city? There are all the politicians of Europe at their wits' end because of the decay of Turkey; but how many even of yourselves have been led thereby to look out for the near approach of our blessed Savior? There is Rome stripped of its temporal power in fulfilment of great prophecies given, some of them more than two thousand years ago; but how many are there that have been led by that fulfilment to look out even for the fall of Babylon?

The simple fact is, that these great fulfilments, though conspicuous to the eye of those who study them, completely fail to produce the least impression on the deep sleep of the unconverted world. The prophecies are not read; the facts are not compared with them; the lessons are not learned, and the soul is not aroused to preparation. How many are there even in this very town, on whom the fulfilment of God's prophetic word has never produced the slightest effect? They are living just as they would have lived, or rather sleeping as they would have slept, if there had been no prophecy to give the warning, and no history to confirm its truth.

Oh, think what it will be to be found naked, when all the saints of God are standing around you in their resurrection robe! We have lately read of poor people startled in the night by shipwreck, and rushing as they were to the deck, utterly unprotected against the bitter blast of the winter's snow storm. Think what it would be to be suddenly aroused from your own deep sleep, to see all that you have in the world wrecked around you, and to find your poor soul quite naked, while the terrible storm of God's most just judgment beats upon you, and breaks down every hope of escape! Oh, dear brethren, may it never be so with you! May you be amongst those who can peacefully look for Christ's appearing, because you are clothed in his righteousness! May you be kept walking in the light, and cleansed from all sin through his most precious blood! Then you will have nothing to fear, but everything to hope for, in the thought of his second coming.—Christian Herald.

THE opposition which assails us in the course of obedience is no evidence that we are mistaken.

MICHAEL THE GREAT PRINCE.

WHO IS HE?

S. RONEY.

Is he the "Prince of Life"?—the Messiah? Let us examine. He is mentioned by name three times in Daniel and twice in the New Testament. "But the Prince of the kingdom of Persia withstood me one and twenty days; but lo, Michael one of the chief princes [the first prince—margin] came to help me; and I remained there with the kings of Persia." Dan. 10: 13. Who was the speaker on this occasion? A description of him is given in verses fifth and sixth. Was he a prince? Undoubtedly he was one of the angel-princes, as his personal appearance would imply. But is there not something more by which we may reasonably infer that he was a "prince"? Let us read: "Then said he, Knowest thou wherefore I come unto tnee? and now will I return to fight with the prince of Persia."

For "three full weeks" had the prince of Persia "withstood" him—for "three full weeks" had Daniel been "mourning," "ate no pleasant bread;" and no one had appeared to explain the "vision" to him, when, lo, while on the banks of the "great river Hiddakel," a "certain man clothed in linen," etc., appeared to him and explained why he had been detained, namely, the "prince of Persia" had withstood him—had opposed him—would not for "three full weeks" consent to issue the desired "commandment"—to let the Jews return to their own land, and "restore and build Jerusalem;" and Michael the "chief prince" the "first prince," came to "help him," and they succeeded in their work.

By this we learn that there were other "princes"—angel-"princes"—and that Michael was the "chief" of them all. He was the "great prince," and with his help Cyrus, "prince of Persia," was persuaded to send forth the "commandment" to "restore and build Jerusalem."

After that mission had been accomplished, he returns to Daniel, to "show him that which is noted in the Scriptures of truth," and having done so, he says, "Now will I return to fight with the prince of Persia; and when I am gone forth, lo, the prince of Grecia shall come." Who is this "prince of Grecia?" Was he not a "prince" of similar character, and who had similar duties to perform in reference to Grecia, that the speaker had in reference to Persia? In other words, that he was to have the supervision of the kingdom of Grecia, when it came upon the stage to be its "prince." Again: "There is none that holdeth with me in these things but Michael your prince." Then, we see that "Michael your prince," is "Michael the great prince, which standeth for the children of thy people"—the Jews.

Now, then, what are the reasonable conclusions arrived at? or we may say, reasonably demonstrated by sound inferences? 1. That there is a class of superhuman beings, that do in a certain sense, and to a certain extent, have the oversight or supervision of nations and kingdoms. 2. That these beings are sometimes called "princes." 3. That Michael is the "great prince"—the "chief prince"—the "first prince" among them all. That he is at the head of the Lord's mighty hosts—the commander of his "legions of angels." As "Beelzebub" is the "prince of the demons," so on the other hand is Michael the "great prince" of the "angels of light." 4. When God selected Israel from among all the nations of the earth, to be his "holy nation"—his "peculiar people," they were given in charge of the "chief prince;" and if we follow the history of that people from their exodus out of Egypt, until their dispersion by the Romans, we shall find that the "angel of the Lord"—that was "Captain of the host of the Lord," was "Michael, the great prince."

At the Red Sea, he was in the "pillar of cloud by day, and in the pillar of fire by night;"—in their wanderings in the "wilderness," he had the watch-care over them, to "keep them in the way." "Behold I send an angel before thee, . . . beware of him, and obey his voice: provoke him not, for he will not pardon your transgressions; for my name is in him." When he appeared to Joshua, he declared himself as "Captain [or prince—margin] of the host of the Lord." Josh. 5: 14. And undoubtedly it was he who slew of the Assyrians, "an hundred and fourscore and five thousand" in a single night. And while the people of Israel were in captivity in Babylon, he was very deeply interested in their welfare, and as we have seen, assisted to influence "Cyrus, prince of Persia," to issue the "commandment" of release.

When the Jewish nation ceased to be the chosen people of God, the care and supervision of Michael was transferred to the christian church—the "Lamb's wife," and will continue, until the time comes for him to "stand up," or to be "sent forth, with the great sound of a trumpet," with his angel-princes, to "gather together" "the elect from the four winds, from one end of heaven to the other," into one fold, when one King shall reign forever, even the "Prince of Peace."

5. As Michael, the "chief prince," has had charge of the most beloved nation among all the nations of the earth, so other nations have had their angel-princes, to hold in check the "winds" of war and commotion, and to let them loose for disaster and destruction; to hold them in check until the purposes of God are accomplished in regard to his people, or to let them loose as the battle-ax, or avenger in the hands of an all-wise and just Providence, for the punishment of some other wicked and guilty nation.

This fact brings us right up to the threshhold, opens the door before us, so that we may see, study, and better understand the agencies and workings of divine Providence, in his dealings with nations, peoples, societies and individuals; that it is largely, if not wholly the work or more properly the "ministration of angels."

So, then, we may reasonably conclude that if the Jewish nation, the Medo-Persian kingdom and the Grecian had "princes" of this higher kind, so had Babylon and Rome. That these four great earthly monarchies that "bore rule over all the earth" had such princes appointed over them, there can be but little doubt; and that the same agencies have a controling influence over the nations of to-day, we may confidently believe; and that they are causing them so to move and act as to fill up all the "jots and tittles of unfulfilled prophecy, and thus accomplish the purposes of God in regard to the destinies of nations and of men should be viewed in the light of a great fact, to be carefully and prayerfully considered by every student of prophecy.

So much for the ministry of the angel-prince. Now to the direct question—Who is Michael? And we think we have clearly indicated by the foregoing the true answer, namely, That he is the "chief" of the angels;—that he is the head, or "first prince" among them;—that he is the General-in-chief—the "archangel."

But it is believed by some, that Michael is Christ—the Messiah. Their reasons are,

1. I. His name—"Mika-el"—the name of God, or, "one like God." But the name does not make him God, or even "like God," much less the Son of God. If there was force in this argument, the name would make him God, and not the Son of God. But there is no force in it, for there are hundreds of men who bear the name of Michael, but, that don't make them gods, the sons of God, or the "archangel," or even God-like. The Lord told Joshua to be careful and obey the angel, because—"My name is in him." His name was his credentials, so to speak—his authority; so that his name proves nothing in reference to his nature.

2. II. It is said that Michael shall "stand up;" and "stand up" is interpreted, "to reign," and as Christ is to reign "King of kings," therefore, Michael is Christ. But is this argument sound? While to "stand up," may mean "to reign" in some instances, does it always mean so? Does it in this instance? Let us put the argument in plain English, and see if it will agree with facts, or commend itself to sound logic. "And at that time shall Jesus reign, which now reigneth over the children of thy people." It proves too much, you see, and therefore is weak, if not worthless. Michael did at that time "stand up," and "strengthen himself" in the interest, and for the welfare of Daniel's "people;" but he did not reign over them, nor did the Lord's Christ.

We will now present a few considerations why we think that Michael is not Christ, and,

(1) When on Mount Nebo, "contending with the devil, he disputed about the body of Moses, but durst not bring against him a railing accusation, but said, the Lord rebuke thee." Jude 9. Here, then, met face to face, the "great prince" of the angels of light—the "archangel," and the "prince of the devils"—the prince of darkness—the archfiend, and "disputed" and "contended" over the dead law-giver of Israel; and Michael said to the "devil," "The Lord rebuke thee." But, if he was the Lord why did he not rebuke him then and there? Did Jesus ever fear or fail to rebuke Satan on any or every occasion? I trow not.

(2) Michael is called the "archangel," which name is never applied to Christ, I believe; for he was "created a little lower than the angels" while in the flesh; and to which of the angels was it ever said, "Sit thou at my right hand"? etc. So that the name, nature, or office can never be applied to Christ.

(3) We read in Rev., chap. 12, of a "great red dragon," that "stood before the woman to devour her child as soon as it was born." That "child" was to "rule all nations with a rod of iron," and the child was "caught up to God and to his throne." This child is generally understood to be Christ. "Michael and his angels fought against the dragon; and the dragon and his angels fought, and prevailed not." Query. Was "Michael" who fought the "dragon," the "child" that was "born" of the "woman"? We think it must take a very imaginative reader to understand the record in that light. We think the foregoing considerations are sufficient to show that Michael and Christ are two distinct personages. While Jesus is the Savior of men, Michael is the chief of the "innumerable company of angels," who shall "minister to them that shall be heirs of salvation."

And from the time that God made a covenant with Abraham, until the "revelation of Jesus Christ which God gave unto him," and "he sent and signified it by his angel unto his servant John;" the angels have been employed to minister in the affairs of men, both temporal and spiritual, and have often appeared in answer to prayer to women and children even, and comforted, instructed, and blessed them. They delivered Lot and his family from doomed Sodom, the children of Israel from Egypt and the Red Sea, the three Hebrews from the fiery furnace, Daniel from the lion's den, Paul and Silas from prison, an angel wrestled with Jacob, and blessed him, stayed the hand of Abraham when about to slay Isaac, appeared unto Hannah and comforted her with a promise, touched the lips of Isaac with a live coal from the altar, showed unto Daniel that which is "noted in the Scriptures of truth." They were present at the birth of the Savior, also at his resurrection, when they "rolled away the stone and sat upon it," and they will be present on the morn of the resurrection, to "gather together the elect from the four winds," and bring them in to the "everlasting habitations" of joy and rest.

Now if there were "ministering angels" in the days of the prophets, and of Jesus and the apostles, are there not "ministering angels" to-day? Do they not minister with unseen hands to all them that shall be "heirs of salvation?" Do they not strengthen and encourage those that are ready to perish by the way? We fear that the churches and and pastors have adopted as true, the adage that "angels visits are few and far between." But we hope they will remember that the work of the holy messengers of God is not yet completed; that they are just as ready to help the true servant of God to do battle in the cause of his Master as ever, and just as ready to hedge up the way of the "Baalams" that would "curse Israel," as they were in the days of old.

May we all remember that in these last days, the "prince of darkness," with his "demons," is making superhuman efforts, through Spiritualism and Infidelity, to overthrow the faith of God's people, and lead them into darkness and doubt; that it behooves all to be on their guard, and "earnestly contend for the faith once delivered to the saints," that they may be prepared to be made "equal to the angels, to die no more."

NEWMAN HALL ON "NOW."

A short word; a shorter thing. Soon uttered; sooner gone. Now! A grain of sand on a boundless plain. A tiny ripple on a measureless ocean. Over that ocean we are sailing; but the only part of it we possess is that on which our vessel at this moment floats. From the stern we look backwards and watch the ship's wake in the waters; but how short a distance it reaches, and how soon every trace disappears! We see also some landmarks farther off, and then the horizon closes the view; but beyond, that ocean still rolls far, far away. Memory contemplates the few years of our individual life; history shows us a dim outline of mountains; science tells us that still farther back, out of sight, stretches that vast sea; reason assures us that, like space, it hath no boundary; but all that we possess of it is represented by this small word—now. The past, for action, is ours no longer. The future may never become present, it is not ours until it does. The only part of time we can use is this very moment—now.

O, listen to the voice of warning now. "Awake, thou that sleepest!" Awake now. "Seek the Lord while he may be found!" Seek him now. "Believe in the Lord Jesus Christ, and thou shalt be saved." Believe now. Confess to him your sins, ask pardon through his blood, rely on his atonement, implore the help of his Spirit, devote yourself entirely to his service. Do it now. "Strive to enter in at the strait gate now. Offer the prayer, "God be merciful to me, a sinner," now. Too much time has been wasted already. Lose no more. This may be your only opportunity! Seize it now, for time is short, and death is near, and judgment threatens! Now, for in eternity it will be too late, and your very next step may land you there.

The only season of which you can be sure is now. The only season in which you can work is now. The purpose may not last till to-morrow; fulfil it now. Fresh difficulties will flood the channel to-morrow; wade it now. The chain of evil habits will bind you more tightly to-morrow; snap it now. Religion is a work for every day: begin it now. Sin exposes to present miseries; escape them now. Holiness confers present joys; seize them now. Your Creator commands; obey him now. A God of love entreats; be reconciled now. The Father from his throne invites; return now. The Savior from his cross beseeches; trust him now. The Holy Spirit is striving in your heart; yield now. "Behold, now is the accepted time; behold, now is the day of salvation."

LAST DAY SCOFFERS APPEARING.

THOS. FITZSIMMONS.

The last day scoffers are appearing, by which we have another sign of the near coming of our Lord. We have cut from The New York Graphic a picture, representing a poor demented looking man, with upturned eyes and clasped hands, praying, and underneath the words placed by the Editor—"A study of idiots,—the man who believes the world is about to end." Thus christians now-a-days who believe in the near coming of the Lord are publicly paraded as idiots!

A Philadelphia journal, The Times, takes constant pleasure in getting off jokes and sarcasms upon Second Adventists, when it has the opportunity. One of its paragraphs is as follows: "The Second Adventists are preparing to make another ascension on or about the coming 4th of July." And we regret to say that these are only a few of a number of journals over the country who follow example in ridiculing believers in the speedy coming of Christ.

The writer in stating his convictions and belief in the near coming of our Lord, has on several occasions been met with contempt, and in several instances only personal respect for him has suppressed the sarcasm and derision of those to whom he opened his views. We believe also that this is the personal experience of many of our brethren who hold the same views. Thus in the present day is every promised sign of the end being fulfilled,—"the last day scoffers"—spoken of by St. Peter, are already open, malignant, and defiant in our midst.

OIL FOR OUR LAMPS.

The Lord has used many illustrations in his Word to beautify, make plain, and forcibly impress his truth upon the human heart. One of the most beautiful and impressive lessons given us by Jesus is found is the parable of the virgins, in Matt., 25th chapter.

The great design of this parable evidently was to illustrate the last part of the church's history, so as to present the most prominent danger to which she would then be exposed, and the opposite position of safety by which eternal salvation will be secured. He shows plainly that safety and salvation when the Bridegroom appears will be secured by having oil in our vessels with our lamps; and that the fatal snare will consist in a lack of that oil.

The great question of interest to us is, therefore, What is the oil, or what does the oil in the parable illustrate? As we believe the church is now passing through the very experience of the virgins presented in the parable, the true answer to the question and the knowledge of our personally possessing the oil, or lacking it, is of infinite importance to us. May God help us to investigate this subject in the most earnest and prayerful manner.

What does the oil illustrate? Do the Scriptures in other passages symbolize any important grace or endowment, as in this case, by oil? If so, those passages may explain this one, for parallels in the Scriptures serve to explain each other.

Oil was one of the most prominent articles used in the typical, Mosaic service. It was mingled with fine flour, and poured upon the meat offerings, and thus eaten by the worshipers; showing that in the antitype it would have an internal application. It was also used for an external anointing, signifying that in the antitype it would have an external application. It was also used for illumination, showing that it would give light to the church of Christ. It was used for consecration, signifying a setting apart for special, holy use; thus were shields and garments anointed, also men for special offices, as kings and priests. This signifies that in the antitypical dispensation those set apart for holy work or worship would receive the antitypical anointing.

The antitypical oil, under the gospel, as explained in the New Testament in each of the departments above, is the Holy Spirit. Aaron, as the priestly type of Christ, was anointed with unmeasured oil, running down over his beard and garments, which was fulfilled in Christ's receiving the Holy Spirit as John recorded: "For he whom God hath sent speaketh the words of God; for God giveth not the Spirit by measure unto him." John 3: 34. "For of a truth against thy holy child Jesus, whom thou [God] hast anointed." Acts 4: 27. "God anointed Jesus of Nazareth with the Holy Ghost and with power." Acts 10: 38. Christ by this anointing was consecrated to the sacred work of the Messiah. All of Christ's people are consecrated by the same anointing, as it is said, "But the manifestation of the Spirit is given to every man to profit withal." 1 Cor. 12: 7.

The oil in the parable was evidently presented not as a consecrating or sacrificial oil, but as an illuminating oil. We must therefore learn what the typical illuminating oil represents in the gospel.

Light is that which manifests persons, things and ideas. Paul says "Whatsoever doth make manifest is light." Eph. 5. 13. What is the gospel illuminater, as typified by the increasing illumination produced by the oil in the seven lamps burning in the Mosaic tabernacle or Solomon's temple? Jesus answered this when he promised to send the Holy Spirit, and defined its work. He said, "He [the Spirit] will shew you things to come." To show a thing is to manifest it—to illuminate its place or to envelop it with a light so that it can be seen.

Again he said of the Spirit, "He shall take of mine and shall shew it unto you." John 16: 14, 15. Paul expresses the same truth thus: "Eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither have entered into the heart of man, the things which God hath prepared for them that love him. But God hath revealed them unto us by his Spirit: for the Spirit searcheth all things, yea, the deep things of God. For what man knoweth the things of a man save the spirit of man which is in him? Even so the things of God knoweth no man, but the Spirit of God." Again he says: "But the natural man receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God; for they are foolishness unto him: neither can he know them, because they are spiritually discerned." 1 Cor. 2: 9–14.

John brings out the same great truth when he says, "But ye have an unction from the Holy One, and ye know all things." 1 John 2: 20. Unction expresses an application of oil—an anointing—and the word is properly used to express the application of oil for a medical or religious purpose. In this passage it is used to show that this religious anointing gives a knowledge of truth, for he continues the subject and says: "I have not written unto you because ye know not the truth, but because ye know it." How did they know it? By the illumination of the unction which they had received. He confirmed this when he said, "But the anointing which ye have received of him abideth in you, and ye need not that any man teach you." Vs. 27.

These passages clearly prove that the antitypical oil in the Christian Church, both consecrating and illuminating, is the Holy Spirit. It follows therefore that the great danger to the church just before the Bridegroom comes, as illustrated in the parable—the fatality resulting to the foolish virgins for the lack of oil, will be a destitution of the Holy Spirit.

Satan understanding this matter and coming in great wrath to ensnare as many of Christ's friends as possible at the end, we may expect him to use every effort to cause them to fail in being furnished with that Spirit at the time when the Savior shall come. He will labor to disprove the existence of the Spirit with many, and others to accept of that which is counterfeit, and others, who know and believe in the the Holy Spirit, he will labor to steal it away by causing them to do those things which will cause it to depart from them.

Without the sanctifying and illuminating agency of the Holy Spirit we are lost; therefore it is infinitely important to us that we possess it. It is the only agency which can produce in men pure devotion and worship acceptable to God. Satan's great effort is to deceive men and cause them to accept some counterfeit, worldly, satanic spirit to control their worshp, and thus fatally ensnare them. We should be guarded on every hand that we may escape his devices.

To furnish us with a real test, by which we may know the true Spirit, God has told us how it is obtained, what fruits it will produce, and the confession it will make. Jesus said, "He that believeth on me as the Scripture hath said, out of his belly shall flow rivers of living water: but this spake he of the Spirit, which they that believe on him should receive." John 7: 38, 39. No truth could be more positively stated than this—that the condition on which we receive the Holy Spirit is the exercise of faith in him "as the Scripture hath said;" not as men may interpret them, but as it is said or written. Remember faith in the divine record is the positive prerequisite to a reception of the Spirit.

The Spirit is retained only by those who continue to exercise faith, obedient to the Word of God; for Jesus said, "He that believeth [continues to believe] out of his belly shall flow [continue to run] rivers of living [active, not stagnant] waters."

We do not believe on Jesus as the Scripture has said, when we receive one scriptural testimony of him and reject another. The Jews believed in Christ's second advent as the Scripture said, but they rejected the divine sayings relating to his first advent; this excluded them from the divine favor, and the privilege of enjoying the Holy Spirit.

Their experiences are given to the Christian Church as examples, and were written for the admonition of those upon whom the ending of the ages have come. Their worship was spurious because it was controlled by a false spirit, received through the adoption of a false theology, which was an alloy of truth and human traditions, the traditions being composed of mystical interpretations of the Scriptures. See Matt. chap. 15.

THE TEMPEST APPROACHING.

The Eastern tempest, so long ago anticipated, almost impatiently, by holy watchers, and waited for by the Lamb's espoused Bride, is now lifting its portentous clouds far above the lands of ancient story, where the spirit-enwrapped seers stood with glasses turned to the sun-setting age, and viewed the dying king of tragic history driven from his usurped throne—where Cæsar stood up who first gave the imperial hand to the "Lady of Kingdoms"—sinking into his appointed grave under the shadows of the Holy Mountains.

The eye must be dim which cannot see the gleaming lightnings now dancing over the Byzantine throne, and the ear deaf which does not hear the muttering thunders echoing the approaching war-whoop of avenging myriads now armor-clad for the last "clash of arms. O wonderful subject! too awful to allow of mirthfulness or sensual pleasures; too grand and sublime to admit of indifference; too destructive and universal in its results to allow no preparation to meet it, connected with which is too glorious a deliverance for Christ's church for her to witness its approach without strong emotions of joy and gladness. God would not allow such events, so vitally important to men, to come upon them without causing an alarm to be sounded so that all might escape its overwhelming ruin. He will see that it is sounded from the pulpit and the press, from the throne and from the market-place.

We clip an editorial from the Boston Journal, which we think gives a very correct sketch of the present external manifestations of the great subject:

THE EASTERN QUESTION.—The war cloud in Europe may be no larger than a man's hand, but it is certainly above the horizon. The foreign papers are very openly discussing the prospects, and it seems evident that the dissolution of the Turkish Empire, which may occur within the year, will be followed by one of the greatest struggles Europe has ever witnessed. Prince Milan of Servia will doubtless be found engaged very soon in a war with Turkey, the object of which will be to obtain absolute independence. Austria and Russia have conflicting interests, which in the Turkish crisis will be apt to bring them into war, and England's interest in Egypt will tend to draw her into the strife in some way. The Emperor of Russia is one of the few elements in the problem which stand in the way of an immediate solution of the Eastern question. His friendship for Germany and Austria and his determined stand in favor of peace do much to defer the impending hostilities. That his people are not in accord with him has been evidenced by a number of incidents, notably the feeling against the addition of the title Empress of India to Queen Victoria's title, a feeling quite deep on the part of the Russian people, but not shared in by Alexander. His death or abdication would precipitate matters at once. But even though he remain upon the throne, should Servia begin open war against the Porte, and should Austria make armed interference against the interest of Servia, as she probably would, Alexander could not possibly stand aloof. The cloud therefore, looks bigger than a man's hand, and the thunder storms of summer may be echoed by the thunders of European cannon." J. C.

THE FOUR GREAT KINGDOMS.

In the time of Nebuchadnezzar, king of Babylon, between five and six hundred years before Christ, the prophet Daniel, who was then a captive at Babylon, was informed by "the God of heaven", that following the Babylonian kingdom would be three more noted ones, and that when the fourth had run its allotted time, "the God of heaven" would "set up a kingdom, which shall never be destroyed, . . . and it shall stand forever." Dan. 2: 44. History shows that there has been but one such series of great kingdoms succeeding each other. They are the Babylonian, Medo-Persian, Grecian, and Roman kingdoms. The prophecy calls the first three by name, and describes the fourth so minutely, that no room is left for doubt, as to that kingdom being meant for the fourth. The prophecy and history fully correspond.

Daniel was instructed to say to Nebuchadnezzar: "Wheresoever the children of men dwell, the beasts of the fields, and the fowls of the heaven, hath he given into thine hand, and hath made thee ruler over them all." Dan. 2: 38. The prophet Jeremiah said: "Thus saith the Lord of hosts: . . . I have given all these lands into the hand of Nebuchadnezzar, the king of Babylon; . . and all nations shall serve him, and his son, and his son's son, until the very time of his land come." Jer. 27: 4–7. His son's son was Belshazzar, who was the last king of Babylon. The Medo-Persian kingdom, which succeeded, also held the controlling kingly power over the earth. Cyrus was the conqueror of Babylon. In Ezra 1: 1–2, we find the following record:

"Now in the first year of Cyrus, king of Persia, that the word of the Lord, by the mouth of Jeremiah, might be fulfilled, the Lord stirred up the spirit of Cyrus, king of Persia, that he made a proclamation throughout all his kingdom, and put it also in writing, saying, Thus saith Cyrus, king of Persia, the Lord God of heaven hath given me all the kingdoms of the earth."

Cosresponding with this, Herodotus, "the father of history" says, when distributing the kingdom of Cyrus: "Wherever Cyrus marched throughout the earth, it was impossible for the nations to escape him." Xenophon, the historian, in his Cyropædia, says of Cyrus: "He ruled the Medes, subverted the Syrians, the Assyrians, the Arabians, the Cappadocians, the Phrygians, the Lydians, the Carians, the Babylonians, the Indians, the Phœniceans, the Greeks in Asia, the Cyprians, the Egyptians, and struck all with such dread and terror, that none ventured to assail him. He subdued from his throne east, west, north and south."

The Medo-Persian kingdom continued some two hundred and twenty-nine years, till B. C. 331, when it was conquered by the Grecians, led on by Alexander the Great.

Daniel said "the God of heaven" informed him that the Grecian kingdom would succeed the Medo-Persian. He received this information over two hundred years before the event took place. It is a well-known fact that the Grecian kingdom, under Alexander, was the third universal one following the Babylonian. Daniel said the Grecian kingdom would be divided, and then a fourth kingdom would succeed that, which would be very strong, and of great extent. He does not give the name of the fourth kingdom, but gives such a particular description of it, that no room remains to doubt that it is the Roman. History allows no other kingdom but the Roman as the successor of the Grecian; for the Roman swallows up all the parts of the Grecian.

M. Guizot, the French editor of Gibbon's Roman History says of the Roman empire, it was "the most extraordinary dominion which has ever invaded and oppressed the world." He speaks of it as "that immense empire, erected on the ruins of so many kingdoms, republics, and States, both barbarous and civilized." Pref. to Gib. vol. 1, p. 4.

Gibbon says: "The empire was about two thousand miles in breadth, from the wall of Antonius and northern limits of Dacia to the Atlas and the tropic of Cancer. It extended in length more than three thousand miles, from the Western ocean to the Euphrates."

Our Savior was born during the reign of Augustus Cæsar, the first Roman Emperor. He issued a decree "that all the world should be taxed." Luke 2: 1. This shows that Cæsar claimed the controlling power over the known world.

Gibbon says: "The image of gold, or silver, or brass, that might serve to represent the nations of kings, was successively broken up by the iron monarchy of Rome." Gibbon could find no form of words so well calculated to express his mind in relation to the four kingdoms, as that used by Daniel in describing the symbol that was their representative. Gibbon goes on to say:

"There was not an inch of ground then known exempt from its sceptre. The modern tyrant who should find no resistance in his own breast, or in his people, would soon experience a gentle restraint from the example of his equals, the dread of censure, the apprehension of enemies. The object of his displeasure escaping the narrow limits of his dominion, would easily obtain, in a happier climate, a secure refuge, freedom of complaint, and perhaps means of revenge. But the empire of the Romans filled the world, and when that empire fell into the hands of a single person, the world became a safe and dreary prison for his enemies. To resist was fatal, and it was impossible to fly. On every side he was encompassed with a vast extent of sea and land, which he could never hope to traverse, without being discovered, seized, and restored to his irritated master. Beyond the frontiers, he could discover nothing but the ocean, inhospitable deserts, and hostile tribes of fierce barbarians."

Thus it became a settled historic fact, that the four great, universal kingdoms followed each other in the same order and character, as described in the prophecies of Daniel hundreds of years before their accomplishment. This is a standing miracle, showing the divine inspiration of the Bible.

TURKISH INSURRECTION.

According to reports, the insurrection in Turkey is continually spreading and gaining ground. It is said that Bosnia, Servia, and Montenegro have joined in the revolt. It is also stated that "the crisis of the insurrection is evidently approaching." Stirring times may be expected there soon. There is no prospect now that Turkey can hold her position much longer. She may be ready to be served up on the Russian table by next thanksgiving day. Austria and Germany may have a price. The whole civilized world is watching with interest the progress of the insurrection, because stupendous consequences are involved. The careful student of prophecy is now entering a field of thrilling interest, where he may daily expect new developments indicating the speedy return of our Lord.

A telegram from London says:

"The Jewish Chronicle says that Turkey is considering the proposition of Jewish bondholders in conjunction with some bondholders of other denominations, to exchange their bonds for land in Syria."

This looks as though the Turks are thinking of letting go in Palestine, in case they are defeated in Europe. The signs certainly indicate that these anti-christian Gentiles will not tread down Jerusalem but a little longer. This being true, the consummation of the christian's hope cannot be far in the future. It is time for the saints to lift their heads and rejoice, because their redemption draweth near.

In addition to other calamities, which are coming upon the Turks, it is said the plague has broken out in Asiatic Turkey, and is spreading. There were one hundred and seventeen deaths by plague in nine days in two towns. The following is from the Missionary Herald for April:

"Several letters from and in regard to portions of the Eastern Turkey field present a sad picture of civil affairs, and of the intolerable abuse of Christians by the Turks. Of one city it is said: "The children of Christians venture into the streets only with fear and trembling." "Some young Armenians, to escape the abuse and cruelty of the Turks, have fled from this part of the country." Wholesale robberies and maraudings, fearful beatings, and even murders of Christians by the Turks, are represented as not unfrequent, while no redress can be obtained. "No Christian can traverse the streets of our cities without danger of being cursed or stoned."

A missionary writes:—"We are unable to do much of any touring on account of the very unsettled state of the country, as we cannot get anywhere without going through a Koordish region, and the English consul here is very unwilling to have us travel at all. He says it is very unsafe; but I think I shall at least visit the Pasin plain, and spend a few days trying to stir up the people there.

"The consul thinks we may be obliged to leave here in the spring. He fears that the Turks will attempt to massacre all the Christians. He is sure that such a thing was thought of, and planned, last fall; but it was found out by the Pasha, and measures taken to stop it. Europeans in Constantinople have the same fear. What is to become of Turkey we don't know. Almost any change would be for the better. But don't be too anxious about us. I feel that the Lord will care for us, and that all will come out well. We need the prayers of all good people." M. G.

WAR CLOUDS.—War clouds keep rising in Europe, and are becoming more and more threatening. The effect already begins to be felt in American business circles. Observing men are convinced that some great changes are at our doors. Their feelings are quite like those who hear the first rumbling of a coming earthquake. A fearfulness and trembling is taking hold of them, that is not easily thrown aside. The following is from the New York World:

"War rumors from Europe have at length become an influence of importance in the speculation in cotton, breadstuffs, and provisions, and this fact is an evidence that there is something in them. The only result yet produced is upon cotton, which quite broke down on Thursday, in the face of some circumstances which seemed to favor an advance. There has latterly been a very large business in rye, an article which it is true, has been growing in home consumption, but is rarely bought in large lots, except for export. It will be remembered that some months before the Franco-German war broke out, an active demand for grain sprung up in this market for shipment to Germany, when there was nothing in the markets of that country to warrant it. A renewal of the export demand for cured meats is also to be noticed, but may have no relation to military supplies. Should hostilities of a serious nature occur in Europe, its immediate effect upon us would be very marked, in reversing the drift which prices and speculation have taken in the past few weeks." M. G.

NEW HYMN AND TUNE BOOK.

At a meeting of the Advent Christian Publication Society held April 17th, 1876, it was voted, that the Society publish a new Hymn and Tune Book, not to exceed 200 pages, and that the following brethren be a committee to arrange and prepare said book for publication: J. Hemenway, S. G. Mathewson, and A. W. Sibley.

Those persons having hymns or tunes that they would like to have inserted in the new hymn book are requested to forward the same to the Business Agent of the Society—Bro. G. T. Adams—immediately, and he will send them to the committee.

A. W. SIBLEY, Secretary.

NEW YORK MEETINGS.—Bro. Moody began the revival meetings at the Hippodrome, New York, Monday evening, Feb. 7th, and closed them Wednesday evening, April 19th, having continued seventy-three days. The meetings averaged about three a day, including those for women and young men; and yet Brn. Moody and Sankey seem fresh as ever. It is estimated that the average attendance has been fifteen thousand a day, or about one million in the sixty-three working days. It is thought one-fifth of the above number, or two hundred thousand different persons, attended the meetings. The last meeting showed that some four thousand had professed to be converted. Let prayer be offered that Bro. Moody may be continually successful in winning souls to Christ. M. G.

CORRECTION.—The following statement appeared in a Concord (N. H.) paper:

"Miles Grant . . . has made up his mind at last that there is no certainty to be associated with the interpretation of the prophecies in Holy Writ concerning the second coming of the Lord."

If the writer of the above had put the word a in the place of "no," he would have expressed our feelings on the subject; for we were never more fully convinced than now that the prophecies point with "certainty" to the coming of Christ, as an event near at hand. As stated in the article to which we have referred, we do not believe any one now knows the precise time when Jesus will come; but we have no doubt but that the event is very nigh. M. G.

CORRECTION.—In a letter from Bro. J. A. Packard, March 22nd, "New Boston, N. H.," should be "New Boston, Winchendon, Mass."

CORRECTION.

Through a misunderstanding, I was published in the Crisis as believing and teaching trine immersion, and assisting in establishing a meeting in Lewiston, Me., of that faith. I never believed or preached trine immersion, neither did I assist in establishing such a meeting. L. L. HOWARD.

DISTRICT MEETING REPORT.

The second such meeting for the present Conference year was appointed to be held in the Bolton District, East Bolton, and to commence March 17th, and continue its sessions over the following Sabbath. As per appointment it was held, but in connection with unavoidable, unfavorable circumstances, as well as some that might perhaps have been better. The weather was cold and stormy, and the roads bad at the time, which hindered many from attending that fully intended to. Then a contagious disease, it was said, kept some away, and perhaps other contagions influenced some, so that the meeting was far from being all it might and ought to have been.

On the Wednesday previous to our meeting we laid away one of our best members in that community; and by death, removals and apostasy, our ranks are being very much thinned. There are some however left, who fully intend to "fight the good fight of faith," and I trust they will. I did the best I could under the circumstances, although sick and debilitated, and will make no report of the preaching. Elder Tilson, the Secretary of the District, was there the first day of the meeting only, and therefore I am (rather unwillingly) his proxy in making this report. I trust he had a reasonable excuse for absence. I would be glad to know that all others had who were not there, whom we had reason to expect and rely upon.

The Lake View Campmeeting committee were personally notified, and expected to be present, to harmoniously attend to the interests of our ground and its better preparation, which will be carried forward; and to make some definite arrangements for our next meeting. Two only were present; three were absent. Of course no business was done; yet it will be at an early date, as there is entire union on the part of the committee, and we purpose to carry into effect what we have undertaken, since we know that to do so is just and right, and to do otherwise would be an injustice to many.

Let us act wisely with reference to these important matters. I have heard from one of the three above mentioned since the above meeting, (Bro. Jewell), explaining his absence, who says—"My determination is the same as previously; I will use my influence to further the cause and promote its interest." Doubtless the other two had good reasons for absence. C. P. DOW.

JOHN BUNYAN was once asked a question about heaven which he could not answer, because the matter was not revealed in the Scriptures; and he therefore advised the inquirer to live a holy life, and go and see.

THE TRACT FUND.

THE ADVENT CHRISTIAN PUBLICATION SOCIETY, at a meeting on Springfield camp-ground, August 11th, 1875, voted to raise Two Thousand Dollars for the free distribution of Tracts the ensuing year; and they invite the help and co-operation of all lovers of the Lord and of his truth, in the furtherance of the good cause. The times are ominous of coming events, and admonish us to diligence in the Master's work. The Lord is at the door, and what we do must be done quickly. Let the contributions be prompt, hearty, and liberal The Lord will reward the liberal giver.

Correspondence.

From Bro. L. Bower.

To the Brn. and Srs. in Christ:—While reflecting to-day on the things that are past, and the things that await us in the future, I can say, The Lord is good, and his mercy endureth forever. His ways are wonderful and past finding out by the children of men. When we look at his wonderful workings among the nations of the earth, the care he has for his word, that every jot and tittle may be fulfilled, we are led to ask, Who is like unto our God? What wondrous love he has bestowed on us. Whosoever believeth on him will not perish, but have everlasting life.

I am glad the Word says "whosoever." That embraces me and all the world. Whosoever will may come to the fountain of life, and drink freely, without money and without price. Beloved brethren, "has not God chosen the poor of this world, rich in faith, to be heirs of the kingdom which he has prepared for all that love him!" "Behold what manner of love the Father hath bestowed upon us, that we should be called the sons of God." "And it doth not yet appear what we shall be; but we know that, when he shall appear, we shall be like him, for we shall see him as he is." When this mortal body shall be changed and made like Christ's glorious body, then we shall be able to comprehend the wondrous love of God.

When shall we be made like unto Christ? When he comes. Then "every eye shall see him, and they also that pierced him, and all nations shall mourn because of him." Then those that have fallen in death shall be brought forth; they that have done good to a resurrection of life, and they that have done evil to a resurrection of damnation. "Every one that hath this hope in him purifieth himself, even as he is pure."

It was for a hope in the resurrection that Paul was called in question. "Some said, What will this babbler say [or base fellow]? other some, He seemeth to be a setter forth of strange gods; because he preached unto them Jesus and the resurrection." Would to God we had more Pauls to-day; men who would learn to avoid foolish and unlearned questions, and would preach Jesus and the resurrection;—life only through Christ, to be gained by obedience to him, and given to us at his appearing and kingdom. "When Christ, who is our life, shall appear, then shall we also appear with him in glory." What a blessed hope! How it has cheered the hearts of bereaved ones, when they have been called to pass through the furnace of affliction. In this wilderness of woe, this long night of mourning, how many hearts have bled, tears have flowed, affection's tie been severed, family circles broken; sweet voices, that once cheered our hearts as we met around the fireside, been hushed, jewels stolen from us; but they shall come again. Glory to God! and they will be the same dear ones we laid away. Bless God, they will be the same literal persons whom we loved and embraced in this world; and best of all, the time is nigh when what we have now in prospect we shall have in reality; what we now see by an eye of faith we shall soon enjoy.

Be of good cheer, brethren; the kingdom, the crown, the glory, all are yours, and ye are Christ's, and Christ is God's. Amen.

Sylvester, Mich., April 7th, 1876.

From Bro. Wm. Halliday.

Dear Brn. and Srs. in Christ:—I have been so much delighted in reading the many good articles in the Crisis recently that a desire is awakened in me to give in my testimony also in favor of Jesus and his holy Word.

For about twenty-two years I have been trying to serve the Lord, and have passed through difficulties real and imaginary, yet I do love the Lord and his people, which is one evidence that I have Christ formed within the hope of glory. I find when trials multiply there is nothing so comforting as to feel that our Father in heaven knows all about it, and cares for us kindly, and will bring us off victorious. When friends depart, disappointments come, trials are severe and hopes are blasted, how good it is to feel that Jesus is our friend, and we can go to him for sympathy and favor. Our joys and happy seasons in this life are very brief; but we are consoled with the assurance that soon we shall enter that land "where there is fulness of joy, and . . . pleasures forevermore."

I am still trying to preach the gospel of the coming kingdom. There has been some special interest manifested recently in the church at Bear Point. Three have come out from the world, and have confessed the Lord by baptism. Last Sabbath we had a blessed day, and when we came around the table in the evening, to commemmorate the death and suffering of our dear Lord, about all arose and spoke, and rejoiced to know that our absent Head was so soon to return, when with all the ransomed we should sit down at "the marriage supper of the Lamb." With delight we anticipate the rapturous scene, when with shouts of joy and songs of victory the brightness of eternal glory shall forever sweep away the remembrance of earthly sorrow. Dear Brn. and Srs., pray for us, that the truth may spread in our land.

Cape S. Island, N. S.

From Sr. R. M. Rines.

Dear Brn.:—I think Bro. D. T. Taylor's view of the "Cry at midnight" is right, and I think we should be wise to be ready at any moment. How thankful I am when I read your editorials brethren; it makes me happy in the Lord to see how good he is to poor sinners in these last days, in sending such good men to teach us the way of life, that we may be saved when Christ comes.

What the church wants is a divine anointing of the Holy Spirit. The power is in God and not in human legislation. We do not need an earthly king with his red tape tactics and dress parade inspections. We want battle line heroes, hot-blooded for the conflict, with the sword of heaven in hand, and the power in the heart to wield it. Let God send out his Joshuas and Davids, and all hands fall in the wake, and you will see the enemy routed at every turn, without any Saul-armored despots to issue their edicts. Condemn no man for not thinking as you think. Let every man enjoy the full and free liberty of thinking for himself. Let every man use his own judgment, since every man must give an account of himself to God. Abhor every approach in any kind or degree to the Spirit of persecution. If you cannot reason or persuade a man into the truth, never attempt to force him into it. If love will not compel him to come leave him to God, the Judge of all. Christ said, "Be wise as serpents and harmless as doves."

Boscawen, N. H.

From Bro. D. C. Thomas.

Dear Brothers and Sisters:—Accept my thanks for the hearty response in sending papers and tracts to be given away. They are eagerly sought for by the people. I have distributed almost all I have received. One backslider made up her mind last Sunday, April 8th, to come back to her Father's house. To God be all the glory. To-day (April 16th) we had a good time. The Lord was with us. Many testimonies were given for Christ, and four arose, and by so doing said they wanted to be for the Lord. I am not rich in this world's goods; if I was I should be glad to buy tracts and papers to give away. I have traveled many miles to tell the people that the Lord is coming soon. I speak in school-houses, and have more calls than I can fill. The people seem to be hungry for the truth. May the Lord bless the labors of his unworthy servant in the salvation of many precious souls. Let me say to those who love the Lord, I feel that I need your prayers. My address hereafter will be Cuba, Alleghany Co., N. Y.

From Sr. H. Rich.

Dear Editors:—I have been thinking some time that I would write a few lines for the Crisis, which you have been so kind to send me free a long time through the instrumentality of Bro. J. S. White. I am the only one in this place who takes the Crisis. I hail its weekly visits, and read and re-read it, then send it to my friends and neighbors. It is about all the Advent preaching that I obtain. I am a poor widow, over sixty years of age, and my health is poor; but I love the blessed truths published in the Crisis; they cheer me on my pilgrimage through this vale of tears and gloom to a city that hath foundations, whose builder and maker is God.

South Truro, Mass., April 9th, 1876.

DOES IT MEAN WAR.—Great importance is attached to the following despatch from St. Petersburg relative to Eastern affairs, published by the semi-official Russian Telegraphic Agency:—"Despite the happy conclusion of the armistice, the general situation has rather been aggravated in the Oriental question. The Porte, which has again fallen into inactivity, leaves the Cabinets to work for peace without seconding them by the application of reforms. There would seem to be rather a retrogression in this respect. On the other hand, a recrudescence of Mussulman fanaticism is announced. The massacres of Christians telegraphed yesterday to the Russki Mir are confirmed. The Christians are making reprisals. Five thousand insurgents have entered the districts of Bihach and Travnik. All these facts are the more grave, since they occur at the beginning of spring." Commenting on the facts a correspondent says:—"The care with which attention is drawn to the statement that 'these facts occur at the beginning of spring,' 'accusations against the Turks, and other signs,' seem to show that Europe will know at last what are the immediate objects of the proceedings with, without, or against Austria.—London Times.

IT is a belief in the Bible, the fruits of deep meditation, which has served me as the guide of my moral and literary life. I have found it a capital safely invested, and richly productive.—Goethe.

Obituaries.

JORDAN. In Chelsea, Mass., March 11th, 1876, Bro. Ezekiel Jordan, aged twenty-two years.

Bro. J. in early life professed faith in Christ, and was quite active in christian worship for a time, but subsequently lost his enjoyment and ceased to unite in sacred devotions. When the blighting hand of consumption was laid upon him, his cherished earthly hopes were broken, and the blooming prospects of time suddenly withered; thus did a merciful Heavenly Father turn his eye from the temporal to the eternal—from a fading to a fadeless world, upon which his heart was once more fixed through the infinite love and abounding grace of Jesus his ever faithful Friend. His faith gloriously triumphed, and he seemed to concentrate the christian labor of years into a few hours, testifying nobly for Christ and the truth, warning and exhorting father, mother, brothers, sisters and all friends, christians and sinners, to be ready to meet him at the triumphal gathering of the sainted hosts on the approaching morning of the first resurrection. His dying hour was remarkably impressive, for a heavenly radiance seemed to illuminate the chamber of death, and the dews of a purer world to gather around the falling saint. J. C.

PALMER. Peacefully fell asleep in Jesus at her son's residence, Camden, New Jersey, March 31st, 1876, Sister Mary Palmer, aged sixty-five years.

For many years Sister P. has been a firm believer in and ardent lover of the second appearing of Jesus Christ, to whom she looked for eternal life. She was a faithful and living member of the Second Advent Church, by whom she was greatly beloved and highly esteemed. She was also a faithful, loving mother. She leaves an only son and family with a large number of relatives and friends to mourn their loss, but not without hope. The funeral services were held in the Advent chapel, conducted by Elder George A. Brown and the writer.

Our sister sleeps in Jesus,
But he will soon appear,
And gather all his chosen
To meet him in the air.

H. T. TAYLOR.

TWISS. In Worcester, Mass., Feb. 19th, '76 our son, Vernon Brewer Twiss, aged thirty-seven years.

He was brought home sick about two weeks before his death. He had never embraced Jesus as his Savior, but before he died confessed his faith in Christ, and said he had given himself into his hands. His dying words to his dear brother at his side expressed a desire for him to be a christian. As Christ accepted the penitent thief at the eleventh hour, we have hope in his death Words of comfort were spoken by Bro. J. A. Libby.

CUDWORTH. Fell asleep in Jesus, in New Rutland, Ill., April 13th, 1876, Bro. Alvin Cudworth, aged about sixty-three years.

Bro. Cudworth embraced the "blessed hope" of the soon coming of redemption, in Bro. Miller's day. This hope has been his solace through the severe trials which he has been called to endure, and he rests waiting its consummation when Jesus comes. Services by the writer. Text, Prov. 10: 7—"The memory of the just is blessed." C. W. SMITH.

THOMSON. At East Bolton, P. Q., March 13th, 1876, of lingering consumption, Philinda Tilson, wife of A. M. Thomson, aged fifty-three years.

Our sister was beloved by all who knew her, and her death was a great loss to her family and the vicinity of her home. We hope to meet her again. Amen. Sermon by the writer, from Luke 20: 35, 36. C. P. DOW.

KNAPP. In Clarkville, April 13th, 1876, after a lingering illness, Lois A., wife of Perly Knapp, aged forty-four years.

She leaves a companion, two daughters, and a large circle of friends to mourn their loss; but they sorrow not as others having no hope. The writer tried to speak words of cheer and consolation to the bereft. D. N. CHADSEY.

GOULD. April 23d, 1876, infant daughter of Henry and Orfa Gould, aged four months.

"How long shall death the tyrant reign,
And triumph o'er the just?"

FOREIGN NEWS.

LONDON, April 27. A Vienna dispatch to the Daily News says the Porte has been diplomatically cautioned against arming the Mahomedan population in the insurgent provinces, owing to the danger of a wholesale massacre of Christians.

The plague in Messopatamia is increasing. There were eighty deaths at Hillah and 208 at Bagdad during the first week in April.

A telegram, dated on the 22d inst. from the Barbadoes Defence Association in Barbadoes, to the West India Committee, says:

"There are riots throughout the Island. Plantations and houses have been sacked, animals destroyed, and enormous destruction to property. Over forty rioters were shot and the troops are actively employed.

The city of Bridgeport is threatened, business is suspended, and families are seeking the shipping for safety. The rioters say that they have the Governor's sanction for their actions Immediate recall of the Governor, John Pope Hennessy, is requisite to save the colony

VIENNA, April 25. The Hungarian Ministers will neither accept nor refuse a compromise, but demand further concessions from Austria. If neither Cabinet recedes a change of Government is inevitable and the situation will become critical.

The state of affairs in Southern Europe is still drifting slowly toward war. Herzegovina has refused to accept an armistice as proposed by Austria. The moral support of the Russian Government and the substantial aid rendered by the Russian provinces have greatly strengthened the insurrectionary movement.

Turkey has declared that she will not attack Montenegro nor take any steps looking to war. A fresh armistice is hoped for.

A dispatch from St. Petersburg to the Russian Agency says that Prince Gortschakoff on Saturday convened the representatives of the five Great Powers because the Turkish Cabinet resolved on Friday to invade Montenegro by way of Scutari. The news from Constantinople is again better, the moderate party resisting the extreme counsels. Fresh negotiations are being pressed for the prolongation of the armistice and the revictualing of Nicsic. Conferences with the insurgent chiefs are going on.

The Prince of Montenegro denies that the Montenegrins took part in the recent engagement.

The Russian Government is going to reinforce the Mediterranean squadron. A telegram from Athens says the Porte is hesitating on the question of declaring war against Montenegro. The war party is strong in the Cabinet. Russia strongly objects. The Porte has asked Egypt for auxiliary troops, so that it can set free the Turkish garrisons of the towns in Asia for service elsewhere. Ten thousand Egyptian troops are to occupy these places. The troops have not yet assembled at Scutari, Aloania. Nothing is yet ready for immediate hostilities. Great agitation and alarm prevail at Constantinople.

CONSTANTINOPLE, April 24. It is stated that Mukhtar Pasha has received ten battalions of reinforcements and will now renew the attempt to revictual Nicsic.

It is reported that the Emperor of Austria has sent a telegraphic dispatch to Count Zichy, the Austrian Ambassador here, instructing him to tell the Porte not to take action against Montenegro or Servia, but to trust to his care for bringing about a peaceful termination of the insurrection, which he hopes for shortly.

BREST, April 28. The steamer Ouessant has foundered. Twenty-one lives were lost.

AUSTRIA. A correspondent in Vienna, says, in a telegram, "Reports reach us every day of gross outrages by the Turkish Irregulars. In Northern Bosnia three hundred Mohammedans, are said to have joined the insurgents. A rising on a larger scale is feared. The Peace Conferences between Baron Rodich and the insurgents are proceeding. The truce is prolonged until the 14th.

LONDON, April 27. The following was received from Barbadoes Wednesday. "Forty persons were killed and wounded and five hundred prisoners taken."

DOMESTIC NEWS.

New York, April 27. A Havana letter of the 22d states that a battle took place at Naranjo lately in which the Spanish commander advanced to a considerable extent from the post with only five hundred men, and in traversing a ravine fell into an ambush of the insurgents treble their number, and after a spirited fusilade, the Cubans charged sword in hand to close quarters, when the Spaniards broke and fled, endeavoring to gain the shelter of the fort, but the pursuers slew them right and left, so that only fourteen were left.

On the succeeding day the commander of the division visited the scene and found the dead and wounded stripped, the latter suffering acutely, when a pile of the dead was ordered made for burning them up, and as the incineration progressed and the surgeons pronounced upon the life chances of the wounded, those beyond recovery were, by order of the said commander, picked up by four men and tossed upon the burning pyre.

The Beebe Plain Adv. Campmeeting.

The first annual session of this campmeeting will be held at Beebe Plain, P. Q., at the Stanstead Junction of the Passumpsic R. R., commencing Saturday, June 24th, and holding over two Sabbaths. The grove is a beautiful one, unsurpassed for campmeeting purposes; a real leafy cathedral. The ground is smooth and dry, and the trees large, spreading rock-maples. The location is convenient of access, the cars leaving the people at the grounds, on a platform built by the railroad company on purpose for our accommodation.

There will be good board provided for all who wish it on the European plan, or each having what of plain substantial food he wishes, and paying only for what he has. We shall also make the best possible provision for lodging all who come unprovided for. Stabling and feed will be provided for horses; 25 cts. for hay and oats, or half that price for either, and 75 cts. a day.

All the railroads will carry passengers for half fare, or fare one way. All along the line of the Passumpsic and South Eastern railroads passengers will purchase the regular tickets to Stanstead Junction, and receive on the ground, of the Secretary, free return passes.

On the line of the Grand Trunk Railway, east of Montreal, and on the International, Quebec Central, and Boston, Concord and Montreal Rail Roads, purchase Campmeeting tickets for Stanstead Junction, and receive through tickets for fare one way; good to return on, and subject only to be countersigned by the Secretary.

Arrangements will be made with other local Roads, if persons living on the lines of such, who desire to attend the campmeeting, will inform the Secretary of the fact at Richmond, P. Q. All tickets will be good from June 14th to July 5th inclusive, so as to give all who build tents the opportunity of doing so.

We have made arrangements for procuring lumber, so that we can furnish it to brethren desiring to build tents, for a lower price than it can be bought of lumber merchants in the immediate vicinity, as we have it brought us by the Passumpsic R. R. Co. free of transportation; and we furnish it to those desiring to build at cost. Lots are also free, and every facility will be offered to assist all, who wish to build, to put up tents as cheaply as possible; and we hope many will avail themselves of their privilege of doing so.

We expect prominent preaching brethren from abroad will be present. We anticipate the presence of Elds. J. Couch, Wm. H. Mitchell, E. A. Stockman, and others. We hope for a large gathering of the brethren and sisters to this great feast of truth, to hear the Word from his servants, and we hope all will pray for God's special blessing on the meeting, and come in these last moments of time to labor for union in Christ, and to save the perishing.

M. A. Potter, President; R. W. Warner, Vice President; C. L. Percival, Treasurer; L. C. McKinstry, Secretary. Lewis Bergoine, John Elliott and John H. Carbee, Campmeeting Committee.

P. S.—All persons who purchase the through tickets will change cars as follows, when they come from points beyond the limits of the Passumpsic R. R. Those who purchase them in Montreal will call for them via St. John, and take the train via the South Eastern R. R.; and all who purchase them east of Montreal, on the Grand Trunk R. R., will call for them via Sherbrook, and change cars at Sherbrook or Lenoxville.

Those coming by the Boston, Concord and Montreal R. R., go via Wells River, and change there for the Passumpsic cars. Call always for Campmeeting tickets.

New York State Conference.

The annual meeting of the N. Y. State Advent Christian Conference will be held with the church at Springwater, Livingston Co, commencing on Thursday evening, June 8th, and continue over the following Sabbath. Springwater is on the New York and Erie R. R., about fifty miles south from Rochester. We trust every minister in the Conference will be present at the annual gathering, and that they will encourage the churches to send their full number of delegates and quarterly collections to help carry forward the cause of truth. Let every church where there is no minister located, and every church that wishes occasional or regular preaching, send delegates. If you cannot send Brn. as delegates, send sisters.

Brn. and Srs. scattered abroad, who want a tent or grove meeting in your vicinity, come to this annual meeting, and tell what you want, and what you can do to support one. Our Savior will soon appear, and our work of saving the perishing will soon be past, and our efforts should be increased and untiring until he comes. We hope to see many of the dear saints at this feast, who have not been able to meet with us for a long time. Come praying, in the Spirit, to the first meeting. Come all. Homes will be provided for all who come. Remember the time, delegates, and collections.

M. R. MILES, Pres.
JAS. E WELLS, Sec.

Maine Annual Conference.

The Maine A. C. Annual Conference will convene at Bangor (in the Hall occupied as a place of worship by the Advent church), Tuesday evening, at seven o'clock, June 13th, and continue several days. It is very desirable that every minister in the State, who is in sympathy with this Conference, should attend, also delegates from every church and society. Each church is allowed one delegate, and one additional for every additional ten members. There will be important business brought before the Conference for action; such as affects the special interest of the Conference, the mission and tract work, the ministry, and all the churches of our State. Come all.

GEO. HUMPHREY, Pres.
I. C. WELLCOME, Sec.

NOTICE.—The question of time for the Annual Session of the Vt. Conference has been discussed, and most seem to think September the best time. And as it has been ruled at two Conferences not to have it holden at the time of campmeeting, we think to have campmeeting commence perhaps the last Tuesday in August, or the first Tuesday in September, and close the next week Wednesday A. M.; and the Conference session commence Wednesday P. M., and hold till Saturday A. M., with preaching evenings. Those interested will please communicate to me their views of the plan, at Waterbury, Vt. A. A. HOYT, for Com.

CONFERENCE.—The first Quarterly Meeting of the R. I. and Ct. A. C. Conference will be held (D. V) at the Advent Chapel in Danielsonville, Ct., commencing Wednesday, June 7th, 1876, at 2 o'clock P. M., and continue Thursday and Friday. This meeting will be especially interesting to all members and churches, as many important features will be introduced; among them will be a new Constitution, By-laws, etc. Will all members come early, and stay through? Will every church send three delegates, or not less than one?

N. A. ANGELL, Conference Clerk.

That Book.

Four hundred more subscribers wanted for "Baptism and Rantism," before I can safely venture to publish the book. Orders are coming in slowly, too slowly to insure success, and I would esteem it a favor if all the brethren and sisters, who think they would buy the book if out, would interest themselves to order it at once; and if some brother in each place would favor me by taking other names to send with his own, I would be thankful to him. I believe the book is needed as a standard work among us, covering the ground not yet covered by any book ever published, and yet holding the old ground which we have occupied as a people for years, of only "one" true baptism; the new ground being mainly of rantism, or the true use and meaning of sprinkling according to the New Testament. Dear brethren, please assist about this matter. The highest cost of the book in paper will not exceed fifty cents. Please send on your orders rapidly to Richmond, P. Q., that I may have the assurance that I can safely send the manuscript to the press.

L. C. MCKINSTRY.

NOTICE.—A meeting is to be held every Sunday at Turner, Me., Chase's Mills school-house. When there is no preaching, we shall have a prayer meeting at three o'clock in the afternoon. A general invitation is extended to the brethren and sisters abroad to come and labor for the perishing.

For the brethren, C. S. TIRRELL.

NOTICE.—The Alton Bay Campmeeting Committee are notified to meet at Alton Bay Tuesday, May 9th, 1876. J. COUCH.

NOTICE.—The subscriber having changed his place of residence from East Penfield to Seneca Falls, N. Y., is at liberty to supply (occasionally) any church in Central New York that may desire his services. WM. INGMIRE.

Maine Special Notice.

Please attend to this at once. The Secretary, Deacon, or Elder, of each Second Advent Church in Maine should give the number of members in their respective churches, by postal card or letter, at once, to the Secretary of the Maine A. C. Conference, that we may know how many delegates we are entitled to in the S. A. C. Association, chosen at our Annual Conference in June next. Address I. C. WELLCOME, Sec., Yarmouth, Me.

NOTICE.—To the Brethren of Iowa Christian Conference:—You are all aware that we are nearing the time for Tent Meetings. The Iowa Mission Tent is not fit to put into the field this season. There is but about one fourth promised that is needed to put into the field a 50×80 tent, which we much need. Camp and Tent Meetings very much depend on your decision. There are many who are amply able to help if this matter was laid before them. I cannot go all around and see you; I should spend more time than is needed to get the tent I have contracted for. Will some one lend a helping hand, and do it promptly? Tent work must stop if this fails, and the blood of souls must be found in some one's garments. I do not want it to be mine. Come, Brn., wake up, and let me hear promptly from any State of all who wish to help the cause in Iowa, that I may know what to do. P. S. W. DEYO, Charles City, Iowa.

KANSAS STATE CONFERENCE.—The fourth Annual Session of the A. C. Conference of Kansas will convene with the church near Centropolis, Franklin Co., Kansas, Friday, May 19th, 1876, at 10 o'clock A. M., and hold over the following Sunday. We hope to see a general attendance of those who are looking for the return of our Lord and Savior. Will not all the churches throughout the State send delegates to this meeting? Homes will be provided for all who come. Come with the Spirit of the Lord, praying that he may direct in all things. C. CROWELL, President.
LEVI S. SMITH, Secretary.

THE LAKE VIEW CAMPMEETING, Magog, P. Q., Canada, will be held, as per vote of Conference, immediately after the Alton Bay meeting. Time hereafter definitely given. Let those who have promised to build cottages be in time with their preparations. Lots free, and all welcome.
C. P. DOW, for the Committee.

NOTICE.—There will be a Woman's National Union Campmeeting holden at Seabrook, N. H., commencing June 28th, and continuing till July 10th. Any wishing to build tents can correspond with C. A. Barton, Seabrook, N. H. Particulars hereafter. A. E. SMITH.

QUARTERLY MEETING.—The first Quarterly Meeting for the Southern District of Wis. will be held at Adams, Green Co., near the residence of Bro. Day, beginning on Friday evening, May 5th, to hold over Lord's day. All are invited to come early, and come to work for God.
WM. SHELDON.

NOTICE.—Bro. Charles W. Helme is to take charge of the meetings at North Abington, Mass Brethren wishing to come to Abington to preach will please correspond either with Bro. C. W. Helme or with Henry M. McPherson, Clerk.

NOTICE.—By an urgent request of the churches of Rockland and St. George, Me., to become their pastor, I preach one half the time at each place. First and third Sunday at Rockland, second and fourth at St. George. H. S. MITCHELL.

THE Pittsfield, Me., Campmeeting will commence Sunday, Aug. 27th. O. S. FRENCH, Sec.

THE Mechanic Falls Campmeeting will commence Saturday, Sept. 2d.
R. R. YORK, for the Committee.

NOTICE.—Bro. A. Damon's labors having closed with the church at Bridgewater, Vt, those wishing to preach for us will please correspond with J. Y. Briggs instead of J. T. Briggs, as formerly published in Crisis. J. Y. BRIGGS, Sec.

Tent for Sale.

A Tent fifty feet in diameter, nearly new, having been pitched only six times, will be sold for the very low price of $150.00.
S. G. LOW, Highlandville, Mass.

ANY person wishing to preach for the Second Advent Church in Worcester, Mass., are requested to correspond with some one of the preaching committee before sending their appointments.
E. G. Higgins, Dr. H. W. Buxton, W. M. Hall, Committee. N. J. STREETER, Clerk.

ALL brethren wishing to preach to the A. C. Church in Keene, N. H., will please correspond with A. A. Stiles or Geo. W. Elliott. In behalf fo the church, A. A. Stiles, G. W. Elliott, G. W. Spalding, H. H. Darling.

THOSE wishing to correspond with the church in Portsmouth, N. H., will please address the following committee: J. H. Berry, J. Shannon, J. Downing, J. B. Trefethen, R. Worster.

ALL corresponding with the Adv. Chris. Church in Charlton, Mass., please direct to Thomas F. Dockham, Charlton, Mass., or J. O. Cortis, Oxford, Mass., preaching committee.
CHAS. W. DOCKHAM, Clerk.

NOTICE.—The church in Wakefield, Mass., have chosen Bro. B. Finney their corresponding Secretary, and the preaching brethren who desire to visit the church will please correspond with him. For the Brethren, C. GOODRICH.

NOTICE.—The office of the Biblical Messenger is now removed to Exeter, N. H. Eld. W. C. Stewart will have charge of the correspondence. All communications in general should be addressed to the Biblical Messenger, Exeter, N. H. Articles for publication may be addressed to me at Waterbury, Vt., where my private address will be for the present; and I shall have charge of preparing the matter for the paper.
A. A. HOYT.

It is devoted to a critical exposition of Bible Truth, and an earnest advocacy of Bible Salvation. Only One Dollar a year, in advance, and postage free. Liberal terms to Agents. Sample copy free.
Address THE BIBLE BANNER, Vineland, N. J.

THE BIBLICAL MESSENGER.

New Arrangement for 1876.

This live monthly, now greatly improved, is well printed on excellent paper, and is a bold advocate of Bible truth. It makes prominent purity of heart, and the personal speedy return of Christ to resurrect the dead and set up his everlasting kingdom. A skillfully prepared sermon is inserted in each paper.

EDITORS: A. A. Hoyt and Wm. C. Stewart.
Corresponding Editor: Wm. Sheldon.
TERMS: Sixty cents a year. Agents wanted. Send for sample copies. Address the "Biblical Messenger," Exeter, N. H.

The Biblical Messenger and World's Crisis will both be sent to one address for $2.60. Address all orders for both papers to World's Crisis, 144 Hanover Street, Boston, Mass.

ADVENT CHRISTIAN TIMES.

This is an ably conducted weekly paper, edited by Elder Frank Burr, and published under the auspices of the Western A. C. Publishing Society. It gives prominence to the personal coming of Christ, the resurrection of the dead, the final destruction of sinners, and the eternal salvation of saints on the renovated earth. It also insists on a holy life as essential to an admittance into the coming kingdom. $2.20 a year. Address Advent Christian Times, 91 South Green St., Chicago, Ill.

The World's Crisis and Adv. Chris. Times sent postpaid to subscribers who will take both, at the reduced rate of $4.00 per year in advance for both papers. Address World's Crisis, Boston, Mass.

Appointments.

☞ APPOINTMENTS MUST BE RECEIVED AS EARLY AS TUESDAY MORNING (as our paper goes to press about noon) to insure insertion for the coming week.

☞ The following RESOLUTION was passed at the late meeting of the A. C. P. Society:—

"RESOLVED, That no appointments be published in the CRISIS henceforth for persons unknown to the Editorial Board (by which is understood the Editors, Editorial Committee, and Business Agent) unless satisfactory reference shall be given."

The Committee appointed by the Adv. Chris. Association, at its last Annual Meeting, to advise with the Editorial Board "in relation to the publication in the World's Crisis of the appointments of men unworthy of recognition as preachers," having attended to the duty assigned them, recommended, and tue Editorial Board have adopted, and ordered to be published, the following resolution:—

"RESOLVED, That when the Editorial Board is properly notified by any of our Churches, or Ministers, or responsible persons, by a written allegation that a certain minister, or ministers, lack moral character, that they be instructed to notify such minister, or ministers, of the information received as a reason for withholding their appointments till after a proper trial and acquittal."

All communications in relation to this matter should be addressed to the Secretary of the Board—GEO. T. ADAMS, Boston, Mass.

THE BIBLE DOCTRINE OF THE SOUL.

An answer to the Question: "Is the Popular Conception of the Soul that of Holy Scripture?"
BY CHAS. L. IVES, M. D.
Professor of the Theory and Practice of Medicine in Yale College.

This is a book of 119 pages, in which the Author discusses the above question in an interesting and able manner,—showing the material nature of, the mortality and destiny of the Soul,—A future immortality to be the special portion of the Righteous,—What the Bible teaches as to the future of the Wicked,—The intermediate state,—The Resurrection,—That of the Righteous and of the Wicked, etc.

The Author claims that the doctrine set forth,—"Honors God, exalts the Bible, insures preaching of future punishment, subverts Universalism and Infidelity, errors of Romanism, of Spiritualism and Swedenborgianism, helps in work of Missions, rightly values the body, brings Christian unity, and promotes personal holiness."

We are much pleased with this work. It is having a wide circulation. We have just received a quantity of the pamphlet edition, and can now fill orders at the following prices: Pamphlet, 25 cts. per copy; $2.25 per dozen by mail; $15.00 per hundred by express. Bound in cloth, 30 cts. per copy by mail; $3.00 per dozen by express.

BIRTHDAY LINES.

C. H. F.

Anniversary of my birth!
Yes! two score years and eight on earth;
Years of joy and years of sorrow;
What promise they of the morrow?
Life's no dream, but life is real":—
If friends were such and no betrayal,
I'd tarry here; and well I might
Fear no storms, neither dread the night.
The gay glad hours of youth are gone;
The bright prospect at manhood's dawn;
And now I stand at manhood's prime;
What hopes have I? what joys are mine?
As I gaze toward the western vale,
The light that shines is faint and pale:
With tearful eye and aching breast,
In manhood's prime I sigh for rest.
Weary of toil? O no; 'tis sweet—
The pilgrim staff, the sandal'ed feet;
Why wish the journey then complete?
I'm weary of falsehood and deceit.
With westward face I gaze, and think
How far to yonder misty brink?
Beyond the mist faith points my eyes,
And lo! the hills of paradise!
Celestial beauty resting there;
Celestial grandeur everywhere.
Welcome! I cry, with shouting breath,
Welcome, loved ones! freed then from death;
Let trials come, I'll not repine
If this bright home is to be mine;
Welcome the signs whose heralding
Proclaim the advent of our King!

Newport, N. H., April 9th, 1876.

THE CHURCH; WHAT IS IT?

L. C. MCKINSTRY.

This is the living question of the times, and deserves a careful, candid answer. That Christ Jesus our Lord did establish his church on the earth, and plant the seeds of gospel truth within its sacred enclosure, and give into the charge of his members the duty of maintaining the standard of truth and working aggressively on the world for material to keep it built up in membership and its "most holy faith," it is evident; and it is equally as evident that it should have preserved its integrity, and that there should now be no necessity of raising the question as to what it is. But, alas! such has not been the case; and to-day, on every hand, there is such a state of things existing as to lead an earnest inquirer after truth to exclaim, if he be not specially careful to take the Word of God for his counsellor—"I do not know, among all the sects and parties of Christendom, each calling itself either a church or the church, where to go or what to do. One says, I am of Wesley; another, I am of Luther; another, I am of Calvin; another, I am of St. Peter; another, I am a Disciple; another, I am simply a member of Christ's church; and another, I belong to the church of God. And I am at a loss, amid the din and cry of them all,—who seem like a party of hackmen at a railway station, crying out, "This way, sir'; 'Come right along this way,'—to know which way to go; and I stand bewildered"; and while thus standing some one comes along and complacently taps him on the shoulder and says, "Never mind the cry; all are right; each is a branch of the true church; their differences are non-essential; join any one of them, and you will be all right."

With this state of things existing, what question is or can be more apropos than the one we raise—"What is the church, the true church of Jesus Christ, in its purity?

We propose to answer the question by a few plain, simple suggestions as to how we may ascertain what the true church is.

There is no better way of beginning the investigation than by going back to the commission which Jesus gave the apostles whom on his ascension to heaven he left behind, charged with the duty of organizing and consolidating his church into a definite, tangible body, with characteristics distinct and clearly defined. That commission is recorded in Matt. 28: 19, 20, where we read—"Go ye therefore and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost; teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you; and, lo, I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world." The authority here given is of the highest character, and the mandate is solemnly, grandly imperative enough to make one feel as though in the presence of God, and cause a trembling to seize him from very awe at the force and meaning of the words, and a fear to refuse to go, or to pervert the instructions he has received, and which he is to give.

That work too is well defined. The order is, "teach all nations." Literally that word "teach" is, "to make disciples of" learners or followers, by taking them into Christ's school. It is from Matheteno, which in Matt. 13: 52 is rendered "instruct" in the text—"Every scribe which is instructed unto the kingdom of heaven is like unto a man that is an householder, which bringeth out of his treasure things new and old." In Acts 14: 21, it is also rendered to teach; and there we have the declaration that the disciples "preached the gospel to that city [Derbe], and taught many," showing that they obeyed the injunction of the Savior, and not only preached, but taught those who were disposed to learn the truth. The word has the force of a sense which indicates that what was to be taught was as a science, and hence it is related to a word which means mathematics, or the sciences; and leaves the impression on the mind that there was to be taught something certain, fixed and substantial, and not to be treated lightly, or as of but little consequence. Then after this was done the learners, or disciples, were to be baptized in the three names of Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, by one baptism or immersion, indicating that the three were one in the planning and carrying out of the grand scheme of salvation. And these persons were to be baptized—not sprinkled or rantized, but immersed, as the word clearly indicates; and then there follows the order to "teach,"—this time from Didasko, which means "to present things to be done," as in the performance of parts in a drama; and the things to be done are indicated in the language, "Whatsoever I have commanded you," and that does not mean the slightest degree of looseness or carelessness, or what is non-essential, but does mean a precision to a nicety of particularness, as "to observe whatsoever" is commanded clearly implies.

It is therefore plainly evident from this that the church of Christ cannot be established in any other way than this: 1st, That the people be made disciples of by preaching to them the truth, and teaching them. 2nd. That they, when made disciples, be baptized, with no substitute for the ordinance or perversion of it. And 3d, that they then be required to "observe whatsoever" had been commanded, and just as it was commanded, of the Lord's Supper, and the doctrines and precepts of the Word.

Nothing can be clearer than this; and it follows, therefore, that the church of Christ is not in a condition of uncertain tenure, or of looseness of state, or of practice of non-essential things; and it follows further that, it being the divine appointment and arrangement, thus established, no man or body of men has or can have the right to disturb or change it in any respect, or pervert the means by which the members of it get into their proper places, and engage in their legitimate work. It cannot, therefore, be true that the church is the mass of professed believers in Christ who have either not attended to the ordinances of the gospel at all, or have perverted them, or practiced them in a perverted manner; neither can it be true that it can recognize any of the perversions of men, by affiliating with them, or doing what will be virtually a recognition of them; for then the church would compromise itself, and be as though really practicing the perversions which it recognized in others.

This may seem like strong doctrine to some, but we fail to see that it is any stronger than the commission warrants; for, be it known that what has been divinely instituted and arranged, men should keep their hands off from, and not seek to change, or allow to be changed, or recognize as changed, or admit to be changeable even.

But there is a great deal of this sort of work. There is a great amount of loose compromising; standards of tests of fellowship are raised which do not take into account whether parties are walking in the path of obedience to Christ's commands or not. It is said, for example, that, in the church, "christian character [which means a standard of it which is recognized by all denominations] is the only test of fellowship"; so leaving aside the important item that such a character comes not simply of living morally up to the standard of the gospel, but of properly observing the ordinances of the gospel and believing the truth.

It is needful that we regard this fact as a people. This is no time to compromise, or to have that charity which makes "all one in Christ" who have not all fully obeyed Christ, and which considers the church to be, not a company of obedient believers, but the whole lot of people who claim to be christians, and whose moral life, simply, is correct, but who are not careful to obey the ordinances of the gospel.

There is a pressure on us to let down the standard, which some are doing, when in truth we have never been quite high enough; for we have not got all the truth there is yet. There is more light to shine out of God's Word, and some of it is in the path which leads into the proper observance of the gospel ordinances; not what extremists say is proper, but what the Word of God teaches is proper.

We want and must have the whole truth, and to stand in the light of it, and be what the church of Christ really is. Then, no matter by what name we may be called, specially if it be a Bible name, we shall be right; otherwise the best name is a misnomer; and to be called a church a misnomer, when there is no more a church than a pile of lumber is a building, or than an effigy of a man is a real man.

The true church of Christ is Catholic, without laying a boasted claim to being so, as the Romish church does, and without being so charitable as to have no regard for principle, or as to ignore the necessity of the essential principles of the "body of Christ," which he has established himself. The doctrines of the gospel must be cared for and kept uncorrupt; there must be kept untarnished the truths of the first and second advents, the crucifixion of Jesus and his resurrection from the dead, his ascension and intercession, and his glorious, endless reign, when he comes, on David's throne. These must all be kept inviolate by the church, and the ordinances properly observed; not loosely, but carefully; not giving license to do as though the things were man's, and at his disposal, which Christ has instituted and regulated; and then there will be all that is made by the New Testament necessary to constitute the church, and to answer the question, "What is it?"

FROM BRO. N. SMITH.

Dear Brn. and Srs.:—Thinking there were many who would like to hear from me, I will write to one and all through the Crisis.

After leaving the dear brethren at New Brunswick Conference I went to Mars Hill, Me., and found the Baptist minister of that place having a series of meetings. I attended on Saturday, and the minister gave out an appointment for me to preach in the evening. I accepted the invitation, and a goodly number came out to hear, among whom were two Free Baptist preachers. I preached from Matt. 11: 28–30. The congregation listened with interest. After the services ended the minister wished to know if I would preach the next day on baptism. I told him I would. The day was very cold, but the house was filled. I preached from Matt. 28: 18–20. Had a good free time. After meeting we retired to the water and baptized six. By invitation I led the meeting in the evening. I will say here that the Baptist minister was a good free christian brother, without prejudice. He went home on Monday and I continued meetings through the week. Many received the truth. They wanted me to spend the winter with them, but duty called, and I had to leave. May God bless the dear children at Mars Hill.

Returned home after an absence of six weeks; found all well. Remained at home one week, then according to invitation went to Ornville, a distance of twenty-eight miles, and commenced meetings among the people of the Christian Order. There were two Adventists in that place, a Bro. Kenney and Sr. Rogers. The people came from different localities to hear the blind man. I labored among them three weeks constantly, and preached a series of sermons commencing at paradise lost, and ending with the time when it shall be restored. I never saw anything that looked like prejudice in the place. I had three Free Will Baptist ministers and one of the Christian Order call on me. They were very friendly and glad to see the work of the Lord prosper in the place. There was a good interest. Some fifteen or sixteen were brought to Christ; most of them from a backslidden state; among them some of the leading men of the town; a Bro. Coober, who came out in '43 on time, and after the time passed was ordained by the Christian Order, and preached for them for some years. He accomplished much good, but for some cause fell into a backslidden state, and remained so until the commencement of the meetings in Ornville. He had made several attempts to return to the Lord; he told me he felt that God was under no obligation to save him. I with others of the place made him a special subject of prayer, and Bro. Coober was brought into the liberty of the gospel the last Sunday I was there. He is a very gifted man, and no doubt will be very useful in the field. Let us give all the glory to God.

I purpose preaching in Ornville every four weeks. The Milo brethren and sisters helped in our meetings. I am now at home, waiting until the roads settle so I can renew my travels. My health has been poor and my lungs very weak. I have thought I would have to give up speaking. Hope the brethren and sisters will remember me in their prayers.

I would say to the dear ones in Nova Scotia that I had expected to visit them before this, but I have been traveling constantly for the three years I have been in Maine; and, as a weak instrument in the hands of God, have seen many brought to Christ. If time lasts, and the Lord will, I expect to be on that shore early the coming fall, to spend the winter. I remember the many hardships and trials I had while traveling in Shelburne Co., with sore persecution, when there was scarcely one of like precious faith there; but much good has been done, and we give God all the glory. The Lord bless Brn. Halliday, Swanesburg and Reed. May they not shun to declare the whole counsel of God, for we are living in the perils of the last days, close up to the judgment; and wickedness is rapidly on the increase. The Lord help us all to be faithful, that when he comes we may hear him say, "Well done, . . . enter thou into the joy of thy Lord."

IN MEMORIAM.

Written in Memory of "Aunt Sally" Burnham.

ELLA M. LUNT.

Another aged pilgrim sleeps,
Another saint is gone;
Another voice is hushed in death
Until the morning dawns.

Eighty and two long years she lived,
And toiled and prayed and plead,
That those for whom the Savior died
Might to the Lord be led.

In Christ her faith was always firm,
She made his house her choice,
And when I was a little child,
I listened to her voice.

Now angels guard her resting place,
But in the morn she'll rise,
And with the saints who "never die"
Be caught up to the skies.

Then henceforth blessed are the dead
Who in the Lord doth die,
For they shall live with Christ for aye
In the coming bye and bye.

Oh God, must all the aged die
Ere this dark night shall close?
Must all who saw the darkened sun,
In the dust of earth repose?

"This generation shall not pass,"
Is the prophetic word,
And some who saw the darkened sun,
Shall live to see the Lord.

Biddeford, Me., April 10th, 1876.

IN MEMORIAM.

Died in Lunenburg, Mass., April 17th, 1876, James Gilchrist, aged eighty-three years. It is nearly fifty years since he with his wife were converted to God and united with the Methodist church. He was a consistent member, cheerfully helping bear burdens by word and deed, and so fulfilled the law of Christ. At a little later period, with the prophetic fulfillment of Isaiah 62: 11—"Behold, the Lord hath proclaimed to the end of the world, Say ye to the daughter of Zion, Behold, thy salvation cometh"; Bro. G. heard the voice and accepted the fulfillment of the text in Matt. 24: 14—"And this gospel of the kingdom shall be preached in all the world for a witness unto all nations; and then shall the end come." The soul-cheering message that the Nobleman was about to return from "the far country" he heard and was glad. Himself and wife believed, received and obeyed the heavenly message. The result was to separate them from the Methodist church; and for the last thirty years he has been "steadfast, unmovable," fearful of the least innovation of the Bible standard in any way to conform to the world. So tenacious was he for a separation of Christ's people from the world, that neither he, his means, or influence, could be had in church fairs, levees, or feasts; nor could he cordially associate with and fellowship those instituting and upholding them.

Being thus cut off by his Bible faith, and unable to meet with those of like precious faith, his home and his heart became the sanctuary for the Lord God to dwell in. He was a practical christian at home and abroad, in word and in deed. He was a good husband, father and neighbor, hence good to everybody; and if called "peculiar" or "odd" in life, he will be praised now he "sleeps."

He has left the companion of his youth, with whom he has lived fifty-seven years. She sorrows, but in full hope of a speedy reunion when Christ comes to reward with immortality and eternal life. He leaves six children, all of whom stood around him to receive his dying words. He was happy in the Lord, and had strength, like Jacob of old, to give good advice and bless his sons with his last expiring breath.

Our Bro. gave all directions relating to the service at his funeral. He prohibited everything that was designed for show. He would have no floral display, and no costly casket to house his dust; but he desired the strictest economy to be used in all the preparations, and the sons readily conceded to their father's wishes. A large gathering of four generations of relatives with friends and neighbors was present to pay their last tribute of love and respect to the departed. It was a solemn time to the family, and of serious reflection to all.

I endeavored to instruct and comfort the mourning group, by giving a synopsis of the belief of the departed by calling attention to 1 Thess. 4: 13—"I would not have you to be ignorant, brethren, concerning them which are asleep, that ye sorrow not, even as others which have no hope. For if we believe that Jesus died and rose again, even so them also which sleep in Jesus will God bring with him." The occasion was adapted to bring to remembrance the necessity of a continual preparation for death, or the sounding of the last trump which will awaken all the sleepers, and summon the world to judgment. I pray that all may be benefitted by going to the house of mourning, and that they may be so wise as to secure eternal life.

THE GOSPEL.

THOMAS PIGGOT.

"I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ, for it is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth."—ROM. 1: 16.

We have noble testimony borne here in reference to the gospel of Christ. While this is the language of inspiration, it is at the same time the blessed experience of the great apostle of the Gentiles. He felt that the gospel had done great things for him, and he was willing to do anything for it in return. His whole life seems to have been one grand testimony to its praise and glory.

Christ appeared to him on his way to Damascus, a red-handed, hot-headed persecutor, captivated his whole soul, and delivered him from the fearful consequences of persecuting those who believe in Jesus, of whom the Savior has said, It were better for you that a mill-stone were hanged about your neck, and that you were cast into the depths of the sea, than that you should offend one of these little ones. It took him from the fearful pit and from the miry clay, and set his feet upon the rock—Christ Jesus. It implanted within his breast the glorious hope of that everlasting inheritance reserved for all those who are kept by the power of God, through faith, unto salvation. It will give him a name and a place among the redeemed out of every nation, kindred and tongue. No wonder, then, that the apostle exclaimed, "Who shall separate us from the love of Christ? shall tribulation, or distress, or persecution, or famine, or nakedness, or peril, or sword?" "I am persuaded that neither death, nor life, nor angels, nor principalities, nor powers, nor things present, nor things to come, nor height, nor depth, nor any other creature, shall be able to separate us from the love of God which is in Christ Jesus our Lord."

Observe here, dear reader, the apostle does not preach a stingy gospel. No; the gospel of Christ has a world-wide application. It embraces every one that believeth, and excludes no one. You may not be for the gospel, but the gospel is decidedly for you.

The importance of hearing and receiving that pure and unadultered gospel preached by the apostles of the Lord Jesus, is apparent from Gal. 1: 6–9—"I marvel that ye are so soon removed from him that called you unto another gospel; which is not another; but there be some that trouble you, and would pervert the gospel of Christ. But though we, or an angel from heaven, preach any other gospel unto you than that which we have preached unto you, let him be accursed. As we said before, so say I now again, If any man preach any other gospel unto you than that ye have received, let him be accursed." From the words of the apostle here, it is of the utmost importance that we know something of the gospel which he preached, so that we may receive it and not another.

The question arises here, What is the gospel that the apostles preached? We will allow him to answer this question himself: 1 Cor. 15: 1–4—"Moreover, brethren, I declare unto you the gospel which I preached unto you, which also ye have received, and wherein ye stand; by which also ye are saved, if ye keep in memory what I preached unto you, unless you have believed in vain. For I delivered unto you first of all that which I also received, how that Christ died for our sins according to the Scriptures; and that he was buried, and that he rose again the third day according to the Scriptures."

We have before us here the facts of the gospel; which are the death, burial and resurrection of the Lord Jesus Christ for the redemption of a guilty world, in order that life and immortality might be offered to all for their acceptance.

Dear reader, O think on the condescending love of Jesus, who, though he was rich, yet for our sakes became poor, that we might be made the righteousness of God in him. He became so poor that he could say, "The foxes have holes, and the birds of the air have nests, but the Son of man hath not where to lay his head." Think on the love of God as seen in the gift of his Son. "For God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him might not perish, but have everlasting life." These are the facts that are to win your hearts back to God and his Christ, and impell you like one of old to exclaim—"Lord, what wilt thou have me to do?"

If this should reach the eyes of any thus inquiring, we would refer them to the apostle Paul's case for an answer (Acts 22: 16)—"And now why tarriest thou? arise, and be baptized, and wash away thy sins, calling on the name of the Lord"; or the words of the Savior himself (Mark 16: 16)—"He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved." Think on the love of God. Allow it to have the intended effect upon your heart. Cast yourselves lovingly and submissively at the feet of Jesus. Resist not the Holy Spirit. Have your names enrolled in the Lamb's book of life. And when the Lord comes, who will come shortly to raise his sleeping saints and crown all his faithful followers with immortal glory, you will not only escape the second death, but wear a crown and join in the everlasting song of praise to him that redeemed us from death by his own blood, and hath made us participators with him in his glory, and privileged us to bask in the sunshine of his love for ever and ever.

CHARITY.

E. MARSTON.

"Though I speak with the tongues of men and of angels, and though I have the gift of prophecy, and understand all mysteries, and all knowledge, and though I have all faith, so that I could remove mountains, and have not charity, I am nothing." Thus declares the divinely inspired apostle Paul. This charity does not refer to the bestowment of gifts, for he adds: "Though I bestow all my goods to feed the poor, and have not charity, it profiteth me nothing."

To-day as I examine myself by this standard, a feeling of scarcely saved, comes over me; and yet as I write, the peace of Christ makes free my heart; and joy and the peace which flows like a river is mine.

We cannot obtain this peace until we are willing to give up the world, and are dead to its sinful pleasures and follies. Again it is written, Wherefore thou art inexcusable, O man, whoever thou art, that judgest another. How carefully we ought to speak when passing judgment upon others, lest doing the same things ourselves, we fall into condemnation. Let us carefully avoid speaking of each others' failings, considering ourselves, bridling our tongues, lest our religion seem to be vain. We may then come boldly unto the throne of grace, and obtain mercy, and find grace to help in time of need.

We are living amid the perils of the last days. The old ship, Zion, is nearing port, sailing over a rough and tempestuous sea. Many of her crew have already been swept away by the waves of temptation and sin which Satan has rolled over them. Knowing that his time is short, Satan has come down in great wrath, and unless we have on the whole armor, we cannot hope to withstand him. But it will not be long. Soon the glad song of redemption will be sung.

Dear waiting ones, lift up your weary heads and sing, for the time draweth nigh. Our work will soon be done. May we strive to do it faithfully for Jesus a little while, and receive our reward at his coming.

THE ATONEMENT.

From the "Plan of Redemption."

But we will not multiply quotations further on this point: enough has been presented to show the correctness of the position advocated above. We will, however, remark, that there are a few passages where the atonement is treated upon with reference to believers, in which its two branches are distinctly marked. Examples: in John 6: 50, 51, where Jesus says, the bread which cometh down from heaven, which a man may eat and live forever, is his flesh, which he will give for the life of the world."

In these two verses there is an ellipsis, which is filled in verses 53, 54, by adding, "my blood." "Then Jesus said unto them, Verily, verily I say unto you, except ye eat the flesh of the Son of man, and drink his blood, ye have no life in you. Whoso eateth my flesh and drinketh my blood hath eternal life. He that eateth my flesh and drinketh my blood, dwelleth in me, and I in him."

Thus it will be seen, if the flesh of Christ purchases the life of the world—the race—from death, the blood of Christ must cleanse, or "purge the conscience from [sin] dead works, to serve the living God," by faith in the virtues of that blood, in order to secure eternal life; all of which clearly implies the voluntary acceptance of the atonement by an act of faith. May this be the happy condition both of the readers and writers of this work.

Our argument, then, on this point, sums up thus:

I. As all men were lost in death by the sin of Adam, all being in him, so all men are saved by the death of Christ, out from death, and from all the consequences of the first transgression, without any voluntary action on the part of the race. Being passive in the fall, they are passive also in the redemption, and must be made alive by a resurrection from the grave; and thus our right to live is gained in Christ.

II. By Christ's intercession with the Father, the sentence of the law was not speedily executed upon Adam, but reprieve was granted (and not forgiveness), and he placed on a second probation, under a law which could give life (Rom. 8: 2), by which the race was placed on trial for eternal life, on condition of repentance and faith, before the sentence of God's violated law is executed upon us. Let us improve the hour of God's mercy and long forbearance, and gain the glorious prize.

III. Thus our state of probation, with the prospect of eternal life and dominion, which was lost, involuntarily on our part, in Adam, is involuntarily restored to us by the intercession of Christ, and his offering himself "from the foundation of the world," to die for our redemption. We will here remark, it should be remembered that Jesus is not now interceding at the right hand of the Father for the redemption of the world, for that redemption is a fixed fact, secured by his death. But he is there interceding: for "he entered heaven with his own blood, there to appear in the presence of God for us." "Wherefore he is able to save them also to the uttermost that come unto God by him, seeing he ever liveth to make intercession for them." Heb. 7: 25.

IV. As we lost involuntarily in Adam a good physical and mental organism, so, by the death and resurrection of Christ, we involuntarily have them restored.

Let us examine the prophecy of Isaiah on this point: "Surely he hath borne our griefs, and carried our sorrows; yet we did esteem him stricken, smitten of God, and afflicted." 53: 4. The evangelist applies this prediction to the healing of our physical infirmities, a pledge of which Christ gave while here. "He hath himself carried off our infirmities, and borne our distresses." Em. Diaglott. Matt. 8: 17. This he said in reference to Christ's healing the sick, and casting the devils out of those who were brought unto him.

Christ's death is ample satisfaction for the claim of the violated law, and removes the curse from the earth and all its inhabitants. This is involved in the terms saved, redeemed, restored, reconciled, made righteous, justified; all which terms are used to show the effect of his death and resurrection on the race and the earth, for it also is to be restored. See Rom. 8: 19, 23.

But this does not secure immortality and eternal life unconditionally to the race. That is obtained through the superabounding grace of God, by "repentance toward God, and faith toward our Lord Jesus Christ,"—a being cleansed by his blood. Christians have the Holy Spirit, which is the earnest of the inheritance until the redemption of the purchased possession." Eph. 1: 14. Thus through repentance and faith, the way to the tree of life is open to all. Jesus saith, "I am the way, the truth, and the life; no man cometh unto the Father but by me." John 14: 6. And in view of the foregoing scriptural facts, it must be a fearfully perverted use of the word of God, and one which is subversive of the whole plan of redemption as revealed in the Scriptures of truth, to teach the idea of the non-resurrection of any one of Adam's race who died. In concluding our remarks on this part of the most vital and important of all subjects ever made known to the sons of men, we would urge upon our readers the duty of making a wise improvement of this door which Christ has opened before us, by removing from us all the difficulties entailed upon us, in prospect of giving us eternal life through his blood, by the forgiveness of our sins, if we will believe in and obey him.

We entreat of you who have not done so, to accept of this grace, open your hearts, and receive the gospel of mercy, pardon, and salvation. You are enjoying a life of reprieve, granted by the offering of the body of Christ, that in it you may seek and obtain the forgiveness of your sins, and live to glorify him in this world, that when you are raised up from the dead, you may come up immortal, to die no more.

FOR THOSE WHO REASON.

A minister of the gospel said, "I believe in the immortality of the soul, and have come to the conclusion that one of two things is true: either it is necessary to the government of God to have a penitentiary to all eternity, or Universalism is true." Which do you think is true? I asked. He replied, "I think it is necessary in the government of God to have a penitentiary to all eternity."

O, what a conclusion. How such a view reflects upon the wisdom and power of God. How much better to adopt the Bible view, that man is mortal, and it is not therefore necessary to have a penitentiary to all eternity. "He that soweth to the flesh, shall of the flesh reap corruption; but he that soweth to the Spirit, shall of the Spirit reap life everlasting." All the wicked will be destroyed, the earth cleansed, paradise restored, and peopled with holy, happy beings—an honor to God, a glorious result of his purpose in Christ Jesus towards this world.

RESCUE THE PERISHING.

Rescue the perishing,
Care for the dying,
Snatch them in pity from sin and the grave;
Weep o'er the erring one,
Lift up the fallen,
Tell them of Jesus the mighty to save.

CHO.—Rescue the perishing,
Care for the dying,
Jesus is merciful, Jesus will save.

Though they are slighting him,
Still he is waiting,
Waiting the penitent child to receive.
Plead with them earnestly,
Plead with them gently,
He will forgive if they only believe.

Down in the human heart,
Crushed by the tempter,
Feelings lie buried that grace can restore;
Touched by a loving heart,
Wakened by kindness,
Chords that were broken will vibrate once more.

Rescue the perishing,
Duty demands it,
Strength for thy labor the Lord will provide.
Back to the narrow way
Patiently lead them
Tell the poor wanderer a Saviour hath died.

WAR ON CHRISTIAN PRINCIPLES.

One of the conditions of the treaty with Mexico, it is said, was that any future war which might break out between the two countries should be conducted on christian principles. Now, we all know that this is an age of progress, and that all sorts of improvements are constantly taking place in all sorts of matters; but war on christian principles is entirely the latest, and if carried out, will, we think, prove greatest of them all.

Just imagine it. We think we can see two armies drawn out in battle array. A fair field is before them. The ranks are formed, the positions taken, the great guns are unlimbered. The General is just about to give the order to fire, when an aid comes up and repectfully reminds him that the war is to be conducted on christian principles, and it will not do to fire. "Very true, very true," said the commander-in-chief; "but what are they? I have read Vauban, and Scheiter, and Turenne. I have read the lives of old conquerors, and have studied the campaigns of the greatest soldiers; but I never happened to come across those principles in any work upon the military art. Do you know anything about it Col.?

"No."

"Nor you, Major?"

"No."

"Nor I either. I really don't know how to begin. I suppose it would not do to shoot. Suppose we send for the chaplain."

The chaplain arrives.

"Do you know anything about this fighting on christian principles?"

"Oh, yes, it is the easiest thing in the world."

"Where are your books?"

"Here;" and the chaplain pulls out the Bible.

"Really," said the General, "we ought to have thought of that before. It is a bad time to commence the study of tactics when the enemy is right before us; but I suppose we are bound by the treaty. What is the first thing, Mr. Chaplain?"

"Thou shalt not kill. Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself."

"But these are not our neighbors; they are Mexicans."

"The same book tells us, a little further on, that the opportunity to do good to a man makes him our neighbor."

"Will you go on, Mr. Chaplain."

"Love your enemies. Do good to them that hate you. Pray for them who despitefully use you. If a man smite you on one cheek turn to him the other."

"But while we are praying for the Mexicans, they will be firing into us."

"No, they are bound by the treaty also. It works both ways."

"Then, what is the use of our arms?"

"This is also provided for in the same book. 'Beat your swords into plough-shares, and your spears into pruning-hooks.'"

"Then I do not see as there is anything for us to do here."

"Nothing, unless you send and ask the Mexican general if he needs anything in the way of medicines, or provisions, or clothing. I rather think the treaty requires this of us. And I don't know but we ought to send them a few school-masters, for I understand they are a shockingly ignorant people."—Christian Neighbor.

THE BIBLE WITH PINS IN IT.—It was an old Bible, a family Bible, a well-worn Bible,—the Bible of an old lady, who had read it, and walked by it, and prayed over it, for a long life-time. As she grew older and older her sight began to fail, and she found it hard to find her favorite verses. But she could not live without them; so what did she do? She stuck a pin in them, one by one, and after her death they counted one hundred and sixty-eight. When people went to see her she would open her Bible, and, feeling over the page after her pin, would say: "Read there," or "Read here"; and she knew pretty well what verse was stuck by that pin, and what by this pin. She could say of her precious Bible, "I love thy commandments above gold, yea, above fine gold. They are sweeter to me than honey and the honey-comb."—Selected.

A KIND invitation to go to the house of the Lord has in many cases been the occasion of conversion. Such was the case of John Williams, the martyr of Erromanga. Standing idle on the street in the city of London, waiting for some friends with whom he had promised to go to the public gardens, he was observed by a lady, who invited him to go with her to church. He went. The truth preached was carried to his heart. And he ultimately became one of the most successful missionaries to the heathen.

IMAGINARY evils soon become real ones by indulging our reflections on them; as he who, in a melancholy fancy, seeing something like a face on the wall or wainscot, can, by two or three touches with a lead pencil, make it look visible, and agreeing with what he fancied.

HOME AND HEALTH.

PHYSIOLOGICAL ARGUMENTS FOR VEGETARIANISM.

Fraser's Magazine gives a chapter on this subject, from which we make an extract, as follows:

What are the diseases by which our richer classes—in England—are chiefly attacked? Those which stand in close relation to gout. Dr. Prout recounts them as "strumous, lithic-acid, and gouty diseases," and attributes them to an imperfect assimilation of the albuminous principles of food; that is to say, to an excess in flesh diet. Next, what classes of men recover best from wounds and severe accidents? Much important testimony affirms it is those who eat least of flesh meat. Eminent surgeons testify that in this respect the Indians and the Chinese far surpass the English soldiers, and attribute it to their "vegetable regimen." As gout is not heard of among Irish peasants, so, too, it is alleged, their blood is less inflammable, than that of well-fed Englishmen, and they recover better from severe hurts. Thirdly, it is claimed that vegetarians have more exemption from the attacks of epidemic disease than flesh-eaters; in particular it is denied that any case of cholera has been found among them. Fourthly, it is admitted by physiologists in general, that the cases of extreme longevity are almost solely found among vegetarians. Of course, many things must conspire that an individual may attain the greatest age possible to man. He must have had no hereditary weakness, no violent shock from accident or acute disease, no permanent excess of toil or distressing care, no long exposure to bad atmosphere in cities; and if vegetarian food is of critical importance, he must have been a vegetarian from childhood; then possibly he will live to the age of a hundred. It is ridiculous to expect that by adopting this practice late in life an individnal can become signal in longevity; yet it is maintained he may somewhat lengthen his years, especially because the diet itself suffices to cure many maladies, probably by the greater purity which it gives to the blood.

The case of Prof. Adam Ferguson is signal and notorious. When past fifty he was seized with very alarming paralysis. His friend, Dr. Black, the celebrated discoverer of latent heat, who was no vegetarian, was called in to treat him, and prescribed a strict vegetarian and milk diet. Under this he recovered; ate no meat and drank only water or weak tea for the rest of his life; had no second attack, and after the age of seventy was remarkably hearty, continuing in much vigor until almost ninety. He lived to ninety three. The effect of a mere vegetarian diet to renew shattered life appears here undeniable.—Science of Health.

TEA AND COFFEE.

Says an excellent writer: "Probably the most general and unbroken, and, I might add, the most mischievous delusion of the civilized world, at the present day, in relation to intoxicating substances, is that which leads to the nearly universal use of tea and coffee as common beverages, by male and female, old and young, vigorous and feeble, healthy and sickly, rich and poor; by all, habitually, as articles of diet; and by most, excessively, as means of intoxicating exhilaration."

There is a general impression that these drugs, so far from being pernicious, are absolutely salutary in their effects when taken with our daily meals. But nothing can be more erroneous than this opinion. "For there is no truth in science more fully ascertained or more completely proved," says Sylvester Graham, "than that both tea and coffee are among the most powerful poisons of the vegetable kingdom. As early as 1767, Dr. Smith, of Edinburgh, demonstrated, by a series of careful experiments, that an infusion of green tea had the same effect as henbane, tobacco, cicuta, etc., on the living tissues of the animal body; in all cases first diminishing and finally destroying their vital properties. In 1772 Dr. Letsome, of Ireland, made a series of similar experiments with the same results; and still later, Dr. Beddoes, of England, by a series of experiments several times repeated, completely demonstrated that tea is as powerfully destructive to life as laurel water, opium, or digitalis. Indeed, it is entirely certain that a small quantity of a decoction of tea or coffee will destroy human life, in one unaccustomed to the use of them, as quickly as an equal quantity of laudanum."

The same experiments have been repeated in this country with the same results. Dr. John Burdell, a dentist of New York, for many years, used in his practice a strong decoction of tea for the purpose of destroying the nerve in decayed teeth, preparatory to his dental operations. The truth is, of which there is not a doubt, that the drugs we are considering are powerful narcotic poisons. There is not a particle of nourishment in them, and their presence in the vital economy is in every way opposed to the physiological, and therefore to the moral welfare of the system. Now, does it appear reasonable that the daily use of such active poisons, as these have been demonstrated to be, can be harmless—much less salutary? Must they not be pernicious and deadly in their influence, and rapidly and certainly destructive to health and vigor? You who will persist in using them, ought not to complain or be surprised at the amount of pain or sickness you are forced to bear!—Science of Health.

BIBLE READING.---NO. 4.

J. R. COOPER.

THE WILDERNESS.

In our last two articles we have endeavored to present the christian's standing in the presence of God. Now we want to say something about the christian's walk here on earth—his walk through the wilderness to the heavenly Canaan.

Num. 1 : 1.—"And the Lord spake unto Moses in the wilderness of Sinai, in the tabernacle of the congregation [not from Mt. Sinai]. . . . Take ye the sum of all the congregation of the children of Israel . . . from twenty years old and upwards, all that are able to go forth to war."

In the book of Genesis we learn that Israel were in the loins of their father Abraham; in Exodus we find them slaves in the brick-kilns of Egypt; in Leviticus they are gathered around the tabernacle of the congregation; but as soon as we open the book of Numbers we find them in the wilderness. Again in confirmation of this, in Genesis we hear the call of God in election; in Exodus we gaze upon the blood of the lamb in redemption; in Leviticus we are occupied with worship; in Numbers it is men of war, standards, camps, trumpets, sounding alarms ready for a march—a type of the church walking through this world.

Num. 1 : 17, 18.—"And Moses and Aaron . . . assembled all the congregation together on the first day of the second month, and they declared their pedigrees, after their families, by the house of their fathers, according to the number of their names, from twenty years old and upwards, by their polls."

What spiritual lesson does this convey to us? Are we still numbered among those who are "born of the flesh," and is our pedigree to reckon from Adam the first? or have we been "born of the Spirit," and can, therefore, reckon our pedigree from Adam the second—the Lord from heaven?

There are thousands of professing christians who are unable to declare their pedigree with clearness. We ought to be able to say without the least hesitation on the authority of God's word: "Now are we the sons of God." "Ye are all the children of God by faith in Jesus Christ." "And if ye be Christ's, then are ye Abraham's seed, and heirs according to the promise." "For as many as are led by the Spirit of God they are the sons of God." This is the christians "pedigree," and he ought to be able to "declare" it without any doubt whatever. He is "born from above." If we trace our natural pedigree to its source, we shall all find we sprang from an irrecoverably ruined stock. "For in me, that is in my flesh, dwelleth no good thing"—"born in sin and shapen in iniquity." Are you proud, dear reader, of such a pedigree? "The christian's pedigree is heavenly. His genealogical tree strikes its roots into the soil of the new creation. Death can never break the line, inasmuch as it is formed in resurrection." Do you suppose any of those Jews had any doubt about their belonging to the stock of Israel? We dishonor Christ if we have any doubts of being one of his members. "We know we have passed from death unto life;"—"we know that we are of God." Such language honors the blessed Lord of life and glory, and shows our confidence in his "finished" work.

Num. 1 : 52.—"And the children of Israel shall pitch their tents, every man by his own camp, and every man by his own standard, throughout their hosts." What is the christian's standard? Is it a system, a creed, a sect, or a doctrine? God's warriors do n't fight under such a banner. Christ is the standard. As we trace our "pedigree" up to him, may his name be inscribed on the "standard" around which we encamp in this wilderness, through which we are passing to our eternal home. If we would stand in the day of battle, we must acknowledge no standard whatsoever but Christ and his word—the living and the written word. Christ is the standard, and "his banner over us is love."

What a magnificent spectacle is brought to our view in the two first chapters of Numbers. Here are 600,000 men "able to go forth to war," encamped around the tabernacle. Judah and his host, 186,000 on the east; Reuben and his host, 151,000 on the south; Ephraim and his host, 108,000 on the west; and Dan and his host, 157,000 on the north. Besides these there were 22,000 Levites who had entire charge of the tabernacle and all its appointments. Then there were the men, women and children, estimated to be about 3,000,000 altogether; all dwelling in tents, pitched in regular order. And then there was God, the mighty creator of heaven and earth dwelling in their midst. No wonder Balaam was made to say, "How goodly are thy tents, O Jacob, and thy tabernacles, O Israel." Num. 24 : 5. And Moses in his last blessing said: "The eternal God is thy refuge, and underneath are the everlasting arms." "Happy art thou, O Israel: who is like unto thee, O people saved by the Lord." Deut. 33 : 27, 29. What a picture! Three millions of people all ready to march through a waste howling wilderness, whence there was not a blade of grass, not a drop of water, no visible source of subsistence. How are they to be fed? God was there! How were they to be kept in order? God was there! Where are the commissary stores? Who is to attend to the Quarter-masters stores? Who is to supply the needs of 3,000,000 of people for forty years in a sterile desert? Faith only gives one answer—God was there! He who never slumbers nor sleeps was there leading his redeemed people to the land of Canaan, supplying their every need. "Their raiment waxed not old upon them, neither did their feet swell." Has this no voice for us? Does not God now dwell here on earth, in the midst of his redeemed people? Are we not pilgrims and strangers here upon the earth, marching through the wilderness to the heavenly Canaan? Did not Jesus say, "Therefore take no thought, saying what shall we eat? or, what shall we drink? or, wherewithal shall we be clothed? Your heavenly Father knoweth ye have need of all these things. But seek ye first the kingdom of God and his righteousness, and all these things shall be added unto you." Matt. 6 : 31–33.

Is not the camp of Israel a vivid type of the church of God passing through the world? Paul says: "All these things happened unto them for ensamples; and they are written for our admonition, upon whom the ends of the world are come." 1 Cor. 10 : 11. What separation from all other nations of the earth! What helplessness! What absolute dependence upon God! When they lay down at night there was not an atom of provision for the morrow! But God was there! They were shut up to God! Faith trusts every thing to God. "If God be for us who can be against us"?

Dear reader, are you a "pilgrim and a stranger" here? "Love not the world, neither the things that are in the world. If any man love the world the love of the Father is not in him." 1 John 2: 15. "Whosoever therefore will be a friend of the world is the enemy of God." James 4 : 4. Solemn words these! Have we duly considered them? What is the world? Easily answered. "All that is not of the Father." "Wherefore if ye be dead with Christ from the rudiments of the world, why, as though living in the world, are ye subject to ordinances." Col. 2 : 20. What do n't a christian love in the world? The true disciple of Jesus is one who has died out of this present evil world. He has no more to do with it than Christ. "Like as Christ . . . even so we." He is dead to the law—dead to sin; alive to Christ—alive to God—alive to the new creation. His "affections are on things above." "For our citizenship is in heaven; from whence also we look for the Savior, the Lord Jesus Christ." Phil. 3 : 20. He is enrolled as a citizen of heaven. His religion, his politics, his affections are all heavenly. He is a heavenly, spiritual man, in the world, but not of it. He is a foreigner, a pilgrim and stranger here! May the Lord help us to live as such!

Dear reader, I must bid you good-bye, for the present. The last year has been one of constant toil to gain a livelihood for my large family, and one of incessant study of God's word to learn the "deep things" of God. Early mornings and late nights have I written and studied until I find my constitution giving away. For the past two weeks I have been prostrated and wrote this article in constant pain. Remember me at a throne of grace. "And now, brethren, I commend you to God, and the word of his grace, which is able to build you up, and to give you an inheritance among all them which are sanctified." Acts 20 : 32.

THE ATONEMENT.

From the "Plan of Redemption."

SECOND PART.

The conditional atonement by the blood of Christ. "For this is my blood in the New Testament which is shed for many for the remission of sins." Having stated that the atonement is presented in the Scriptures in two branches, and shown that the first part is accomplished by the death and resurrection of Christ, that it is universal in its application to and effects upon our race, the earth, and the whole creation (Rom. 8 : 19, 23) in their redemption from the effects of the first transgression, we now proceed to show that all the adult portion of our race are brought under a new law, which has since been called "the new covenant"—"law of faith"—"law of the spirit of life"—"the royal law" (Jer. 31 : 31; Rom. 3 : 27; 8 : 2; James 2 : 8), in distinction from the "old covenant"—"law of works"—"law of sin and death," of which we shall speak presently.

Under this law there is a special salvation to be obtained, not by paying its penalty or suffering to death, as in the case of the first covenant, or letter which killeth, whose ministration was death, but by virtue of the blood of Christ, to cleanse away our sin against the new covenant (not the old), through "repentance toward God, and faith toward our Lord Jesus Christ," thus saving us from suffering to death—the second death; while the unrepenting, unbelieving, will fall under its power. "Behold the days come, saith the Lord, when I will make (complete, Em. Diaglott) a new covenant with the house of Israel and with the house of Judah." Heb. 8 : 8. Of this covenant we speak more at length in our chapter on that subject. We will remark here, however, that this covenant is founded upon and sealed—"completed"—by the blood of Jesus, and can give life.

The propriety—perhaps it would be proper to say the necessity—of such a law will appear when we consider that Adam was made a living soul, in a condition to multiply and replenish the earth, and subdue it, preparatory to immortality and dominion over it, and all things it contained; with a perfect physical, mental and moral organism; with the tree of life to perpetuate his life (until his work was done); all of which were pronounced by our Creator "very good." Gen. 1 : 31.

With all these advantages at hand, with the law of God for his instruction, government and discipline, making no provision for his disobedience, as there was no necessity for nor propriety in it, Adam transgressed and fell, involving his race in the curse and the evils in which we now find ourselves. Therefore, had reprieve and repentance been granted us to make a second trial for obedience to that violated law, it could not have benefitted us, as it could not give us life from the penalty already resting upon us, which was death. That law could not give life; therefore no righteousness could come by it (Rom. 8 : 3); it 'being weak through the flesh;" its penalty, must be executed upon us, and all perish at last; or, if we had been redeemed from death and placed under that law, there was no assurance that we should keep it better than Adam did.

But infinite wisdom, mercy, and goodness has provided a more excellent way, for "Christ hath redeemed us from the curse of the law, being made a curse for us." Gal. 3 : 13. "For the law of the Spirit of life in Christ Jesus hath made us free from the law of sin and death; for what the law could not do in that it was weak through the flesh, God sending his own Son in the likeness of sinful flesh, and for [even by an offering for sin, Em. Diaglott] sin, condemned sin in the flesh, that the righteousness of the law might be fulfilled in us who walk not after the flesh [the law of sin and death], but after the Spirit." Rom. 8 : 2, 4. How clearly the fact is here stated, that Christ, being made a curse for us, redeems us from the curse of the first law, which was powerless for our help, placing us under a new law, called by Paul "the law of the Spirit of life," because it is a law which has power to give life. The letter (first law, on tables) killeth, but cannot make alive; "but the [law of] the Spirit giveth life." O, how much better adapted to our condition is the latter than the former law! What excuse will the unbeliever have when arraigned to receive reward under this life-giving law? "How shall we escape if we neglect so great salvation"? Heb. 2 : 3.

Again, the Word declares, "For him who knew no sin, he hath made a sin-offering on our behalf, that we might become God's righteousness in him." 2 Cor. 5 : 21. Em. Diaglott. Here, again, we are informed that the spotless One, the Lamb of God, once suffered for sins, being put to death in the flesh," (1 Pet. 3 : 18); the Father "bruised him," "put him to grief," "made his soul an offering for sin" (Isa. 53 : 10), that we might be brought under the law of life, the law of faith, which could give righteousness, and through faith could justify us in the sight of God" from all things from which we could not be justified by the law of Moses." Acts 13 : 39. This is "the righteousness of faith" (Rom. 10 : 3, 6), "the righteousness of God without the law [of works]," Rom. 3: 21, "the righteousness of God which is by faith of Jesus Christ, unto all and upon all that believe, for there is no difference [between the Jew and the Greek]. For all have sinned and come short of the glory of God," (Rom. 3 : 22, 23), God's righteousness, of which the unbelieving world are ignorant, as were the unbelieving Jews. Rom. 10 : 3.

This law is by Paul called "the gospel of Christ, the power of God unto salvation (not to all men) unto every one that believeth, both Jews and Greeks, "the gospel [law] in which the righteousness of God by faith is revealed in order to faith, as it is written, But the righteous by faith shall live." Rom. 1 : 16, 17. Heb. 10 : 38. Em. Diaglott.

Reader, if you are out of Christ, permit us to remind you that although you have the righteousness of the old law imputed to you by the death of Christ, yet without the righteousness of God, which is by faith in the blood of Christ, under the new law, you must suffer its penalty in the second death. "Except ye eat the flesh of the Son of God, and drink his blood, ye have no [eternal] life in you." John 6 : 53; 1 Cor. 9 : 21; Gal. 6 : 2.

That all adults are under this new law, and are to be judged by it, is clearly revealed, "For God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life." John 3 : 16. "He that believeth on him is not condemned, but he that believeth not is condemned already, because he has not believed in the name of the only begotten Son of God."

Therefore justification of life from the grave by the death of Christ secures eternal life to no one, but restores them to the same state from which Adam by transgression fell, involving his race in sin; so that the infant and imbecile will receive eternal life as the gift of God, and be raised immortal with all the saints, because no sin of unbelief or action attaches to them, they having never voluntarily transgressed any law. Hence the prophet says: "Lo, children are an heritage of the Lord; and the fruit of the womb is his reward." Ps. 127 : 3. Yea, he hath ransomed them from death, and will suffer them to come to him; he will pronounce his blessing upon them, and "give unto them eternal life, and they shall never perish."

But the adult portion are under the law of faith, as before shown; and these two laws are presented in contrast in the New Testament, by Paul, thus: "The law of the Spirit of life." "The law of sin and death." Rom. 8 : 2. "The letter killeth, but the Spirit giveth life." "Ministration of death written in stones." "Ministration of the Spirit rather glorious." "Law of works." "Law of faith." Rom. 3 : 28.

THOUGHTS ON PROPHECY.

P. W. HOUGH.

"And in the days of these kings shall the God of heaven set up a kingdom which shall never be destroyed; and the kingdom shall not be left to other people, but it shall break in pieces and consume all these kingdoms, and it shall stand for ever"—DAN. 2 : 44.

There are some facts connected with this prophecy that I wish to call attention to. (1) Time when given. (2) The manner. (3) Its exposition.

First. The time when everything that God has done to enlighten his church has been when most needed. Witness the flood. Noah had preached a hundred and twenty years, and had invested all he had in that enterprise; he had borne the scoffs of that wicked generation. His faith, it seems to us, would at last begin to waver. At this point God gave him the "seven days." How timely! So with the children of Israel, when they were encamped by the Red Sea; they were soon apprised of their danger by seeing the angry foe behind them, impassable mountains on their right and left, and the sea in their front. At this time God caused the cloudy pillar to rest down between the two camps; thus giving light and deliverance to the chosen people. The wise man has truly said, "Light is sown for the righteous." Ps. 97 : 11.

With these facts before us, let us gain the stand-point that Daniel occupied when this dream was given. He was of the family of David, well acquainted with the promises to that kingdom and its history from David's time. He loved the very stones of Jerusalem, and had often met with the assembled tribes in the beautiful temple of Solomon, and chanted in holy song the very promises of God made to that people, of exaltation and glory. But how changed his condition. That beautiful house is burned, its walls broken down, the city consumed, and himself a captive in a foreign land. Place yourself where he stood at this time and see what strong inducements would be presented to your mind to doubt the faithfulness of God respecting the kingdom to David, or to lead you to understand those promises as mystical.

Paint this picture fully in your mind, and you have at once a reason why our heavenly Father reserved this manifestation of his future purpose respecting the kingdom of God until this hour. His beloved people needed it, and their want was supplied. Henceforth Daniel's mind is prepared to take a lively and active interest in all after revelations concerning the kingdoms of this world, until the kingdom of God should come.

Second. The way and manner this knowledge was communicated is very instructive. It was not first given to Daniel, but to the king of Babylon; and he, forgetting it, called out all his wise men to restore the lost dream, and give a solution of it. This gave the subject notoriety at Court, and Daniel being called to interpret it, satisfied his mind why such providences had overtaken his people, and at the same time showed a perfect contrast between the noted wise men of Babylon and the prophets of the living God; and placed the church (though in captivity) in her exalted character—the light of the world. How wonderful are his ways! We may say with Mary, "He hath holpen his servant Israel in remembrance of his mercy."

THE INTERPRETATION.

As this prophecy is so frequently alluded to by writers and speakers on Prophecy, little need be said more than to point out the seven sections Daniel has noted in the exposition of it. Notwithstanding this is a very simple prophecy, many differ widely in expounding it. Some few I will note in their proper place.

VISION. "This image's head was of fine gold." Dan. 2 : 32.

INTERPRETATION. "Thou art this head of gold." v. 38.

APPLICATION. Babylon, B. C. 681.

Second section.—VIS. "His breast and arms of silver." v. 32.

INT. "After thee shall arise another kingdom inferior to thee." v. 39.

APP. Medo-Persia. Dan. 5 : 25–31. B. C. 491.

Third section.—VIS. "His belly and thighs of brass." v. 32.

INT. "A third kingdom of brass shall bear rule over all the earth." v. 39.

APP. Grecia. Dan. 8 : 3–8, 20, 21. B. C. 331.

Fourth section.—VIS. "His legs of iron." v. 33.

INT. "The fourth kingdom shall be strong as iron; forasmuch as iron breaketh in pieces and subdueth all things." v. 40.

APP. Imperial Rome. Luke 2 : 1; Dan. 11 : 20; Mark 8 : 1–10. B. C. 30.

Fifth section.—VIS. "His feet part of iron and part of clay."

INT. "Whereas thou sawest the feet and toes, part of potter's clay, and part of iron, so the kingdom shall be divided." v. 41.

APP. Rome divided about A. D. 489.

Sixth section. VIS. "As the toes of the feet were part of potter's clay and part of iron, so the kingdom shall be partly strong and partly broken." v. 42.

INT. "His dominion shall be taken away." Dan. 7 : 26; Dan. 2 : 42, 43.

APP. Dominion taken away 1798–9.

Seventh section.—VIS. "A stone was cut out without hands, which smote the image upon his feet that were of iron and clay, and brake them in pieces." v. 35.

INT. "In the days of these kings shall the God of heaven set up a kingdom, which shall never be destroyed." v. 44.

APP. In this generation.

Confirmation. "The dream is certain, and the interpretation sure." v. 45.

The great leading facts brought to view by this dream are the four great kingdoms of antiquity; viz., Babylon, Medo-Persia, Greece and Rome.

This prophecy is the alphabet of prophetic orthography. It is the first lesson we should learn well if we ever expect to become skilled in expounding prophecy, or able to give meat in due season to the household of faith. The way is open to all to gain a knowledge of its footprints in the history of the past and present.

The only safe way to do this is to follow the interpretation, word for word, as spoken by Daniel, and word for word as recorded in history. It will not do to slip cogs here to make out a theory. God's machinery works perfectly. Geologists claim there has been a glacial period, and suppose they prove it by the scattered boulders and scratches on the rocks; scratches in history are much more legible, and sure to fill every word of Daniel's interpretation.

I saw in Crisis of April 5th, Bro. P. Alling says "nearly all expounders of this chapter are agreed that the two legs and feet of this symbol represent the two divisions of the Roman kingdom, which occurred early in the fourth century." I was not aware that a majority among us took that view; but as Bro. Alling has better opportunities to know, we accept it as correct; yet with due respect for their piety and learning, I must enter my christian protest against such application. For there is nothing in the symbols or interpretations that hints at anything of the kind. Let us examine symbol and interpretation. "And the fourth kingdom shall be strong as iron." This embraces the legs in the symbol, and of course in the interpretation. See v. 33. "His legs of iron." This embraces the legs (what next?). "His feet, part of potter's clay and part of iron." Note, no mixture of clay and iron in the legs; they were composed of pure iron. The first we hear about the mixture is in the feet and toes. Very well; let us see where Daniel says the kingdom shall be divided. v. 41. "And whereas thou sawest the feet and toes, part of potter's clay, and part of iron; the kingdom shall be divided."

Where does the prophet of God say it shall be divided? Not in the legs surely. Then if the prophet has not located the division of that empire in the legs, who among us, uninspired worms, dare do it without incurring a very grave responsibility. I for one (though I should lose the friendship of some whom I dearly love) cannot do it. Such views on this prophecy must lead to greater blunders in expounding other portions of the prophetic chart, and tend to distract the household of faith.

It seems to me that there is no need of falling into such mistake in understanding this matter. (1) Daniel treats the two legs as a consolidated kingdom, by saying, "The kingdom shall be divided." Where? In the socket of the ankle, precisely where anatomy places the division of the toes, making the ten toes represent the ten kingdoms in western Rome, which since has proved Daniel's interpretation correct. He then introduces the sixth section by saying—"And as the toes of the feet." Daniel has made this a section by itself; for when he introduced the divided state, he said, "feet and toes"; but in describing the time of the end, when these kingdoms should hate the harlot power, and assert their independence, he says as above, "the toes of the feet."

Here we have six sections distinctly marked, and as distinctly fulfilled in the past time of waiting for the incoming of the seventh—the kingdom of God. How glorious the prospect!

Let me recapitulate. Sec. 1. Babylon. 2. Media. 3. Grecia. 4. Rome Imperial. 5. Rome divided, controlled by Papacy. 6. The harlot cast out, and kings rule. 7. God's everlasting kingdom comes. Seven is God's perfect number.

DEATH.

J. W. THOMAS.

"The end of that man is peace."—Ps. 37 : 37.

"The end of that man is peace." What man? The perfect man, the upright man, the good man, the christian man,—his end is peace. Why should it not be so? Many years ago he made his peace with God. He confessed and forsook his sins, and being justified by faith, he had peace with God through Jesus Christ our Lord. The spirit of peace took possession of his heart, and he became a peace-maker. Since then he has tried to live peaceably with all men, endeavoring to keep the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace—has believed, and proclaimed the gospel of peace; and now as he comes down to the close of life, with one of old he can say, "Lord, now lettest thou thy servant depart in peace." All is well. His mind is stayed on the Lord, and he has perfect peace. He who said long ago to his disciples, "My peace I leave with you," is with his servant now, and assures him of the truthfulness of his promise.

"Mark the perfect man." What, can a man be perfect? Why not? Did not the Lord say to Abraham, "Walk before me, and be thou perfect"? Did he not say that Job was a "perfect man"? Did not David say, "I will walk within my house with a perfect heart"? Did not Jesus say, "Be ye therefore perfect, even as your Father which is in heaven is perfect"? Did not Paul say, "Let us therefore, as many as be perfect, be thus minded"? How can perfection be attained? "Whom we preach, warning every man, and teaching every man in all wisdom; that we may present every man perfect in Christ Jesus." Christ is the life-boat; get into him and you are all right. "If any man be in Christ he is a new creature: old things are passed away; behold, all things are become new." When a man's heart is changed so that he loves God, will he want to displease him? No. He will say, "Thy law is within my heart: I delight to do thy will, O God." He who saves from sin, can keep from sin, and preserve blameless unto his heavenly kingdom.

"Behold the upright." The perfect man is an upright man. He stands right up boldly, and can look every man in the face, conscious of his own integrity. He is not warped, nor crooked, nor twisted; he is honest in the dark, as well as in the light. He does not pile his wood with crow's nests in the middle, nor pack his apples with the best ones on top. He gives good weight and measure. He is a man of truth. His word can be relied on at all times. He hates deception in every form. He does unto others as he would they should do unto him. The Bible is the rule of his life. Whatever he finds recorded there, he endeavors to obey, regardless of the opinion of others. He is not swayed by what is popular, but with him truth is the all-absorbing question. He thinks for himself. He loves mercy, deals justly, and walks humbly with his God. Such is the upright man. "Blessed are the undefiled in the way, who walk in the law of the Lord." "Though he fall, he shall not be utterly cast down; for the Lord upholdeth him with his hand."

"The end of that man." Then the perfect man, the upright man, must die." His life must come to an end. Yes, he is mortal like all others. All men are under the sentence of death. None can keep alive his own soul. Whether they will or not they must die. The rich, the poor, the great, the small, the honorable, the despised, the proud, the humble, the gay, and the sorrowful must all come to an end at last. Death is a mighty leveler. He spares none, waits for none, and stands on no ceremony. Down to the water's edge all must come. Beneath death's dark wave all must be laid. Some will not look upon a corpse, nor attend a funeral, but by-and-by they must die, and be followed by others to the home of the dead.

"Before us lies a valley dim,
Which soon our feet may tread;
And through it rolls a sullen stream,
The river of the dead."

Yes, if we have Jesus with us, we can walk through the valley in peace. "The end of that man is peace." No dark forebodings, no fearful apprehensions; all is calm, peaceful. Jesus has been through the valley and risen triumphant. "My flesh shall rest in hope."

THE QUESTION.

A. PARMALEE.

"How shall we escape if we neglect so great salvation?"—HEB. 2 : 3.

Reader, can you tell me how it will be possible for me to escape if I neglect, or treat with indifference, a salvation that cost the only begotten Son of God a life of sorrow, reproach, affliction, temptation, persecution, and finally a malefactor's death?

Our first parents are blamed for disobedience to God, thereby bringing upon their posterity innumerable and great evils, disease, pain, and death, but remember that they had not the faintest conception of these evils; but before your eyes, all around you, every day and every hour you witness the dire effects of sin; and as you behold, you hear the voice of an offended God inviting, beseeching, commanding you to return to him and live; not for his sake, but for your sake; not because your loss will prove a loss to him, but because it will be an infinite, irreparable loss to you and you alone. Now, since "sin entered into the world and death by sin," and you know and have seen and do feel its ravages in your mortal bodies; since God in his infinite love and mercy has furnished a remedy, not only for sin but also for its sad effects, how can you escape a "sorer punishment" if you "neglect so great salvation." It is useless, yea it is madness and folly for you to stand amidst the general wreck, just as it is about to go down, and cast reproach upon its author instead of accepting deliverance at the hands of one "who is mighty to save."

Adam's sin of commission, though it resulted in innumerable evils upon himself and his posterity, did not necessarily entail upon either himself or them eternal consequences; had it done so, man's redemption would have been an utter impossibility; his annihilation would have been a moral necessity. But, dear reader, your sin of omission, in "neglecting so great salvation," must result in your eternal condemnation. Mind, God will not condemn you because you swear, because you steal, because you lie, because you are a drunkard, but "This is the condemnation, that light is come into the world, and men love darkness rather than light because their deeds are evil."

"For God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life. For God sent not his Son into the world to condemn the world; but that the world through him might be saved. He that believeth on him is not condemned; but he that believeth not is condemned already, because he hath not believed in the name of the only begotten Son of God."

O how my heart swells with emotion while contemplating the wonderful love of God for his fallen, ruined creatures. He did not hate us, though in the perversity of our sinful nature we are wont to regard our Maker as a malignant, unrelenting tyrant, delighting in inflicting pain upon his creatures. It is Satan, the arch enemy of God and man, sitting enthroned in the human heart, that makes men regard him in so false a light. "To the froward he showeth himself froward; to the pure he showeth himself pure;" yet he is the same all the time.

When the writer was revelling in drunkenness and vice, God lóved him just the same as now. I alone was the hater. Then he loved and pitied; now he loves and admires; not the person, does he admire, but the character; not an assumed character, but one developed by the love of God shed abroad in the heart by the Holy Spirit which is given unto us, "through faith in the Son of God."

But you think God is vindictive and revengeful because of the many evils resulting from the sin of Adam; because he declared that in the sweat of his face he should eat bread; because to the woman he said, "I will greatly multiply thy sorrow;" because, to perplex and annoy, he cursed the very ground, causing it to bring forth "thorns also and thistles" to him, besides the innumerable moral evils that have haunted man from the dawn of creation till now; not the froward only, but the holy and good among men. But hold, my friend. Do not charge too much upon our loving Father, our God. He was never the author of a moral evil, mind that! All the wrongs you suffer, are from the perversity of man's corrupt nature, and the majority of physical evils are the result of our own transgression; but all the evils God visits upon mankind, or allows to be inflicted are only to turn man's attention to a perfect life to which he designed, from the foundation of the world, to restore him.

Had God been hateful in his nature, cruel and unrelenting, as man is wont to regard him, he could easily have obliterated every thing beautiful and lovely, and caused the earth to bring forth only noxious weeds and annoying thistles. He could have compelled man to eat only the unpalatable, uninviting "herb of the field," hedging about, as he did the tree of life, all other trees, allowing man only to snuff the delicious fragrance of their fruits, as, with longing eyes he gazed upon it. He could have caused disease to continually gnaw at his vitals, causing him unremitting pain, compelling him to drag out a miserable existence which he had the power of prolonging without limit, until his hateful nature (if it were such) was fully sated. And more, he could have withheld the promise, which, amid all the sorrows his rash act had plunged him into, even then was "an anchor to the soul," and sent his creature, man, forth, sorrowing, suffering, and without hope.

But I cannot enlarge now upon the theme of God's love. I have written now four times as much as I intended to when I picked up my pen. It is an inexhaustible subject. To the beliving, regenerate heart, God's love to man is continually manifesting itself in whatever it encounters, whether it be in peace and security of person or property, or "in necessities, in distresses, in tumults, in watchings, in fastings or in imprisonments."

In all of God's dealings with man from the first until now, and on to the end, his "eternal redemption" is his only object, and I cannot close this article any more effectively than by repeating the question with which it begins, "How shall we escape if we neglect so great salvation?" leaving the reader to answer to his own satisfaction.

THE JEWS.

L. E. HORR.

Are the Jews a representative people?—a type of the people of God? As Abraham was the father of the Jews, as a nation, so spiritually he is "the father of all them that believe, though they be not circumcised; that righteousness might be imputed unto them also; and the father of circumcision to them who are not of the circumcision only, but who also walk in the steps of that faith of our father Abraham, which he had being yet uncircumcised." (Has baptism taken the place of circumcision?) "Know ye, therefore, that they which are of faith the same are the children of Abraham." "For the promise that he should be the heir of the world was not to Abraham, or to his seed, through the law, but through the righteousness of faith." "For ye are all the children of God by faith in Christ Jesus." For as many of you as have been baptized into Christ, have but on Christ. There is neither Jew nor Greek, there is neither bond nor free, there is neither male nor female; for we are all one in Christ; then are ye Abraham's seed, and heirs according to the promise.

Can they be in Christ before they lived? or the children of God before they believe?

But says the objector, Does not Paul say, "He hath chosen us in him before the foundation of the world"? Yes. Does Paul contradict himself? In the last chapter of Romans he speaks of "two who were in Christ before him." And he says, "It is the world to come of which we speak." John says, "Whosoever abideth in him sinneth not." "If we say that we have not sinned, we make him a liar, and his word is not in us." Paul and John had that spirit that leads into all truth and showed them things to come.

Do you not think they "looked at the things that are not seen—that are eternal?" and at "the foundation of God" that "standeth sure," instead of the foundation that had "perished"? Says one, "For whom he did foreknow, he also did predestinate to be conformed to the image of his Son." Cannot the Lord know us, or predestinate us "to be conformed to the image of his Son" as well after we believe as before we lived? The desire of my heart is, Lord, let "thy kingdom come."

THE slanders of libellers may be compared to fuller's earth, which though it may seem dirt to you at first, only leaves you more pure and spotless when it is rubbed off.

OIL FOR OUR LAMPS.

(Concluded.)

Men destitute of the illumination of the Holy Spirit are always inclined to raise a false standard by which to try their spirits. Many try them by the emotional standard, and reckon themselves as possessed of the Holy Spirit when they enjoy certain religious enthusiasm, strong emotions of pleasure, heated zeal, gushes of joy, and great mental excitement. We consider it dangerous to depend upon this evidence; for while God's Spirit may produce much of a similar experience, a false spirit may produce it abundantly.

The question is then pressed home with great force, How can we positively distinguish between the true and the false? We answer, by God's tests, and not by man's. God has prepared but one aqueduct through which the water of life is conveyed to fallen humanity, and that is true faith in his Word.

When our religious emotions of real joy and devotional excitement are produced by contemplations of sacred truth, in reading, hearing, or reflecting upon it as it conveys to the mind and impresses the heart with the certainty and real existence, either in the past, present or future, of all the principles, beings and things revealed, we have a Bible argument that it is the Holy Spirit which has produced these religious experiences. But when our religious experience is principally moulded by surrounding circumstances, so that when those circumstances are changed, our experience changes with them, we have great reason to fear that we are controlled by a worldly spirit, subject to worldly influences.

The true Spirit always produces the frnit of divine love, which causes us to love what God loves; for his love will embrace the same things when it is in us that it will when it is in him. We have this evidence, therefore, that the Holy Spirit dwelleth in us when our supreme affections are set upon the very things that God has revealed himself as loving.

Again, we are exhorted to "try the spirits, whether they are of God; because many false prophets [teachers] are gone out into the world." John 4: 1. Why is it important to try (test) the spirits? "Because" there are many false teachers. What is the idea expressed? It is that the Spirit of God will influence and cause men to receive that which God's true servants teach, while an evil spirit will cause men to embrace what evil servants teach. Therefore we may know the character of the spirit we possess by the character of the theology we adopt. The apostle confirms this position by his qualifying sentence: "Hereby know ye the Spirit of God. Every spirit that confesseth that Jesus Christ is come in the flesh is of God; and every spirit that confesseth not that Jesus Christ is come in the flesh is not of God."

Why did Inspiration single out one truth in this case, as a testing truth, by which to try the spirits? Because some truths, under some circumstances do not in their reception test the spiritual condition of the heart as some other truths will do. When a person is under control of a spirit which seeks popularity, that heart will reject an unpopular truth in opposition to intellectual convictions, which it would receive if accepted by the masses. Therefore, to test the spirit controlling a man, some truth must be presented to that man which a worldly, evil spirit will reject, and the Spirit of God will accept, so that its acceptance or rejection proves which spirit controls the man.

The apostle unmistakably confirms this idea when he presents the two classes thus: "They [false teachers] are of the world; therefore speak they of the world, and the world heareth them." V. 5. He then presents the opposite class thus: "We are of God; he that knoweth God [by the holy "unction"] heareth us. Hereby know we the spirit of truth and the spirit of error." V. 6.

Remember that the good spirit is the spirit of truth, and the evil spirit is the spirit of error; and that each may be known by their relations to truth and error. Christ adds his sealing testimony to this position when he says, "When he [Christ] putteth forth his own sheep, he goeth before them, and the sheep follow him, for they know his voice; and a stranger will they not follow, but will flee from him; for they know not the voice of strangers." The "voice" is heard in religious teaching, and the "following" is progression in the unfolding and acceptance of truth. Enoch walked with God;—he accepted every unfolding truth and obeyed it.

The testing truth which manifested the spirit controlling Noah was that very unpopular truth in his day—the approaching flood. No worldly, evil heart would accept that truth then, for it sounded the death knell to their worldly hopes, and blasted their future prospects; while him whose heart by the Spirit had been weaned from the world and wedded to a glorious future, to be received through faith and obedience to God, could joyfully accept it as a stepping-stone to the glorious inheritance.

Noah secured the privilege of living beyond earth's baptism of water because he possessed the spirit which caused him to heed the warning, and make preparation for the change of worlds. The truth which tested the spirits controlling the hearts of that generation cannot thus try the spirits controlling this generation, because it can not affect the worldly hopes and prospects of men here as it did there. We may believe in the truthfulness of what Noah believed, and yet our farms, houses and merchandise are not prospectively destroyed by it.

So it was at the first advent of Christ. The truth that the long expected Messiah had appeared in the person of Mary's son—the carpenter, was as unpopular among those possessing a proud and worldly spirit, as was Noah's message to the antediluvians. The unbelieving Jews, by their theological errors had established worldly hopes and painted a glorious future for themselves, which a belief in the divinity of Christ's message did as completely destroy as did Noah's message the hopes of the people of the Old World.

To profess faith in Jesus, as the long-looked for Redeemer of Israel, during the apostolic age, made people obnoxious in all honorable and popular society, excluding them from fellowship in the established church, subjecting them to the anathemas of high churchmen and the vulgar scorn of the lower strata of society, and also to the confiscation of their goods, imprisonment, and ignominious death. No person, under such circumstances, would accept such a truth and make such a profession of faith who had not been so crucified to this world that its hopes and prospects had become so weak and dim, and those of the world to come so strong and bright by the regenerating power of the Holy Spirit, that they could joyfully sacrifice all that men love in this world for the treasures of the world to come.

These were evidently the reasons why the apostle could truthfully say, "Every spirit that confesseth that Jesus Christ is come in the flesh is of God;" for no motive only that inspired by God's Spirit could, under those circumstances, prompt a man to make such a confession.

That truth, so trying in its belief in the apostolic age, has been so changed in its relation to popular sympathy, that millions have since evidently professed faith in it that they might obtain worldly honor, riches and fame; therefore they were prompted to confess that truth by a wicked, worldly spirit, and not by the Spirit of God.

We cannot tell whether a person possesses a good or a worldly spirit by his acceptance of truth which has become so generally believed that it does not crucify—cut off—from popular favor and public sympathy by adopting it.

Christ was not raised upon the cross because he was popular in this world, but because he was unpopular; so it is with his people. They put themselves on the cross by being identified with unpopular truth. Upon this principle Paul could say, "And I, brethren, if I yet preach circumcision, why do I yet suffer persecution? then is the offense of the cross ceased." Gal. 5: 11. The doctrine of circumcision was then popular, but the doctrine of christian baptism and faith in Christ was very unpopular; and those who professed faith in it were reckoned unworthy of honorable society, and were cast out as was Christ.

Jesus makes bearing the cross the pivot on which a christian life turns, when he says—"Whosoever doth not bear his cross, and come after me, cannot be my disciple." Luke 14: 27. Christ having made it the rule that all his followers must bear the cross (and this is necessary to crucify them to the world, its spirit and lusts), has in-incorporated in his gospel, truths designed to produce the cross for each generation to bear. Each gospel truth believed by the apostolic church did not produce the cross it bore, for many of those truths were also believed by their persecutors, but those rejected by them produced the shame and social death.

The principles in the human heart which cause men to believe God's truth for the truth's sake, although it be unpopular with worldly men, are reckoned by God as the brightest virtues embellishing fallen humanity. In fact we believe the Scriptures teach that God will not reckon the heart worthy to become the receptacle of the Holy Spirit until those principles are fully established. Jesus expressed this all-important truth when he said, "Whosoever shall be ashamed of me and of my words, of him shall the Son of man be ashamed, when he shall come in his own glory, and in his Father's, and of the holy angels." Luke 9: 26.

God, to manifest his estimation and the vital importance of this truth, has a number of times exhibited his decision as to the spiritual condition of those accepting and rejecting present and discarded truth, and has invariably rejected those who rejected it and accepted those who accepted it.

Divine truth and the Holy Spirit are so blended in their origin, nature and work, that they are inseparable in their presence and influence upon the human heart. God will not give the Spirit to those who refuse to receive his Word; for in the Word we get God's commandments, and through his Spirit the preparation of heart and power to keep them. Their united and harmonious action in saving lost men is as essential as the united action of the boiler and steam of a railroad engine to make it efficient in drawing cars. The boiler could do nothing without the steam, neither could the steam be produced without the boiler. So it is in christian experience. The Spirit can only be held by faith, and faith is the word of God and human credence. An active, saving faith is filled with or vitalized by the Holy Spirit, which causes it to produce good works, just as the steam makes the engine active to draw the cars. Jesus expressed this wonderful unity of divine truth and Spirit when he said: "The words that I speak unto you, they are spirit and they are life." John 6: 63.

Christian readers, we hope that none of you will be deceived and trust that you are enjoying the fruits of the Holy Spirit while you are refusing to receive and confess the truth of Jesus Christ; for the Spirit will not go where the words of Christ are not received. We press this subject because we believe it is wofully and wickedly neglected, and that multitudes are now under a fatal deception, thinking that they are in possession of God's Spirit while they are controled by a spirit of religious enthusiasm, self-righteous, worldly, despising portions of sacred truth and all who believe and confess it.

On the other hand, we believe there are many who hold the truth in unrighteousness, having an intellectual, heartless faith, which makes them more like lions than lambs, hurling the truth at their opponents as missiles of death. Thus Satan is laboring to rob all men of the spirit of an endless life, and send the deceived millions down to the pit of everlasting night. Under these terrible influences let us pray earnestly to our heavenly Father to fill us with the Holy Spirit, the illuminating oil, that we may be led into all truth, and find rest at last on the radiant shores of the eternal Eden.

STARTLING NEWS.

London, May 7. A serious riot took place in Salonica, European Turkey, on Saturday, between the Christians and Mohammedans. The trouble arose from the fact that a Christian girl wished to become a Mohammedan, and was forcibly taken from her Turkish friends by the Greeks. During the riot the French and German Consuls were assassinated by the Mohammedans. Further disturbances are apprehended, as, at last accounts, the authorities had taken no measures to protect life and property, and no arrests had been made.

THE AMERICAN CONSUL SAID TO BE IN THE BLAME.

Constantinople, May 7. It is stated here that the body of Christians who attempted to take the would-be convert from the Turkish quarter at Salonica acted at the instigation of the American Consul. Fighting between the Christians and Turks ensued. The French and German Consuls went to the mosque and were killed by the exasperated Mohammedan populace, notwithstanding the efforts of the Governor to protect them. A frigate left Constantinople to-day for Salonica with Echeriff Pasha, the Governor, a Turkish commission, the second dragman in the French embassy, and the German Consul at Constantinople. Punishment of the guilty has been ordered with publicity befitting the crime. A French man-of-war left for Constantinople immediately on receipt of the news to protect the lives and interests of the French citizens and the honor of the flag.

God is evidently stirring up the war elements in the East to a culminating point. Antagonism is reaching a red heat. Religious fanaticism is the most uncontrolable war element that ever existed on the earth; and the Scriptures teach clearly that it will kindle the fires which must consume Rome's two great antichristian powers, Catholicism and Mohammedanism. The thought that the flames are now being kindled which shall consume those hoary, blood-stained powers is overwhelming in its magnitude and triumphantly glorious in its anticipated results to the people of God. Brethren, wait with staff in hand, for the heavenly cloud appeareth.

TRINE BAPTISM.

We have received the following inquiries: (1) "Can you trace trine baptism farther back than Marcion?" (2) Are the books which claim to be written by Justin Martyr, and Clement, of Alexandria, specious or genuine?"

(1) After a careful and thorough examination, we are unable to find any trace of trine immersion before the time of Marcion, about A. D. 130, which, we think, affords very clear evidence that it was unknown before his time.

(2) There are works by Justin Martyr and Clement of Alexandria which are admitted to be genuine. Some have confounded the writings of Clement of Alexandria with another Clement, who lived at a later date. Clement of Alexandria was a cotemporary with Tertullian. The latter was born in A. D. 160, and died about 220. He adopted trine immersion, as taught by Marcion, while he wrote against some of the other strange opinions of Marcion.

Justin Martyr was born about the year A. D. 89. He was converted to christianity A. D. 133, and suffered martyrdom in 164 or 167. He wrote several pieces, but only his two apologies for the Christians, and his dialogue with Trypho, the Jew, have been preserved. Justin Martyr is a very important witness for christianity and the writings of the New Testament. His writings contain frequent quotations from the New Testament, and special references to "the Acts of the apostles, the epistle to the Romans, the first epistle to the Corinthians, the epistle to the Galations, Ephesians, Phillippians and Colossians, the second epistle to the Thessalonians, the epistle of Peter, and the book of Revelation, which he expressly says was written by 'John, one of the apostles of Christ.'" See Horn's Introduction, vol. 1 (London edition, 1834,) p. 78.

It is further inquired, if trine baptism could not be called "one baptism?" It could be when it is proved that one equals three, and three are equal to one, but not before. Trine baptism, or trine immersion, means three distinct immersions; whereas the Bible says "one baptism (Eph. 4: 5). Whoever claims it means three baptims, should also advocate three hopes, three Lords, three faiths, and three Fathers.

WATERBURY.

At the present time (May 1st) we are holding meetings in Waterbury, Vt. There has been a good religious interest in the Methodist and Congregationalist churches during the past winter, and quite a number have been converted. Some are falling back, but others are pressing forward in the christian warfare. We are much pleased with the friendly spirit of the pastor, Bro. Wheeler. We are visiting from house to house, with Bro. Geo. C. Arms, talking and praying with each family. We have also visited the business men at their stores, shops, and offices, and tried to persuade them to be christians. We receive kind treatment, and see tokens of good. One has been savingly converted, and others are under conviction. We find it difficult to reach those who have resisted the Spirit during the revival of the past winter. We have had full audiences and good attention. We are expecting cheering results. Several have consecrated all to Christ, and are richly blest. Bro. A. A. Hoyt is with us to render efficient help. He publishes the Biblical Messenger, which is a good monthly.

"THIS GENERATION."

Please explain Luke 21: 32.

C. H. WHEELER.

The passage reads: "Verily I say unto you, This generation shall not pass away till all be fulfilled." The Savior was asked for the signs of his second coming. In order to answer this question of his disciples, he mentioned a long series of events that would transpire before his return; and when he came to mention the last, he said: "Verily I say unto you, this generation [the one that sees the last named signs] shall not pass away till all be fulfilled. "This generation" must be either the first or the last in the Christian dispensation. It could not have been the first, because none of the signs of his second coming appeared in that generation. Besides, it is not reasonable to believe the signs of his second coming would be seen seventeen hundred years, or more, before his return; but it is reasonable to believe that the signs of his second coming should appear near the event, so that those who are alive when he comes, may be duly warned, and get ready. There is good reason to believe we are now living in the last generation that will exist before the return of our Savior. Is the reader ready?

M. G.

SECTARIANISM.—The spirit of sectarianism has done much evil in the world, and prevented many from seeking Christ. As we approach the end of the present dispensation, we may expect to see good christians uniting together,—not creeds—but becoming one in the Spirit of Christ; thus being ready to meet him at his coming. The following is a sample of the spirit of sectarianism, often manifested by persons, even noted for their upright christian character, as in this case:

When the Baptists of Hartford began to hold public services, an over-zealous member of Dr. Strong's society called upon him and asked him if he knew that John Bolles had started an opposition meeting.

"No," said he, "when, where?"

"Why, at the Court House."

"Oh, yes I know it," the doctor carelessly replied; but it's not an opposition meeting. They are Baptists, to be sure, but they preach the same doctrine that I do. You had better go and hear them."

"No," said the man, "I am a Presbyterian."

"So am I," said Dr. Strong, "but that need not prevent us from wishing them well. You had better go."

"No," said the man with energy, "I shan't go near them. Dr. Strong, ain't you going to do something about it?"

"What?"

"Stop it, can't you?"

"My friend, said the doctor, seriously, "John Bolles is a good man, and will surely go to heaven. If you or I get there we shall meet him, and we had better, therefore, cultivate a pleasant acquaintance with him here."—Church Union.

BINDING OF SATAN.

If the binding of Satan is a literal act, I would ask in what sense is he "reserved under chains of darkness" now? (1) Was he not one of the angels that fell? (2) If so, how, or in what sense will he be bound again? (3) Will he have any influence after he is bound and cast into a bottomless pit and sealed up?

M. A. BENJAMIN.

(1) In that he was cast out of the glory and light of heaven, to this gloomy earth, and denied the privilege of ever returning ing to heaven.

(2) Yes.

(3) When he is shut away from the human family, as a criminal taken from society.

(4) Not till he is let loose for a short time at the end of the one thousand years. See Rev. 20: 7-9.

THREE MONTHS LIST.—It is pleasant to see the steady advance of the three months list. Let every one give a lift, and make this "centennial year" memorable for efforts to spread the news, that the King of kings is about to return and open the "millennial year," when all the saints will be gathered to behold that which will make the Philadelphia "centennial" exhibition, with all its wonders, look like a cheap affair. The only qualification necessary to admit one to the Millennial exhibition will be a pure heart. Let us do all we can to persuade the people to get ready. Send them "our paper" for three months."

THE TRACT FUND.

THE ADVENT CHRISTIAN PUBLICATION SOCIETY, at a meeting on Springfield camp-ground, August 11th, 1875, voted to raise Two Thousand Dollars for the free distribution of Tracts the ensuing year; and they invite the help and co-operation of all lovers of the Lord and of his truth, in the furtherance of the good cause. The times are ominous of coming events, and admonish us to diligence in the Master's work. The Lord is at the door, and what we do must be done quickly. Let the contributions be prompt, hearty, and liberal. The Lord will reward the liberal giver.

FROM BRO. T. G. GREEN,

TO THE A. A. M. SOCIETY.

Dear Brethren:—Again I feel it duty to report to you, that you may know how matters stand in Florida.

Since I wrote you last, I have been called upon to part with my dear mother, who died March 16th. It was a hard trial, but she is at rest, waiting for Jesus to come and ransom her from the power of the grave. Her last words to me were—"My son, hold out faithful, and continue to preach the glorious gospel of Jesus to the last." The Lord help me to do so, is my prayer.

I have visited Bradford and Baker counties since I wrote you, and have tried to scatter the good seed, with what success may never be fully known till the Master comes. Many calls are still coming in from every direction. I have preached in several places in Columbia Co., but in most of the churches there appears to be a lack of entire consecration. O Lord, deliver them from that dreadful condition that may cause the Lord to spew them out of his mouth, and bid them "depart."

Last Saturday and Sunday I preached at Blount's Ferry; and although it rained very hard, a goodly number were out and gave good attention. One was hopefully converted, and is waiting baptism; others will soon follow. A Baptist Bro. came twelve miles to hear, and was much pleased. He desired me to preach in his neighborhood, and thinks his people will like the doctrine. This is a new field. I hope to have the Holy Spirit in laboring among them; but I lack books and tracts to scatter. I never feel fully prepared to meet the enemy without them. I could dispose of many Hymn Books, but I am not able to send you the money. Would to God I was. If you can, please send me one dozen or half-dozen Hymns of the Jubilee Harp.

Dear Brn., you see that I have not been idle, although I cannot give you so cheering news as some; yet I can say that I have done all I could, and as the end is drawing near, will double my effort to save sinners.

May God bless you in your most noble work, is the prayer of yours in the gospel.

Suwannee Shoals, Columbia Co., Fla.

CONFERENCE REPORT.

The Kansas Central A. C. Conference held a quarterly session at Plymouth, Osage Co, Kan., April 1st to 2nd, 1876, the President, Eld. N. S. Brian presiding.

The business performed at this session was as follows: N. R. Smith was chosen Secretary pro tem. Voted, That the next session meet at Ottumwa, Coffey Co., Kansas, July 1st, 1876, and continue over the following Sunday. Voted, That the report of this meeting be published in the A. C. Times and Crisis.

CHURCH REPORT.

Bro. Burger gave a short report of the church at Ottumwa. Said that "they were determined to remain steadfast." This Bro. and Bro. Ewbank came sixteen miles through the rain and mud to attend this meeting. On account of rain and high water the meeting was not very well attended, yet we had a good time in the Lord. Brn. N. S. Brian, Burger, Ewbank, and the old soldier, Jonathan Smith, gave some timely exhortations. Bro. J. C. Smith and wife rode many miles to the meeting, and ministered unto us the word of life. They have endured many privations in these broad prairies,—privations that would make those that are stronger tremble; yet the judgment day will show the good done, and the blessing won.

We adjourned to meet at the time and place appointed. Come, all ye that love Jesus, to this meeting, and let us celebrate the Centennial Fourth of July at this place in serving the Most High.

N. R. SMITH, Sec. pro tem.

PRAY FOR THE SICK.—Bro. C. H. Martin, of Oxford, Me., has been sick for more than a year, of bleeding from the lungs. But little hope has been entertained of his recovery. He now asks the prayers of those who have faith in Gods healing power, in his behalf, hoping that the Lord will answer prayer, and restore his health, and enable him to care for his family. Brethren and sisters, pray for him.

I. C. WELLCOME.

Correspondence.

From Sr. C. Tuller.

Dear Crisis:—Please allow me to say, through your columns, to the friends of the poor African, that after the burning of our school-house, I was permitted to finish my term in safety. For the honor of humanity let me say that the best citizens of the county greatly condemned the act of the mob, and it is not now at all certain that the negro who was killed was the guilty person.

My pupils are now scattered at work, wherever they can find it to do. One of my very best boys has been laid in the grave, having a sweet witness that he will come forth to life. One of my young men, who is preparing to teach, and for whom I have great hopes, is under severe discipline. He went to work, took cold, and came down with pneumonia fever; it settled in one hand which was strained by hard chopping, and he is in a pitiable condition. He has given evidence of being a christian, and I trust that grace is working in him a fitness for the Master's service. One of my girls, not yet seventeen years old, I took to the Commissioner for examination, and he gave her a first-class certificate, expressing to me wonder at her proficiency, and wished that all teachers could do as well. My young friends who read the Crisis may be interested in a little of her history. The mother who had taught her, what she had herself puzzled out in the First Reader, died when she was ten years old. Since that time, she has taken care of her poor old father and young brother, and managed to get to school in all sixteen months; and few white girls of her age excel her in understanding. I have given them a home and privileges ever since I came here.

The clothing that has been sent here has greatly blessed them, and the gifts of money sent has helped to keep them from suffering. Now she has taken my place at West Point, and comes home and does up their work on Saturday, and they do their cooking. If the kind friends could see this young girl, and see how nicely she manages her school of near thirty pupils, and how understandingly she reads our papers to her father, they would not regret what they have done.

Another of my pupils is very useful in a large school at Caverna. Allow me to make an extract from his last letter:—"Oh, how I prize the papers you send us. They are so rich! I receive papers from my white friends here occasionally, but they do not produce such wholesome food and drink for one hungering and thirsting for righteousness. I always feel refreshed and animated after reading them. I really believe the great Judge will soon descend, surrounded by his angelic host, etc. Two more expect to teach next month. Could friends see them and know their character and high aspirations for usefulness, they would be proud of them. Several more might teach but for want of money, and so have to keep at work. Government gives this year thirty cents per scholar, between the age of six and sixteen. There were here twenty-one of that age, and I drew $6.30. At the Point there are over sixty, and Ellen can draw $18.60."

I have written a few items, that friends may know and realize that this race is just as capable of cultivation as our own. That they may get to read and understand the Scriptures, is my great desire. When they can read in the Testament, their minds are so awakened, at least some of them, that they are anxious to progress. Only a few of all races will savingly read and understand. But one such is worth all of earth's fashions and show.

Some friends may ask what I am doing now. At present I am trying to make an attractive christian home for my own boy of eighteen, the age that needs as much as any other, perhaps, a mother's care and watchfulness. I have kept him at school and on a farm north, until last winter, it seemed best for him to stay with me; and this spring he is farming on a small scale. The land is very poor, but with the blessing of Providence we hope to raise a little. I have the tracts and papers sent here arranged in a vacant room handy for distribution as opportunity presents. When able, and sometimes when sick, I ride miles in a day to visit the poor and sick, and my time is fully occupied. Should time continue, it may be duty and feasible for my son to go to school this fall, when I can again work exclusively for the good of these poor ones. I think the good Father will open the way to build another humble house, and in a more protected spot nearer a dwelling, though I have little fear from a mob again. "Occupy till I come," said our Captain. May all hear and obey.

I am much interested in Tent operations. O that one, yes, many, might be sent all over this poor county. It seems to me a rich harvest might be gathered. With this my heart sends love to all the household.

West Point, Ky., April 30th, 1876.

P. S.—Since my last, I have received a valuable lot of clothing from Sr. Lowry, of Cincinnati; $1 from Bro. Goud; a nice roll of Young Pilgrims, on which I found the name of Charley Towle, and two nice packages—no name.

C. T.

From Bro. B. Spaulding.

Dear Brn. Editors:—I am here on the Aroostook river, in the lower part of Maine. My health is rather feeble,—not able to do but little. I can visit a few families, and spend most of my time in writing. I have correspondents all over the country, and I occasionally give lectures; but traveling has been so bad, and my feet so paralyzed, that I have not been able to get about much; but snow is going off now, and things are more favorable. There is quite a good interest here, and at Salmon Brook neighborhood the prospect is very encouraging. Bro. Snow is holding meetings there, with promising success, and we feel God is about to bless. Here in this neighborhood the Advent doctrine was planted and has taken deep root; so there is little prejudice or opposition, and in the towns around here the field is white, ready for harvest, and reapers are needed in the field.

O, I do hope yet to be able to do something in this cause. I am well received everywhere, and doors are open to me. I trust I shall be able yet to work in the cause. It is remarkable to me that I can remember Bible language so well. I can quote proof texts from memory, and give the chapter and verse where they can be found. Your brother looking for Jesus.

From Sr. D. W. Gaige.

Dear Brn. and Sisters:—I embraced the blessed truth of the Lord's soon coming in 1847, and have never seen cause to abandon the faith. Though Christ has tarried, we have waited, watched and prayed for that glorious morn to be ushered in. Like many others, I am quite alone, with hardly any of like precious faith. My nearest church is Lockport, and I am twelve miles east, so I get but little preaching. My Bible and papers are my all. I am surrounded by churches which have fairs and festivals, but none of these things move me; my eyes are fixed on the morning star, and I look for a home and a kingdom in the land promised to Abraham. I have always taken one or two of the Advent papers, and have been taking the Prophetic Times of late. I like the Crisis, and hope to be able to take it while life lasts, or until our adorable Redeemer comes.

I see a few names now and then in the paper, of those dear servants of the Lord I used to hear preach so long ago: Elds. J. B. Cook, W. Sheldon, Edwin and G. W. Burnham, under whose labors my eyes were first opened to see the truth as it is in Jesus. Those were bright days of hope and expectation, when so many were searching the word of the living God, to see if the things they heard were so. Now it is unbelief, infidelity and Spiritualism. Truly darkness covers the land, and gross darkness the people. God bless the dear ones who are laboring in his vineyard. I once could help the suffering cause, and did what I could; times have changed with me; old age and sickness have come, and I must submit to my lot. Pray for me, dear ones, that my faith fail not, and that I may be accounted worthy to stand before Christ when he appeareth. From your sister in Christ looking for immortality when Jesus comes.

From Bro. M. A. Potter.

Dear Brn.:—I preach my farewell sermon to the church in this place next Lord's day (April 30th), and take my departure for Keene, N. H., where my family will remain for the present. My labors will be mostly in Massachusetts. Bro. John Smith is to take charge of the church until such time as God shall send them one who will look for their welfare. Bro. Smith has taken a stand as a minister within the past two years, and is an earnest worker in the Master's cause. May God bless him in his responsible position.

St. Johnsbury, Vt., April 28th.

CHRIST AT THE HELM.—"A voyager who had been several days storm-tossed on a dangerous coast, as his ship was about to pass a point of even greater danger, hesitated to go to his state-room, lest the sailors should fail of their duty, through weariness, and the ship be wrecked. Having expressed his fear to the captain, he said, You need not fear; I shall stand at the helm. So Jesus says to every timid soul who trusts in him."

FAITH relies upon the truth of what God hath promised, and Hope waits for the enjoyment of the good in the promise, but more especially for the glory which is to be revealed. This hope of glory is full of rejoicing, because everything which hope looks at and draws its joy from, depends on the truth and faithfulness of a covenant God. There can be no failing on his part, and therefore on the believer's there can be no disappointment.—Roumaine.

KEEP a clear conscience and a cheerful spirit; for they contribute much to the healthful action of every function of the body.

Obituaries.

SMITH. In Chicopee Falls, Mass., March 31st, 1876, Bro. Charles H. Smith, aged 48 years.

Our dear Bro. Smith was converted in the year '54, and was in the time movement and disappointed like many others; yet he held on to the blessed promise recorded in St. John: "I go to prepare a place for you. And if I go and prepare a place for you, I will come again and receive you unto myself; that where I am, there ye may be, also." He has been one of the most devoted, faithful, consistent men we ever knew; and he died in perfect peace. He left a kind and affectionate wife, and other dear friends, to mourn his loss. May the God of all grace sustain them in their deep affliction, until the resurrection morning, when there will be a happy reunion of loved ones.

Funeral services were held by the writer. Text 1st Thess. 4: 18. I. B. POTTER.

PINGREE. In Bethel, Me., of consumption, Esther C., wife of Lawson Pingree, and daughter of Solomon S. and Dolly Pingree, Feb. 27th, 1876, aged 30 years.

Sr. Pingree professed faith in Christ when sixteen years of age, and was baptized by Eld. Geo. Briggs. She loved religion and the place of prayer, and cheerfully bore the cross here, expecting to wear the crown hereafter. She left a kind husband, three children, a mother and one sister to mourn her loss. Her amiable qualities secured her many friends. She suffered much, but was patient and resigned to the will of God. For her, death had no terrors, but it cost her a struggle to be willing to leave her children; but grace triumphed, and she gave them into the care of a faithful God, who has promised to be a Father to the fatherless, and was comforted with the hope of meeting her loved ones again to part no more. Funeral sermon from Isa. 40: 6, 7, 8. May the hope of the gospel comfort the bereaved. F.

WIGGIN. In Loudon, N. H., March 26th, 1876, Mr. David Wiggin, aged about ninety years.

He was a constant reader of the Crisis for many years. He retained his mental faculties remarkably, and manifested uncommon patience. J. L W.

FOREIGN NEWS.

BELGRADE, April 30. It is stated in Government circles that the militia have been ordered to supply themselves with a week's provisions, and to hold themselves in readiness to march at twenty-four hours' notice.

RUDESHEIM, May 1. The boiler of a steam ferry-boat plying between this place and Bingen, on the left bank of the Rhine, exploded yesterday. It is believed that thirty persons were killed.

CONSTANTINOPLE, May 2. Mukhtar Pasha reports by telegraph that he has returned to Gatschko after another sanguinary engagement. He hopes his victory will lead to the termination of the rebellion. He says that in the last battle, which was fought on Sunday while the troops were on the march to Gatschko, the insurgents numbered 16,000 and lost 1000 killed and wounded in addition to 400 on the previous two days. The Turks throughout the expedition lost 85 killed and 161 wounded. He declares that the victory was decisive.

RAGUSA, May 2. Sclavonic accounts of the battle of Sunday assert that Mukhtar Pasha was defeated and compelled to take refuge in Gatschko, and that in the four days fighting he lost 2500 killed, while the insurgents lost only 400.

LONDON, May 2. A dispatch from Risario, Dalmatia, says the Turks lost 3000 and the insurgents 120 men during the four days fighting preceding the relief of Nicsic.

May 3. The Times Berlin dispatch says there are symptoms that Russia does not object to the temporary joint occupation of Herzegovina by the Austrian and Turkish troops, provided Austria consents to the present reform, proposals being replaced by something like the programme which the insurgents submitted to Baron Rodich.

The Russian telegraphic agency is informed that the situation is unchanged. The insurgents profess their readiness to lay down their arms when they receive the guarantees which they demand. Pacification depends on the wisdom of the Porte.

May 4. The Times Berlin dispatch says the Austrian Government has forbidden the transmission of telegrams concerning the concentration of troops in Croatia and Dalmatia.

The Russian Telegraphic Agency reports that Nicsic has been revictualed for only three weeks. The insurgents prevented Mukhtar Pasha completing the work of throwing provisions into the town.

BY way of an offset to these peaceful and reassuring utterances, we have a curious article in the Russian St. Petersburg Gazette, which appears to contemplate the contingency of a general breaking up in the friendly relations of the great powers. The incessant repetition of friendly assurances between Austria, Germany and Russia, while they continue their armaments as if war were imminent, is of itself sufficient, in the opinion of the Gazette, to justify the prevailing distrust. England and Russia look upon each other with suspicion, and the former has just ascribed hostile motives to the Russian Government. The relations between Russia and Austria, too, are unsatisfactory, and their interests are so identical that a collision between them can hardly be regarded as a mere chimera. Andrassy's position is insecure, and if he should be displaced, his successor would reverse his policy, and the friendship between Russia and Austria would be exposed to serious dangers. As to Germany, her policy is doubtful, but she will not remain passive when the time for the final settlement of the Eastern Question comes, and she will then have to decide between Austria and Russia. Germany, the Gazette adds, will dictate her conditions at the last moment, "and that those conditions will be hard, utterly unscrupulous, and determined only by personal interests, may be inferred from Bismarck's past career, and his peace negotiations with Denmark, Austria and France." Thus calmly does one of the most influential organs of opinion in Russia contemplate the possibility of a general war, and suggest the contingencies in which it will be necessary for Russia to stand nearly or quite alone, unsupported except by her own vast resources.—Boston Journal.

GREAT apprehensions continue to exist in various parts of the Turkish Empire, that the fanatical Moslem element will rise up against the Christians. Unusual irritation and muttering of vengeance indicate a coming calamity. Murders are frequent, and a missionary writes that "there has been no time during our twenty years' residence in Turkey when it has been so unsafe to travel, as during the present year." Evidently the downfall of that rotten old empire is near at hand.

DOMESTIC NEWS.

SPRINGFIELD, Mass., May 5. The failure of Harvey, Arnold & Co., of the North Adams Print Works, carrying down five other cotton mills, is even more disastrous in its results than at first appeared. The liabilities, it is thought, will rise over rather than fall below the estimated $1,250,000, and not less than 1200 men, women and children in the six mills are thrown out of work.

Notices.

Women's National Union Campmeeting.

POSITIVELY UNSECTARIAN,

There will be a Women's National Campmeeting held at Seabrook, N. H., under the auspices of the Christian Women's Bureau, organized Mar. 14th, 1873, commencing on Wednesday, June 28th, and holding till Monday, July 10th. All christians, men and women, that can work for the glory of God and the salvation of the perishing, instead of creeds and isms, are cordially invited to meet with us. We expect to have a good old fashioned campmeeting, without the fashions and follies of these times. We shall bring before this meeting the subjects that most inspire and encourage the humble workers for Jesus. The fares will be reduced on the different Rail Roads as is usual for such meetings, which we shall advertise the first of June. All that wish to put up tents on the ground, either wooden or cloth, will please write early to Bro. C. A. Barton, Seabrook, N. H., so as to have their location secured to them.

ANNA E. SMITH, Pres., SUSIE E. PAGE, Sec., of Christian Women's Bureau. Those wishing to inquire more about this meeting will correspond with Sister Anna Smith, 231 West 22nd St., New York City.

By order of the Christian Women's Bureau.

CONFERENCE.—The Lord willing, the next semi-annual session of the A. C. Conference of Northern Pa. and Southern N. Y., will be held with the church at Turner Creek, Bingham, Potter county, Pa., commencing Friday evening, June 2nd, 1876, and hold over the following Sunday. Those coming by rail, stop at Genesee Station, on Erie railway, Western division, then to Turner Creek. Stop at Bro. Tracy's, on stage road. Those coming by their own conveyance, inquire for deacon Amos Johnson. We hope that all will make a special effort to attend this meeting. Come, friends of truth, let us make a grand rally, and let us show to the world that we mean what we say. Let us make such a stir among the dry bones of ignorance and superstition, that sinners and fallen angels will tremble. Come filled with the Spirit of Jesus, and then our influence will be felt. Now is the time for action; soon it will be too late.

E. C. COWLES, President.
H. ZIEGENFUSS, Secretary.

Conference.

The Washington Co. Quarterly Conference of Advent Christians is hereby called to meet on Friday evening, June 2nd, 1876, with the church at Bell school-house, and hold over Sunday. On account of stormy weather and a bad state of roads, there was no session held for the election of officers on March 11th, as per call. It is hoped that each church will send delegates with credentials signed by Elder and Clerk, and that all of "like precious faith" will lay to a helping hand to save the perishing. The Bridegroom is soon coming. Let us be ready. The business session will be Saturday, June 3d, at 2 o'clock P. M. Officers will be elected by ballot. The business of first Quarterly Conference will follow the election of officers.

J. W. HAYWORTH, President.

[No State given.]

VERMONT TENT.—Those who wish the Vermont Tent pitched in their vicinity this year will please inform me at once, so we can arrange for preaching, etc. Those who can help to carry forward the work will please correspond with me now. Address me at Waterbury, Vt. A. A. HOYT.

Nova Scotia Annual Conference.

The Nova Scotia Advent Christian Conference will be held at Bear River, commencing on Thursday, June 15th. We hope not only to see the faces and hear the voices of old friends, but extend a cordial invitation to all who may either personally or publicly feel interested in the grace to be brought unto us at the revelation of Jesus Christ. J. M. TOZIER.

York Co., Attention!

The next Quarterly Session of our County Conference is to be held at Bar Mills, Me., commencing Thursday, June 1st, 1876, at 2 o'clock P. M. Will our preachers and churches take immediate steps towards attending this session, or having themselves reported by letter? Our continued existence as a Conference may depend upon the course you take in this matter. Ample provisions will be made for all who attend. Strangers in the place may find a good home by inquiring for Simon J. Locke. C. H. SWEET, Secretary.

NOTICE.—The Advent church in Milo have changed their monthly conference, so the next conference will be May 13th. O. S. French is expected to preach May 14th. Hereafter the regular conference will be every four weeks from the above date. W. T. LIVERMORE, Clerk.

Wisconsin Campmeeting.

Our State Campmeeting will be held at Lavalle, Sauk Co., beginning Saturday, June 3d, holding over two Sundays. Lavalle is on a branch of the Northwestern R. R., running from Madison to Elroy, Sparta, etc. The meeting will be held about half a mile south of the Lavalle depot.

Having located the meeting so far north this year, we trust friends in that part of the State will specially appreciate the move, and show their appreciation by a large attendance. We hope for an excellent meeting, and look for great results. Let ministers as well as lay members come early, and come to work with their might.

O. THOMAS,
F. J. GROAT, } Com.
WM. SHELDON,

N. B.—Let all put up tents for the first Saturday who possibly can.

New York State Conference.

The annual meeting of the N. Y. State Advent Christian Conference will be held with the church at Springwater, Livingston Co., commencing on Thursday evening, June 8th, and continue over the following Sabbath. Springwater is on the New York and Erie R. R., about fifty miles south from Rochester. We trust every minister in the Conference will be present at the annual gathering, and that they will encourage the churches to send their full number of delegates and quarterly collections to help carry forward the cause of truth. Let every church where there is no minister located, and every church that wishes occasional or regular preaching, send delegates. If you cannot send Brn. as delegates, send sisters.

Brn. and Srs. scattered abroad, who want a tent or grove meeting in your vicinity, come to this annual meeting, and tell what you want, and what you can do to support one. Our Savior will soon appear, and our work of saving the perishing will soon be past, and our efforts should be increased and untiring until he comes. We hope to see many of the dear saints at this feast, who have not been able to meet with us for a long time. Come praying, in the Spirit, to the first meeting. Come all. Homes will be provided for all who come. Remember the time, delegates, and collections.

M. R. MILES, Pres.
JAS. E. WELLS, Sec.

Maine Annual Conference.

The Maine A. C. Annual Conference will convene at Bangor (in the Hall occupied as a place of worship by the Advent church), Tuesday evening, at seven o'clock, June 13th, and continue several days. It is very desirable that every minister in the State, who is in sympathy with this Conference, should attend, also delegates from every church and society. Each church is allowed one delegate, and one delegate to every ten members additional above twenty-five. There will be important business brought before the Conference for action; such as affects the special interest of the Conference, the mission and tract work, the ministry, and all the churches of our State. Come all.

GEO. HUMPHREY, Pres.
I. C. WELLCOME, Sec.

NOTICE.—The question of time for the Annual Session of the Vt. Conference has been discussed, and most seem to think September the best time. And as it has been ruled at two Conferences not to have it holden at the time of campmeeting, we think to have campmeeting commence perhaps the last Tuesday in August, or the first Tuesday in September, and close the next week Wednesday A. M.; and the Conference session commence Wednesday P. M., and hold till Saturday A. M., with preaching evenings. Those interested will please communicate to me their views of the plan, at Waterbury, Vt. A. A. HOYT, for Com.

CONFERENCE.—The first Quarterly Meeting of the R. I. and Ct. A. C. Conference will be held (D. V.) at the Advent Chapel in Danielsonville, Ct., commencing Wednesday, June 7th, 1876, at 2 o'clock P. M., and continue Thursday and Friday. This meeting will be especially interesting to all members and churches, as many important features will be introduced; among them will be a new Constitution, By-laws, etc. Will all members come early, and stay through? Will every church send three delegates, or not less than one?

N. A. ANGELL, Conference Clerk.

That Book.

Four hundred more subscribers wanted for "Baptism and Rantism," before I can safely venture to publish the book. Orders are coming in slowly, too slowly to insure success, and I would esteem it a favor if all the brethren and sisters, who think they would buy the book if out, would interest themselves to order it at once; and if some brother in each place would favor me by taking other names to send with his own, I would be thankful to him. I believe the book is needed as a standard work among us, covering the ground not yet covered by any book ever published, and yet holding the old ground which we have occupied as a people for years, of only "one" true baptism; the new ground being mainly of rantism, or the true use and meaning of sprinkling according to the New Testament. Dear brethren, please assist about this matter. The highest cost of the book in paper will not exceed fifty cents. Please send on your orders rapidly to Richmond, P. Q., that I may have the assurance that I can safely send the manuscript to the press.

L. C. MCKINSTRY.

NOTICE.—A meeting is to be held every Sunday at Turner, Me., Chase's Mills school-house. When there is no preaching, we shall have a prayer meeting at three o'clock in the afternoon. A general invitation is extended to the brethren and sisters abroad to come and labor for the perishing.

For the brethren, C. S. TIRRELL.

Women's National Campmeeting.

We wish to inform our friends that the above is not designed to take the place of the Seabrook Campmeeting, of which due notice will be given hereafter. Persons desirous of obtaining rooms for either of the above meetings can obtain them by writing to C. A. BARTON, Secretary for Com., Seabrook, N. H.

NOTICE.—The subscriber having changed his place of residence from East Penfield to Seneca Falls, N. Y., is at liberty to supply (occasionally) any church in Central New York that may desire his services. WM. INGMIRE.

Maine Special Notice.

Please attend to this at once. The Secretary, Deacon, or Elder, of each Second Advent Church in Maine should give the number of members in their respective churches, by postal card or letter, at once, to the Secretary of the Maine A. C. Conference, that we may know how many delegates we are entitled to in the S. A. C. Association, chosen at our Annual Conference in June next. Address I. C. WELLCOME, Sec., Yarmouth, Me.

NOTICE.—To the Brethren of Iowa Christian Conference:—You are all aware that we are nearing the time for Tent Meetings. The Iowa Mission Tent is not fit to put into the field this season. There is but about one fourth promised that is needed to put into the field a 50×80 tent, which we much need. Camp and Tent Meetings very much depend on your decision. There are many who are amply able to help if this matter was laid before them. I cannot go all around and see you; I should spend more time than is needed to get the tent I have contracted for. Will some one lend a helping hand, and do it promptly? Tent work must stop if this fails, and the blood of souls must be found in some one's garments. I do not want it to be mine. Come, Brn., wake up, and let me hear promptly from any State of all who wish to help the cause in Iowa, that I may know what to do. P. S. W. DEYO, Charles City, Iowa.

KANSAS STATE CONFERENCE.—The fourth Annual Session of the A. C. Conference of Kansas will convene with the church near Centropolis, Franklin Co., Kansas, Friday, May 19th, 1876, at 10 o'clock A. M., and hold over the following Sunday. We hope to see a general attendance of those who are looking for the return of our Lord and Savior. Will not all the churches throughout the State send delegates to this meeting? Homes will be provided for all who come. Come with the Spirit of the Lord, praying that he may direct in all things.

C. CROWELL, President.
LEVI S. SMITH, Secretary.

THE LAKE VIEW CAMPMEETING, Magog, P. Q., Canada, will be held, as per vote of Conference, immediately after the Alton Bay meeting. Time hereafter definitely given. Let those who have promised to build cottages be in time with their preparations. Lots free, and all welcome.

C. P. DOW, for the Committee.

NOTICE.—There will be a Woman's National Union Campmeeting holden at Seabrook, N. H., commencing June 28th, and continuing till July 10th. Any wishing to build tents can correspond with C. A. Barton, Seabrook, N. H. Particulars hereafter. A. E. SMITH.

NOTICE.—Bro. Charles W. Helme is to take charge of the meetings at North Abington, Mass. Brethren wishing to come to Abington to preach will please correspond either with Bro. C. W. Helme or with Henry M. McPherson, Clerk.

NOTICE.—By an urgent request of the churches of Rockland and St. George, Me., to become their pastor, I preach one half the time at each place. First and third Sunday at Rockland, second and fourth at St. George. H. S. MITCHELL.

THE Pittsfield, Me., Campmeeting will commence Sunday, Aug. 27th. O. S. FRENCH, Sec.

THE Mechanic Falls Campmeeting will commence Saturday, Sept. 2d.

R. R. YORK, for the Committee.

NOTICE.—Bro. A. Damon's labors having closed with the church at Bridgewater, Vt., those wishing to preach for us will please correspond with J. Y. Briggs instead of J. T. Briggs, as formerly published in Crisis. J. Y. BRIGGS, Sec.

Tent for Sale.

A Tent fifty feet in diameter, nearly new, having been pitched only six times, will be sold for the very low price of $150.00.

S. G. LOW, Highlandville, Mass.

ANY person wishing to preach for the Second Advent Church in Worcester, Mass., are requested to correspond with some one of the preaching committee before sending their appointments.

E. G. Higgins, Dr. H. W. Buxton, W. M. Hall, Committee. N. J. STREETER, Clerk.

ALL brethren wishing to preach to the A. C. Church in Keene, N. H., will please correspond with A. A. Stiles or Geo. W. Elliott. In behalf fo the church, A. A. Stiles, G. W. Elliott, G. W. Spalding, H. H. Darling.

THOSE wishing to correspond with the church in Portsmouth, N. H., will please address the following committee: J. H. Berry, J. Shannon, J. Downing, J. B. Trefethen, R. Worster.

ALL corresponding with the Adv. Chris. Church in Charlton, Mass., please direct to Thomas F. Dockham, Charlton, Mass., or J. O. Cortis, Oxford, Mass., preaching committee.

CHAS. W. DOCKHAM, Clerk.

NOTICE.—The church in Wakefield, Mass., have chosen Bro. B. Finney their corresponding Secretary, and the preaching brethren who desire to visit the church will please correspond with him. For the Brethren, C. GOODRICH.

ALL those wishing to preach at East Weymouth, Mass,, will please correspond with Alonzo Manuel, before sending appointments.

NOTICE.—The office of the Biblical Messenger is now removed to Exeter, N. H. Eld. W. C. Stewart will have charge of the correspondence. All communications in general should be addressed to the Biblical Messenger, Exeter, N. H. Articles for publication may be addressed to me at Waterbury, Vt., where my private address will be for the present; and I shall have charge of preparing the matter for the paper.

A. A. HOYT.

THE BIBLE BANNER FOR 1876.

This is a large, illustrated, monthly paper, conducted by A. A. PHELPS, A. M., assisted by two able Corresponding Editors—D. T. Taylor and William Sheldon—who will contribute liberally for its columns. It contains various departments—Doctrinal, Prophetical, Practical, Bible Class, Miscellany, and Items of Interest. It is devoted to a critical exposition of Bible Truth, and an earnest advocacy of Bible Salvation. Only One Dollar a year, in advance, and postage free. Liberal terms to Agents. Sample copy free.

Address THE BIBLE BANNER, Vineland, N. J.

THE BIBLICAL MESSENGER.

New Arrangement for 1876.

This live monthly, now greatly improved, is well printed on excellent paper, and is a bold advocate of Bible truth. It makes prominent purity of heart, and the personal speedy return of Christ to resurrect the dead and set up his everlasting kingdom. A skillfully prepared sermon is inserted in each paper.

EDITORS: A. A. Hoyt and Wm. C. Stewart.
Corresponding Editor: Wm. Sheldon.

TERMS: Sixty cents a year. Agents wanted. Send for sample copies. Address the "Biblical Messenger," Exeter, N. H.

The Biblical Messenger and World's Crisis will both be sent to one address for $2.60. Address all orders for both papers to World's Crisis, 144 Hanover Street, Boston, Mass.

ADVENT CHRISTIAN TIMES.

This is an ably conducted weekly paper, edited by Elder Frank Burr, and published under the auspices of the Western A. C. Publishing Society. It gives prominence to the personal coming of Christ, the resurrection of the dead, the final destruction of sinners, and the eternal salvation of saints on the renovated earth. It also insists on a holy life as essential to an admittance into the coming kingdom. $2.20 a year. Address Advent Christian Times, 91 South Green St., Chicago, Ill.

The World's Crisis and Adv. Chris. Times sent postpaid to subscribers who will take both, at the reduced rate of $4.00 per year in advance for both papers. Address World's Crisis, Boston, Mass.

Appointments.

☞ APPOINTMENTS MUST BE RECEIVED AS EARLY AS TUESDAY MORNING (as our paper goes to press about noon) to insure insertion for the coming week.

☞ The following RESOLUTION was passed at the late meeting of the A. C. P. Society:—

"RESOLVED, That no appointments be published in the CRISIS henceforth for persons unknown to the Editorial Board (by which is understood the Editors, Editorial Committee, and Business Agent), unless satisfactory reference shall be given."

The Committee appointed by the Adv. Chris. Association, at its last Annual Meeting, to advise with the Editorial Board "in relation to the publication in the World's Crisis of the appointments of men unworthy of recognition as preachers," having attended to the duty assigned them, recommended, and the Editorial Board have adopted, and ordered to be published, the following resolution:—

"RESOLVED, That when the Editorial Board is properly notified by any of our Churches, or Ministers, or responsible persons, by a written allegation that a certain minister, or ministers, lack moral character, that they be instructed to notify such minister, or ministers, of the information received, as a reason for withholding their appointments till after a proper trial and acquittal."

All communications in relation to this matter should be addressed to the Secretary of the Board—GEO. T. ADAMS, Boston, Mass.

THE BIBLE DOCTRINE OF THE SOUL.

An answer to the Question: "Is the Popular Conception of the Soul that of Holy Scripture?"

BY CHAS. L. IVES, M. D.

Professor of the Theory and Practice of Medicine in Yale College.

This is a book of 119 pages, in which the Author discusses the above question in an interesting and able manner,—showing the material nature of, the mortality and destiny of the Soul,—A future immortality to be the special portion of the Righteous,—What the Bible teaches as to the future of the Wicked,—The intermediate state,—The Resurrection,—That of the Righteous and of the Wicked, etc.

The Author claims that the doctrine set forth,—"Honors God, exalts the Bible, insures preaching of future punishment, subverts Universalism and Infidelity, errors of Romanism, of Spiritualism and Swedenborgianism, helps in work of Missions, rightly values the body, brings Christian unity, and promotes personal holiness."

We are much pleased with this work. It is having a wide circulation. We have just received a quantity of the pamphlet edition, and can now fill orders at the following prices: Pamphlet, 25 cts. per copy; $2.25 per dozen by mail; $15.00 per hundred by express. Bound in cloth, 30 cts. per copy by mail; $3.00 per dozen by express.

MRS. ELLEN G. WHITE'S VISIONS.

BY MILES GRANT.

ISSUED

BY THE ADV. CHRIS. PUB. SOCIETY,

A NEW WORK

On the Sabbath of the Old Covenant. An investigation of Mrs. E. G. White's Visions, showing that they are not from God.

All who have accepted Mrs. White's visions as coming from heaven, or who have been led to rest on Saturday instead of the Lord's day, should read this work. Let those who live among our Seventh-day brethren send and get a number of the books to give away. If the reader has friends at a distance who have received Mrs. W.'s Visions as true, have a copy of this work sent to them.

It contains 106 pages, and we will send it at the following prices: Single copy, 20 cts.; per doz., $1.75 by mail; per hundred, $10.00 by express. AGENT.

THE DURATION AND NATURE OF FUTURE PUNISHMENT.

MORE OF GOD.

BY J. LYLE.

O Father, thou alone art God,
Through endless years thou art the same;
I fall before thee and adore thee,
Our Father, hallowed be thy name.
May such an one as I draw near,
And speak to thee in earnest prayer?

Cherub and seraph near thee dwell,
Angels of might in word and deed;
But of them all I would not call
On one for me to intercede.
My Advocate before thy throne
Is Lord of angels, thy dear Son.

Increasing years of mortal life
With their sad weight are bending me;
I strive in vain strength to retain,
But ah! the grave's my destiny!
Fond objects of the past have fled,
And left me with a hoary head.

Forsake me not, O heavenly Friend,
Forgive my wandering and my sin;
Thy book of truth from early youth
My guide and counsellor has been.
Bless me while trembling on time's shore,
Ere I go hence to be no more.

And oh, when death's long night is gone,
When morning stars shall sing again,
Let me arise with glad surprise
To hail my Lord's millennial reign.
Then crowned with endless life I'll raise
With thy redeemed my song of praise.
—Restitution.

THE USE OF THE JUDGMENT DAY.

L. C. KERR.

Very recently I listened to a funeral discourse from a learned divine, in which he, in argument, did away with the judgment day. His text was Heb. 9: 27—"And as it was appointed unto men once to die, and after this the judgment." Of this he made three propositions; viz., (1) Preparation, (2) Appointment, and (3) The Judgment.

After showing the necessity of a preparation on the part of those out of Christ, with due exhortation, he took up the appointment. This appointment he showed to be caused by Adam's transgression, and that, had he not transgressed, the appointment never would have been made. But he would have us understand distinctly that, in the fulfillment of this appointment, in men dying in Adam, they were not punished for their own sins, but died exclusively for the sin of their forefather, Adam.

This was all true enough, and we were glad to hear this much truth; but, alas! he soon covered up all he uncovered when he came to the last proposition of his subject—the Judgment. While he dealt with the first and second propositions, he showed the use of a judgment in counseling the unsaved to prepare for it, and then telling them that they were not punished or rewarded in the Adamic death. This premise was fatal to his whole philosophy, as can be seen at a glance; for, notwithstanding, he had them (the dead) all in hell and heaven respectively, as soon as they met with this appointment, when they died in Adam.

When he commenced to deal with the judicial part of his text, he thought he would deal a blow at the "no soul class," as he contemptuously called the Adventists. He remarked that some people believed that the soul slept in the grave with the body until the resurrection; but thought this was a preposterous notion, for the Bible was full of the soul's immortality. Said he had abundance of evidence to establish the fact that the righteous went immediately to heaven at death and there received their full reward; and that, as the soul was the subject of conversion, it was the subject of reward. Said if a person had no soul he could not be converted, any more than a beast.

He endeavored to reconcile some of the objections to his theory. He remarked that the objector would say, "If men are rewarded and punished before the resurrection, what is the use of bringing them back to have it done over again? why not leave them there?" But this proved too big an objection for him to reconcile. However he made the attempt. He compared the state of the dead between death and the resurrection to a prison. Supposed a man to be guilty of murder, and was put into prison to await the penalty, which was hanging; then according to the opposing theory, he said it would leave the criminal in the prison, and would not punish him for the crime.

Now if this illustration does not upset his theory and establish the doctrine he was combating, there is no sense in it. Let us try it. The grave (the place where the dead are kept until the judgment) is represented by the prison; the death, or penalty due the sinner, by that due the criminal, which is hanging; the judgment, or time of its infliction, by the time of execution of the criminal.

It follows, therefore, that sinners are not punished until they come out of this prison, the grave; imprisonment being no part of the punishment or penalty. This is not bad logic, after all, inasmuch as it does not punish people before they are judged. And this is in keeping with the second part of his text—the appointment, which was that none were punished for their own sins while under the power of the Adamic death.

The sum of his argument upon this point was precisely this: Men are not punished for their own sins by the Adamic death; they die no other death this side of the judgment; therefore they are not punished before that time! How, then, does he get sinners into hell and saints into heaven while in the Adamic death, and before judgment? The forepart of his sermon was arrayed against the latter part, and the text stood with full force against his philosophy; for it says—"It is appointed unto men once to die, but after this the judgment"; showing as plainly as words could that men are judged before they are punished, and not afterwards, as our friend was trying to prove.

This is what a judgment is for—for an examination of character, the passing of sentence, and its execution. And if all this is done at death and before the judgment, what is the use of a judgment for that purpose? Or does God have to do things twice over in order to do them right? I apprehend that it would be the most difficult thing in creation to perform, to reconcile with the doctrine advocated on this occasion the following scriptures upon the time of the saints' reward.

We read: "For the Son of man shall come in the glory of his Father, with his angels, and then he shall reward every man according to his works." Matt. 16: 27. "When the Son of man shall come in his glory, and all his holy angels with him, then shall he sit upon the throne of his glory; and before him shall be gathered all nations, and he shall separate them one from another as a shepherd divideth his sheep from the goats; and he shall set the sheep on his right hand, but the goats on the left. THEN [not before] shall the King say unto them on his right hand, Come, ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared [not possessed by, but] for you from the foundation of the world." Matt. 25: 31–34. "When thou makest a feast, call the poor, the maimed, the lame, and the blind; and thou shalt be blessed; for they cannot recompense thee; for thou shalt be recompensed [when?] at the resurrection of the just." Luke 14: 14. "When the Chief Shepherd shall appear, ye shall receive a crown of glory that fadeth not away." 1 Pet. 5: 4. "I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith; henceforth [from this time forward] there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which the Lord, the righteous Judge, shall give me at that [judgment] day; and not to me only, but unto all them also that love his appearing." 2 Tim. 4: 7, 8.

"The nations were angry, and thy wrath is come, and the time of the dead that they should be judged, and that thou shouldest give reward unto thy servants the prophets, and to them that fear thy name, both small and great." Rev. 11: 18. They could not have got it at death and this be true. Impossible. And again, "Behold I come quickly, and my reward is with me to give every man according as his works shall be." Rev. 22: 12. "These [worthies] all died in faith, not having received the promises, but having seen them afar off. . . . And these all having obtained a good report through faith received not the promise, God having provided some better thing for us, that they without us should not be made perfect." Heb. 11. "For we must all appear before the judgment seat of Christ, that every one may receive the things done in his body, according to that he hath done, whether it be good or bad." 2 Cor. 5: 10.

This is all to be brought about, not at death, but "in that day when God shall judge the secrets of men by Jesus Christ according to the gospel." See Rom. 2: 12, 16. And for this cause he "has appointed a day in the which he will judge the world." Acts 17: 31. And unless that day comes, and there be a resurrection of the dead, all those who have fallen asleep in Christ have perished (see 1 Cor. 15: 18), which could not be true if men were immortal and went to heaven at death. In a word, if men are possessed of immortal souls, which go to reward at death, then it is nonsense to talk about a resurrection, especially when it is questioned that the same dust will be regathered and organized into a man again, as it is by those who hold so strongly to the immortal man. They seem to think that if all goes back to dust, and this dust becomes scattered, as it is termed, "to the four winds," and no trace of it, to all human conception, is to be found, man is hopelessly lost; forgetting that God is omnipotent, and holds all things as it were in the hollow of his hand, having the same power to re-create as he did to create in the first place. So it can be seen that the doctrine of immortal-soulism is founded on the un-certainty of a resurrection. But the resurrection is a certainty, and hence its foundation falls.

From Bro. H. S. Seaman.

Dear Brethren:—Never having seen anything as regards the cause in this place in your columns, it occurred to me to drop you a line. There are in this city quite a body of Adventists, perhaps twenty or more. They have come into the light generally through stray tracts and papers, not any I think through the preaching of the Word.

The first effort to hold public services was made last summer by some of the brethren, and Bro. J. T. Ongley preached a few Sabbaths, doing a great deal to strengthen those that heard him in the truth as it is in Jesus. The effort was discontinued from two reasons, first, a lack of sufficient harmony as regards matters of belief; and secondly because no one branch was strong enough to bear the whole burden alone. The consequence is, all attempt at organization has been broken up, and most of the brethren are drifting back into the orthodox churches.

It seems to me to be a mistake when brethren are so near together that they cannot find a platform they can stand upon. Cut off from the churches, and still cannot fellowship each other. All are agreed on the necessity of a change of heart, of personal holiness and entire consecration, of believer's baptism by immersion, of the mortality of man, the destruction of the wicked, and life only in Christ, and finally of the soon coming and the personal reign of Christ; and yet, because brethren differ on the character of that reign, or what is called "the age to come," they cannot fellowship each other. Cannot brethren agree to unite on certain main points, and give liberty on the minor ones? for to my mind it is certain that none of us have got all the truth yet, and if we shut down the gates and fix the boundaries, and say "thus far shalt thou go and no further," what better are we than the sects, only that we have got a little more light, and that blinds us.

In the churches, especially in the Baptist church, of which the writer was a member, many have acknowledged their belief in the mortal nature of man, and the near approach of the Savior, but so long as the Adventists themselvs are unable to unite, they can have no power to draw them in among them.

I think you have struck the key-note in your plan of three months subscriptions to operate as a missionary effort. Let us each select those we think are interested in divine things, and have sent to them the Crisis, or some other good Advent paper, and we will be doing the largest amount of good at the least expense. A tract or book they will hardly care to read, but there is something so fresh in a live Journal of to-day, that it seems like drinking from a running living spring. They will soon become interested in it and watch for its coming, and before its term of subscription has run out, they will come to the conclusion that they want it well enough to subscribe for it themselves. Then when the interest in the matters of our faith is once excited it is easy to get them to read or hear the truth.

The writer has tried many forms of missionary effort, and is satisfied that this is the best. In this time of wonderful events, when it would seem that none can be so blind as not to see the light of the approaching morning, it behooves us all to use all the means that God has put in our hands to warn a sleeping world. Is it not a glorious thing to be living in these last days? It is a time for consecration, for prayer, for labor, for "the coming of the Lord draweth nigh." Yours in the faith,

Erie, Penn.

IT is not so much great talents that God blesses as great likeness to Jesus.

IS YOUR TELEGRAPH LINE IN WORKING ORDER?

Every morning, precisely at eight o'clock, the chief operators at the central offices of the Western Union Telegraph Company send forth the single word, "Roll-call," and immediately, from thousands of offices all over the land, each faithful operator along the lines touches the magic key in response, and flashes back to the chief the words, "At my post!" It often happens that very different answers are received. When, for instance, a storm has raged in certain localities, and has blown down the poles and wires, the nearest office to the disaster so informs the home office, and workmen are at once dispatched to repair the damage done. Many officers send answers when it is too late, whilst others again send no answers at all, and the operators there are either reprimanded or dismissed for their neglect. Once I remember hearing of the following answer: "The operator was killed some time last night by lightning. He was found dead in his office, his hand upon the key." Death had called that operator suddenly, but he was found at his post.

My dear friend and brother, you also are an operator, you are daily called upon to answer "Roll-call." Each morning sun, as he greets you from above, bids you to answer the "roll-call" of your Chief and friend. Do you know him? Have you not answered his call yet? He has called these many years; Jesus, your Savior. Have you established your telegraph line from your heart to his? Does the heavenly key of prayer, and of his love and forgiveness, beat in harmony with and responsive to your own?

Are your lines in working order, or have the storms of adversity and misfortune blown down or torn asunder the sweet communion lines with your heavenly friend? Oh, let heaven's workman, the Holy Spirit, at once repair the broken line of communication; let him use the means and implements of his profession upon your heart; let him lead you to the silent closet, and there charge anew the electric batteries of love and prayer, of contrition and confession, and send forth living streams of holy fire along your line to the throne of grace! And keep the wire in working order; never leave your post; stick to the key of prayer; hold fast to the sanctuary of that closet, lest Satan steal in upon it and rob you of the implements of the christian's telegraph station—prayer.

Then if storms, or sickness, or poverty, or affliction of any kind should come, you can safely rest at ease, for the heavenly workman, the Holy Spirit, the "Comforter," will speedily repair all damages. He is always close at hand when you call him, and the dear Savior is quick to touch the responsive key and send words of cheer and consolation to your troubled heart. How precious are the words: "Let not your heart be troubled." "Lo! I am with you always." "Come to me all ye that are heavy laden, and I will give you rest."

Dear brother, dear sister, touch often that key of prayer, and you will not be amongst the absent ones when the last roll is called, but you will receive the reward promised by the Lord to all who remain faithful to the end.

And you, my dear friend, will you not establish such a telegraph line? Do you not feel as though you had missed too many roll-calls already? Are you sure that the roll-call of this morning is not the last? Will you not be found at your post when death calls you from your work below? Will he find you with your hand upon the key of prayer?—The Evangelical Messenger.

FRIENDSHIP.

"Jesus loved Martha and her sister and Lazarus." How exquisitely beautiful and significant is this little sentence. How much of that which was most precious in the life of the man Christ Jesus, does it unfold. We are apt to think of him as being only a sort of universal relation to the race. Too often men of great genius and power are men of impassable temperament. Minds absorbed with the subject of their great thoughts, carry about with them an air of immobility. It is to them a sign of weakness to betray emotion, or to be attracted by any passing thing. The man who is born to rule an empire, must not be affected by petty personalities, nor stoop to regard ordinary relations. When Napoleon stooped to kiss a child, it was only to magnify his greatness, by the wondrous condescension of the act. Not so, true greatness, for true greatness is true goodness. A truly great man condescends; or rather condescension is the constant art of greatness, if by that word is meant the careful attention to all amenities of life. A great heart never stoops to friendship, never bows to love, for it lives in the atmosphere of both. Reverence for his mother, was as genuine in Washington, the President, as in Washington the boy. Sturdy self-sufficiency may be the sign of a strong stubborn nature, but not of a truly great soul.

Fellowship, confidence, some one to lean on, and to love, is the holiest and noblest aspiration of the intelligent being. And the blessed Master, by his human leanings, by his special loves and confidences, has sanctified friendship, and given to the tender ministries of life a character and elevation which severer pietists have ignored and condemned. What a light it throws on the picture of the Savior's earthly history, to read the touching story to which the caption of this article introduces us. How our imagination lingers about the beautiful home of Bethany, and the tender scenes of those frequent visits to that favored abode. Who was he, this Lazarus, the brother of Martha and Mary? And who were they, and what their social position in the place where they lived? Nothing more is said about them. They are only incidentally introduced on several occasions, but they are all occasions of a social character. Evidently there existed between the Lord and these good people a very tender and confidential relation. He said on one occasion, "the foxes have holes, and the birds of the air have their nests, but the Son of man hath not where to lay his head;" but this was said as to his safety from his enemies, who were hunting him down like some beast of prey. There was one house, at least, which so far as the love of its inmates was concerned, was always a shelter for his weary head. There was one circle, at least, of true loving hearts, which beat in unison with his own. There were tender bosoms, whose generous emotions were to him as the balm of a summer breeze on a fevered cheek—"Jesus loved Martha, and her sister, and Lazarus!"

Oh, the blessedness of pure christian friendship! who would be without it? No joy is complete that cannot be shared with another, and sorrow has double weight that is borne all alone. Christ knew the value of companionship, as an element of working power even, and so ordained that his disciples should go out "two and two" to preach the gospel of the kingdom.

Solitude may be desirable as a corrective, but as a rule of life it is a Siberia to every generous impulse. It may be food for an anchorite, but it is starvation to a christian. Healthy christian natures never grow alone. The soul, says Hamilton, is a climbing plant, it creeps and grows on something other than itself, and Robertson insists, that our most secret communings with God, are strengthened by the presence of another, with whom we can utter our petitions aloud. And as if an answer to this, as a law of our being, the Divine promise is, "Whatsoever two of you shall agree to ask the Father in my name," etc.

Happy soul that has his Bethany. Blessed heart that has its circle of love and trust. Blessed experience whose confidences are not betrayed. And happy they, whose generous homes are open ever to the weary friend; whose love and counsel are an undiminished treasure, and who in giving, share more largely than they give, and in strengthening are strengthened in return.

Such love exists where Jesus is the favored guest, and friend meets friend with open hand because of Him who "loved Martha, and her sister and Lazarus."—Advocate of Christian Holiness.

WHY THE TIMES WILL NOT GET BETTER.

THOS. FITZSIMMONS.

Because it is the time of the end. Because it is contrary to Scriptures that either the times or society are to get better at that period, but rapidly and continually worse, until the final climax and consummation of all things. This is the last or Gentile dispensation, when we are told the transgressions are come to their full, and that after this fulness, the end should be speedy and sure.

There is not a single hint or promise in the entire Scripture that at this season things will get better, but worse. We are told and apprised in this period of "perilous times," that "seducers shall be waxing worse and worse," men "deceiving and being deceived," nations invading one another, "distress and perplexity of nations," "famine and pestilence," "earthquakes and revolutions," a "great apostacy and falling away," "the day of wrath," "the days of vengeance, cruel and fierce," and in short, to use our Lord's own words, "A time of great tribulation, such as was not from the beginning, nor ever shall be;" and unless those days were shortened no flesh could be saved.

Again, for additional evidence, we are told as it was in the days of Noah, before the flood, and in the days of Lot, so shall it be at the coming of the Son of man. Now how was it in these days? The Bible informs us that there were times of universal wickedness, unrighteousness, and immorality, and which have their counterpart today over the world.

Again it is the tradition of the primitive church and fathers, that the close of the last days of the Gentile age would be characterized by, and be witness of, open defiance to religion, law, order, right and morality; and the same view is interpreted from Scripture by the ablest writers and commentators of Christendom for the past eighteen hundred years, and we see to-day before our eyes, the fulfilment of those very things predicted by them hundreds of years ago.

Again, because the agencies, satanic and human, that have been working in the past to bring on this actual condition of things to-day, one greater, more widespread and rapid, than ever before; and not one of them removed, nor does any legislation suffice, as witness the efforts over the world the past twenty years; nor does the spread of light and knowledge make any practical change.

Again, the Lord himself, and all the prophets declare just such a state of things as we are now witnessing and suffering under, to be the precursors of and usher in the end. Because the past twenty years has shown the publicly recorded convictions of innumerable learned worldly men, from human and political standpoints, that the present is neither one of hope, or the future of apparent security, and wherein they also, involuntarily sustain and bear out prophecy.

We hope from this mass of testimony, divine and also human, yet all harmonizing and joined in one conclusion, added to what the worldly every day are now witnessing, that they are answered, and will know why the times will not, and are not, to get better.

A VALUABLE CONCESSION.

C. P. DOW.

In a recent work issued by the Montreal press, and being circulated and read in Canada, entitled "The Apocalypse Explained," written by the Rev. Benjamin Slight, A. M., on page 70, I find the following evidence of "light advancing," it being an exposition of Rev. 2: 7—"To him that overcometh will I give to eat of the tree of life, which is in the midst of the paradise of God." It is as follows:

"The promise in the text may symbolize . . . eternal life. Eternal life is the gift of God, and it is bestowed through Christ. It implies,

1. Immortality. The tree of life in the earthly paradise was noticed, as being in some way connected with immortality. Precautionary measures were adopted lest Adam after the fall should take of the tree of life and live forever. It does not belong to the scope of the present subject to inquire into the nature of this fact. Adam was no longer under that covenant, by obedience to which immortality was to be secured to him. By a breach of the terms of the covenant he was doomed to death; and he must not, therefore, partake of the pledge of immortality. We are rendered immortal through Christ. 'He that liveth and believeth in me shall never die.' THERE IS NO NATURAL IMMORTALITY OF THE HUMAN SOUL, any more than of the human body; and therefore, all reasonings and deductions to establish such a dogma are vain. God ALONE has immortality dwelling in himself. He that CREATES can DESTROY. He holdeth our souls in life. And it is his purpose that it shall be so,—that man shall live forever. Hence says Christ, respecting his sheep, 'I give unto them eternal life.'

2. Eternal happiness. Existence, without enjoyment, is but a living death. But the glorified saints shall eat of the fruit from the tree of life. Eternal blessedness issues from Christ. Bliss in heaven could not be sustained without him. It will be directly communicated from the throne of God, and realized in every circumstance of their happy existence; in the place, in the society, and in their employments. The promise is, if they would overcome difficulties, sloth and sin, and partake of spiritual life, they should be hopeful candidates of eternal life, with all its vast circle of enjoyments. Let us, then, be stimulated to live to God, and for eternal happiness. Let us seek for glory, honor, immortality, that the result may be eternal life."

The emphatic signs are mine, not the author's, and added to call careful attention to the sense of his language. It is a proper, a scriptural denial of the natural immortality, or deathlessness, or unending existence, of man—all men. The saints are to have eternal life by faith in Christ, and through his power; and this relates to the whole of man, to use his words, "the human soul," as well as "the human body."

In the light of the above exposition, and the scriptures upon the subject, we inquire, How are the finally impenitent, the lost, to obtain eternal life in misery? It will be observed that a distinction is made in the above quotation between eternal life, and the happiness or enjoyments of such life. Let us, by a "patient continuance in well-doing," seek for and finally obtain, eternal life.

HAND-SHAKING AS A MEANS OF GRACE.

I maintain that shaking of hands, rightly administered, is a means of grace. You, my dear sir, are established, and every one knows you to be a solid man. There is a man beside you, just fighting his battle and making his way. You know him and nod to him. Take him by the hand, my dear sir; it will do him good; and if he was cast down a little, as men will sometimes be, it may encourage him. "Our minister shook hands with me." What made that bulky fellow, too big to be a boy, too raw to be a man, announce that fact so loudly when he went home? The truth is, for sensible effect on him it was more than the sermon.

John Smith has been a hard drinker, but is trying fairly to get out of it. Going down the village street he meets Mr. Brown, who is "boss at the works above." Mr. Brown shakes hands with "Mr. Smith," in sight of the entire village. Does that do Smith any good? I tell you it is as good to him as one of Mr. Gough's admirable lectures. It says as plainly as if Mr. Brown had written it, "Mr. Smith, you have only to take care of yourself, and you will be a respectable man in spite of all." That makes Smith strong, and when he goes to church next Sabbath and looks over at Mr. Brown, he will find it easier to believe God's most loving Word, "Their sins and their iniquities I will remember no more." So "shake hands and be friends," at market, on the street, and, above all, at church. I presume the apostle meant something when he said: "Greet all the brethren with an holy kiss."

Some people quit church for want of the means of grace. Everybody looks as if just returned from the north pole, and there had been no time to thaw, and "the deacon who runs the church" (if anything so lifeless can be said to be run) had been in command of the party. I suspect the boys sometimes say: "Well, I guess I ought to be good; but if ever I do, it won't be 'long with the deacon." They wait, poor boys, till some one comes along with heart, whose genial, life-like ways make them "feel kind o'good;" and they catch the inspiration, "and run with gladness in the way of God's commandments."—Dr. John Hall.

TO THE LAMBS OF THE FLOCK.

W. J. W.

If there are any among us who need care and attention it is the young in Christ, and we shall be held responsible if the young in our midst are not cared for. My young friends, ever bear in mind that Jesus loves you, and will care for you if you put your whole trust in him; for he is a friend that sticketh closer than a brother, and never will leave nor forsake you. You may meet with temptations, but he will provide a way for your escape. Paul says that we have put off the old man with his deeds. Be sure that you put away all of his deeds; and when desirous of doing that which you know not the result of, go to the Lord in prayer, asking for divine direction, and follow the inspiration there received, even though it be a cross; for in so doing you will grow strong in the Lord.

Never try to enjoy religion and attend places of mirth and frolic; for Jesus cannot accompany you there. When you are invited to join in them, you can reply as did a converted drunkard, when asked to go into a saloon by his former companions; he replied, "I cannot go in, for Jesus will go no further than the door with me."

Do not expect to attain in a short experience that for which others have spent years of strife against sin and Satan. Experience is a great teacher. You can profit by others' experience, but the most lasting lessons that you learn will be from personal experience.

Let not your Bible get dusty on your shelf for want of being read. I find those who read it most love it best. You need not think to gain assistance in living a christian life by reading the fictitious trash of the day, however good the moral. You will find enough to study in the Bible to last you during the time allotted us here, which from the signs cannot be long; and if you live up to the teachings of the Sacred Book, you will gain an abundant entrance at last into Christ's everlasting kingdom.

WE know by experience that without Jesus we can do nothing. And when we permit the flame of love to burn low, and begin to feel discouraged when looking at the prospect before us, saying fearfully in our hearts, "Who is sufficient for these things?" it is very evident that we are measuring our own strength with the work to be accomplished—the trials which we must meet, or the sufferings to be endured, instead of looking to Him to whom all power is given, in heaven and in earth.

INK-DROPS.

J. ALBERT LIBBY.

We are on our way to a destiny glorious as heaven, or sad in the extreme; and it well becometh us to choose what is best. I have sought to do so, and have good hope. Now do I wish to persuade my kindred, my neighbors and all, to rest not short of knowing that each day's travel but shortens the distance between what is transient and the abiding home.

We often think if we could go back on life's pathway, and walk it over, we could do vastly better than we have done; we had better stop thinking thus till we find ourselves making some present improvement.

The old lady was terribly afraid of doctrine; it should not be dwelt upon, in meeting at any rate; and yet before she sat down she talked of her immortal soul, and deathless spirit, and said she had good hope through grace that she should go to heaven when she died. I rather think it was what she did n't believe she did n't want to hear, and she was speaking for a host of others.

In the grand centennial rush this summer, how few if any will gather who have lived a hundred years; and if perchance one should be there, he will be slow, wrinkled, and time-worn. But in the coming age, if years are counted, and the nation born from the dead in a day should wish to hold centennial jubilee, and king David should read the roll-call, there would not be a missing one in all the wide kingdom, and no marks of age would sit sadly upon the cheek or brow. At such a centennial I would love to be.

When Jesus was among men he was no formalist; he stood and cried at the feast in Galilee, "If any man thirst, let him come unto me and drink." He sat and taught on the Mount of Olives, and in the synagogue at Nazareth. He stood, I think, to pray at the grave of Lazarus in Bethany; but kneeled in the garden of Gethsemane; teaching us by example that we need be conformed to no place or posture in our service, but should meet each occasion for doing good, controlled more by circumstances than conventionalities.

DIVINE LOVE.

The love which warms human hearts, regards our neighbor as ourselves, and supremely adores the living God, is not attained, but obtained. It cannot be found amid the vanities of life; but is sent down from heaven. Is it not an invention; it is an inspiration. It is the character of the new creature. It is the new life which is planted in us when we are born again. "The love of God which is shed abroad in our hearts by the Holy Ghost which is given unto us." It is the main-spring of all usefulness and devotion to God or man. It is the well-spring of all pure thoughts, of all noble deeds, and of all true aspirations. It affords strength, encouragement and pleasure, in the performance of the most unpleasant duties of life. It is sufficient to the grandest sacrifices that circumstances can demand of us. As the beams of the early spring sun dissolve the ice, break the fetters of winter, and quicken the slumbers of nature, so the love of God, rising on the human soul, dispels sluggishness, dullness and weariness, and quickens our holy activities. Love cannot be idle. Being the gift of God, it is within the reach of all. Come to Jesus, and re-kindle the holy flame on the altar of your heart.—The Pastoral.

BE KIND TO THE AGED.

Age, when whitening for the tomb, is a worthy object of reverence. The passions have ceased—hopes of self have ceased. They linger with the young, and pray for the young—and O, how careful should the young be to reward them with tender affection and with the warmest of love, to diminish the chill of ebbing life! The Spartans looked on reverential respect for old age as a beautiful trait of character. Be kind to those who are in the autumn of life, for you know not what sufferings they may have endured, nor how much of it may still be their portion. Do they seem unreasonably to find fault or murmur? Allow not your anger to kindle against them; rebuke them not, for doubtless many have been the crosses and trials of earlier years, and perhaps their dispositions, while in the springtime of life, were less flexible than your own. Do they require aid? Then render it cheerfully. Forget not that the time may come when you may desire the same assistance from others that you render to them. Do all that is needful for the old, and do it with alacrity, and think it not hard if much is required at your hands, lest when age sets its seal on your brow, and fills your limbs with trembling, others may wait unwilling, and feel relieved when the coffin has covered you forever.—Christian Standard.

INJUDICIOUS ZEAL.—A young minister, who had just come to his appointment, was seated at tea with one of the leading families of his flock. At the table was a daughter of fine appearance and elegant manners, but evidently a proud and self-willed young lady. The mother, all solicitous of her child's salvation; abruptly drew the attention of the new pastor to her daughter, and besought him to do all he could to save her, for she had passed through so many revivals without betraying any anxiety for herself, that the mother feared that her heart would become utterly hardened. Much more the mother continued to say, notwithstanding the effort of the visitor to change the topic so indiscreetly pressed on him; when at length all the fiery passions of the young lady were roused, and uttering an angry exclamation, with an indescribable scorn of countenance, she left the room, leaving her misguided mother to weep her own folly, and herself from that time to become hardened against all approach on the subject of grace, and an open scoffer of religious things. Wise words should be wisely spoken.—Ex.

DOCTRINE.—The importance of a doctrine, not as a truth but in relation to us, may be determined by the frequency and clearness with which it is set forth in the Scriptures. Those doctrines which concern us most are most clearly revealed. "The wayfaring man, though a fool, need not err therein." Those which concern us least are less definite, being treated not as independent, but on account of their connection with other doctrines that are leading and essential. If we would give our thoughts to doctrines in proportion to the attention they receive in the Scriptures, we should be more nearly correct fundamentally, and in matters remote we should be saved a great amount of needless and mischievous speculation.—C. W. Millen.

IF every man would sweep before his own door, it would soon make a clean street.

HOME AND HEALTH.

APOPLEXY AND ITS CAUSES.

BY HENRY REYNOLDS, M. D.

The frequency of death from apoplexy is such as to attract considerable attention. It is not a very unfrequent occurrence for a person to be smitten suddenly and die, by this disease. What is the nature of a disease whose approach is so unobserved and its onslaught so fatal? Is there no way to detect its advance or to escape from its clutches? Is one person as likely to be attacked as another, and is there no means of prevention? These and other questions naturally suggest themselves in regard to this disease. Their answer in part I will attempt.

It may be stated that apoplexy never attacks a really healthy person under ordinary conditions. Almost invariably there is a predisposing condition of the system. It is a condition of the system brought about gradually during years of wrong hygiene management. When a man dies with apoplexy, what has happened to kill him so suddenly? A blood vessel has bursted, the blood escapes into the tissues of the brain, compresses it, and kills the man just as quick as a bullet would.

But what causes the blood vessel in one man's head to burst under precisely the same external circumstances in which another man suffers not the slightest harm? This is the essential point of the case and deserves special attention. The structure of the blood vessel has become degenerated. The natural tissues of the blood vessels are strong, tough, elastic and muscular, and will not rupture unless subjected to very great strains and tensions. But a wrong system of diet, so common with our people, fails to supply to the system the proper materials out of which to keep these elastic blood vessels in good repair. Want of exercise prevents the perfect elaboration; the food taken and impure air prevents the removal of the effete and worn-out particles of matter from the tissues. Fat takes the place of muscular fibre, and the elastic tissue becomes weakened and brittle. The blood becomes more rigid and unyielding and when forced by a little extra tension, caused by a slight increase in the force of the circulation, ruptures, the blood pours out and the person is prostrated.

This is more likely to occur in persons who have passed the age of forty. As a person advances in years there is a tendency to this peculiar degeneration of the blood vessels. People with the advance of years become more inactive, fail to properly restrict their diet and eat unsuitable kinds of food, and a degeneration of tissue takes place more or less extensively throughout their bodies. They are then ripe for apoplexy. A hearty dinner distends the stomach, interferes with the free return of blood from the head a blood vessel ruptures and they are dead. Unusual excitement, a fit of anger, great joy, grief, or other disturbance of the circulation, may produce the same result.

This is emphatically a disease where "an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure." Much may be done in the way of prevention; very little in the way of cure. A plain diet, in moderate amount, abundant exercise and pure air to breathe, are the best safeguards against its attacks and the best means of prevention. Even in cases where an attack has been survived, attention to these means will do much towards preventing another attack.

The foregoing article I selected for the Crisis from the Lewiston (Me.) Journal, to which I would add that, if persons would eat, drink, dress, and do all things to the glory of God, living up to all the requirements of his sacred truth, they would keep free from nearly all the plagues to which our American people are subject. Nature's laws are laws of God, and are included in all the written statues of that All-Wise Being in whose hands we are. To disobey these laws of nature is to violate God's law, and obedience to all his holy will becometh the household of faith. If we are faithful over a few things, we shall be made rulers over many, and enter into that endless joy of the redeemed saints. F. P. DINGLEY.

So. Casco, Me.

ICED BEVERAGES.

Many persons are seriously injured, and several are killed outright, during each heated term, by the free use of iced water, ice-cream, and other very cold ingesta. A typical case happened in Wheeling, West Virginia, recently. A man who drank iced water freely at dinner, was soon after affected with cramps, and died in a few hours. Now, drinking freely of extremely cold water is injurious at all times, except in certain inflammatory conditions; but the danger is greatly increased while eating. The true physiological rule is to drink nothing at meals; but if persons will use salt, grease, pepper, saleratus, fine flour, and other thirst provoking materials, they should drink as sparingly as possible at meals, and freely between meals. And in this way, if they do not get the better of two good things, they will have the lesser of two evils.—Health Reformer.

OF many a young man of to-day whose life is irregular, if not flagrantly criminal, fond friends are saying, "Oh, he is only sowing his wild oats." So he is, but not in the sense intended; not in the sense of burying them, but sowing them as the terrible seed of a more terrible harvest. It is false, young man, that you can transgress great moral laws and form viscious habits, and on arriving at manhood cast them off as easily as you can change your dress. The law is that you will reap in manhood, what you sow in youth,—that and nothing else.

The CRISIS is devoted to the exposition of all Bible truth; especially the doctrine of the immediate, personal coming and reign of Christ on the earth; holiness of heart; the unconscious state of the dead; their literal resurrection, and final destruction of the wicked.

"THE LORD WILL COME."

Oh, the Lord will come, let his saints rejoice;
He cometh to call them home.
As they sleep in the dust they shall hear his voice,
When the promised hour has come.
They shall rise from the dead with a noiseless tread,
As its accents reach their ear.
But the world around shall hear no sound,
And shall see no cause for fear.
O! to the soul that trusts his word,
A glorious hope is the coming Lord!

The Lord will come "as a thief in the night,"
And his work be going on,
And by those alone who watch for the light,
Shall his working thus be known.
From the worldling's side shall the christian bride
Be noiselessly taken away;
And two at the mill shall be grinding still,
And but one shall see the day.
As Enoch was sought for, but was not found,
So shall the righteous be.
For them, on the earth or under the ground,
No more shall the worldling see.
From their places of rest, on the mountain's crest,
Or scattered like dust on the sod;
With the living saints there, caught up in the air,
To meet with their Savior and God.
Coming to fulfil his word—
Oh! a glorious hope is the coming Lord

The Lord will come; and there by his side,
Shall his waiting people stand;
Sharing his state as his chosen Bride,
A bright and a spotless band.
He comes with the angel's terrible voice,
With the shout, the trump of God;
And the heavens are bent, in his swift descent,
To the earth which his feet had trod.
O! woe to his foes in that day of his wrath;
And woe to the man of sin—
For judgment shall swiftly swoop down on his path,
And the day of the Lord begin.
And through the long sweep of its thousand years,
Shall his glorious reign extend;
And his kingdom of Peace shall go on to increase
Till it's lost in the age without end!
O! to the soul that slights his word,
A fearful thought is the coming Lord.

PARADISE.

C. P. DOW.

This word, as used by some, is the synonym of heaven and heavenly joys awaiting the faithful; where and when they can hardly tell, only that they expect this paradise at death, and its joys to be found where Christ is.

The word itself is said to be of Persian origin, and to mean a garden of delights, of trees and beautiful things; may we not suppose, of gorgeous, sweet-scented flowers, loading the balmy air with rich perfume, and thus regaling the senses of those who pass its shady bowers; a highly cultivated and improved place, made surpassingly beautiful—hence "a garden of delights."

As a word used to express christian faith and hope, it should be used by us as it is used in the Bible. Greenfield defines Paradeisos as of Persian origin, and says "it means a park, a forest, a garden of trees of different kinds, a delightful grove." See Lexicon. It originally meant a literal, tangible, material place on earth, and more, a place of pleasure, and so a desirable place. In Solomon's Songs 4: 12–15, we read—"A garden . . . thy plants are an orchard [paradeisos] of pomegranates, with pleasant fruits; camphire, with spikenard, . . . and saffron; calamus and cinnamon, with all trees of frankincense; myrrh and aloes, with all the chief spices; a fountain of gardens, a well of living waters, and streams from Lebanon." And Solomon, when telling the story of his pursuit of earthly bliss in the possessions of a dying world says (Eccl. 2: 4)—"I made me gardens [paradeisos] and orchards, and I planted trees in them of all kinds of fruits." Thus Solomon, the wise and wealthy king, made and sought to enjoy an earthly paradise; but in it was decay and death; and he who made it pronounced it "vanity." Again we read, in Neh. 2: 8, of "the king's forest,"—in the original, paradeisos, giving us the sense of the word as above explained.

Thus we have given the places where the word is found in the original, in the Old Testament, and rendered in English by terms and descriptions consistent with and explanatory of the meaning of the word. We also read in the same Testament of the garden of Eden planted by God, where was "every tree that is pleasant to the sight," beautiful trees, "and good for food"; as also "the tree of life," "in the midst of the garden"; and, moreover, "the tree of the knowledge of good and evil."

In this first paradise Adam and Eve, our first parents, as sinless beings were placed. Here they were tried and fell. And hence this beautiful place, where every want was supplied without care and toil, was lost to them and us, their entire posterity, and the place itself not to be found.

Will a beautiful paradise be again upon our earth,—the home of sinless beings, a scene of immortality? We think so, as Jesus, the second Adam, will yet come to restore what was lost by the first Adam. Hence Paul, when he came "to visions and revelations," tells of one who was "caught up into paradise"; or, as is the sense of the Greek, not up in space, but away in time, as explained by John Scott, minister of the Free Church of Scotland in his "Catechism of Prophecy," page 167, as being "the new heavens and earth—the world to come—the third and restored state of all things (2 Pet. 3: 5–7, 13)"; and he adds, "Paul was then by anticipation enrapt into a vision of the third heaven, to which Peter and the apostolic church looked forward as their eternal inheritance, just as Peter, James and John saw the Son of man in the glory of his kingdom on Tabor." See 2 Cor. 12: 1–4.

The term Paradise occurs also in Luke 23: 43, where Christ upon the cross, in answer to the prayer of the penitent thief, "Lord, remember me when thou comest into thy kingdom," said, "Verily I say unto thee to-day, thou shalt be with me in paradise." When will Christ come in his kingdom? At the end of probation, when "the quick and dead" are judged, and every man is rewarded, the thief and all others. 2 Tim. 4: 1; Matt. 16: 27.

To be with Christ in paradise will be to be with him in his future, eternal kingdom; for he has said, "To him that overcometh will I give to eat of the tree of life, which is in the midst of the paradise of God." Rev. 2: 7. This must be the final reward, in the kingdom to which Christ and his people are heirs, but not at present inheritors. From the Father's throne of universal empire we hear Jesus' cheering words of promise—"To him that overcometh will I grant to sit with me in my throne, even as I also overcame, and am set down with my Father in his throne." Rev. 3: 21. Thus in only three places in the New Testament does the word Paradise occur, as noticed above, and in no place does it appear to mean less than the final restitution, the eternal kingdom of Christ upon earth,—a definite, material place; and the time of its being gained is when Christ comes in his kingdom.

It is therefore no dream-land, or land of dreams; no disembodied state, or sky kingnom; but the land of promise, Abraham's farm, made lovely, and the scene of love—"a garden of delights"—our final Eden home—the heavenly country.

The above thoughts were suggested by reading an interesting sketch of the finest floral garden in America, owned by Henry Shaw, at St Louis, Mo. He is a bachelor, with some peculiar whims and habits, with no heirs. A St. Louis paper thus refers to the garden: "He is a Scotchman, a millionaire, and some seventy-five years old. He has constructed the finest flower garden in the world. It has thirty-five acres in it, and is a gorgeous marvel of a garden. It has every flower in it obtainable over the world, that will live in St. Louis' climate. It is a bewildering paradise of floral beauty. The flowers number by the millions. What it cost, no one can tell. Shaw himself don't know. It is threaded by walks and adorned with conservatories and hot-houses, full of the rarest exotics. A force of one hundred gardeners is needed to keep the place in order. Shaw, it is said, spends his entire income from his millions in keeping it up. He began the thing after the war, and for several years has opened it to the public. Hundreds of thousands of visitors resort to it. It is the chief attraction and curiosity for the stranger in St. Louis to visit. And, strange to say, no police guard it, and no flowers are pilfered. This is the public reverence to the man's generous enterprise. We visited the elegant house at the head of the garden. A picture of Shaw represents him standing among his flowers. Two elegant portraits of beautiful ladies, in the garb of a past day, represent some of his female progenitors. A large book is kept there for visitors to record their names in. A curious feature of the garden is beds devoted to one flower. For instance, there is a large bed with every variety of cactus; another with hundreds of verbenas, and so on. Everything is in prodigal profusion."

A peculiar ambition surely. It will however distinguish him and make his name to be remembered. This splendid and costly garden is by him willed to the city as a public pleasure park, or paradise, on condition that the city binds itself to keep it up in full splendor. It is to be known as Shaw's Garden, to perpetuate his name, as he has no offspring to do it.

One better, and more able than Shaw, has willed us a much more valuable and beautiful garden, its acres comprising the whole earth, upon easy terms. Shall we fulfill the conditions, and rest in the future paradise? We may if we will. A sickly multitude daily gaze upon the exquisite loveliness and unsurpassed beauty of Shaw's garden, who must leave it to toil and die; but all that enter the future paradise will have upon their cheeks the roseate hue of health, in their frames an immortal vigor, and upon their brow the fadeless crown of unwasting life; and they will not be transient visitors, but dwellers in that lovely place. Well might John Wesley say, in his sermon on the New Creation, "The whole earth shall become a more beautiful paradise than Adam ever saw." It will be the perfection—the crowning consummation of God's great work in and for our world, which is beautiful in its ruins, as it groans beneath the curse, bearing upon its marred form the footprints of beauty, and having the sure promise of redemption.

INSIDE AND OUTSIDE.—It has been well said: "All true christians must be like Noah's ark, that was pitched without and pitched within, Gen. 6: 14. They must have a holy inside, and a holy outside; their profession and practice must agree."

Consistency is indeed a jewel. And perfected holiness is the source of true consistency. Purify the internal fully, and the external will be pure. Yea, the life will be full of "whatsoever things are honest, whatsoever things are pure, whatsoever things are lovely, whatsoever things are of good report." (Phil. 4: 8.)—Ex.

THOUGHTS BY NIGHT AND DAY.

C. COLEGROVE.

THE BEST COMPANY.

Let a man ask himself—"What company do I prefer? Whose companionship is most agreeable to me?" This may serve as an important test or evidence of his true condition. It is right to inquire what is the direction or preference of his affections? The affection of a true man is an affection for the truth, and for a person in whose life and character truth is represented. Such a being is Jesus Christ. How precious is the perfection of his excellence, and the felt preference for him! For a man to be conscious that he does truly prefer Christ to all other persons, is a delight. His judgment and understanding confirm the choice. There is the solid comfort of knowing that the possession of this preference is inestimable. To have the preference for Christ is to have him in assurance and expectation. With whom would we dwell forever? Whose society would be a balm for every grief? Whose presence would be safety and satisfaction? Whose name is precious in extremity? In whom do we believe as combining in himself everything to fulfil perfectly and forever the most intelligent and exceeding want of the mind? It is Christ. Then swiftly speed the day of his coming!

GROANS OF CREATION.

Meanwhile, in his absence, everything is burdened. The spirit of the world is averse, nay, adverse to the Redeemer's return. The worldly instinct is affectionate toward the present, and desires to have it prolonged. It toils to elaborate it into something better, indeed, but objects to a personal kingdom of Christ. Yet in the thought of God, without a kingdom, nothing shall be perfected. The earthly eye, sees magic in some new phase of the old at the best, but dislikes an interruption from above. The multitude say—"all things continue as they were; let them continue, and they will continue." The faith is the daughter of the wish. Ridicule of a coming Messiah in person, springs from a root of great strength and tenacity of attachment to the fleeting routine of things as they are. But one of the noblest longings is a longing for the return of that absent and great Benefactor, whom God will send. Think of aching and heart-sick nature. Think of the long and weary woe that has weighed down the world since the first day of blight. Think of the long, long ages of pain. There are the battles that have heaped up the dead; and every dreadful power has cursed creation. And now, looking back at the havoc, and seeing no end, no rest, no restorer, we cannot but look back for the precious friend of the race of man, and say with all holy beings, and all suffering things, let the heavens open, and the king come. The schemes of men are all idle and unavailing. Their ingenious devices bring no salvation. Governments are corrupt. No political edifice is firm. Death is reaping always. When will it cease to be said of every infant that is ushered weak and tiny into life, "born to die?" And when will men cease to drape, and seal up, and bury the dead?

WISDOM IN ACTION.

Many are apt to think it is dangerous or even wicked to live inactive; it may be, even for a moment. And yet how important after all is right action! How often, without pauses for reflection, may we not in a multitude of words and in an enthusiasm of even religious doing, do some things not altogether wisely and well! Who has no occasion for any regret? Who sees in himself no want, no fault, no failure! Such a one may need help to his sight. God sees as we do not. Sometimes we wonder and worry at some interruption of our work. But we may possibly be overdoing, and hand and head need rest; or we may need to suffer in order to some unknown good, or in order to a better sense of a comforting Father, and so we are checked, or smitten, or bruised, and hope and strength are nearly gone. But, after all, we get a better and more peaceable faith by the trial; a heart-easing faith, and a rest of trust. Not always the greatest activity is the most useful, but the wisest activity.

TO LOVE OR TO BE LOVED.

Which is sweetest, greatest, happiest and best? To be loved is blessed, even by a feeble creature who can do us no good, or not much, at most. To be loved by one truly good, and able to do us good, is both happiness and good fortune. To be loved by one whom we love and esteem, and whose character we approve, and whose approbation we desire, is a gladness. To be loved by God himself, truly loved, deeply loved, and especially durably loved, this is a crowning delight. And then to love in return, is a great blessing and joy. To love such a being as Jesus is, and to love the Father, is such a high, pure, and precious moral sentiment, that one prizes nothing more, unless to be loved by them. And to love even those who may not be altogether worthy, yet if he who loves is strong in faith and strong in fibre, giving glory to God, he is far happier than to love only those who have the grace to requite your love.

We pretend not here to write a decision which is the most to be coveted, that is, to love or to be loved; yet happy are they who both love and are loved. Yet God loved those who loved him not; loved us, loved us first; loved us when we were yet sinners, and gave Christ to die for us. When shall we understand this as we ought? What fools all men are, because they know so little of God and his love! Hence, we need Christ to come and open our understandings, for with immortal eyes we can see more keenly; ever so much more keenly and clearly. One thing is certain; unless God had loved us, we should not love Him. So ignorant, foolish and alienated is man.

THE REASON OF LOVE TO GOD.

It is not because of such a dreadful doctrine as eternal torment, and yet this kind of artillery fire is opened on sinful men by the thunderers; but what of such thunder? The immediate occasion of true love and faith, is the Divine excellency. Perfect equity and goodness, and beauty in the great Object, invite our faith, and faith is neighbor and pioneer of love. Then pity is something precious. The suffering rightly desire and truly need to be pitied. If we were perfect, we should need no pity. If we are weak and afflicted, we hunger for the pity of a kind heart, and how fortunate to have pity allied to power! God is best and greatest of all, and God's pity is great, as he is great. But how many are heedless of God's pity—think there is no such thing, or prize it poorly, so darkened is human understanding! When we suffer sorely, then we think there is something heavenly in the pity of a watchful and true God. We are indeed shut up to His pity, when we look in vain for other sympathy. Shut up to it! And it is just blessed to be so hedged and compelled, even though we come to it with weeping at the failure of our weak idols, and sigh because our fondness is so often disappointed.

To love the God of all glory is such a treasure, such a conquest, such an honor! The doctrine that he has created men whom he will torment in a bottomless and endless hell, having given them an utterly inextinguishable being, and a capacity to suffer a thousand million ages of agony, we put among the abominations of every kind of Romanism, taking Rome for Satan's seat. We love God because we ought to love Him, we must love him, and we may love him; and we know we may love him, because he is and has perfection; and if he loves us, that is the end of all debate, and we therefore and thenceforth freely and truly choose to love him.

ROMANISM OF THEOLOGY.

All christendom is iron-bound and bowed down with the dogma of infinite torments for the wicked, who may die between eight and eighty years, more or less. And still some are cheerful, and even merry, who profess and teach this faith. What inconsistency! He who believes such a terror, ought never to smile, or go unclad in sackcloth. Men and women should never marry and entail on the unborn the most dismal probabilities of damnation and doom. Are not those who marry the most daring sinners, and is not every official, a sinner in chief who celebrates or cements a union, and is not every wedding, if possible, worse than a funeral? Yet, clothed and harnessed in this Roman and iron theological mail, ecclesiastics walk erect, and even think or seem to think it a blessing that children are born, though nineteen out of twenty of all creatures having the image and blood of Adam, are infallibly damned to roar and writhe in heat and bitterness, cursing their creation, and entwined in the coil of their great deceiver and companion, the devil. May God give us clear heads and true hearts, and keep us perfectly until the day of jubilee, and we are clear escaped from every snare and pain.

THE VISION.

P. ALLING.

"Cast not away your confidence."

In Heb. 10: 35–38 we have this language: "Cast not away your confidence, which hath great recompense of reward; for ye have need of patience, that after ye have done the will of God, ye might receive the promise." For yet a little while, and he that shall come will come, and will not tarry. Now the just shall live by faith; but if any man draw back, my soul shall have no pleasure in him."

All these injunctions and promises must be observed till the Coming One does come, if the blessing is obtained. It will not answer to cast away our confidence in any one of them, lest we fare as did Saul, the king of Israel, who waited for the prophet Samuel the full appointed time of seven days, and because he did not come, and his little army was being scattered, and sorely pressed by the hosts or the Philistines, he forced himself into an act of disobedience which cost him his crown, his kingdom, and his life. 1 Sam. 13.

O how many there are now who are acting equally as unwisely, and for similar reasons as did Saul, and may in the end share a similar loss! They say, "your time is past," which proves your application, both in the beginning and in the ending of the periods, incorrect; consequently the whole arrangement is wrong, and out of joint, and other events and points of time must be sought for their fulfillment; and have you to work to re-arrange them, by fixing upon times and events that places their termination in the indefinite future, quite beyond our day and generation! This has caused a sadness of heart beyond the power of language at command to express. This has led me to look the subject over again, and put forth another effort to "strengthen the things that remain and are ready to perish."

Now "the vision written out and made plain upon tables" in the Advent movement of our day has been of God, or it has not. If not of God, then it has been a counterfeit, corresponding so perfectly with the word of the Lord that his children were not able, at the time, or even now are they able to detect the error.

Mark this, it is the event, and not the time only, that is the subject of promise, and the thing sought by the church; hence how absurd it is to assume, as do some, that "we were right as to time, but wrong in the event"! To such I would refer to the case of the ascension of the prophet Elijah, and the faith of Elisha. They passed the four different places of expectation, and after they had crossed Jordan (the fourth), they continued right along "and talked" till "the chariot of fire and the horses of fire" appeared to bear him away. All was literal, but no more so than will be our deliverance at the coming of Christ. Suppose, after those repeated disappointments, they had cast away their confidence, and declared it all a mistake, think ye that God would have sent his chariot for Elijah and then confer "a double portion of his spirit" upon Elisha? Certainly not.

Now if our dear brethren whom God so greatly honored in their "work of faith and labor of love" in 1841–'44 had continued on in their "patience of hope," after having done the will of God in "writing the vision," as did those honored prophets;—had they thus done, I say, we never should have heard of their complaint of being set aside by the church, or "taken down like the scaffolding around a finished building, as a thing of no further use." No, never! never!! never!!! All of this complaint has risen purely from this fact, that they imagined their work done and the building completed just at the point when they had succeeded in laying its foundation. Since then many have acted much as did an efficient time lecturer, just prior to the spring of 1843, who spoke on one occasion to a large audience with much freedom and effect, who, when he closed, declared "his work was done, his mission was at an end," and there stopped, and never took another step towards the kingdom!! Such a scaffolding was good in its place, but as it did not reach to the top of the edifice, of course the Master builder had no further need of its use, and removed it, as he has done with others and will continue to do with all of like character to the end.

I will now add a few Bible quotations, that were true and appropriate in 1843, and are equally so now, which justifies the past, and gives assurance of faith to the future as well as the present.

God said to the prophet Daniel (8: 17)—"Understand, O son of man; for at the time of the end shall be the vision." Ch. 12: 4—"But thou, O Daniel, shut up the words and seal the book, even to the time of the end; many shall run two and fro, and knowledge shall be increased." Verse 10—"And none of the wicked shall understand; but the wise shall understand." Verse 12—"Blessed is he that waiteth and cometh to the thousand three hundred and five and thirty days." Verse 13—"But go thou thy way till the end be; for thou shalt rest and stand in thy lot at the end of the days." Hab. 2: 2—"And the Lord answered me and said, Write the vision and make it plain upon tables, that he may run that readeth it. For the vision is yet for an appointed time; but at the end it will speak and not lie; though it tarry, wait for it; because it will surely come, it will not tarry."

This is God's testimony and not mine, and corresponds in all respects with every other portion of his word, both in the Old and New Testament Scriptures; and so completely harmonizess with the events of this generation as to leave no room for doubt in believing minds.

The period in verse 12 evidently measures the duration of the papal abomination, from the time it was set up till Daniel shall stand in his lot in the resurrection. That this setting up was accomplished when the papal beast of Rev. 13 "received from the dragon his power, seal, and great authority" is manifest. That this was accomplished by the decrees and laws of the emperor Justinian as early as the year 540 or thereabout, is clear to my mind, and has been for many years, and for these reasons: (1) The history of those times records the facts; (2) Because I find no historic events this side of those times that fill the prophecy; and (3) The pending events at this time both in eastern and western Rome justify me in believing and in doing as did Elijah and Elisha, and as did Israel at the Red Sea; viz., "go forward" till redemption comes. Amen.

TRUST.

J. W. THOMAS.

"Trust in the Lord."—Prov. 3: 5

The trust of Christians is not in the flesh, "For we are the circumcision, which worship God in the Spirit, and rejoice in Christ Jesus, and have no confidence in the flesh. (Phil. 3: 3), nor in carnal weapons. "And Saul armed David with his armor, and he put an helmet of brass upon his head; also he armed him with a coat of mail. And David girded his sword upon his armor, and he essayed to go; for he had not proved it. And David said unto Saul, I cannot go with these, for I have not proved them. And David put them off him. And he took his staff in his hand, and chose him five smooth stones out of the brook, and put them in a shepherd's bag which he had, even in a scrip; and his sling was in his hand; and he drew near to the Philistine. And the Philistine came on and drew near unto David; and the men that bore the shield went before him. And when the Philistine looking about, saw David, he disdained him; for he was but a youth, and ruddy, and of a fair countenance. And the Philistine said unto David, Am I a dog that thou comest to me with staves? And the Philistine cursed David by his gods. And the Philistine said to David, Come to me, and I will give thy flesh unto the fowls of the air, and to the beasts of the field. Then said David to the Philistine, Thou comest to me with a sword, and with a spear, and with a shield; but I come to thee in the name of the Lord of hosts, the God of the armies of Israel, whom thou hast defied. This day will the Lord deliver thee into mine hand; and I will smite thee, and take thine head from thee; and I will give the carcasses of the host of the Philistines this day unto the fowls of the air, and to the wild beasts of the earth; that all the earth may know that there is a God in Israel. And all this assembly shall know that the Lord saveth not with the sword and spear; for the battle is the Lord's, and he will give you into our hands. (1 Sam. 17: 38–47.

Trust in the Lord. David did. He feared not the great Goliath when he had the Almighty to fight his battles. With triumphant faith he shouted "The battle is the Lord's." Read the whole story of David's victory. See what the Lord accomplished for Israel through a shepherd boy. The Christian has enemies to contend with. How shall he meet them? Just as David met the Philistine, trusting in the living God. What did Paul say? "For the weapons of our warfare are not carnal, but mighty through God to the pulling down of strongholds; casting down imaginations, and every high thing that exalteth itself against the knowledge of God, and bringing into captivity every thought to the obedience of Christ." 2 Cor. 10: 4, 5. Trust in the Lord. What did Paul and Silas do when in the jail at Philippi? They trusted in the living God. What was the result? The devil was routed, the jailor converted, the apostles delivered, the saints comforted, and salvation preached in the name of Jesus of Nazareth. What should saints do now when they are in any trouble? Trust in the Lord. Suppose you go into a new field to preach, and you haven't much money, and no one comes to help you? Trust in the Lord. Suppose you are sorely tempted, and it seems as if your strength would give way, and you go down the stream, what would you do? Trust in the Lord. Suppose you are poor, and have no meal in the barrel, nor oil in the cruse? Trust in the Lord. Suppose you are persecuted for righteousness' sake. Trust in the Lord. Suppose there are burdens and perplexities in your mind that you cannot tell to any human being, what then? Trust in the Lord. Suppose you want an evidence of full salvation, how will you get it? Trust in the Lord. Can you trust the Lord at all times, and for all your needs? Yes. For he hath said, "I will never leave thee, nor forsake thee." So that we may boldly say, "The Lord is my helper."

THIS SAME JESUS IS COMING AGAIN.

R. P. ELDREDGE.

"This same Jesus, which is taken up from you into heaven, shall so come in like manner as ye have seen him go into heaven."—Acts 1: 11.

When our blessed Lord had bade adieu to his sorrowing disciples, and was about to return to his Father on high, how cheering must have been those precious words spoken by the heavenly messengers—"This same Jesus which is taken up from you into heaven shall so come in like manner as ye have seen him go into heaven." And not only did they cheer those disciples, over whose hearts a shadow had been cast, but they have comforted and cheered the afflicted church of Christ all along down the stream of time; and to-day they still cheer the hearts of God's waiting and watching ones.

Jesus had told them in the most tender and affectionate tones, that it was needful for him to go away; then he sweetly adds, "If I go and prepare a place for you, I will COME AGAIN, and receive you unto myself, that where I am there ye may be also." Precious promise! Only a little while shall we have to wait for his return. His work in heaven will soon be completed; the mansions will soon be ready. Sublime thought! If it gave his disciples joy to behold him after his resurrection from the dead, how much greater will be their joy to see him coming in his kingly beauty and glory, and "bearing our crowns in his hands."

Church of Christ, christian pilgrim, have you long been toiling in your Master's service, bearing the heat and burden of the day? Are you at times weary in waiting and watching for his return? and do you sigh for rest, sweet rest? "Be of good cheer, and lift up thy head, for thy redemption draweth nigh." Yes, thank God, this same blessed Jesus is coming again, and he is coming personally and visibly. How different will be his second coming from that of his first. Then he came as the humble babe of Bethlehem, to suffer and die for a guilty world; but he has burst the bars of death, and risen triumphant; and when he comes again he will come as the mighty Conqueror, as King of kings, and Lord of lords." Then they whose names are written in the Lamb's book of life shall be made like him, for they shall see him as he is.

We are taught to be "looking for that blessed hope, and the glorious appearing of the great God and our Savior Jesus Christ." What a blessed and purifying hope! It is this hope that has given comfort to the church of Christ in her darkest hours; and it is this hope that enables her to still look forward to that glorious day when this sin-blighted earth shall again bloom with immortal beauty and loveliness. God's faithful children will then hear from his own sweet lips the glad "Well done, . . enter thou into the joy of thy Lord."

In that blessed day "the wilderness and the solitary place shall be glad, and the desert shall rejoice and blossom as the rose," and "the redeemed of the Lord shall return, and come with singing unto Zion, and everlasting joy shall be upon their heads; they shall obtain joy and gladness, and sorrow and mourning shall flee away."

Oh, let us all see that we are in love with the coming of our glorious King, and earnestly looking for the resurrection of the body and of that life which is to come.

"How careful, then, ought we to live;
With what religious fear,
Who such a strict account must give
For our behavior here."

If there was ever a day when the followers of Christ needed to live careful lives—to watch and pray, it is to-day; for surely sin and iniquity abound, and the love of many is waxing cold. They are rushing on to the judgment, with no fear of God before their eyes. They are crying, Peace and safety, when they are actually in danger of destruction. Their sins are uncancelled, consequently they do not love Christ's appearing; and unless they awake from their slumbers and indifference they will have to take up the sad lamentation, "The harvest is past, the summer is ended, and we are not saved."

If you have no bright prospect of a blissful immortality through Christ, commence to pray ere it is too late. Come to Jesus at once, for the promise is, "Though your sins be as scarlet, they shall be as white as snow; though they be red like crimson, they shall be as wool." With such encouraging promises, let us yield to Christ; and though the way is often dark, and our feet grow weary, may we ever remember that our blessed Jesus has walked a rough path before us, and he knows just what we need, and has promised never to leave or forsake us; "for in all our affliction he is afflicted." The Lord help both reader and writer so to live, that when he comes we may be prepared to enter through the gates into the city.

GENESIS 18: 19.

J. F. MARQUAND.

"For I know him that he will command his children and his household after him."

In all ages of the world men and women have been set forth as leaders and examples to the people. Such was Abraham, distinguished for his faith and fidelity to true principles; he was the friend of God and humanity. The severest test that mortal man could go through was administered to him. He was commanded by God to offer his Son as a burnt offering, and only hesitated when the order was reversed to stay his hand and spare the child. Not only was Abraham obedient to God, but the lines in his character were strongly marked by the manner in which he brought up his family,—his example and teaching both to his servants and his children.

There is nothing on this earth so beautiful as a well regulated and orderly family, where the parents love truth and righteousness, and command their children and servants to obey. This is a miniature of the heavenly places and the kingdom of God. In such a family there is peace and quietness, and steady progression in goodness; but, on the contrary, where the parents are worldly, selfish and proud, yielding obedience to the animal passions and appetites, not restraining their children from vice and immorality, there you will find disorder, confusion, intemperance, backbiting, and every evil work. Well might the Psalmist say—"Gather not my soul with sinners." Ps. 26: 9.

The apostle Paul, speaking of the wicked, calls them the "children of disobedience." Eph. 2: 2. They will not hear Moses nor the prophets, neither would they hear Christ who speaks from heaven. The prophet Daniel says (10: 12)—"The wicked shall do wickedly, and none of the wicked shall understand." The characteristics of the righteous and the wicked are most truly set forth in the Bible. Please read the first Psalm, and especially the 37th, wherein the career and destiny of both righteous and wicked is graphically described.

But we will now return to our text. "I know Abraham, that he will command his family after him." Would that we could point to the Advent people and say that they follow his example. It is a fact that the children of the present day and generation are neglected. They are not admonished and reproved when they do wrong, and are allowed to have their own way and will. Their young and tender minds, carried away with the love of dress and fashion, parties, concerts, fairs, sociables, balls, pleasure jaunts, playing cards, theatres, etc., etc. And this is not all; parents sanction and approve this conduct.

The writer of this was cognizant of the fact of an Advent mother spending two whole days in making a dress for her daughter, fifteen years old, to attend a ball; and she was gone most of the night. How could that mother approach the throne of grace and ask God's blessing on that child, and expect a favorable answer? The apostle also says—"Train up your children in the nurture and admonition of the Lord." Eph. 6: 4. Teach them to stay at home and help their parents, and live soberly, righteously, and godly in this present evil world. No child that is disobedient to its parents can be expected to be obedient to God; for if they obey not their parents whom they can see, how can they obey God whom they have seen? The path of duty is the path of peace. Let parents take up the cross as did Abraham and Sarah, and cause their children and households to serve God, and thus both parents and children will meet in the kingdom of God to go no more out forever. Remember also the words of Joshua (24: 15)—"But as for me and my house, we will serve the Lord."

BACKSLIDERS.—The churches are full of them. There are ten-fold more members who lag behind the standard-bearer than march up to duty and privilege like brave soldiers of the cross. Churches, associations, whole denominations, report a decline. Wherefore? What is the cause? Are there no sinners to convert? Is there no material to bring into the kingdom? Loss of divine power is the real trouble. The cause of this loss is lack of consecration and faith. It is a hard thing to say, but truth and faithfulness require the utterance of the fact, that christians are generally backslidden and need recovering.

IF a man will give his heart and life to God, God will give him in return greater gifts than if he were to suffer death over again for him.

TURKEY IN PROPHECY.

It has been understood by nearly all christian interpreters of the Bible prophecies, for more than a thousand years, that the Ottoman empire is prominently presented there as continuing until the end of the gospel age. It has also been understood by many of those writers that the prophecies give a very definite description of it in its last stages of existence, and the leading causes, instrumentalities, and location of its final destruction. It seems to us, as that power is now rapidly waning, and the probabilities are strong that it must soon fall, that it is the duty of Christ's servants at such a time to present its prophetic history, and show what may be expected in its immediate future, and what position the nations involved in its downfall will then occupy.

We have received a number of communications recently, requesting us to give the light we have upon the important subject.

We will attempt to give a very brief sketch of the position occupied by many learned writers, and the understanding we now have of Turkey's present prophetic position.

Daniel is the great consecutive prophet in the Scriptures, and has given a clear and comprehensive view of the four great Gentile governments, occupying the most commanding positions among human governments from his time to the end. He gives the most particular history of Rome, which is the last of the four. Rome, far back in its history, was divided into two parts, "Eastern and Western Rome"; its imperial lords removing their throne from Rome to Constantinople. The last of the Roman Cæsars reigned at the Eastern Capital, from which the last emperor was driven about four hundred years ago.

Daniel's prophecy presents particularly the political history of the four powers, and only refers to the ecclesiastical as it moulds and changes the character of the civil. The overthrow and demolition of these powers are most minutely described, not only by Daniel, but by other prophets; and can we reasonably suppose that the last form of civil government occupying one of Rome's capitals, which has been for more than twelve hundred years one of the most blood thirsty, oppressive powers that ever made war on Christianity, should not be presented by Daniel and other prophets in its rise, progress and final death? We may confidently expect to find its history in those prophecies, especially that of its destruction.

Daniel, in his eleventh chapter, gives a brief history, without symbols, of Persia, Grecia and Rome, giving the last items of Roman history connected with the last time of trouble, at which time the dead will be resurrected.

If Turkey is to be found in this prophecy, as a power occupying the Roman capital, we should certainly expect to find it in the last part of this prophecy as the last chapter of Roman history. In harmony with these reasonable expectations, many of the most learned commentators tell us that the eleventh chapter of Daniel ends with a description of the Turkish Empire. We confidently adopt this view as being fully sustained by the prophecy and history.

"Western Rome," in its proper order, is first presented, and a brief sketch given of the terrible papal persecution. Then as a leading Western power, atheistical (not papal), France is presented from the 36th to the 40th verses. A more literal accomplishment of prophecy we believe cannot be found than the acts of that infidel government in these divine utterances. For a more particular description see "Historical Echoes," from page 30 to 42.

At verse 40, the king of the south pushes at the godless king, and the king of the north comes against him—France—like a whirlwind.

We are told that Egypt is the king of the south in this verse, not because it laid south of France or Palestine, but because it was the southern division of the Grecian Empire, and in this conversation had been called "the king of the south." See verses 5–6. For the same reason the king of the north, which should go forth like a whirlwind, must be the government occupying the territory of the northern division of Grecia, called by the angel "the king of the north."

Grecia was first divided into four parts, toward the north, south, east and west, as predicted; but soon after the western and northern divisions, Macedon and Thrace, were conquered by and added to the eastern kingdom, Syria, so that Syria occupied the entire northern part, with the north-western and north-eastern sections, which was doubtless the reason why it was from that time called "the king of the north." The question now arises, Did Atheistical France, during its short reign, make war on Egypt? and did Egypt push—make a feeble resistance against France? and did the government then occupying the territory of Macedon, Thrace and Syria, which was the Sultan's government, make war on France also? and who prevailed in the latter case, and overpowered and passed over? We answer, all of this took place exactly in harmony with the import of this prophetic language. Atheistical France did make war on Egypt, which made a very feeble resistance. The sultan did make war on France, and signally triumphed over it, as indicated by his overflowing and passing over. It was the king which had many horsemen and ships, that triumphed and entered into the glorious land, who also exercised power to control the treasures of Egypt, its "gold, silver, and precious things." It was the Sultan, and not Bonaparte, who was victorious through his naval forces in Syria. It has been the Sultan and not France or any other government which has had the power for nearly a hundred years to draw annually from the Egyptian treasury "gold, silver, "wheat and barley"—"precious things." It is also a fact that the Sultan has held in "his hand" the "glorious land," while "the land of Egypt did not escape.

Bishop Newton explains this overflowing king to be the Turks, and that Egypt, according to this prophecy would in the latter days be held in vassalage by the Turks. He says, commenting on v. 43: "It was foretold by Ezekiel, that Egypt should always be 'a base kingdom,' and subject to strangers; and here (Dan. 11, 43), it is foretold that in the latter times it should be made a province to the Turks, as we see at this day." He then adds "The two next, which are the two last verses of this chapter, I conceive, remain yet to be fulfilled." Newton, in commenting upon the expression "But tidings out of the east and out of the north shall trouble him," says, "It is universally known, that the Persians are seated to the east of the Othman dominion, and the Russians to the north." The power of Russia is growing daily; and it is a current tradition among the common people in Turkey, that their empire shall one time or other be destroyed by the Russians.

Sir Paul Rycaut in his account of the present state of the Greek Church, speaking of the respect and reverence which the Muscovites have for the See of Constantinople, says also that, the Greeks on the other side have an esteem and affection for the Muscovites, as for those whom ancient prophecies mention to be designed by God for their avengers and deliverers in after ages."

These expositions were written by Newton nearly one hundred years ago, when the political condition of Turkey and Russia were very different from what they are now. The strength of the two governments then did not indicate that Russia would be able to drive the Turks from their strong-holds in Europe, and utterly break their power in Palestine; but he came to his conclusions entirely by his understanding of their prophetic history, and not by their comparative strength. He continues his comments, and says, "Whatever be the motive and occasion, the Turk 'shall go forth with great fury to destroy, and utterly to make away many.' The original word, which we translate 'utterly to make away many,' signifies to anathematise, to consecrate, to devote to utter perdition, so that it strongly implies, that this war should be made upon a religious account."

The present war in Turkey has commenced exactly in harmony with these suggestions. It is the ripening up of long established religious hatred; the outbursts of pent up superstitious revenges, which always produces the most furious and bloody warfare.

That the Christian and Mahometan subjects of Turkey are now in exactly such a state of excitement as would be necessary to produce such a war, and that all the European nations are now on tiptoe of expectation that such a war is impending, appears evident from our last news from the East. From the insignificant circumstance of a Christian girl being converted to the Mahometan faith at Salonica, the restrained war spirit burst forth as suddenly as a thunder clap, and the cry of "blood" rent the heavens when the infuriated worshipers grappled in death-lock, and the Consuls of France and Germany fell, staining the two national flags with government blood. In an hour the wires flashed the electrifying news to Italy, France, Germany, Austria, Russia and England, and war-ships were hastened from all points, like firemen to a burning building, to stop, if possible, a terrible onslaught.

No circumstance could more fully show what question is now producing the uncontrollable excitement of the people, and the fears which cause the nations to sleep upon their arms than that to which we have referred. That we are not alone in this conviction appears from the following:

London, May 9. The Standard's correspondent at Berlin says it is generally thought here that the Salonica affair will prove fatal to Turkey. Interference of the European powers for the benefit of the Christians is now considered unavoidable, as it is evident that the Porte is powerless to protect them against the outbreaks of fanaticism.

As to location of the last desperate struggle of this power for national existence, Newton says: "Between the seas in the glorious holy mountain, must denote as we have shown, some part of the Holy Land. There the Turk shall encamp with all his power, yet he shall come to his end, and none shall help him; shall help him effectually, or deliver him." page 318. The prophet's expression, "none shall help him," is very emphatic, showing an important feature in his last fatal movement. As he had in the connection presented certain triumphant movements, and then gives his last effort in which he shall perish and none to help him, we concede that the difference in these movements is this: "He will receive help in the first, and so continue to exist; and none in the last; and for that reason will perish.

When Atheistical France made war on Turkey, England and Russia came to the rescue of the Turks, and so they were saved from national destruction. When the Crimean war commenced between Turkey and Russia, England and France were induced to help Turkey, which again saved it from utter destruction.

These movements are just what the prophet presents as preceding the final overthrow of the king, and what Newton and many learned expositors understood would take place immediately preceding the end. The important question now is If Turkey should be plunged into war, as is expected, will it be the last presented in the prophecy? or do present circumstances justify us in expecting that it will be the last? Is the existence of the Ottoman government now threatened? It is perfectly evident that it is. Does its future continuance depend upon foreign help? It is certain, as acknowledged by all, that it does. Does the Sultan realize that he now needs help, and does he ask for it? He does, as the following testifies:

Berlin, April 28. A despatch from Vienna says the Porte has sent a circular letter to its representatives at the various European courts asking for military assistance to suppress the insurrection, and citing as a precedent the suppression of the Hungarian insurrection by Russia in 1849.

This argument to us is very strong that the last war in this prophetic series is rapidly approaching.

But what will be the nature of the closing scenes of this war? As Newton expresses our convictions on this subject, we can do no better than quote him. He says: "At that time there shall be great tribulation, such as never was since there was a nation, even to that same time; and after that shall be the general resurrection." page 318.

According to these statements and proofs, Turkey's next war will be a terrible struggle between Christians and Mahometans, which will end in the utter destruction of the Sultan's government, connected with which will be the "general resurrection of the dead, consequently the second advent of Christ. Let all be fully prepared for the closing scenes of the gospel age, for they are evidently swiftly approaching. Let all find refuge in Christ without a moment's delay.

WATERBURY.

We closed our meetings in Waterbury, Vt., Sabbath, May 7th. The Lord has been pleased to bless the people, and lead many to advanced ground in the christian warfare, and to obtain new victories over the world, the flesh and the devil. Several have made a full consecration, and received a fullness of peace and love never before experienced. Sectarian prejudice has passed away as the morning dew, and brotherly love and communion have been greatly strengthened in the hearts of the disciples of Jesus. All seemed pleased to hear about his coming, and the more we talked on this blessed theme, the more interested they appeared. Young converts received the news joyfully, and expressed a warm desire to see him coming in his glory. Those who listened to the eight discourses on the subject, appeared to be convinced that "the end of all things is at hand." Skeptics gazed with astonishment at the strength and amount of evidence presented. One, who said he had not been to meeting before for fifteen years, listened to the lectures with marked attention, and was heard to say at the close, he believed the Lord would come within ten years.

We formed a very pleasant acquaintance with Bro. S. H. Wheeler, the Congregationalist minister. He united with us heartily, giving his aid and sympathy to forward all measures designed to build up the cause of Christ. The meetings Sabbath mornings and evenings were held in his church. Bro. A. A. Hoyt resides in Waterbury, and is earnestly at work as an evangelist. When at home he rendered valuable assistance in the meetings. He is devoted to the cause of his divine Master, and loves the service.

At the close of our meetings in Waterbury a "Christian Workers' Union" was formed, having the following platform:

CHRISTIAN WORKERS' UNION.

We, the undersigned, believers in Christ, in the town of Waterbury, Vt., hereby form ourselves into a Christian Workers' Union, for the purpose of living and spreading "pure and undefiled religion."

We mutually and unanimously agree to take the Bible as our only rule of faith and law of discipline; making christian character the only test of fellowship and communion. We do this in harmony with scriptures like the following:

"For he is our peace, who hath made both one, and hath broken down the middle wall of partition between us." Eph. 2: 14.

"For ye are all the children of God by faith in Christ Jesus." Gal. 3. 26.

"There is neither Jew nor Greek, there is neither bond nor free, there is neither male nor female; for ye are all one in Christ Jesus." Gal. 3: 21.

"There is one body, and one Spirit, even as ye are called in one hope of your calling." Eph. 4: 4.

"I in them, and thou in me, that they may be made perfect in one." John 17: 23.

"Neither pray I for these alone, but for them also which shall believe on me through their word; that they all may be one in us; that the world may believe that thou hast sent me. John 17: 20–21.

As one means of accomplishing this end, and keeping up a lively interest in meetings, we mutually pledge ourselves, by the help of the Lord, to improve the earliest opportunity offered for praying or speaking, in every conference meeting, in order that Christ may be glorified in avoiding all dull formalism and waste of time.

Some forty joined at once, and it is expected that many more will become members of the union. It is designed to have at least one union meeting a week, and also to work "in regions beyond." We have great reason to praise the Lord for his blessings bestowed on the people in Waterbury.

M. G.

CHRISTIAN WORKERS' UNION.

In our report of the Waterbury meetings may be seen the platform of the "Christian Workers' Union," which we commend to the attention of all our readers, and if they are pleased with the plan, we hope they will at once put it into practical operation, wherever there are christian workers. It is a well-known fact that prayer and conference meetings are often dull, cold and formal, because there is so much time wasted in waiting for others to do something. One object of this union is to change this unpleasant dragging system to one of joyful activity.

Another prominent object to be gained is the breaking down of sectarian walls, and the consequent union of all the true children of Christ. If they can be persuaded to work together for a short time in efforts to save the perishing, they soon forget their creed differences and find themselves one in Christ, ready to lend each other a helping hand in the christian journey. Sectarianism has been one of the great weights with which Satan has endeavored to fetter the progress of "pure and undefiled religion"; but the time has come when those who truly love Jesus should meet together on one common platform, to help each other, and to persuade as many as possible to be ready for the great day of the Lord. The fiendish forces of Satan are being mustered for battle on every side, and shall not the friends of Jesus unite against their great advancing foe? If "union is strength," let us have the union. When christianity is low, sectarianism prevails; when we are filled with the Spirit of Christ, sectarianism dies, and the cause of Christ is advanced.

We would recommend that in every town, village, or city, one or more Christian Workers' Unions be formed of such as may be pleased to unite to give new life to the cause of Christ, and that at least one union prayer-meeting be held each week. Of course, in such meetings, points of doctrine about which equally good men differ, should not be agitated. The aim should be to kindle up a true devotional spirit, by prayer, testimony and song, and to lead the unconverted into the christian pathway.

As a means of doing much good, let a few of the workers go out into school districts, and hold prayer and conference meetings, visiting from house to house, talking and praying with the people. Let us deny ourselves, and make a sacrifice for the good of others. Those who believe Jesus is soon coming, should be doubly awake to every good work. They should be all alive in the christian service, and ready to co-operate with every friend of Jesus, though he may have but little light and knowledge. Give him a helping hand, and let there be union in Christ.

There is no probability that all true christians will think alike about every point of doctrine, or plans of operation, for this has never been, not even among the disciples in the first century. What is not essential to salvation should not be made a test of fellowship. One of the excellences of the pure christian religion is this: it unites the hearts of those who differ in points of theology, but it does not unite with what is unchristian, though correct in theory. True christian union is produced by the indwelling power of the Holy Spirit, in hearts consecrated to Christ, and is not dependent on a perfect theology. To be fully in Christ, one must live up to what light and knowledge he may possess. Beyond that he cannot go. He who has more truth should bear kindly with him who has less, and take special pleasure in imparting to those who may lack, instead of bestowing censure upon those who are deficient. Let love lead, and none need fear the results. He who is most like Jesus should be the most long-suffering, kind, unsectarian, and ready to help every needy one, with kind words and deeds. Whoever loves Christ should be considered as a member of one family, and be welcome to all the privileges we enjoy. The members of a household do not all think alike about religious matters, politics or business, but should that cause them to divide and start separate interests? certainly not. Their differences may afford subjects for pleasant conversation, but not for dividing. How much more should this be the case in the family of Christ. There is no love so strong, so lasting, so forbearing, as that in the heart of a true christian. It overlooks and reaches beyond that felt by any natural heart. It abides when all else has failed; but the more one has of sectarian love, the worse his condition, and the more disagreeable his company and spirit. Let one always attend some particular meeting, and he is pretty sure to be more or less sectarian; but if he will mingle with the christians in other denominations, and unite with them in prayer and song, he will be quite sure to find his sectarianism fading away; and when it has been once fully removed, we have never known one return to it again. He would as soon think of exchanging a seat in the express palace car for one on the slow emigrant train.

CONSECRATION.

All who wish to enjoy "perfect love," "perfect peace," and continued sweet rest in Jesus, must make a full, unconditional surrender to him, with a firm purpose to obey him in all things, at any cost. Having done this, he will realize as never before, that the yoke of Christ is easy, and the burden is light. He can understand Paul, when he said he gloried in the cross. The service of Christ then becomes a love-work. All worry is gone. The future looks bright and inviting, and the present is full of contentment, though crosses are on every side. The mind is free from all doubts and fears, and the person truly loves the appearing of Jesus, feeling all ready to meet him at any moment. Blessed rest! It is for all, who will consecrate themselves wholly to Jesus. The following is the form of words used by Bro. A. B. Earle to express his consecration.

"Andover, Feb. 10th, 1859. "This day I make a new consecration of my all to Christ.

"Jesus, I now and forever give myself to thee; my body to be used for thy glory; my mouth to speak for thee at all times; my eyes to weep over lost sinners, or to be used for any purpose for thy glory; my feet to carry me where thou shalt wish me to go; my heart to be burdened for souls, or used for thee anywhere; my intellect to be employed at all times for thy cause and glory. I give to thee my wife, my children, my property, all I have, and all that ever shall be mine. I will obey thee in every known duty."

The result has been glorious. Bro. Earle has only done what all should do, who wish to be ready to meet Jesus at his coming. If the consecration is not made, why not do it now? The Lord says. Now, and it is for our highest interest here and hereafter. Make no delay. Be thorough, and let it be done forever.

M. G.

Bro. A. J. Young writes April 2nd, from California:—

"The churches in Vallejo, San Francisco, and Santa Clara are in good condition as a general thing. We have good meetings here, and Bro. Carpenter reports Vallejo as being blest in that direction; and others who know, report Santa Clara the same. I am more and more convinced that Jesus is at the door. I received a letter from Bro. F., of Sacramento, a few days since. He says the few there are having blessed meetings. He has been out in some new places to speak, where there is an interest."

M. G.

Bro. Batchelor's health is very poor, consequently, he is unable to preach. Pray for him, that he may have special blessings from the Lord.

M. G.

Bro. Geo. W. Wright, Lexington, Mich., writes May 3d:

"The meetings still continue with unabated interest, though not quite so largely attended. Monday, April 24th baptized nineteen; and Monday, May 1st, twenty-one more went forward. The lake was quite rough both times, but the converts went forward heroically. Probably as many more will go forward next week."

For the Iowa Mission Tent. Before acknowledged, $44.50. A. J. Mears, Greenfield, Adair Co., Iowa, $5. W. A. Pryor, Greenfield, $5. Eber Dunham, New Hartford, Iowa, $1. Joseph Ingalls, $5. W. T. Sherman, $5. L. C. Boynton, Boston (pd.), $2. H. B. Sevey, Mt. Vernon, Me., $10. Total, $67.50.

Who will help in this enterprise, to put a good tent into the field to save men?—not to build up any one special sect or party, but to do good? We trust that a number last year received the truth, and will go forth to proclaim it to others. There is one graduate of a college who has been made to rejoice in the light, and will ably defend it. This one case of glorious triumph of the truth well pays the expense and trouble that there is connected with a tent. We have come to a time when to build up parties and plan for a long time to come will no. do. The gospel of peace and salvation must be preached. Men must be warned in the highways and hedges. Who will do their part? Please let us hear soon. Send us a card.

One pound of gold may be drawn into a beautiful wire that would extend around the world. So one good deed may be felt through all time, and even extend its consequences into eternity. Though done in the first flush of youth, it may gild the last hours of a long life, and form the only bright spot in it.

THE TRACT FUND.

The Advent Christian Publication Society, at a meeting on Springfield camp-ground, August 11th, 1875, voted to raise Two Thousand Dollars for the free distribution of Tracts the ensuing year; and they invite the help and co-operation of all lovers of the Lord and of his truth, in the furtherance of the good cause. The times are ominous of coming events, and admonish us to diligence in the Master's work. The Lord is at the door, and what we do must be done quickly. Let the contributions be prompt, hearty, and liberal. The Lord will reward the liberal giver.

From Sr. M. Trask.

Dear Brn. and Sisters:—I feel very much like meeting you all this morning in a grand love-feast, to hear you tell of the goodness of God to you, and to hear if the holy fire is burning brightly upon the altar of your hearts. O what a grand and glorious work Jesus completed when he sent the Comforter—the Holy Spirit—into the world to help our infirmities. We are great sinners, for he is a great Savior. He can save us to the uttermost if we will put our case in his hands. He was never known to lose one. When we put our case in the great Lawgiver's hands, we promised complete subjection to his will. How much territory does that cover? Just this much: we must put away from us anger, wrath, malice, evil communication, envyings, the world, the flesh, and the devil. We must be clean; not sinning and repenting every day, or up and down all the while. How far should we get in a day if we started out in the morning, traveled all day, and when night came we came around just where we started from? Not very far. I am afraid that many professors are doing just so to-day. We are to grow in grace. We are to go on unto perfection; not laying again the foundation of repentance from dead works. We are to leave our A B C, and learn to read; become complete scholars in all the branches of learning.

Some say they cannot live without committing sin; then we never shall get into the kingdom, for none but the pure in heart shall see God. We are admonished to buy wisdom; it is more precious than gold. Wisdom and prudence dwell together, and they find out knowledge. "The fear of the Lord is to hate evil." "Blessed is the man that heareth me, watching daily at my gates." All nature is rejoicing this morning, and we can rejoice if we will throw ourselves, burdens and all, on Jesus.

God will hear your prayer or mine, and answer it too if we live where God can work through us to his glory. I tell you, brethren and sisters, it does not pay to be a half-hearted christian, any more than it pays to get a poor article of goods because it is cheap, promising yourself you will get better goods when that is gone. I go for the pure unadulterated religion of Jesus Christ.

Do you know that if you allow yourselves to get vexed, angry, jealous or envious about any thing or toward any body, that Satan is very much pleased? Spiritual death always follows such Satanic fever; but there is an antidote for these dangerous diseases. Every time you are taken with it apply the blood of Christ, and I am not afraid to assert that a few applications will make a complete cure, especially if you mix a little patience, charity and forbearance together, and take a dose every hour of the day. Three times a day, if possible, and night and morning, let what will occur, take a Spirit bath, on your knees before God; and I will promise you, as long as you follow these directions, you will be strong in the Lord. I bless God I ever tasted of the good word of God, and the powers of the world to come, and I do not mean that Satan shall cheat me out of my crown.

Chicago, Ill.

From Bro. Jas. Campbell.

Dear Brn. and Sisters of the Crisis:—I would like to draw your attention to an incident that happened in this village on the 18th inst. At a conference meeting held in the Congregational church (of which communion I was for six years a member), this question was put: When does a man put on immortality? or was he made immortal?

This question, with others of a similar character, was written on slips of paper and handed to the assembly, who passed them back to the Moderator, the assembly answering them publicly. The minister of the church, who was seated beside the Moderator, said he would answer this question himself, and did it on this wise: he said that "man does not put on immortality, but was made immortal, and remains so." He cited no portion of Scripture to prove the soundness of his judgment; it was merely a matter of opinion, and as such received by the congregation.

As if in direct approval to the above decision the congregation immediately arose and sang the following hymn—

"A charge to keep I have,
A God to glorify,
A never-dying soul to save,
And fit it for the sky."

Now I cannot in any part of the Bible find a single word or sentence that confirms these sentiments, but on the contrary I find it most explicitly written that "the soul that sinneth, it shall die." Ezek. 18: 4. To meet appears clear that a very wide discrepancy exists between the ministry of to-day and that of Paul, who in his first epistle to the Corinthians, 15th chapter, verses 53–55, says—"For this corruptible must put on incorruption, and this mortal must put on immortality. So when this corruptible shall have put on incorruption, and this mortal shall have put on immortality, then shall be brought to pass the saying that is written, Death is swallowed up in victory. O death, where is thy sting? O grave, where is the victory?"

Therefore, taking the Scriptures for my guide, I believe that it is at the resurrection and then only I shall put on immortality.

It is now about twelve months since the pure light of apostolic truth dawned upon me, and I enjoy "that hope that maketh not ashamed"; an unfeigned belief in Christ as our Savior; the hope that John speaks of in ch. 3, v. 3—"And every man that hath this hope in him purifieth himself, even as he is pure."

Both myself and wife were baptized at your Springfield Campmeeting last year, and I am glad to say have since received great spiritual blessings, and are still striving for more light and knowledge of the Scriptures, pressing "onward toward the mark of our high calling of God in Christ Jesus," whose second coming we fervently pray for, and believe is close at hand. Then Rachel's children shall come again from the land of the enemy. Brethren and sisters in the Lord, let us pray without ceasing, "For yet a little while, and he that shall come will come, and will not tarry."

Chicopee Falls, Mass., April 27th.

From Bro. Wm. H. Huls.

Dear Readers of the Crisis:—Perhaps there are some who would love to hear from Rockbridge. I am truly glad to say the Lord has been with us in reviving his work. The church has been wonderfully revived, and sinners converted. There seems to be more of a spirit of union than we have ever had before. Prejudice has given way, and the love of God and the interest of saving poor sinners has taken its place with the majority of christians. We have our prayer-meetings every Sabbath at half-past two o'clock, so that the other two churches of this place can unite. We have excellent meetings. The Spirit of the Lord has been with us in mighty power; more this year than ever before.

I believe the greatest means of building up the cause of Christ and promoting God's blessed truth is to be led and governed by the Spirit of Christ, and to unite with others as much as possible who are governed by the same Spirit. Brn. S. P. Whitney of W. Virginia, and D. T. Call of Rochester, O., have preached the Word. They worked well together. One came about one hundred and thirty miles north, and the other about the same distance south. They were both filled with the Spirit of their Master, and in great earnest in saving sinners. It was said by numbers of other denominations that it was the best meeting we have ever had at this place.

Rockbridge, O.

From Eld. R. Deering.

Dear Brn.:—I am more and more interested in the great theme of your paper, and am unwilling to be without it. It appears to me that the "signs" are not only increasing in number, but also in rapidity of succession. Wonders, so to speak, follow each other in such rapid succession that one can hardly keep pace with them. But I will not remark further to those so much better acquainted with such matters than I am, but simply say I am glad to have a paper that keeps me advised of these things. It reminds me that my blessed Master is near, and revives my faith, and love, and hope. I am glad, too, that you speak out on that dearest and sweetest of gospel privileges, the blessing of perfect love, or holiness of heart. It is some years since my adorable Lord, by his Holy Spirit, penetrated my poor heart with a sense of my inward corruption, and gave me to groan after a clean heart. And thanks to his holy name, I did not groan in vain. From an inward consciousness I can say, "His blood can make the foulest clean." Yes, he can make the heart a fit habitation of God by the Spirit. With best wishes and prayers, I am yours in the blessed hope.

Louisville, Ky.

From Bro. D. E. Lyon.

Dear Brn.:—I see in last week's Crisis one of my letters written while in Ohio to one of the brethren. I wish to say a word further (as some may wish to write to me, and I invite correspondence). My home and address is at Mt. Pleasant, Mich., where all letters to me should be sent.

While in Ohio, on a visit to the home of my childhood, I attended the Nevada Conference in Jan. last, which resulted in great good to many, including myself. Since that date I have enjoyed some of the richest blessings, and encountered some of the sweetest conflicts in my experience. My trust is still in the living God, and my faith unshaken in his promises. Never before have I had so little confidence in my own strength, or such a willingness to trust all to the Lord. Relying on my own strength, I am in every conflict defeated; trusting all to Jesus, I am through him every time successful and victorious. Will you continue to hold me up at a throne of grace, for I am almost isolated from human association, that completely sympathizes, there being none of our faith in this vicinity. Dear Brn., write to me, and thus encourage and strengthen, for I need all the help I can get. I hope to meet you all soon "over there" in "the beautiful home."

Mt. Pleasant, Mich., May 6th, 1876.

In having nothing, I have all things, because I have Christ. Having, therefore, all things in him, I seek no other reward, for he is the universal reward.

FOREIGN NEWS.

IMPORTANT NEWS.—A Berlin telegram to the News states that a tremendous pressure has been brought to bear on the Conference there in favor of Russian armed intervention and immediately against Constantinople.

The London Times, reviewing the proceedings at the Conference, says: The announcement of a complete agreement between the three imperial powers is satisfactory, but as it appears all plans of positive action are rejected, and that the powers are about to tender good advice again to the Sultan and insurgents, we think it would be premature to thank the Chancellors for a settlement of the Eastern question.

Russia's real design is clearly seen in its effort to get the consent of the Great Powers to its armed intervention, "immediately against Constantinople." J. C.

SPAIN.

MADRID, May 3. In Congress to-day the debate on the new Constitution was continued. Senor Alvarez opposed the toleration clause, and declared that the monarchy was lost if religious unity was not maintained.

Prime Minister Canovas del Castillo in reply pointed out that Spain possessed colonies in America, Africa and Asia, and had relations with the whole world. It would be impossible for her to keep these colonies and maintain these relations if the government adopted an irreconcilable Ultramontane attitude.

Congress to-day by a vote of 226 to 39 rejected the amendments proposed by the Moderator against the religious toleration clause of the Constitution.

LONDON, May 9. A special from Athens to the Times reports that the Bulgarian insurrection near Philippopolis threatens to become serious. The Porte is greatly alarmed, and is sending forward all disposable forces by daily and nightly trains on the Adrianople Railway. The movement has been long preconcerted by Servian agitators. At first it was considered unimportant, but has spread rapidly, and the numbers of insurgents are variously estimated at from one thousand to ten thousand.

A dispatch from Constantinople asserts that the Bulgarian rioters have fled to the mountains, and cordons of troops have been established to prevent the movement spreading. Advices received at Paris, however, represent that the postal and telegraphic communication between Constantinople and Sophia is interrupted by the insurrection.

The Porte has sent by telegraph the following account of the disturbance in Salonica to the Ottoman Embassador at London:

The convert to Mohammedanism arrived at Salonica by railway. The Mohammedans proceeded to conduct her, according to custom, to the residence of the Governor General, when about one hundred and fifty persons, whom the Consul of the United States had assembled, rushed at the convert, tore off her veil and mantle and carried her by force to the house of a Christian.

The excited Mussulmans proceeded to the Governor's residence and insisted that the convert be brought thither. The Governor hearing that the German and French Consuls had entered the Mosque, which was invaded by a crowd, went there to induce the Consuls to withdraw and to calm the people. All his efforts were useless. The populace wrenched the bars from the grating, fell upon the consuls and struck them down in spite of the efforts of the Governor to shield them with his own person. The troops ultimately dispersed the people. The Governor of Salonica telegraphs that order has been restored and the guilty parties have been arrested.

May 12. The Russian telegraphic agency reports that the Salonica affair has caused a panic throughout Turkey. The foreign embassadors at Constantinople have resolved to meet every day to consider the state of affairs.

Upon later intelligence the embassadors have agreed to ask their respective Governments to send additional men-of-war to Constantinople. The Ruski Mir says the Porte is hastening preparations against Montenegro. Twenty fresh battalions have arrived at Scutari and five at Artvari.

VIENNA, May 2. Advices from Bulgaria report that the insurrection is rapidly extending and the insurgents are burning Turkish villages.

DOMESTIC NEWS.

New York, May 9. Dispatches from Pottsville, Penn., state that there was intense excitement there yesterday, occasioned by the evidence of a detective, who testified that the Molly Maguires, of which he had become a member, were a branch of the ancient order of Hibernians, with test oaths binding them to murder any person obnoxious to their society.

A murder of any outsider was made the occasion of promotion of the murderer. None but Catholic Irishmen can be members. The detective swore that Patrick Collins, a county commissioner, is master of one division of Mollie Maguires in Palo Alto.

President Gowen of the Reading Railroad testified that Collins had secreted the murderers and done other things for which he would soon be called to account. The Mollies have signs, grips, and passwords. The testimony created consternation among the members who were spectators in Court.

Mississippi. A shocking fight occurred between the whites and blacks. Seventeen blacks and three whites were killed.

Notices.

At a meeting of the Board of Managers of the Second Advent Chrtstian Association, held April 11th, it was voted that the Annual Meeting of the Association for this year be held in Chelsea, Mass., Aug. 23d, at 2 P. M. (the week between the Springfield and Alton Bay Campmeetings). Full notice hereafter. C. E. BARNES.

The Beebe Plain Adv. Campmeeting.

The first annual session of this campmeeting will be held at Beebe Plain, P. Q., at the Stanstead Junction of the Passumpsic R. R., commencing Saturday, June 24th, and holding over two Sabbaths. The grove is a beautiful one, unsurpassed for campmeeting purposes; a real leafy cathedral. The ground is smooth and dry, and the trees large, spreading rock-maples. The location is convenient of access, the cars leaving the people at the grounds, on a platform built by the railroad company on purpose for our accommodation.

There will be good board provided for all who wish it on the European plan, or each having what of plain substantial food he wishes, and paying only for what he has. We shall also make the best possible provision for lodging all who come unprovided for. Stabling and feed will be provided for horses; 25 cts. for hay and oats, or half that price for either, and 75 cts. a day.

All the railroads will carry passengers for half fare, or fare one way. All along the line of the Passumpsic and South Eastern railroads, passengers will purchase the regular tickets to Stanstead Junction, and receive on the ground, of the Secretary, free return passes.

On the line of the Central Vt. and Montpelier and Wells River Roads fare is also reduced. Inquire always if tickets are sold to STANSTEAD JUNCTION; if not, purchase tickets to points intercepting with the Passumpsic Road, and then purchase again to Stanstead Junction. Purchase the regular tickets, and receive free return passes on the Camp Ground. Fare is reduced one half as far south as Concord, N. H., by the B. C. & M. Road, and as far as Vernon, Vt., on the Central Vt. Passengers below White River Junction on the Central Vt., purchase tickets through to Stanstead Junction via the Conn. and Passumpsic Roads. Those near St. Albans, purchase to West Farnham, then to Stanstead Junction. Those on the Montpelier and Wells River Roads, purchase to Wells River, then to the Junction. Those on the Shefford and Shambly Road, purchase first to West Farnham, then to the Junction.

On the line of the Grand Trunk Railway, east of Montreal, and on the International, Quebec Central, and Boston, Concord and Montreal Rail Roads, purchase Campmeeting tickets for Stanstead Junction, and receive through tickets for fare one way; good to return on, and subject only to be countersigned by the Secretary.

Arrangements will be made with other local Roads, if persons living on the lines of such, who desire to attend the campmeeting, will inform the Secretary of the fact at Richmond, P. Q. All tickets will be good from June 14th to July 5th inclusive, so as to give all who build tents the opportunity of doing so.

Be careful always in changing cars to see that baggage is re-checked.

We have made arrangements for procuring lumber, so that we can furnish it to brethren desiring to build tents, for a lower price than it can be bought of lumber merchants in the immediate vicinity, as we have it brought us by the Passumpsic R. R. Co. free of transportation; and we furnish it to those desiring to build at cost. Lots are also free, and every facility will be offered to assist all, who wish to build, to put up tents as cheaply as possible; and we hope many will avail themselves of their privilege of doing so.

All persons who purchase the through tickets will change cars as follows, when they come from points beyond the limits of the Passumpsic R. R. Those who purchase them in Montreal will call for them via St. John, and take the train via the South Eastern R. R.; and all who purchase them east of Montreal, on the Grand Trunk R. R., will call for them via Sherbrook, and change cars at Sherbrook or Lenoxville.

Those coming by the Boston, Concord and Montreal R. R., go via Wells River, and change there for the Passumpsic cars. Call always for Campmeeting tickets.

We expect prominent preaching brethren from abroad will be present. We anticipate the presence of Elds. J. Couch, Wm. H. Mitchell, E. A. Stockman, I. C. Wellcome and others. We hope for a large gathering of the brethren and sisters to this great feast of truth, to hear the Word from his servants, and we hope all will pray for God's special blessing on the meeting, and come in these last moments of time to labor for union in Christ, and to save the perishing.

M. A. Potter, President; R. W. Warner, Vice President; C. L. Percival, Treasurer; L. C. McKinstry, Secretary. Lewis Bergoine, John Elliott and John H. Carbee, Campmeeting Committee.

Alton Bay Campmeeting.

The Alton Bay Campmeeting is appointed to commence August 26th. J. COUCH.

CONFERENCE.—The Lord willing, the next semiannual session of the A. C. Conference of Northern Pa. and Southern N. Y., will be held with the church at Turner Creek, Bingham, Potter county, Pa., commencing Friday evening, June 2nd, 1876, and hold over the following Sunday. Those coming by rail, stop at Genesee Station, on Erie railway, Western division, then to Turner Creek. Stop at Bro. Tracy's, on stage road. Those coming by their own conveyance, inquire for deacon Amos Johnson. We hope that all will make a special effort to attend this meeting. Come, friends of truth, let us make a grand rally, and let us show to the world that we mean what we say. Let us make such a stir among the dry bones of ignorance and superstition, that sinners and fallen angels will tremble. Come filled with the Spirit of Jesus, and then our influence will be felt. Now is the time for action; soon it will be too late.

E. C. COWLES, President.
H. ZIEGENFUSS, Secretary.

Conference.

The Washington Co. Quarterly Conference of Advent Christians is hereby called to meet on Friday evening, June 2nd, 1876, with the church at Bell school-house, and hold over Sunday. On account of stormy weather and a bad state of roads, there was no session held for the election of officers on March 11th, as per call. It is hoped that each church will send delegates with credentials signed by Elder and Clerk, and that all of "like precious faith" will lay to a helping hand to save the perishing. The Bridegroom is soon coming. Let us be ready. The business session will be Saturday, June 3d, at 2 o'clock P. M. Officers will be elected by ballot. The business of first Quarterly Conference will follow the election of officers.

J. W. HAYWORTH, President.

[No State given.]

New York State Conference.

The annual meeting of the N. Y. State Advent Christian Conference will be held with the church at Springwater, Livingston Co., commencing on Thursday evening, June 8th, and continue over the following Sabbath. Springwater is on the New York and Erie R. R., about fifty miles south from Rochester. We trust every minister in the Conference will be present at the annual gathering, and that they will encourage the churches to send their full number of delegates and quarterly collections to help carry forward the cause of truth. Let every church where there is no minister located, and every church that wishes occasional or regular preaching, send delegates. If you cannot send Brn. as delegates, send sisters.

Brn. and Srs. scattered abroad, who want a tent or grove meeting in your vicinity, come to this annual meeting, and tell what you want, and what you can do to support one. Our Savior will soon appear, and our work of saving the perishing will soon be past, and our efforts should be increased and untiring until he comes. We hope to see many of the dear saints at this feast, who have not been able to meet with us for a long time. Come praying, in the Spirit, to the first meeting. Come all. Homes will be provided for all who come. Remember the time, delegates, and collections.

M. R. MILES, Pres.
JAS. E. WELLS, Sec.

Maine Annual Conference.

The Maine A. C. Annual Conference will convene at Bangor (in the Hall occupied as a place of worship by the Advent church), Tuesday evening, at seven o'clock, June 13th, and continue several days. It is very desirable that every minister in the State, who is in sympathy with this Conference, should attend, also delegates from every church and society. Each church is allowed one delegate, and one delegate to every ten members additional above twenty-five. There will be important business brought before the Conference for action; such as affects the special interest of the Conference, the mission and tract work, the ministry, and all the churches of our State. Come all.

GEO. HUMPHREY, Pres.
I. C. WELLCOME, Sec.

NOTICE.—A meeting is to be held every Sunday at Turner, Me., Chase's Mills school-house. When there is no preaching, we shall have a prayer meeting at three o'clock in the afternoon. A general invitation is extended to the brethren and sisters abroad to come and labor for the perishing.

For the brethren, C. S. TIRRELL.

CONFERENCE.—The Annual R. I. and East Ct. A. C. Conference, at its March session, voted to hold an adjourned session with the A. C. Church at Danielsonville, Ct., commencing Tuesday, June 6th, 1876, and hold three days. Preachers and churches are requested to represent themselves at this meeting, as business of importance will come before it; prominent among which will be the new Constitution. The delegates appointed to attend the Annual Meeting at Providence, R. I., are the only legal delegates to this adjourned meeting. Let every church send the same delegates that were sent in March to Providence, R. I.

N. A. ANGELL, Conference Clerk.

NOTICE.—Hereafter there will be regular meetings at the Pine Ground Advent Chapel in North Chichester, N. H., three times on Sundays, and Wednesday and Saturday evenings. All those wishing to preach will correspond with E. Ordway, North Chichester, N. H.

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN:—There are no vacancies in the Desk of the Scitico church for "UNRECOMMENDED STRANGERS." This is my answer to past, present, and all future applicants, during my pastorate. In all kindness, greeting.

H. C. SMITH.

NOTICE.—There having been no meetings in Dover for quite a number of months, and we, feeling that the cause has been lowered, and that it is our duty to raise the banner again, have organized and started meetings. Our meetings will be called The First Advent Christian meeting in Dover, N. H., and we want good brethren that will not make division to come and preach the word. For the church, H. S. PINKHAM.

NOTICE.—There will be a conference in Indian River, Me., to commence June 21st, and continue over the Sabbath. We expect to see a good representation of Jesus' friends in this locality. Come all who can. Ministering brethren from abroad are invited to come and help us make this one of the best meetings for the salvation of the lost and perishing. For the church, M. W. CORLISS.

Notice.—Providence permitting, we propose another gathering at the grove of Bro. J. F. Emerson, West Levant, Me., the first, second, third and fourth days of July next. All are invited, who love to meet in the name of the Lord, and so much the more, as they see the day approaching. We have need to gird up anew, to fortify our powers mightily, by giving heed to the sure word of prophecy, and exhorting one another to a waiting readiness for the return of the Master. It is expected that Bro. J. G. Smith, of Farmington, N. H., will be present to assist in gospel labor, as also Bro. F. A. Baker, with other brethren in the ministry. ISRAEL DAMMON.

VERMONT CONFERENCE.—The next session of the Vermont Quarterly Conference, will be holden at Hardwick, commencing June 6th, and hold as long as God will bless it. Let Vermonters rally for God, and come to this meeting. Drop your work then, and come to work for and with God. He'll pay you ten-fold. A. A. HOYT, for Com.

QUARTERLY CONFERENCE.—The third meeting of the N. H. Adv. Chris. Quar. Conference will be held with the church in Whitefield, N. H., commencing Wednesday, June 14th, at 7 o'clock P. M., and hold over Sunday the 18th. May there be a general gathering in the name of the Lord. We expect Bro. A. Ross, and hope Bro. Couch will attend as usual.

N. WHEELER,
D. W. DAVIS, Com.
J. W. WHITE,

Wisconsin Campmeeting.

Our State Campmeeting will be held at Lavalle, Sauk Co., beginning Saturday, June 3d, holding over two Sundays. Lavalle is on a branch of the Northwestern R. R., running from Madison to Elroy, Sparta, etc. The meeting will be held about half a mile south of the Lavalle depot.

Having located the meeting so far north this year, we trust friends in that part of the State will specially appreciate the move, and show their appreciation by a large attendance. We hope for an excellent meeting, and look for great results. Let ministers as well as lay members come early, and come to work with their might.

O. THOMAS,
F. J. GROAT, Com.
WM. SHELDON,

N. B.—Let all put up tents for the first Saturday who possibly can.

York Co., Attention!

The next Quarterly Session of our County Conference is to be held at Bar Mills, Me., commencing Thursday, June 1st, 1876, at 2 o'clock P. M. Will our preachers and churches take immediate steps towards attending this session, or having themselves reported by letter? Our continued existence as a Conference may depend upon the course you take in this matter. Ample provisions will be made for all who attend. Strangers in the place may find a good home by inquiring for Simon J. Locke. C. H. SWEET, Secretary.

VERMONT TENT.—Those who wish the Vermont Tent pitched in their vicinity this year will please inform me at once, so we can arrange for preaching, etc. Those who can help to carry forward the work will please correspond with me now. Address me at Waterbury, Vt.

A. A. HOYT.

Nova Scotia Annual Conference.

The Nova Scotia Advent Christian Conference will be held at Bear River, commencing on Thursday, June 15th. We hope not only to see the faces and hear the voices of old friends, but extend a cordial invitation to all who may either personally or publicly feel interested in the grace to be brought unto us at the revelation of Jesus Christ. J. M. TOZIER.

NOTICE.—The subscriber having changed his place of residence from East Penfield to Seneca Falls, N. Y., is at liberty to supply (occasionally) any church in Central New York that may desire his services. WM. INGMIRE.

Maine Special Notice.

Please attend to this at once. The Secretary, Deacon, or Elder, of each Second Advent Church in Maine should give the number of members in their respective churches, by postal card or letter, at once, to the Secretary of the Maine A. C. Conference, that we may know how many delegates we are entitled to in the S. A. C. Association, chosen at our Annual Conference in June next. Address I. C. WELLCOME, Sec., Yarmouth, Me.

NOTICE.—To the Brethren of Iowa Christian Conference:—You are all aware that we are nearing the time for Tent Meetings. The Iowa Mission Tent is not fit to put into the field this season. There is but about one fourth promised that is needed to put into the field a 50×80 tent, which we much need. Camp and Tent Meetings very much depend on your decision. There are many who are amply able to help if this matter was laid before them. I cannot go all around and see you; I should spend more time than is needed to get the tent I have contracted for. Will some one lend a helping hand, and do it promptly? Tent work must stop if this fails, and the blood of souls must be found in some one's garments. I do not want it to be mine. Come, Brn., wake up, and let me hear promptly from any State of all who wish to help the cause in Iowa, that I may know what to do. P. S. W. DEYO, Charles City, Iowa.

NOTICE.—The question of time for the Annual Session of the Vt. Conference has been discussed, and most seem to think September the best time. And as it has been ruled at two Conferences not to have it holden at the time of campmeeting, we think to have campmeeting commence perhaps the last Tuesday in August, or the first Tuesday in September, and close the next week Wednesday A. M.; and the Conference session commence Wednesday P. M., and hold till Saturday A. M., with preaching evenings. Those interested will please communicate to me their views of the plan, at Waterbury, Vt. A. A. HOYT, for Com.

THE LAKE VIEW CAMPMEETING, Magog, P. Q., Canada, will be held, as per vote of Conference, immediately after the Alton Bay meeting. Time hereafter definitely given. Let those who have promised to build cottages be in time with their preparations. Lots free, and all welcome.

C. P. DOW, for the Committee.

NOTICE.—Bro. Charles W. Helme is to take charge of the meetings at North Abington, Mass. Brethren wishing to come to Abington to preach will please correspond either with Bro. C. W. Helme or with Henry M. McPherson, Clerk.

NOTICE.—By an urgent request of the churches of Rockland and St. George, Me., to become their pastor, I preach one half the time at each place. First and third Sunday at Rockland, second and fourth at St. George. H. S. MITCHELL.

THE Pittsfield, Me., Campmeeting will commence Sunday, Aug. 27th. O. S. FRENCH, Sec.

THE Mechanic Falls Campmeeting will commence Saturday, Sept. 2d.

R. R. YORK, for the Committee.

NOTICE.—Bro. A. Damon's labors having closed with the church at Bridgewater, Vt., those wishing to preach for us will please correspond with J. Y. Briggs instead of J. T. Briggs, as formerly published in Crisis. J. Y. BRIGGS, Sec.

Tent for Sale.

A Tent fifty feet in diameter, nearly new, having been pitched only six times, will be sold for the very low price of $150.00.

S. G. LOW, Highlandville, Mass.

ANY person wishing to preach for the Second Advent Church in Worcester, Mass., are requested to correspond with some one of the preaching committee before sending their appointments.

E. G. Higgins, Dr. H. W. Buxton, W. M. Hall, Committee. N. J. STREETER, Clerk.

ALL brethren wishing to preach to the A. C. Church in Keene, N. H., will please correspond with A. A. Stiles or Geo. W. Elliott. In behalf fo the church, A. A. Stiles, G. W. Elliott, G. W. Spalding, H. H. Darling.

THOSE wishing to correspond with the church in Portsmouth, N. H., will please address the following committee: J. H. Berry, J. Shannon, J. Downing, J. B. Trefethen, R. Worster.

ALL corresponding with the Adv. Chris. Church in Charlton, Mass., please direct to Thomas F. Dockham, Charlton, Mass., or J. O. Cortis, Oxford, Mass., preaching committee.

CHAS. W. DOCKHAM, Clerk.

NOTICE.—The church in Wakefield, Mass., have chosen Bro. B. Finney their corresponding Secretary, and the preaching brethren who desire to visit the church will please correspond with him. For the Brethren, C. GOODRICH.

ALL those wishing to preach at Eest Weymouth, Mass,, will please correspond with Alonzo Manuel, before sending appointments.

NOTICE.—The office of the Biblical Messenger is now removed to Exeter, N. H. Eld. W. C. Stewart will have charge of the correspondence. All communications in general should be addressed to the Biblical Messenger, Exeter, N. H. Articles for publication may be addressed to me at Waterbury, Vt., where my private address will be for the present; and I shall have charge of preparing the matter for the paper.

A. A. HOYT.

NOTICE.—Preaching brethren wishing to preach for the First Christian Advent meeting in Dover, N. H., will please correspond with the following committee, JOHN W. FELKER, H. S. PINKHAM.

Notice.

"UNION IN CHRIST" is the title of a neat illustrated Monthly, devoted to Christian Union and evangelistic work. Its editorial staff are clergymen of ability in different denominations. It will be furnished a year to our readers when remitting to this office, renewals or sending new subscribers, by enclosing 30 cents extra for "Union in Christ." Regular terms 60 cents a year; 25 cts. to ministers of the gospel and to agents. Sent on trial three months free with terms to agents. Address H. A. KING, 37 Park Row, New York City.

Wanted

To purchase, a small house on Springfield Camp ground,—one in the front circle preferred. Any one having one for sale will please correspond (stating the price) with J. HEMENWAY, Westfield, Mass.

Appointments.

☞ APPOINTMENTS MUST BE RECEIVED AS EARLY AS TUESDAY MORNING (as our paper goes to press about noon) to insure insertion for the coming week.

☞ The following RESOLUTION was passed at the late meeting of the A. C. P. Society:—

"RESOLVED, That no appointments be published in the CRISIS henceforth for persons unknown to the Editorial Board (by which is understood the Editors, Editorial Committee, and Business Agent), unless satisfactory reference shall be given."

The Committee appointed by the Adv. Chris. Association, at its last Annual Meeting, to advise with the Editorial Board "in relation to the publication in the World's Crisis of the appointments of men unworthy of recognition as preachers," having attended to the duty assigned them, recommended, and the Editorial Board have adopted, and ordered to be published, the following resolution:—

"RESOLVED, That when the Editorial Board is properly notified by any of our Churches, or Ministers, or responsible persons, by a written allegation that a certain minister, or ministers, lack moral character, that they be instructed to notify such minister, or ministers, of the information received, as a reason for withholding their appointments till after a proper trial and acquittal."

All communications in relation to this matter should be addressed to the Secretary of the Board—GEO. T. ADAMS, Boston, Mass.

THE BIBLE DOCTRINE OF THE SOUL.

An answer to the Question: "Is the Popular Conception of the Soul that of Holy Scripture?"

BY CHAS. L. IVES, M. D.

Professor of the Theory and Practice of Medicine in Yale College.

This is a book of 119 pages, in which the Author discusses the above question in an interesting and able manner,—showing the material nature of, the mortality and destiny of the Soul,—A future immortality to be the special portion of the Righteous,—What the Bible teaches as to the future of the Wicked,—The intermediate state,—The Resurrection,—That of the Righteous and of the Wicked, etc.

The Author claims that the doctrine set forth,—"Honors God, exalts the Bible, insures preaching of future punishment, subverts Universalism and Infidelity, errors of Romanism, of Spiritualism and Swedenborgianism, helps in work of Missions, rightly values the body, brings Christian unity, and promotes personal holiness."

We are much pleased with this work. It is having a wide circulation. We have just received a quantity of the pamphlet edition, and can now fill orders at the following prices: Pamphlet, 25 cts. per copy; $2.25 per dozen by mail; $15.00 per hundred by express. Bound in cloth, 30 cts. per copy by mail; $3.00 per dozen by express.

MY BEAUTIFUL HOME.

BY D. T. TAYLOR.

There is sweet rest for me in the beautiful home
On the banks of the shadowless shore;
Where the tempest-tossed billows of time cease to foam,
And the cold blast of death comes no more.
Beautiful home! soon thy bright bowers I'll roam;
There the clear river flows,
There the tree of life grows
And blooms, in my beautiful home.

There is sweet rest for me with the dear ones of old,
Who have bowed neath the stroke of the foe;
But I'll greet them again in the mansions of gold,
Where their life-crowns forever shall glow.

There is sweet rest for me with my Savior and King,
When he comes in his might from above;
When the hosts of the deathless his triumph shall sing,
And dwell in the light of his love.

There is sweet rest for me, and I sigh to be there;
Lord Jesus, O come, quickly come!
Let the gathering angels thy faithful ones bear
To thyself and the beautiful home.

SOUL-CHEERING.

L. BOUTELL.

To the hearts of all that feel as the apostle did when he said, "My heart's desire, and prayer to God for Israel is, that they might be saved"; or when he said, "I beseech you, brethren, by the mercies of God, that ye present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God, which is your reasonable service." All this kind of readers will be glad to hear good concerning the cause of Christ, the spread of truth, and the conversion of men to God. It will awaken in their very being, as they read, a holy aspiration to strive for higher attainments, a growth in grace and knowledge of the deep things of God. So I venture to give a few dottings of my recent visits with the household of faith.

I visited Abington, Ct., and preached with them on Sunday, April 9th. Here twenty-five years since I used to have good seasons in school-houses, giving the cry, "Behold he cometh!" and a goodly number fell in love with the (to them) welcome message. Time has cut down most of those that responded so heartily, bidding us welcome to their hearts and homes; but we find a few of the Puritan stamp left—"steadfast, unmovable, always abounding in the work of the Lord." Since I was there they have built a new chapel. Bro. Davis is their pastor, and they are in a prosperous condition, united and engaged in the work of "building up on their most holy faith." I had a good day with them, and I thought they had a good time with me. I found the coming of the Lord was still cheering and comforting to them, with a readiness by holy obedience.

Bro. H. Davis was away to recruit, as he is in poor health. May God restore him to this people, for he has been a great blessing to them. I found good homes with Brn. Ingalls and Briggs, and doubt not I should have found more, if I could have staid longer.

I have also, in exchange with Bro. Phetteplace, been to Lowell and spent Sunday, the 23d of April. Here, many years since, I used to meet the disciples that were so confident they should soon set their immortal feet on the new earth, but were disappointed. Many changes have overtaken them, and many have "fallen asleep"; but I am thankful to be able to say that there are a few faithful ones of "like precious faith" left, and they have apparently a healthy state of things among them. They worship in a hall large enough to seat a large congregation; but it would be a blessing to them if they could build a modest chapel for the poor with poor clothing to come to, and put out a sign—"Everybody's meeting." They are prospering under their pastor, Bro. P. They have additions to the church and their graces. In the evening there was a large congregation and specially interesting, for they were mostly young. They have been blest with some revival, which has cheered them exceedingly, and I pray God they may have more of the thorough work of God that shall reach more souls and bring them to Christ. It did me good to greet the old pilgrims who on hearing the voice of the seventh angel saying, "Sound an alarm in my holy mountain, were all ready to respond with heart and hand, "The day of the Lord cometh."

I found a welcome home with Bro. Pickering and family, and they are looking for a better country, that is an heavenly. My visit at Lowell was pleasant, and I could but hope it might be profitable to the flock of God.

My last Sunday was with the Advent church in Danielsonville, Ct. Here they had a wonderful work of God the past winter, under the labors of Sr. Crumb and others; some of the hardest cases, speaking after the manner of men, and from what I could judge by my short time with them. I should say their conversion was radical, and their reformation real, so they may stand in Christ through the trials and perils of the last days. We had Bible reading in the forenoon, and it was soon evident that they loved the blessed Bible, and a hearty assent to the comments while reading showed plainly they were taught by the Holy Spirit, and understood well what it is to put off the old man and put on the new, created in righteousness and true holiness. Afternoon and evening were precious seasons that I shall not easily forget. I did thank the good Lord for so miraculously raising me to health, so I could once more preach the living truth to these lovers of Jesus and his soon appearing. It was blessed to clasp the hand of old saints, with tears of joy at a reunion even here; but to see a large congregation, seemingly all interested, open to conviction, and ready to do, is more blessed still. O praise the Lord! it is a good time to work, and our labor is not in vain in the Lord. I left this place with a strong desire for their welfare, and a hope that the tide would continue to rise, so that the hearts of those that have stood through many discouragements might be made more joyful still.

Chelsea, Mass.

A GOOD man on board a steamboat was greatly troubled by a company of card-players seated by a table in the cabin, over which hung the only lamp in the room. They were very profane, as is the custom of card players, and he longed to speak a word that would serve as a check to them. At last he took out his Bible, and drawing near the table, politely requested leave to read by their lamp. The sight of the Bible at once stopped their swearing, and after gambling for about ten minutes in silence, they all arose, put up their cards, and went to bed. What a power in the silent reproof of a good man with a Bible in his hand.

— If God drop not down his assistance, we write with a pen that hath no ink.

THE WORD OF GOD IS TRIED.

There is in this day, says Dr. John Hall, a great tendency to turn things upside down. For example: many ancient nations had the idea of sacrifices. So had the ancient Hebrews, and men say it was by them borrowed from the other nations. Now surely it is more reasonable to say, this custom was instituted by authority; that God gave it to men, and that from the great original form its shattered and distorted fragments were scattered abroad among other nations. The same habit prevails as to the precepts of the Bible. Very similar precepts abound in the religious writings of nations other than the Hebrews, and men say they are alike the work of man. But is it not much more reasonable to believe that God gave these at the first, and that the modified forms are the product of memories and traditions handed down from the original sources? The Koran, the Book of Mormon, and many other religious books are on precisely the same basis; they are receivers of stolen goods. The best things in them are plagiarisms, extracted bodily from the Word of God. There is a very wide-spread story of a serpent which harmed men. This appears in the serpent worship of many lands. Worship among Pagan nations arises from either of two sources. They worship an evil being because they fear him, and by worship they hope to propitiate him and escape harm. They worship a good being on the other hand to secure a continuance of his favor. Serpent worship implies fear, therefore, rather than adoration. The English legend of St. George and the dragon; and the Irish legend of Saint Patrick and the Snakes come from the same source. Because of all this, men have said that the story of the fall, through a serpent's influence, was the same old story in another form. But is it not far more reasonable to say that at some remote period in human history a serpent did do the race great harm, from which time, memories, and hopes, and fears associated with a serpent have gone down from age to age?

All these beliefs must somewhere have a foundation in fact. In 1701, the notorious Captain Kidd was hanged for piracy on the high seas. But why is it that to this day the search for his hidden treasures has not been abandoned? The basis of this searching is the fact that he did hide treasures on Gardner's Island, which were found, and by the Governor of Massachusetts were confiscated to the State. There must be a piece of fact for all these fancies—you must have the sound before you can have the echo. So the traditions of the fall, of the serpent, of grace, of the altar, the sacrifice, and the priesthood are best accounted for by their having first existed in fact. Sacrificial services in all the ages are but the shadows of the great High Priest, and of the one great altar, on which God's sacrifice for sin was made, by which our souls are saved.

It is written: "The word of the Lord is tried." History has tried it, and it has stood the test. Geography has tried it, and place has fitted accurately to place. The science of language has tried it, and it has not been found wanting. Physical science is trying it now, but like the fabled serpent which gnawed the file, so in the end those who attack the Scriptures will be found the only damaged party. Bad men have tried the Bible. Voltaire, Rousseau, Tom Paine, and others have tried it, but where are they now? Good men have tried the Bible; in youth and in old age; in sickness and in health; in business and at home; in life and in death. Lawyers have tried it; statesmen have tried it; soldiers have tried it; society has tried it in its charities, its education, and its laws; the ages have tried it; but it is not worn out; it is not effete; it is ever young and ever old; it is God's book; we need no other; the longer it is tried the more satisfactory it is proved; it is the Word of the Lord, which abideth forever.—The Armory.

FROM J. C. & S. E. SMITH.

To the Scattered Ones in Christ, Greeting. After returning from the Quarterly Conf. in Mo., to dear Bro. Crowell's home, in Pleasanton, Linn Co., we had two more meetings. Bro. Crowell prepared seats for all that came, and the Lord blest in speaking his word. Saturday, March 4th, we set out for Bro. Alfred's, near Mound City, some fifteen miles from Bro. C's home. We found the travelling very bad, yet we reached his home in the afternoon, and then rode some twelve miles more, from place to place, to notify the people of a meeting over the Lord's day. March 5th, the school-house was occupied in the forenoon by a Presbyterian minister, and we attended his meeting, and had notice given of our meeting in the evening. In the afternoon we attended a Methodist meeting. We listened with interest to our Bro's remarks. He gave a good Bible discourse, on the coming of the Lord and the resurrection, and our hearts were greatly cheered. He invited us to take part, and the Lord abundantly blest. Here also we gave out notice of meeting in the evening; by thus doing, we had more out than both meetings in the day time. The Lord opened a door of utterance, and the words found in Dan. 2: 44, were appropriated. We raised the chart, and in the name of the Lord published to them the glad tidings of the speedy coming kingdom. The Lord helped wonderfully in declaring the good news. We had excellent attention, and many expressed a desire to hear more on the subject. A large company came for tracts and papers at the close of the meeting, and some promised by the assisting grace of God they would meet us in the kingdom.

Monday night we left word for another meeting, but during the night it rained, and on Monday it came off very cold, so that we did not have so many out; still we had a goodly number, and the Lord helped again in presenting his word.

Tuesday, March 7th, we continued on our way south; came to a Bro. Brimhall's home, who lives near Mapleton, Bourbon Co. Bro. B. was away teaching, but his dear companion was urgent for us to stop and raise the alarm in their neighborhood. In the afternoon we rode to the school-house, and had word given out for meeting at night, and then carried it to other neighbors and neighborhoods; and in the meantime sister B. sent her son seven miles away to where Bro. B. was teaching, and had him come to the meeting at night. Here we enjoyed a rich feast in the Lord. Bro. B. said at the close, that he could come every night for some time, to such a meeting as that, and that there had been more truth spoken that night, than all the preaching there had ever been in that school-house. It did our souls good to hear Bro. & Sr. B's warm testimonies, and their sweet songs of Zion. Bro. B. tarried at home over night, and in the morning returned to his school, and again came with another brother and family, and returned again after meeting. Our hearts were greatly cheered to meet with this dear Bro. and family, and to enjoy the blessings of a pilgrim's home.

Bro. B. carried notice to his school that we would speak on the evening of the 9th. The night came, and we were there in the name of the Lord, to speak those things that pertain to sound doctrine. A large company gathered for so short a notice. We had freedom in the Lord in presenting his truth, and we trust the word spoken will not return void. The Lord grant that it may prove a savor of life unto life. We found a good home with Bro. Chown and family, who were formerly from N. H. He loves the blessed gospel, and is anxious to see it prosper. Nearly all were anxious for us to remain longer. Some said they would strive to meet us in the kingdom. Some came for tracts, and an interest awakened, I trust, that will last till Jesus comes. 10th, we journeyed fifteen miles further south to Bro. Himes' home, near Marmaton, Bourbon Co., where we had meetings last winter, and saw a few unite in church fellowship. Bro. Hunt was the first to come to this place and sound the alarm. Then we came a few months afterward, and spoke the same things, and saw the Lord give the increase. Paul may plant, Apollos may water, but God gives the increase; and to him belongs all the glory.

When we arrived at Bro. Himes' we found that Bro. Hunt had been having a series of meetings in an adjoining neighborhood, and had appointed one for the next night, 11th, at our old field of labor, near Bro. Clark's. Bro. H. insisted that I should speak, as he was feeling poorly; and from the words of Paul found in Acts 17: 30, 31, we exhorted them to repent, and flee from the wrath to come. We had blessed liberty in presenting the plain word. Bro. Hunt followed with a warm exhortation to make ready for the coming of the Lord. Lord's day came, and we spoke from Paul's "expectation and desire." At night Bro. H. preached a funeral discourse to a full house. Monday night we met again. A large company gathered, and the Lord worked. A number started for the kingdom, and more than twenty promised by grace divine to meet us there.

14th, we journeyed to Memphis, Bourbon Co., distance fifteen miles, to our log home. This is a new town, and where thousands of tons of coal are shipped to different places in the great West. Here we secured the depot for meetings, and on the night of the 16th, we had a good hearing. Continued meetings over Lord's day, 19th, notwithstanding the cold snow storm which we had. Our second night of meeting, the depot was full. The Lord gave great help in showing the good things that he has promised to them that love him; and after speaking, a merchant of the place took advantage of the occasion, and gave a temperance lecture, in short, referring a number of times to the Lord's word which we had presented, and warned them all to take heed to it, and become temperate; then he placed on the stand the pledge for them to sign. Thirty-three put down their names. Some of the hardest cases of the place, and of those, too, who have been in the habit of drinking much. I trust it will be a reform indeed, a complete separation from the world and all its evils, and a turning unto the Lord who will abundantly pardon.

March 21st, we came through Fort Scott to Pleasanton, Linn Co., distance thirty-five miles, through snow drifts and mud all the way. But it was pleasant over head, and my dear companion and little one got along nicely. Jesus is with us, and we do praise him for all things. O how many times he has led; and in going into new places we have seen his salvation made manifest. We can afford to go for Jesus, and pass through all we have to encounter for the kingdom and eternal life.

At Bro. Crowell's precious home we found rest for a few days, while the storms were raging without. On Lord's day we went to hear Elder Kimsy preach a funeral sermon. He gave the Bible "hope," and comforting words to the sorrowing widow. At night we were enabled to proclaim the hour of the Lord's judgment at hand. We had a solemn time, and a number arose and promised to meet us at the right hand of God. When we closed, it was raining hard, and it was very dark, so that I could not see the road. We had to pass a number of bad, gullied places, and one we went into, but did not upset. Bro. Crowell, wife, and another sister were with me. I sprang from the wagon and held the rains, while the horses were springing to get away. We came out all right however, and arrived at Bro. C's. home safe. March 29th, we took leave of dear Bro. C. and family, leaving him sick with a slight attack of pneumonia, and came on our way to Osage Co., to our Bro's home. Two days we rode through mud nearly every step of the way. We had to ford a number of streams which were very high, once the water almost came into our wagon, but the Lord directed, and we arrived at our uncle's, at Plymouth, on the night of the 30th, just before another heavy storm set in.

Quarterly Conference was appointed at this place, for the 1st of April; and notwithstanding the very muddy and rainy weather, Brn. Ewbank's and Burges came from Ottumwa, and we had a good season in the Lord. April 8th, we spoke to a large congregation at the "Try School House," in our Bro's vicinity, and in the evening, twelve miles away to Melvern, where the Lord is blessing his children, and Sr. Nobbit is doing a gospel work in lending the Crisis, and tracts.

Since our return yesterday, we received the sad news of our dear Bro. Crowell's death. He went down fully ripe for the great harvest. We shall miss him very much. He has acted nobly for the cause of truth in this great State. His work has been well done, and he rests for a little season in the cold, cold ground, till Jesus the Life Giver calls him forth. O who will fill his place in the great work of saving men in this State. The Lord grant abundance of grace to his dear companion and children, that they may bear up under this deep stroke of affliction. The Lord grant that the children may be ready to meet their kind father in the kingdom of God.

We have received quite a supply of tracts from the A. C. M. Society, for which we are thankful. We also thank Bro. Busch of Philadelphia, for sending so many Nos. of Crisis and other papers. We can assure the Board, and all who have sent these tracts and papers that they will do a vast amount of good. And may others invest in this good work for the Master, and gain a hundred fold here, and in the world to come, eternal life.

As our next Annual Conf. is drawing nigh, I hope all interested will try to be there, and come to work for Jesus. What is done must be done quickly. I pray the Lord to stir many up to activity, and may each have their work done, and well done, that they may enter into the joy of our Lord.

Pray for us, Brn. and Srs., that while we labor we may have sheaves for our hire, and meet with you all around the throne of God, when Jesus comes to take his Bride to himself. Peace and love be with you all, Amen. From your Bro. & Sr. in Christ.

SOMETHING SURE.

H. P.

"And the voice said, cry. And he said, What shall I cry? All flesh is grass, and all the goodliness thereof is as the flower of the field.... The grass withereth, the flower fadeth; but the word of our God shall stand forever."

In this time of treachery and evil of all kinds, when men in the most responsible positions are betraying their trust, when wickedness most heinous is being unearthed in the highest places, and those who have been regarded as the brightest lights in the moral sky, are going out in darkness; and those once esteemed good and pure are falling, it needs no inspiration to believe that all flesh is grass; but do we believe as readily, and fully, that "the word of our God shall stand forever?" With the long array of fraud, embezzlement, confiscation, intrigue, and political scheming, and broken vows among those who claim to be respectable, and are striving to be leaders in society, the conviction is settling down all through us that we can put no faith in man. "Put not your trust in man, whose breath is in his nostrils." Professed friends often deceive us; those we trusted most sometimes prove our worst enemies; and perhaps our most intimate associates, those who walked with us to the house of God, destroy our happiness in this world by their double dealing. Surely, "all flesh is grass, and their goodness is as the morning dew.

But while we are growing so sceptical in regard to man s faithfulness, and so ready to believe one portion of Scripture, let us not disbelieve the rest. The same prophet who pronounced all flesh grass, declared, with exultation, and triumph, and gratitude ringing in the message, that "The word of our God shall stand forever." Here, then, is something we can believe; something to trust in—a refuge from the storms and dire commotion of a distracted and desperately wicked world. The word of God abideth forever! God has made many blessed promises to the children of men who trust in him. We cannot enumerate them here; they are written in "the Book." Those promises are his Word; and they hold good, now and forever. No broken pledges in all our Father's dealing with his children, and his notes never get outlawed. They were witnessed by the Holy Spirit, and when we take God at his word and trust him fully, we have the witness in our hearts that his promises are all sure, yea and amen, forever.

What a resting place for the weary soul! How blessed to escape from the bottomless quagmire of this corrupt world, and plant our feet on the solid Rock. It is like being rescued from the treacherous quicksands, and set down on the firm green turf; like coming from the damp chilling shadows of the charnel house, into the warm, bright, sunlight.

Children, do you believe God's word? You start at the question and say, why yes, of course. But do you believe all his promises down deep in your hearts, and rest upon them? If so, happy are ye.

"Though troubles assail, and dangers affright;
Though friends should all fail, and foes all unite;
There is one thing secures us, whatever betide,
The promise assures us the Lord will provide."

And do you believe the promises of the Son? Christ has said, "Lo, I am with you always." You have good company on your pilgrimage; do you believe it: He has promised to come and take his weary children home. Will he come? O yes! though he seems to tarry a little, wait patiently and hopefully. "Lo, I come quickly and my reward is with me." He has promised to wipe away your tears; stamp you with his likeness, and give you glory, honor, eternal life, and a blissful home with Him in his everlasting kingdom. Throw all doubts to the winds. "The word of our God shall stand forever."

DEATH.

A. G. GORDON.

Jesus said, "And whosoever liveth and believeth in me shall never die." John 11: 26. This is the bread which cometh down from heaven; that a man may eat thereof and not die." John 6: 50. This is that bread which came down from heaven; not as your fathers did eat manna and are dead: he that eateth of this bread shall live forever." John 6: 58. "Verily, verily I say unto you, if a man keep my sayings, he shall never see death," John 8: 51. "My sheep hear my voice, and I know them, and they follow me; and I give unto them eternal life; and they shall never perish, neither shall any man pluck them out of my hand." John 10: 27, 28.

The question now arises, What death is this? I would notice. First. It is a death which affects only the unbeliever. Therefore it cannot be the death of the "natural body," for "Abraham is dead and the prophets." John 8: 52. But they that keep Christ's sayings "shall never taste of death."

Some have advanced the idea that Christ had reference to the immortal soul when he spake of never dying. Let us examine that idea. It cannot mean the immortal souls of sinners, for only the believer here is referred to. And if "never die," when applied, means "immortal soul," then certainly it is fair to infer that the sinner has no immortal soul, as we find direct and inferential proof that he shall die. It is only the believer that has the promise that he shall never die. Now what is this death? Is it not that which the believer will escape? the same death that the unbeliever will suffer. I think it is. If this death has reference to the final doom of the wicked, as I believe it has, why take the declaration "never die," and make it prove the conscious existence of the happy spirit in the intermediate state, when that subject does not seem to be under consideration. I consider that these scriptures which I have quoted have no reference to the intermediate state whatever, but have especial reference to the eternal state.

DUTY TO SOCIETY.

WELLS W. WILSON.

Society, regarded as a social compact, throws about us certain rules and regulations whose observance is of special interest to us all. It was for mutual aid and safety in the first place, coupled with a natural inclination to obey and govern, that men felt themselves constrained to enter into an alliance with each other; which alliance, though bedimmed by intervening ages, none the less exists, and is as binding upon us to day, as on the ones who formed it.

Every man, no matter where he lives, gives his consent, if not in words, by very silence to it, and that consent involves obedience and support. No society can succeed and prosper independent of and unassisted by its individual members. So related is the individual to society, and society to him, that anything affecting one affects the other, and anything that benefits the one in due proportion benefits the other.

Nor is this local and immediate—limited to the time and place in which it happened to occur. The telegraphic wires of influence, so to speak, greater than the mighty ocean-cable, girt this world, and send their messages of good and evil to its furthest bounds. We cannot think a thought, however slightly tinged with inconsistency, without that thought and its indulgence giving shape to our succeding action, which in its effect continues on "ad infinitum" unless counteracted, which as in the sad effects resulting from the sin of Adam seldom if at all takes place. If then a single thought so slightly tinged, gives rise to such results, it is our duty to suppress all such, and at the same time bury deep the ones of darker hue. Our duty is but half discharged when we shrink back from doing openly what is at work within. To purify the stream, get at its source and purify it first. To purify and thus enable man to do his duty to society, you must purify his heart, and then his words and actions will agree therewith.

TOBACCO OR BOOKS, WHICH?

I. C. WELLCOME.

These are hard times. We would be very glad to have that book, have wanted it ever since it was published, but we have no money. We have not seen such hard times before. True, money is scarce, but you find enough to buy tobacco. How much do you spend for tobacco in a year? Well, I don't know, says one, about ten cents a week. That is five dollars and twenty cents a year. Another says, I spend about twenty-five cents a week for tobacco. That is thirteen dollars a year. Another told me he used nine pounds, at five shillings per pound, in three months. This would be thirty dollars a year. Either of these sums would buy a number of good books, each year; and soon produce a splendid library.

No, you cannot have books, you need them, you and your families very much need the information and instruction they would impart to you; but you do not have the money to buy them. You choose to spend your money for tobacco, to stultify your mind, derange your physical system, engender disease, poison the atmosphere about you so that it is unfit to inhale by your family or associates, set a bad example for your children or friends. If you occasionally need a new book, you are dependent on your neighbor who buys books instead of tobacco, to lend to you. "Wherefore do you spend your money for that which is not bread? and your labor for that which satisfieth not?"

FOR WHOM SHOULD WE PRAY?

L. A. WHEELER.

"I exhort, therefore, that, first of all, supplications, prayers, intercessions. and giving of thanks, be made for all men; for kings, and for all that are in authority; that we may lead a quiet and peaceable life in all godliness and honesty." 1 Tim. 2: 1, 2.

A broad field—"all men," says the apostle; "For enemies," says Christ; for a brother that sins not unto death, says John; for the sick and one another says James; "for all in authority," says the text. The greater part of the human family occupy positions of God given authority in some way; nor only these at the head of nations, but "governments" and "rule" in church, the master over servant, the husband over wife, the parent over child, are all recognized in the inspired Book as those we need the prayers of the faithful that we may live a quiet and peaceable life in all godliness and honesty. Here is strength for the weak, power for the helpless, wisdom for all that lack. If this weapon was used more, there would be less call for carnal ones. How much we need to be in our closets.

THE HOME OF THE SAINTS.

C. H. SWEET.

Where is it to be? Some say in heaven above; others say in the earth made new. Which party is right? Oh! says one, "it makes no difference, either place will be satisfactory to those who gain it." Yes, but if God has said heaven, I don't want to say earth, or if he has said earth, then I don't want to say heaven. What has he said about it? As I examine his word carefully, I fail to find anything there about men's going to heaven when they die, or that they ever go there. But I read a great deal about the saints inheriting an earth freed from the curse, and filled with the glory of God. Which position shall I accept as correct? I answer, the one so plainly taught in the Word of God. If any desire assistance about searching out this Scriptural proof, let them send a few cents to the Crisis office, accompanied with a request for "Scripture Searchers."

THOSE that do but superficially taste of divine knowledge, find little sweetness in it, and are apt to become indifferent for the want of a higher relish.

SANGUINARY CONFLICT AT HAND.

THOS. FITZSIMMONS.

Though the world may not know it, it is undoubtedly by agencies, visible and invisible, preparing for a mighty and sanguinary conflict of arms, in which as prefigured by the Apocalyptic vision, blood shall flow to the bridles of the horses. For five years past, and to-day, this active preparation (and let it be noted, in a time of peace) has been actively going on in the Old World, and the nations involuntarily placing themselves in readiness, as the mighty instruments, destined by God to punish each other, when his trumpet shall set their vast hosts in motion.

Again, we witness to day the invention and construction of the most ingenious and terrible weapons of human slaughter, in rifled cannon, monster ordinance, submarine torpedoes fired by electricity, for destroying whole fleets, improved small arms, and the armies and navies of the great powers raised to a standard of numbers, drill and organization, never before paralleled—the evidence that some great event is at hand, that only awaits the near time to uplift the veil, and show the wherefore of these things. That time is nearer than mankind dream of, and as the preparation is upon a colossal scale so will be the conflict. It will be the greatest, as it will be the last conflict of the nations.

PROVIDENTIAL DELIVERENCE BY A DOG.

"The earth is the Lord's, and the fulness thereof;" and he hath said, "Every beast of the forest is mine, and the cattle upon a thousand hills." The Lord had need of the ass colt to fulfil his purpose when he rode in triumph to Jerusalem. The lions and bears have been his agents in the accomplishment of his work; and he who guided the different beasts into Noah's ark, can move them still by potent though mysterious influences, and direct them to actions which assist in the accomplishment of his providential purposes.

On the 3d day of January, 1858, the good ship Caspian, of about one thousand tons, Captain W. H. Trufant, of Bath, Me., lay at the wharf at New Orleans, laden and bound for Boston. Captain Trufant was half owner, as well as master of the ship, and was a sober, serious man, a diligent reader of his Bible and hymn-book, and allowed no swearing or drinking on board his vessel. His wife, Margaret A., and their two children, had accompanied him on the voyage, and in addition to his three mates and a crew of nearly twenty souls, there were also several other persons who had taken passage with him for Boston.

On this night of which we are speaking, as the mate of the vessel came on board, he was followed by a large dog, a hound, who walked up the plank, and went on board with him. Inquiries were made for his owner, but no one knew anything about him, and the dog was put ashore. Watching his opportunity, he came on board again, and was again and again sent ashore, until at length, on his return to the vessel, one of the sailors threw him into the water, thinking thus to get rid of him. By this time the mate noticed what was going on, and seeing the dog swim to the shore, and come directly on board again, as though determined to go to sea with them, he thought there was something strange about it, and said: "That dog did not come on board for nothing, and, as no one claimed him, ordered that he should be allowed to remain in the ship.

The following day the Caspian sailed for Boston, and for four days nothing unusual occurred. At the expiration of this time a severe storm arose, before which the vessel was driven and tossed. The tempest raged fearfully for some ten days, and for more than a week neither sun nor stars appeared. All knowledge of their whereabouts was lost until the evening of the fourteenth day, when they were driven upon the northern coast of Cuba. About ten o'clock at night the ship crashed upon a rocky reef, and the horrors of instant shipwreck were upon them. Sea after sea broke over the deck, the mast went by the board, the boats were carried away, and the captain was seen no more till his mangled and disfigured form was found cast ashore by the waves.

After striking the reef, the heavy seas drove the vessel in shore, until she stuck fast about two ship's lengths from the land, which was low, rocky, and covered with trees. There the vessel lay, helpless, amid the fury of the winds and seas; and passengers and crew were alike powerless to save themselves or others from death. Anxious eyes were watching them from the land, but no one was able to breast the waves and bring deliverance to the ill-fated company. All they could do was to watch and wait until the vessel should go to pieces, and then try and save those who might be washed ashore by the waves.

When all hope for the vessel was gone, and there was but little expectation of saving the lives of those on board, some one thought of the dog, who had so persisted in his determination to come on board the ship. He was found, and a small line tied around his body, and then he was thrown into the sea. Striking out through the foaming waves, he swam for the shore, reached it in safety, and communication was opened. Ready hands grasped the twins, and drew after it a larger line, to which was attached a still larger rope, and finally a strong hawser was fastened by one end to the capstan, and was pulled from the vessel to the shore, and made fast to a tree upon the bank.

A chair was then slung to the hawser, and one of the passengers was lashed into the chair, and then, by means of a line, the chair was drawn to the shore and delivered its precious freight in safety. Then the chair was returned to the ship, and another passenger was lashed to it, and drawn safely to the land. Again and again this process was repeated. The children were lashed in the arms of the mates, and carried safely with them. The captain's wife was also carried ashore, clinging to the rope so closely that her hands were blistered by the friction; but at last she and all, save the poor captain, were safe and sound upon the land.

Such was the simple instrumentality by which God was pleased to preserve the lives of those on board the ship. And the captain's widow still lives to trust that God who protected and delivered her in the hour of danger, and who now, even in the days of desolation and of tears, still proves himself a Father of the Fatherless, and the Judge of widows in his holy habitation!—Christian Herald.

WHILE the minister is "the servant of all," yet not all are his masters. They may not dictate terms to him; they may not transfer to him their burdens. He is their servant in that he is their spiritual guide and counselor, acting with respect to their needs, not with reference to their wants. He is the servant of a moral necessity, not of an individual judgment or caprice. "One is his master, even Christ."—C. W. Millen.

ONE of the saddest things about human nature is, that a man may guide others in the path of life without walking in it himself—that he may be a pilot, and yet a castaway.

HOME AND HEALTH.

"LIVING TO EAT, AND EATING TO LIVE."

The following is an extract from "The Science of Health," under the above heading. The writer says—"Now if men would exercise the same intelligence in feeding themselves and their families that they do in feeding their horses, two-thirds of the sickness and untimely deaths would be done away with. If they would only feed their families with the same degree of wisdom with which they manage their domestic animals, a vast amount of suffering and death would be eradicated. This seems a strange remark to make of civilized men, yet it is true.

Now as to eating to live, what is the object of taking food? To grow, to have health, and to be strong. Then let the diet be arranged to secure these objects, and let other considerations sink out of sight. It is the health and the strength of the body, which is to be promoted by eating. No cider, no beer, no wine, no rum, no whiskey, no tobacco, or snuff; no tea, no coffee, are needful for these objects. Then away with the whole list of them. There is no need of fine flour, for the whole grain ground together in the form of Graham meal is better adapted to growth, health and strength. There is no need of pies or rich cakes, because plain bread offers more nourishment, and will not disorder digestion. Plain, simple food, well cooked, is all that is needed to secure the health and stength of the body, and its full development. Every one should eat to live—to live in the broadest sense of the term; to live in the fullest exercise of all his faculties, unimpeded by bodily infirmity or disorder. Every one should eat, not what he likes the best, but that which he finds by trial gives him the most health and strength of body and mind. Eat to live, not live to eat.

EDMUND BROWN.

SUMMER DRINK.

Speaking of oatmeal, an exchange remarks that a very good drink is made by putting about two spoonfuls of the meal into a tumbler of water. The western hunters and trappers consider it the best of drinks, and it is at once nourishing, stimulating, and satisfying. It is popular in the Brooklyn Navy Yard, two and a half pounds of oatmeal being put into a pail of moderate cool water. It is much better than any of the ordinary mixtures of vinegar and molasses with water, which farmers use in haying or harvest fields. We can endorse all that is said in the above item in regard to oatmeal water as a summer drink for men who are engaged at hot and laborious occupations. While not used by the workmen at all the rolling mills and blast furnaces, yet it is more or less largely used by the rolling mill, blast furnace, and glass-works men throughout the country, while in England, Wales, and Scotland it is even more popular as a working drink by those engaged at hot and toilsome labors than with our workers here. It is far more strengthening and less hurtful than the stimulating beer and ales that are commonly resorted to by men of these occupations; while no difference to what heat the workman is subjected, or what quantity of the oatmeal water he consumes, it is not in the least hurtful. A little over half a pound of oatmeal to a gallon of water makes this a most excellent drink, which the more temperate foreign iron workers greatly use, and which they assert surpasses as a beverage all that can be found in ale, beer or porter, even in those qualities for which the latter are used by men of such employment.

DIGESTIBILITY OF MILK.—It is well-known that cow's milk is often found to be difficult of digestion by invalids and infants. The reason of this is that the caseine of the pure milk is coagulated by the gastric juice in such large masses that their solution is difficult. The attempt has been made to correct the difficulty by the addition of lime water to the milk, which seems to have the property of causing the caseine to coagulate in small granules, instead of large masses. The caustic character of lime water has been the great objection to its use.

Dr. Carter, of London, has recently shown by experiments that barley water is much better than lime water for this purpose. In this we have an agent which is perfectly harmless, and is somewhat nutritious.

TO BEAUTIFY THE TEETH.—Dissolve two ounces of borax in three pounds of boiling water, and before it is cold, add one teaspoonful of the spirits of camphor; then bottle for use. A table-spoonful of this mixture, mixed with an equal quantity of tepid water and applied daily with a soft brush, preserves and beautifies the teeth, extirpates all tartarous adhesion, arrests decay, induces a healthy action of the gums, and makes the teeth pearly white.

THOSE who use a plain, unstimulating diet have little thirst, and require but little drink.

LOOKING HOMEWARD.

TUNE—"Oh, I shall be satisfied when I awake

I am now looking homeward to Eden's fair clime,
When Paradise lost is restored.
The earth robed in beauty I hope soon to gain,
And be home with the saints and my Lord.
No sorrow, or sighing, no sickness or pain,
Will ever be known in my home;
No groans of the dying, no tear-drops to fall,
And their songs, they fill heaven's high dome.

I am now looking homeward, a river I see
Of pure sparkling water there runs;
It runs through the city, from God it proceeds,
There I'll drink that pure water at home.
On the banks of that river the tree of life grows,
And its verdure is always so green,
No cold frosts of autumn can mar its fair leaves,
And its flowers will ever be seen.

I am now looking homeward, and sigh to be there,
With all the bright angels to sing,
To gaze on my Savior with unclouded eyes,
In glory our voices will ring.
The angels are coming, and soon they'll be here,
To gather God's jewels all home;
I hope to share with them, and be gathered safe there,
Then in Paradise evermore roam.

SIGNS OF THE TIMES.

"Can ye not discern the signs of the times?" Matt. 16: 3.

In the first verse, we learn that the Pharisees and Sadducees came to Jesus, and desired him to give them a sign from heaven. What kind of a sign they wanted, does not appear, nor for what purpose, anything, probably, which would settle the question of his Messiahship. The Savior, knowing that they were not actuated by a sincere desire to know the truth, did not comply with their request, but rather upbraided them for their want of spiritual discernment. From their knowledge of natural signs, they could tell whether it would be fair, or foul weather on the morrow, but they could not discern the spiritual meaning of those important events which were passing before them. It was their duty to do so. Hence we infer, that it is still a christian duty, carefully to observe the signs of the times. It is not every future event that is foreshadowed by signs—only those of the most vital importance to men. The first and second advents of our Saviour are events of this kind. The latter, no less than the former, is clearly pointed out by unmistakable signs.

1. The era of the second advent will be immeditely preceded by a great running to and fro, and by a great increase of knowledge. See Dan. 12: 4. The prophet connects these things with the time of the end, and the full unfolding of his prophetic visions; see the same verse. But the end here spoken of, agrees in point of time with the coming of Christ, for in the foregoing context it is connected with the standing up of Christ, the great Prince, for the deliverance of all who have their names written in the book of life. It is also connected with that fearful time of trouble, which will be visited upon an ungodly world, at the coming of Christ, with the resurrection and the rewarding of the righteous with unfading glory. But we are now living in the time indicated by these signs. Within the past forty years the world has undergone an entire revolution in these respects. There is now a constant running to and fro, a ceaseless mixing and mingling of the nations. Aided by the application of steam to the propulsion of the railway carriage and the ocean steamer, and stimulated by an insatiable thirst for pleasure, for fame, for gain, and for knowledge, the present age stands out boldly marked, and clearly defined, above and beyond all that have gone before it, as the age of travel. But the present is no less clearly marked as an age of knowledge. Not that we understand better than our fathers the doctrines of Christianity; but in many, if not all the departments of human knowledge, we have far outstripped all the generations of the past. There is not only great advance, but wide diffusion. The printing press, the telegraph, the railway and the steamer, are rapidly developing new thoughts, new habits and aspirations, in all places of the earth. It is doubtless, then, the age indicated by the prophet, an age of running to and fro, and of the increase of knowledge.

2. The coming of Christ will be immediately preceded by the world-wide preaching of the gospel. See Matt. 24: 14, "This gospel of the kingdom shall be preached in all the world for a witness unto all nations, and then shall the end come." The end here spoken of is the end of the world, that with which the coming of Christ is associated. Before this end comes, the gospel is to be preached in all parts of the world, not for the salvation of all the world, but for a witness unto all nations. For the past forty years this work has been in a special manner accomplishing. During this period have come into effective operation, all our missionary, Bible and tract societies. These, aided by great improvements in the art of printing, and still greater facilities in travel, and stimulated by the Macedonian cry, from large portions of our world hitherto effectually barred against the gospel, have even now, for aught any one can decide positively to the contrary, fulfilled to the letter, this witness preaching of the gospel to all nations.

But we have additional testimony on this point in Rev 14: 6, 7. "And I saw another angel fly in the midst of heaven, having the everlasting gospel to preach—to every nation, and kindred, and tongue, and people. "The substance of this preaching is, Fear God, and give to him glory, and worship; and the reason assigned is, "For the hour of his judgment is come." Hence we are told in the next verse, "And there followed another angel saying, Babylon is fallen, is fallen." The flying of this angel-preacher marks the rapidity with which the gospel is to be spread, and identifies it, beyond dispute, with our own day; while the immediate subsequent fall of Babylon proves that it immediately precedes the coming of Christ, for the Roman anti-christ is to be consumed by the Spirit of Christ's mouth, and destroyed by the brightness of his coming." 2 Thess. 2: 8.

3. The age immediately preceding the coming of Christ, will be an age of great pleasure-seeking, and of business enterprise. See Luke 17: 26, 27, "As it was in the days of Noe, so shall it be also in the days of the Son of man. They ate, they drank, they married wives, and were given in marriage. Likewise also as it was in the days of Lot, they did eat, they drank, they bought, they sold, they planted, they builded; even thus shall it be in the day when the Son of man is revealed." Men have eaten and drunk, have planted and builded in every age. The Savior knew this perfectly well But he also knew that the times of Noah and Lot were distinguished for these things, that then men and women had become so engrossed in worldly things, in the pleasures and business of life, as that they had in a great measure, lost all regard for the authority of God. These were almost, or altogether, the only things for which they lived; even so shall it be, in the age immediately preceding the advent. But here the question arises, Are not these the characteristics of our own day? Is not this a pleasure and a gain-seeking age? Was there ever an age like it in the history of our race, unless we except those marked as its parallel, by the Savior? And they were only like in kind, not its equals in degree. Their facilities for acquiring gain, and gratifying pleasure, were comparatively limited. The wonderful inventions of modern times have aroused and stimulated to a degree hitherto unknown, both the power to acquire wealth, and the disposition to spend it in all the ways which a voluptuous age can invent. Nor are these alone the characteristics of the world. The church, too, notwithstanding all her activity in the great and good work of spreading the gospel, is largely under the influence of this worldly spirit. The Savior, foreseeing that his church would be in danger, from this source, issues a timely warning. See Luke 21: 34, "Take heed to yourselves, lest at any time your hearts be overcharged with surfeiting, and drunkenness, and cares of this life, and so that day come upon you unawares." This warning has almost the force of prediction. Is it not true that the church is largely engrossed with the cares of this life? so living, as that should the day of the Lord now come, it would come upon her unawares? And this word, unawares, reminds us of another point of resemblance between the times of Noah and Lot, and the time of the coming of the Son of man. For as the flood of water came on the antediluvian world, and as the rain of fire came on the city of the plain unawares, even so will the coming of the Son of man be. The great mass will, as then, be taken by surprise.

And this naturally brings into view another sign of our times, viz., the unbelief of the church and the world as to this great doctrine of the advent. The world will scoff at the doctrine of the advent altogether, while the language will be, "Our Lord delayeth his coming." The sentiments of the former we find recorded in 2 Peter, 3: 3, 4. "Knowing this, first, that there shall come in the last days, scoffers, walking after their own lusts, and saying, Where is the promise of His coming? for since the fathers fell asleep, all things continue as they were from the beginning of the creation." What period of time is included by the last days here named, need not be positively decided. It is sufficient to say, that the last days of the gospel dispensation, those immediately preceding the coming of Christ, are doubtless included. Yet in these days down to the period of the advent, the men of the world will scoff at the idea. But is not this true of our own day? "No," says the superficial observer; "does not the church preach the doctrine of future advent?" But hold; just give this subject a little prominence, half that which the Scriptures give it, preach as the Scriptures preach it, as an event near at hand, intensify this truth, by the lapse of eighteen hundred years, and the concurrence of all the signs of our times, strike boldly and plainly, until you arrest public attention, and, having done all, mark the result. The man who will do so, who has the fortitude and ability so to do, effectually, will call down upon himself such a tirade of abuse and ridicule, as no other course of action would secure, however simple, mean or criminal. Miller's experience is an example in point. Long before the error of his chronological dates had been developed by the lapse of time, he was the butt of ridicule. The license to abuse and vilify him was absolutely universal and unchallenged. Why was this? From the great mass, this opposition, this abuse arose not from the detection of his chronological errors, but from unbelief of, and hatred to, the doctrine of the advent altogether. And this belief, this hatred, still pervades the masses; and were the doctrine preached to-day, as then, plainly, boldly, powerfully, the results would be everywhere similar.

But the church's unbelief is of a different type. She does not, like the world, deny the doctrine in toto, she simply postpones the event. "Our Lord delayeth his coming." And should the question be asked, How long? the reply would be, at least a thousand years. But why put this language into the mouth of the church? We answer, because the Savior puts it into the mouth of the evil servant, who would not watch for his returning Lord; and that servant must be understood as the representative of a class—a class, who should be found in the church just prior to the advent. And if that class does not constitute the church of to-day, it is not because her position on the subject of the advent is not the same. If that unfaithful, unwatchful servant, does not represent the church of to-day, on this subject, then we will look in vain for the represented.

But again, the unbelief or indifference of the church, just prior to the advent, as it respects this event, as illustrated in the parable, is a prophetic description of the state of the church immediately preceding the advent. We do not understand, however, that the definite numbers used, represent the exact proportion of the true and false professors of that day. There will be many of both classes. But what we wish to notice particularly, is that just before the midnight cry is made, "Behold the Bridegroom cometh," these virgins "all slumbered and slept." This language points out the great want of watchfulness which will characterize the church at that day. Now where shall we look for a realization of this prophetic picture, if not to our own day? On this subject the church of to-day is most assuredly asleep.

We are told the form of salutation among Christians, in primitive times in very common use, was, "The Lord cometh." We know from the Scriptures, that the early Christians longed for this event. But it is not so now. The subject is not talked of, nor thought of. The pulpit and the press proscribe it. Truths pertaining to the church's faith are discussed a thousand times over, but those pertaining to her hopes are neglected. Many excuse themselves by saying, "The great matter is to know that we are united to Christ." Yet the wise, as well as the foolish virgins are censured, not because they had no oil, but because they went to sleep when they ought to have watched. We conclude, then, that the unbelief and indifference of the church and world on the subject of the advent, constitutes a marked and well-defined sign of the near approach of that event.

5. The period immediately preceding the advent, will be distinguished as a time of great trouble, anxiety and consternation among all classes of society; see Luke 21: 25, 26. "And upon the earth, distress of nations, with perplexity, the sea and the waves roaring, men's hearts failing them for fear, and for looking after those things which are coming upon the earth." The Savior speaks of these as immediate precursors of his second coming. They certainly refer to a time which is to be remarkable for the things named. But are we not now beginning to realize something of this distress of nations, much, very much of this perplexity, and fear, and evil forebodings? Nations, like individuals, sometimes have presentiments. This was true at the time of the first advent. Men, as it were, held their breath, sure that something remarkable was about to transpire. And so it is now. The civilized world is fairly oppressed with the conviction that we are upon the threshold of some grand crisis; some great turning point in the history of our world. If we are not living in the time indicated by the Savior, it is possible we will fail to know it when it comes. . . .

6. Finally, the last days, and therefore the days immediately preceding the advent, will be noted for great laxity of morals in the church of God. See 2 Tim. 3: 1–5. "This know, also, that in the last days perilous times shall come; for men shall be lovers of their ownselves, covetous, boasters, proud, blasphemers, disobedient to parents, unthankful, unholy; having a form of godliness, but denying the power thereof." This is a sad picture, yet since the apostle tells us that the persons spoken of have a form of godliness, we must look for its original in the church of God; nor need we look long to find it in our own day. Is it not very largely true, that there is now scarcely any such thing as discipline known in the church? What can the imagination paint which some one or more of the churches does not tenderly cover over with the mantle of religion? Even the slaveholder, who seems the embodiment of all that is wicked—whose crime is "the sum of all villanies," finds a safe lodging-place in many of our churches. Besides, it is an age distinguished for selfishness, insubordination, and formality. No part of the church can plead not guilty to these charges. Is it harsh, then, is it uncharitable, to say that the apostle describes in the above language the church of our own times, and that consequently we are living in the time closely trenching upon the coming of Jesus Christ?

Such are some of the signs of our times—signs which all point with unerring certainty to one grand coming event—an event so glorious, that its prospect should fill every Christian heart with an ecstacy of joy.

From the foregoing we may notice the following practical deductions.

1. We should study the subject. "Blessed is he that readeth, and they that hear the words of this prophecy." "We have, also, a more sure word of prophecy, whereunto ye do well that ye take heed, as unto a light that shineth in a dark place, until the day dawn." The mariner examines his charts, and takes his observations. He is not satisfied unless he knows his latitude and his compass points. So the Christian should know his position upon the great stream of time. He, too, should take his daily observations. Prophecy is his only chart. Without its light, he can know nothing of the future; all would be impenetrable darkness. Without this light, to guide and cheer us amidst the darkness and the storm, we are like the sea-tossed mariner, who, without compass or helm, abandons himself to the winds, and drifts—he knows not whither. We may not know everything that is to be known; but diligent, prayerful study, here, as in every other department of Bible literature will be amply compensated.

We should watch for the coming of Christ. It is not enough that we have the oil of grace in our lamps—that we are the children of God by regeneration; we have a duty beyond this; we must watch; for we know not at what hour the Son of man cometh. Nor is this a watching for the event of death, simply. Death is no pleasant prospect. It is not desirable for its own sake—not, says the apostle, that we would be unclothed. He did not desire it for its own sake. But the coming of Christ is to be looked for with very different feelings. It is regarded as a joyful prospect. "Looking for," says the apostle, "and hasting unto the coming of the day of God." We are even taught to pray for it: "Even so, come Lord Jesus."

Preparation and watchfulness for death are not what our Lord enjoins in connection with his glorious advent. But how, says an objector, can I watch intently, in any true sense, for an event which I believe, and Christians generally believe, to be over a thousand years distant? We answer, you cannot. But should you believe as you do? Are you not occupying the position of the evil servant who said, "My Lord delayeth his coming?" Do not the Scriptures teach us to watch for it as for an event which may transpire at any day? Let us watch, then, lest the day of the Lord should overtake us as a thief.

3. If the foregoing reasoning be correct, then we cannot have the millennium before the advent. If the advent is near, as indicated by the signs, there is no room for the millennium this side of it. The signs cannot occur, and all pass away a thousand years in advance of the thing signified. Then they would be no signs. They cannot occur during the millennium—these, or any like them. It would suppose a state of things wholly unlike the millennium. They cannot transpire at the close of the millennium; for between that and the final judgment, there is but a "little season," and that little season is so completely taken up with events peculiarly its own, that there is no time nor place for these signs. Yet if we put the advent at the close of the millenium, we must put the signs there too. And what a strange confounding and misplacing of events that would be! The kingdom does not come in its power before the King; the millennium does not come before the advent.

But finally, if the advent is near, then what new zeal and life should be infused into all who hear this good news. Now is the time when the servants are to make their last and best efforts to gather guests. . . . . We must go out into the highways and hedges, and gather up the lame, the halt, and the blind, and compel them to come in, that the wedding may be furnished with guests. The door of our New Testament ark is not yet closed. Let us tell the prisoner to hasten and escape to Christ, the only ark of safety. Tell him that the time is short, that now is the accepted time, and now is the day of salvation. Tell him that the Master cometh. And let our prayer be, "Even so, come, Lord Jesus, come quickly."

THE IMPENDING HOUR.

"Be ye also patient, stablish your hearts; for the coming of the Lord draweth nigh."—JAS. 5: 8.

The feelings with which we await the coming of any person or thing depend very much upon the nature of the person or thing advancing, or upon our fittedness to meet him or it.

It is evening in a very pleasant household. There is a key heard at the front door. The children come down the stairs with a bound, clapping their hands, and shouting, "Father's coming!" But disaster has entered that home. The writs have been issued. It is time for the furniture to be levied on. From the oldest to the youngest member of that household the feeling is that the home must be broken up. The front-door bell rings; an official is about to enter, and the whisper all through the rooms of that house is, "The sheriff's coming!" It is just so in regard to the announcement of my text. To one it sounds like a Father's, to another like an executioner's footstep. To one it is the breath of a June morning; to the other it is the blast of a December hurricane.

"The coming of the Lord draweth nigh." I do not see how God can afford to stay away any longer. It seems to me that this world has been mauled of sin about long enough. The church has made such slow headway against the Paganism, the Mohammedanism, the fraud, the libertinism, the drunkenness, the rapine and the murder of the world, that there are ten thousand hands now stretched up beckoning for God to come, and to come now.

There is enough corn in the United States and Great Britain annually wasted, in brewing and distilling, to feed over five million men. Every grog-shop, every house of infamy, every gambling saloon, every dishonest store, bank, insurance company, declaring there is no God, or if there be, let him strike if he dare! Corruption in most of the city governments; corruption reaching from the weather-vane on the top of the City Halls down to the lowest stone in the foundation. . . . .

France and Prussia feeling for each other's throats; and although the dead in battle outnumber five times all the present population of the earth, yet nations longing for war, and this hour six million men in Europe arming for conflict, while applauding nations look on, and the cry is, "Blood! give us more blood!" The earth staggering under the successive shocks, like a foundering ship at the moment when the passengers cry—"She's going down!"

That God is coming with his judgments among the nations, I cannot doubt. Look at the floods on both sides the sea. France going down under the wave; the wealth of nations swept off in a day; harvests, vineyards, villages unmoored. Look at the insectiverous assault, which was first considered hardly worthy of a small item in a newspaper; but the grasshopper, the Colorado bug, and the army worm, have gone on until public fasts have been declared, and the Lord Almighty invoked to arrest the national calamity.

Look at the marine disasters, and hear the voice of the shipwrecks. Listen to the roar of the unparalleled conflagrations in Chicago, and Boston, and London. See the toppling over of great commercial establishments everywhere. I tell you that God's controversy with the nations has begun. "The coming of the Lord draweth nigh."

I see also a sign of the divine advance in the opportunity for repentance which is being given to the nations. . . . If there were not something tremendous coming, God would not be so urgent or importunate in his call. . . . .

The fact that such a day will come, cannot be disputed. The Bible intimates, yea, it positively says, that in that last day God will come in by a flash of lightning. I suppose that on that day there may be rolled up dun storm-clouds, and that there may be folds of darkness all around the perimeter, and that there may be a background black as midnight. Then, while the beasts are moaning with terror, and while the housewife is kindling the candle at noonday, and while the janitors of public buildings are lighting the chandeliers, and the nations are trembling and half suffocated with the terror, there may be in the distance a faint sound of thunder that will roll louder, and louder, and louder, as though a thousand tempests were gathering in battle array; and that then there may be a silence, a deep hush, a silence of complete expectancy; and that, while the world is hushed in that dreadful stillness, instantaneous with the crash that shall split the hills, there shall burst upon the world a fiery cohort, a book of reckoning, a throne, and the Lord Omnipotent. . .

The world and all the things that are therein are to be burned up. . . . Banks and moneyed institutions, with consumed bonds and melted bullion—all the investments of the world not worth one cent on a dollar. . . . That scene is not something that we read about as occurring four or five thousand miles away, at Stockholm, or St. Petersburg. It will occur here, and you and I will be participants. When the roll-call of that day is read, your name and my name will be read in it, and we will answer "Here!" These very feet will feel the earth's tremor; these eyes will see the scrolled sky; these hands will be lifted in acclamation or in horror, when the Lord shall be revealed from heaven, with mighty angels, in flaming fire taking vengeance upon those who know not God, and who obey not the gospel of his Son. It will be our trial. It will be our Judge. It will be our welcome, or it will be our doom. . . . .

Who can estimate the number of revolutions in a minute of the wheel of God's judgment chariot? It will not be an empty chariot, the occupant flung out by the speed of the travel or some sharp turn in the way; but firmly seated in that chariot will be the Lord, the most grandly loved and the most outrageously treated Being in all the ages.

Coming to bless his saints. Rise, O children of the fire, and hail him as he comes to count your wounds! Coming to vindicate his cause! Crouch, O you scientists and infidels, who said there was no Christ, or if there were, he would never appear. Coming to cast out the hard-hearted and the rebellious. O, bow now, before his arrival, that then you may be ready to hail him. Coming with the months. Coming with the weeks. Coming with the days. Coming with the hours. Coming with the minutes. Coming with the seconds. Coming! "The coming of the Lord draweth nigh."

THE HOLY GHOST REJECTED.

We live under the dispensation of the Holy Ghost, the most glorious one ever existed under by the race; days that kings and prophets looked for, sought and died, but never found. Nay, more; it is ours to behold the rays of millennial twilight, shedding their glories on the evening of the world.

The first two thousand years of human history, mark the patriarchal age, rude and primeval state of society composed its teeming generations from Adam on to Moses. Yet, under this dark and far-off dispensation, great moral lights arose, as so many landmarks, dotting the ecclesiastical records of mankind; and which, like so many tall mountain tops may be seen lifting up their heads in peerless grandeur, across the sweep of ages. In time the patriarchal was succeeded by the dispensation of the law; when Moses and the prophets were the light of the world for two thousand years more. Finally, in the fullness of time, God's only Son came under the law, in human flesh, was crucified, dead and buried, rose again from the dead, and ascended up on high for our justification, leaving the Holy Ghost as vicegerent to his people till he should come again to judge the world, both the quick and the dead.

Here commenced the dispensation of the Holy Ghost. Says Christ: "I go to prepare a place for you; and if I go to prepare a place for you, I will come again and receive you unto myself." "And I will pray the Father, and he shall give you another Comforter that he may abide with you forever." "And the Comforter, which is the Holy Ghost, whom the Father will send in my name, he shall teach you all things, and bring all things to your remembrance." Again, "It is expedient for you that I go away, for if I go not away, the Comforter will not come unto you."

Read the Acts of the Apostles. In tracing the Apostles, and the whole church, from the day of Pentecost, we see clearly the vicegerency of the Holy Ghost fully established; indeed, the Acts of the Apostles might, with propriety, be termed the Acts of the Holy Ghost; for it was he who directed them in all their labors; who gave them mouths of wisdom, lungs of brass, sinews of iron, tongues of flame, hearts of fire, and who ruled with sovereign authority at their meetings.

No wonder that thousands were converted in a day then, for the Holy Ghost had free course. Nay, more, they obeyed Christ and tarried at Jerusalem for the gift of the Father, and were baptized with the Holy Ghost and fire themselves.

But the soul-damning sin of our times, is what most modern churches utterly dispense with, nay, even despise, the peculiar office of the Holy Ghost, as the representative of Christ, until he shall come again, and the distributor "to every man, severally as he will," "of those gifts which the Lord Jesus gives for the perfecting of the saints, for the work of the ministry, and for the edifying of the body of Christ." I say, in all this, his peculiar office, in this his own dispensation, and the only one in which he works otherwise among us, than in times past among the fathers, the Jews and the prophets. He is despised and rejected; nay, the sacrilegious attempt is made by some to condense all gifts into one person, the parson. You see the result, dead churches, dead ministers and dead sinners. In such cases the ministers do all, the churches lose all, and the devil gets all, or nearly so.

Here let us remark, we shall never, as a rule, recover the true apostolic energy, and be endued with power from on high, as the first disciples were, till we recover, not the lost arts, but the lost faith. The rejection of the Holy Ghost and worldly conformity, by modern churches, is an abandonment of the apostolic faith. As it regards a "higher life," nothing is plainer than the impossibility of it, except we yield to faith a higher honor, and abide in it with a holier confidence. This we cannot do, and dispense with the gifts of the Holy Ghost. Would that the whole land were filled with pentecostal churches! That we have a few, is the joy of the good, but they are the exception and not the rule. The glory of Pentecost, let us bear in mind, was simply christianity or the Holy Ghost in power and demonstration unobstructed. Hence the conversion of three thousand and five thousand per day. With us however, it is vice versa, and hence, the lack of corresponding success.

Suppose the Holy Ghost were to be poured out upon our most popular churches and great evangelical gatherings, as anciently upon the Galilean fisherman, with similar demonstrations of power and praise, which, by the way, is not likely to occur; should it, however, in the providence of God happen, could they endure it without the assistance of armed police forces to resist the Spirit, and put down the fanaticism? We fear not. Five thousand careless ones could not stand it then without crying out: "Men and brethren, what shall we do?"

We fear many modern churches have greater powers of resistance than the common sinners of old Jerusalem on the occasion above mentioned. Alas, for them! How shall they escape the doom of the ancient Laodiceans after whom they are so closely and fatally modeled?—Christian Standard.

I AM WAITING.

L. B. WEAVER.

I am waiting for the return of my long absent Lord and Master; and while I am waiting for him I am trying by his help to do just what he bade me do when he left his poor, weeping, sorrowing disciples, and was taken from their sight up into heaven. With the groaning creation, I am waiting for redemption and for the possession which he has promised to all the faithful ones of earth. And as I wait day by day, hour by hour, and pass wearisome days and sleepless nights, and often feel as though the time was so long, sometimes it seems as if he had forgotten about us; but I know he will never forget his dear ones, and so I wait, resting assured that He who has promised is able to perform all that he has told us he will do. While "toiling in rowing," like the disciples of old, I rest, trust and wait, looking eagerly for every omen of his approaching chariot. I have many things to endure which sometimes seem hard to bear; but while bearing pain and suffering, I think how little we know about suffering and privation to what Christ did. As I think of these things I am comforted, and seem to hear his gentle whispers of love, saying, Only a little while longer, and then "forever with the Lord." I can with patience wait all the days of my appointed time, cheerfully doing all that he bids me, and by-and-by we will be at home.

INK DROPS.

J. ALBERT LIBBY.

Sickness is but a premonition of death—the menace of a sure coming foe; and God wishes that we may turn these threatenings to good account. He bends over the hot pillow, saying in whispers thus: The props are being removed from under you, and you may fall. Will you fall into my hands and go to sleep in Jesus? Then Jesus into the other ear speaks softly—"And this is the will of him that sent me, that every one that seeth the Son, and believeth on him, may have everlasting life, and I will raise him up at the last day." "And ye now, therefore, have sorrow; but I will see you again, and your heart shall rejoice."

What a world of comfort in these few words! If his presence, who spake them, was gladness and sunshine to the hearts of the Galilean eleven, and the cloud that took him from their sight the darkest that ever o'ershadowed the church, how radiant with glory will that cloud be which shall again reveal him! And did it not shine resplendently in type, on the mount of transfiguration? Yes! yes! He will be thrice welcome, when he stoops again to dwell among us; and what hearts will exclaim, as did Peter at the place of vision, "Lord, it is good for us to be here."

It is no sign a minister is great in any sense, other than in his own estimation, because he uses high-sounding words. The language of Jesus is brought to our tongue in the simplest form of speech,—"It is enough for the disciple that he be as his master, and the servant as his lord."

PROPHECY, AND WORLDLY ARGUMENT.

THOS. FITZSIMMONS.

Thousands of persons are denying to-day, that the present extraordinary state of the world has anything to do with the coming of Christ, and say that it proceeds from visible causes; that any intelligent and observing man can see for himself, viz., overtrading, speculation, extravagance, etc. This is the worldly standpoint and argument that is to-day almost universally shared by the press and people, as the explanation of all that we are now suffering and beholding.

But ask this press and people—"How is it then, that these things are the identical tokens that prophecy declares shall usher in, and be the signs of the near end. Whence this coincidence and harmony?" And they say they don't know. Now here is a coincidence and harmony between the things we are witnessing, and the Bible declarations of the end, that cannot certainly be in their corroboration of each other accidental, to say nothing of other auxiliary and supporting testimony. They are nonplussed, and in five cases out of six, these persons are caught, and in their silence admit their defeat. The fact is they don't want to know the truth, or the scales to fall from their eyes. The soon coming future, we believe, will do both for many of them;—force them into the admission of God's truth, and take the scales from their eyes.

Phila., Pa.

MESSAGE.

N. M. GROVES.

Time is short; this dispensation is closing; the sifting time is coming, when the tares will all be burned up, and nothing left but the pure wheat to be gathered into the garner of our Lord. Much of the divine revelation has been fulfilled; the most solemn judgments yet remain, when the Lord Jesus will descend from heaven to consume every form of opposition to his kingdom. Beware, lest beguiled by the great deceiver, you lose the substance of christianity while pursuing its counterfeit.

I warn the true flock of our dear Master; for, mixed up with all the varying sects of christendom we find that little flock. Come out; come out, true followers of the Lamb, from every form of opposition to the true doctrine taught by the Apostles, and prophets, and Jesus, and raise the blood-stained banner of Prince Immanuel, and as you raise it cry aloud and spare not, whether men will hear or forbear. Cry, "Behold he cometh with clouds, and every eye shall behold him."

Beware of the seducing spirits of these last days, who may come clad in forms of beauty, but only to lead away from the true faith of the gospel of the Son of God. Remember where it was found in its purity; in that upper room in Jerusalem, where the cloven tongues sat upon the chosen few. Go back to them for the blessed gospel; keep close to their teaching. Whatever departs from the spirit of their holy doctrine or practice is of man, and not of God. We give the warning! It will be heeded by the true flock only; for the Savior's sheep know his voice, and follow him. We know our Lord has his litle flock everywhere, throughout the world; and to such he says, "Lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world."

Let that be our joy, our comfort, in these days of abounding error and deep trial. Let us pray much, watch earnestly, wait patiently. Let us be found with lamps trimmed and burning, giving meat in due season. Let us not move before he gives the order, but when he does, without question, without delay go forward, and God will be with his own cause.

He says, "because thou hast kept the word of my patience, I also will keep thee from the hour of temptation, which shall come upon all the world, to try them that dwell upon the earth." Behold, I come quickly; hold that fast which thou hast, that no man take thy crown.

BE just to yourself as well as others. Disparagement leads to discouragement.

May be found in the Pavilion of the Centennial Newspaper Exhibition, at Philadelphia, during the season of the Exposition. The space assigned to the Crisis is numbered 2916, and to the Young Pilgrim 2921.

Elder Geo. A. Brown, of No. 30 North 11th St., Phila., writes as follows: "If any of the brethren or sisters contemplate coming to Philadelphia this summer, we have two brethren who keep boarding houses, and they could be well accommodated at reasonable rates. Perhaps many would be pleased to know this." Inquire of Bro. B. as above.

OUR VACATION.

The time has again come for us to have a little rest from the confining, toilsome, perplexing office work which is a heavy mental tax upon us. What we mean by a vacation is this: The Editors divide the official year between them, each doing the duties of resident Editor six months, while the other does the duty simply of a corresponding Editor for the same period. Our health is very good at present, for which we render hearty praise to the Giver of all blessings; but still we feel the need of rest. We are expecting complete and eternal rest very soon, yes, very soon; praise the Lord!

TURKEY IN PROPHECY.—No. 2.

As the prophet Daniel has clearly presented Turkey on the Roman field just at the time and in the position we should suppose it would naturally be exhibited, from the fact that it has occupied one of Rome's capitals during the last ages of Rome's prophetic history, we should expect to find it also presented by some other prophets in their description of the last items of Gentile history.

Bishop Newton and many other learned expositors, understood that Ezekiel, in his 38th chap., has given the prophetic history of the "same times" and some of the "same events" as given by Daniel in the last verses of his 11th chap. He says "The same times and the same events seem to be presignified in this prophecy, as in that of Ezekiel, concerning Gog of the land of Magog."

Both prophets present great Gentile Powers in fatal conflict upon "the "mountains of Israel," or "the glorious, holy mountains." Daniel says "At that time shall Michael" "the great prince" "stand up," reign over "thy people," when there will be such a time of national trouble as has never been, at which time Daniel's "people shall be delivered, every one that shall be found written in the book;" following which is the "general resurrection."

Ezekiel says "And it shall come to pass at the same time, when Gog shall come against the land of Israel, saith the Lord God, that my fury shall come up in my face; for in my jealousy and in the fire of my wrath have I spoken. Surely in that day there shall be a great shaking in the land of Israel, so that the fishes of the sea, and the fowls of the heaven, and the beasts of the field, and all creeping things that creep upon the earth, and all the men that are upon the face of the earth, shall shake at my (God's) presence; and the mountains shall be thrown down, and the steep places shall fall, and every wall shall fall to the ground. And I will call for a sword against him throughout all my mountains, saith the Lord God; every man's sword shall be against his brother. And I will plead against him with pestilence and with blood; and I will rain upon him, and upon his bands, and upon the many people that are with him, an overflowing rain, and great hailstones, fire, and brimstone.

All who believe in a future day of God's wrath upon the wicked nations must receive this as a proof text of such a day. It must take place in connection with, and continue beyond Christ's coming, for his "presence" will be there.

This event according to its prophetic account, will be the most grand, awful, and glorious earthly event of which we have any record. It has four distinguishing features, one or more of which will be found in every inspired description given of it;—the presence and reign of Christ, the destruction of wicked governments, the resurrection of the dead, and a shaking of the earth, with a dissolving of its elements by fire. The Psalmist says "Therefore will not we fear, though the earth be removed, and though the mountains be carried into the midst of the sea; though the waters thereof roar and be troubled, though the mountains shake with the swelling thereof. Selah. The heathen raged, the kingdoms were moved; he uttered his voice, the earth melted." Ps. 46. 2.

Here we get the rage of the kingdoms and the shaking of the earth, the same as by Ezekiel. Isaiah adds his testimony thus: "The earth is utterly broken down, the earth is clean dissolved, the earth is moved exceedingly. The earth shall reel to and fro like a drunkard, and shall be removed like a cottage; and the transgression thereof shall be heavy upon it; and it shall fall, and not rise again. And it shall come to pass in that day, that the Lord shall punish the host of the high ones that are on high, and the kings of the earth, upon the earth. And they shall be gathered together, as prisoners are gathered in the pit, and shall be shut up in the prison, and after many days shall they be visited. Then the moon shall be confounded, and the sun ashamed, when the Lord of hosts shall reign in Mount Zion, and in Jerusalem, and before his ancients gloriously." Isaiah 24. 19.

In this passage we get the shaking of the earth, the punishment of kings and the reign of Michael. Jeremiah adds his thunder to the awful utterances of Jehovah as follows: "Set up the standard toward Zion; retire, stay not; for I will bring evil from the north, and a great destruction. The lion is come up from his thicket, and the destroyer of the Gentiles is on his way; he is gone forth from his place to make thy land desolate; and thy cities shall be laid waste, without an inhabitant. I beheld the earth, and lo, it was without form, and void; and the heavens, and they had no light. I beheld the mountains, and lo, they trembled, and all the hills moved lightly. I beheld, and lo, there was no man, and all the birds of the heavens were fled. I beheld, and lo, the fruitful place was a wilderness, and all the cities thereof were broken down at the presence of the Lord, and by his fierce anger." Jeremiah 4.

In this foreshadowing of the events we find the standard--signal—for the assembling of armies, "toward Zion," the "holy mountain," and evil coming from the "north," "Gog" from the "north," while the lion—a power represented by the lion—"shall come from his thicket," and the destroyer of the Gentiles (not the Jews) is on his way to "thy land." He then presents exactly in the order of the other prophets the shaking of the earth, showing that it would be thrown back into its chaotic state, as it was before its first creation as recorded by Moses.

We have many other prophecies in which the parallelism is very perfect, but we will cite but one more, from the 16th of Rev. "And the sixth angel poured out his vial upon the great river Euphrates; and the water thereof was dried up, that the way of the kings of the east might be prepared. And I saw three unclean spirits like frogs, come out of the mouth of dragon, and out of the mouth of beast, and out of the mouth of the false prophet. For they are the spirits of devils, working miracles, which go forth unto the kings of the earth, and of the whole world, to gather them to the battle of that great day of God Almighty. Behold, I come as a thief. Blessed is he that watcheth, and keepeth his garments, lest he walk naked, and they see his shame. And he gathered them together into a place called in the Hebrew tongue Armageddon. And the seventh angel poured out his vial into the air; and there came a great voice out of the temple of heaven, from the throne, saying, it is done. And there were voices, and thunders, and lightnings; and there was a great earthquake, such as was not since men were upon the earth, so mighty an earthquake, and so great. And the great city was divided into three parts, and the cities of the nations fell; and great Babylon came in remembrance before God, to give unto her the cup of the wine of the fierceness of his wrath. And every island fled away, and the mountains were not found. And there fell upon men a great hail out of heaven, every stone about the weight of a talent; and men blasphemed God because of the plague of the hail; for the plague thereof was exceeding great."

It seems to us to be a great strain on christian sincerity to doubt that this passage describes the same events as the others quoted; for we believe greater parallelism cannot be found in any collection of predictions in the Scriptures. In this last passage we have the government represented by the Euphrates, as having its waters, "peoples" and treasures, "dried up, that the way of the kings of the east might be prepared." These kings cannot be those of Western Europe, for they were never in any sense biblically, geographically, or historically, called the kings of the east.

If we turn to the 9th chap., we find the Euphrates power symbolized, and a part of its history measured, and its application to the Ottoman government so clear that there has been almost a unanimity of opinion among all classes of expositors that it belongs to the Turks. This harmonizes exactly with Daniel, for he presents the king of the north, or Turkey, as coming to his end and none to help him; that is, his helpers are gone, his waters dried up. Waters in Rev. are explained to represent "peoples" and "nations;" therefore we understand that just before the last battle, the Sultan will be deserted by many of his former allies and subjects, which will cause him to suddenly leave Rome's Eastern capitol, and go to the Holy Land for refuge, where he will find his national grave, just when the tombs of the saints will be opened, and they awake to immortality. This passage also proves that when Turkey is thus weakened, all the nations will be drawn into collision, which will eventuate in the "battle of that great day of God Almighty."

These foreshadowings certainly have a remarkable adaptation to Turkey at the present time. More than two-thirds of the Sultan's European subjects are in their religion antagonistic to the government, and many of them are now in rebellion, and are seeking independence of Mahometan dictation. England, France, Germany and Austria, have for a long time used their power to sustain the sinking kingdom, but they are on the point of abandoning it to its coming fate. Thus the waters—"peoples and multitudes"—are being drawn out of the channel of the sick man's river, as his supporters, which must eventuate in his destruction.

The Revelator groups together in this passage many of the characteristic events of the last judgment, the advent of Christ, the great battle, the earthquake, and the devastating storm of thunders, lightnings and hail.

We now inquire, What nations are predicted in these prophecies as instrumental in bringing Turkey to its end in the land of Israel? The Psalmist says, "The kingdoms were moved." There will be more than one. Jeremiah says, "The lion is come up from the thicket, and the destroyer of the Gentiles is on his way." Ezekiel presents Gog, the chief prince of Meshech and Tubal, and "Tarshish, with all the young lions thereof," and their allies. It might seem that these are the same as those seen by Jeremiah, as they are represented as leading many other nations, and one of them could very properly be called the destroyer of the Gentiles, as he leads many of them to the place of final destruction.

Who is Gog? He is a king, or ruler, for he is the chief prince or ruling prince of Meshech and Tubal. According to history, the principal descendants of Meshech and Tubal are the Russians. Mr. Faber reads the passage thus: "Gog, the land of Magog, the prince of ROSH, Meshech and Tubal." From Rosh we get the name Russian.

Smith, in his Dissertations on the Prophecies, says—"The posterity of Meshech peopled Cappadocia and Armenia. Thence they sent colonies to the north, who were called the Moschi, or Moscovites. The posterity of Tubal, Josephus informs, peopled Iberia, on the Black Sea. According to Bockhart, Tubal was the father of the Tiberians on the north of Armenia the Less. And Martin (in his Philological Library) informs that Tubal was the father of the Russians." p. 205.

It is evident from these historic facts that the descendants of Meshech and Tubal were mingled, but subsequently were divided into many families and tribes, who should in the last terrible struggle be led by the Gog of the north, as a leading representative king. It is a remarkable fact, as stated by Mr. Smith, that some of the chief princes of those barbarian tribes assumed the "dreadful epithets, "The scourge of God, and, The DESTROYER of nations." Jeremiah says, "The DESTROYER of the Gentiles is on his way" from the "north parts." Mr. Guthrie, in speaking of the same people, says—"These fierce tribes were scattered over the vast countries of the north of Europe, and the northwest of Asia, which are now inhabited by the Danes, the Swedes, the Poles, the subjects of the Russian empire."—Smith, p. 204.

But it appears from this prophecy of Ezekiel that Gog will encounter an antagonistic host, allied against him, led by "Tarshish, wth all the young lions thereof." Who does Tarshish and the young lions represent? Mr. Smith comments upon this as follows: "Tarshish was a grandson of Shem. He peopled Cilicia; and from him the city Tarshish or Tarsus (the birth-place of St. Paul) there had its name. Its inhabitants became the most expert seamen, built the best ships, and many of them became merchants. The Mediterranean in their vicinity came to be called the Sea of Tarshish. This name was given to a city in Spain, Tartossus, or Tarshish. The west end of the Mediterranean came to bear the same name. And finally, authors inform us, Tarshish came to be a name for the sea in general. Accordingly the ships of Tarshish mean the ships of the sea. (See Pool on this passage.)

Nothing is more common than for names in prophetic language to be thus extended, and transmitted from one place and even nation to another. When we read therefore of the merchants of Tarshish, we may understand, not the descendants of any of those ancient cities of that name, but the merchants of the sea, or some great mercantile, maritime power. And their ships of war, we may suppose, are designed by all the young lions thereof. The LION may be the SIGN of their navy, or their coat of arms."—p. 216.

It seems to us difficult to conceive how a more perfect mystical description could be given of England than this given by the prophet as interpreted by these renowned expositors. Its imperial symbol is a lion; its sails whiten all seas, its merchants trade at all ports, and the thunder of its naval cannon echoes in the four quarters of the earth. It is the only nation now openly manifesting opposition to Russia's progressive movements in Asia and towards Constantinople.

We learn from the prophecies, according to approved expositors, that the three kingdoms to occupy prominent positions in the great movement of the last battle will be Turkey, Russia and England. Turkey to be a defenceless, crippled nation, deserted of its supporters, and swallowed up by Gog or Russia, from the north. Russia to form extensive alliances with the surrounding nations, acting as a leader, and so draw them into a general war, which will terminate in their utter destruction, and thus it it will become the "desroyer of the Gentiles."

England will hide its war purposes, like a lion in the "thicket" until Russia shall develop its real intentions on Turkey, with its design to possess the Holy Places, when it will suddenly bring out its young lions—war-ships—and defiantly inquire of the Czar, Hast thou come "to take a prey?" "to take a great spoil?"

Somewhere in the midst of these mighty scenes, Christ will rend the heavens and appear in his glorious majesty, and the warring millions will wail at his presence, and the elements will convulse, while the saints will sound the note of hallelujah sweeter and higher than mortal ears ever heard. The nations are preparing for the tragic scenes, and wheeling into line for the last prophetic battle. Let all the people of God ascend by divine aid to the summit of translation, for the prophetic clock is about to strike the hour of eternal redemption.

TURKEY.

As the threatened war on Turkey will be a religious war between Christianity and Mohammedanism, it is interesting to learn the numerical strength of the two parties in Turkey itself, between which the war issue is pending outside of any foreign intervention. We have the authority of the London Times for the following statement:—

"The population of the Turkish Empire in Europe, Asia, and Africa, is vaguely supposed—for even an approach to correct statistics is out of the question—to amount to 36,000,000, little more than 27,000,000 being under the direct sovereignty of the Porte. That of the European Provinces consists of 15,000,000, of whom between 5,000,000 and 6,000,000 belong to the so-called vassal States of Roumania and Servia. Besides these, who are all Christians, there are in the Provinces immediately subjected to the Porte—Bosnia, Bulgaria, etc.—about 4.000,-000 of the same denomination, against only 2,500,000, or perhaps 3,000,000 Mussulmans. These Christians, although divided into a variety of races and sects, have one common bond of union in their hatred of the Turk, in their longing to oust him from Europe, and in their hope to constitute among themselves a Confederate State or a Federation of States, capable of taking rank among the independent European nations. Add to this that a large proportion, about 3,400,000, are Slavs, and these—such of them, at least, as are not Mussulmans—besides the mutual support they yield to each other in their own territory, rely on the sympathies of the Slavs, especially of the Southern Slavs of the Austro-Hungarian Empire—that is, about 4,500,-000 Dalmatians, Crotians, etc.—who dream of a South Slavish combination to be made out of the fragments both of the Ottoman and of the Hapsburg Monarchy.

Were Turkey left to her own devices, left to settle her quarrel with her subjects; were not foreign—say Russian and Austrian—influence at work to check.the impulse both of the Government and people of her tributary principalities, and of the Volunteers from the Austrian Slav Provinces, it is not easy to believe that her unaided forces would be equal to the task of crushing the insurrection in Herzegovina, or of preventing its spread to the hitherto undisturbed adjoining districts, and the general outbreak of an internal feud between the antagonistic creeds and races.

The Government of the Porte feels this, and in its desperate struggle for existence it clings for support to that Power which is supposed to have the most dangerous designs against the integrity of the Ottoman Empire. It clings to Russia, and obeys passively and almost entirely the influence of the Russian Ambassador, General Ignatieff, a man powerful by the strength of his character, by his consummate adroitness, and also by 'the eighty millions of people prepared,' as he says, 'to back him.'"
J. C.

THE CRISIS IN TURKEY.

The intelligence daily received from Turkey justifies the gravest apprehensions for the immediate future. The military movements and the diplomatic negotiations relating to the insurrection in Herzegovina are entirely lost sight of in the more serious complications at Salonica and Constantinople. The danger that now threatens is a rising of the Mussulman mob against the Christians, and an outbreak of a religious war more fanatical and therefore more bloody and merciless than any that has stained the recent history of the world. From the possibilities attendant upon such a rising, and the massacres that must be perpetrated before it would be possible to crush the mob, the mind shrinks back in horror. In the outrage at Salonica we have an illustration of what a Mussulman mob can do under slight provocation, and of the indifference or weakness of the authorities. Bloodthirstiness is a passion which grows by what it feeds on, and the affair at Salonica has evidently stimulated rather than repressed the hostility to the Christians. If the foreign war vessels which now blockade that port were to be withdrawn, or the vigilance of the foreign consuls and ministers to be for a moment relaxed, there is not the slightest doubt that there would be a fresh outbreak, much more extended and disastrous.

The situation in Constantinople is even more serious. There the Softas—a term applied to all persons attached to the Mosques—appear to be masters of the situation. They are reported as marching about the streets to the number of ten thousand, uttering revolutionary cries. The Sultan, so far from being able to control or to repress this mob, was besieged by them in his palace, and after an hour's clamor, yielded to them abjectly and dismissed the Grand Vizier at their request. This incident illustrates at once the gathering strength of the unruly population, and the cowardice and helplessness of the Porte. Both Turks and Christians are buying weapons in readiness for the conflict which is so plainly impending. Even in Asiatic Turkey there are indications of a similar condition of affairs. At Beyrout and Damascus there have been several cases of assault or murder by the Moslems, and hostility to the Christians has manifested itself in so many ways that the French have found it necessary to send a man-of-war thither to protect them.

When all these circumstances are taken into consideration, it will be apparent that the next few weeks will be weeks of uncertainty and anxiety, possibly of tumult and bloodshed. The faith of the Mussulman teaches him that Paradise is the reward of all who die fighting for Islam; and the Moslem mob would look upon a massacre of Christians as a holy enterprise, ensuring an entrance into heaven, to all who might engage in it. Of course foreign intervention would make short, sharp work of the participants in such a rising, and the result would be the final elimination of the Sick Man from European politics. But it is to be feared that such intervention could not come soon enough to prevent a terrible collision with bloody results. What with the dangers to be apprehended from this source, and liable to develop at a moment's notice, and with the complications sure to attend the settlement of the Turkish affairs by the great powers, each of which is jealous of the other, the situation of affairs at present is exceedingly dark and threatening.—Boston Journal.

The above is a carefully written editorial in one of the most reliable political papers published in the country, and we think very truthfully represents the crisis in Turkey, according to to-day's news (May 20th). We solicit for this article a very careful reading, comparing the facts stated with the prophetic features of those governments as recently published in the Crisis, particularly as it relates to two items in the prophetic description given:

(1) That this war must be a religious war between two classes of worshipers; one class anathematizing and attempting to utterly extirpate the other.

(2) That this war must excite the jealousies of the great Powers, bring them into collision, and bring out England and Russia as the leading powers of the embattled hosts.

Everything connected with this terrible strife, so far, seems to correspond exactly with the prophetic history of the introductory scenes of the last battle as we have believed and taught for more than thirty years, and as many of our standard expositors wrote long ago. We wait with unmeasured interest to see how the matters will turn during the next few weeks. If the war element prevails, then we have no doubt the end of the age has come; but if the efforts for peace should succeed, then the church will have to wait a little longer for her triumph.

EXPERIENCE.

The christian religion is founded on certain principles, which are essential to produce human happiness in this life, and secure a home in the kingdom of God. These principles are not true because they are in the Bible, but they are in the Bible because they are true. They are the plain laws of righteousness, or right doing, and are eternal. They are all in harmony with good common sense, and commend themselves to every candid person.

In addition to these fundamental principles, which we will not now stop to specify, the christian, who observes these principles, has an experience, which affords him knowledge that can be obtained in no other way. Without this experience, there is a painful uncertainty felt by those whose consciences are not seared by resisting the Holy Spirit of God, and refusal to obey the word of the Lord.

One most important part of christian experience is when the sins are first pardoned. A new life begins at that time. He is then "a new creature," and would be saved, should he be called to sleep in death. But pardon is not "the fulness of the blessing of the gospel of Christ." "There's more to follow." After cleansing comes the filling with the Spirit, or the gift of the Spirit. This affords a new, a richer, sweeter, more blessed experience, than that at the time of pardon. This is well known by all who have had the experience. There are a multitude of witnesses to this fact, including the young and aged, learned and ignorant, sick and well, rich and poor, bond and free, out of every nation, kindred, tongue and people, surrounded by all the trials and temptations that Satan can bring to bear upon them, thus showing that the grace of God "is sufficient" to keep them "in perfect peace" perpetually.

This experience is well set forth by Bro. J. M. Washburn, a minister of Christ, and published in the "Guide to Holiness." He says:

I saw that it was an experience, and so knew that it could be understood only by experience. Remembering how impossible it had been for me once to understand regeneration, I learned not to cavil at a thing, because I could not understand it. Soon I began earnestly to crave it. How blessed, I thought, it must be to abide in the love and conscious presence of the Holy Spirit. But the subject was dark, and I knew not now to seek the blessing. To tell me that the blessing was attained "by consecration" to God was to afford no aid, since I knew not how to make the consecration. Beyond the intellectual apprehension, the whole subject was exceedingingly dark to me. The words used to describe the higher life I could not understand, but they formed a mere theory, quite a different thing from an experience. But I desired that which I could not understand, and so I continued to search for it. I read the experiences of others, conversed with those who had the experience, and almost constantly thought about it and desired it myself. Still I had no oppressive anxiety, no feeling of despair as I had before conversion; yet I craved it, thinking that it must be a most blessed life.

I need not enter into further detail. I was not satisfied with my present experience, and wanted a better one. I thought I had two or three specially discouraging things to contend with. 1. My turn of mind had always been metaphysical and doubting. 2. I was surrounded by most oppressive and crushing worldly matters, which had been bearing me to the earth for more than a year. On Saturday, July 15th, 1871, I had a free conversation with two friends, who were living the life of trust. One of them assured me that I was not far from entering into it. But it was dark to me. On Sabbath I read and thought on the subject most of the day; and in the evening the impression was made on my mind that that life would be mine some day, though I still had no anguish on the subject.

LIGHT BREAKING IN.

On Monday morning I awoke at about 6 o'clock, quite refreshed from sleep. The sun was shining beautifully in the room, and before rising I turned to engage a moment in meditation and devotion. As I turned—not having the subject of the higher life in my mind at the moment—the light of the Holy Spirit shone into my heart as gently, sweetly, serenely as the sun-rays were shining in the bed-chamber; and the whole blessed life of trust was made plain to me. How gentle was the inflowing! It was the still small voice of the Spirit, showing the mind how to trust Jesus for all things. There was a real showing to the mind which before was dark. The Comforter was sent into the heart (John 16: 15), and took of the things of Jesus and showed them unto me. No transaction between the mind of man and man was ever more real and true. At the moment my mind was unusually composed, and God favored me to see the whole operation with great clearness. The first thing was new . . . light imparted to the mind. It came gently and sweetly, affording a most subdued sense of sweet peace and rest.

2. The mental act was simple in the last degree—was the yielding of the human to the divine will; and brought into the proper relation with the light of the mind; this was as easy as it was sweet and gentle. With the light, I felt new, sweet life flow into the spiritual nature. Or, as already said, the inflowing of life may have given the light, according to the teaching of John: "In Him was life; and the life was the light of men."

3. I had a conscious elevation, or lifting up of the faculties of the mind into Christ, constituting, as I suppose, the ingrafting of the branch into the Vine. With this sense of elevation there was a conscious re-adjustment of the mental faculties into greater harmony.

4. There was a flow of very gentle, sweet peace into the heart, with not the slightest agitation or emotion of the mind. This sense of sweet peace, I think, resulted from the elevation and re-adjustment of the faculties of the mind in harmony, as well as from the presence of the Spirit in the heart.

5. With great clearness I saw that the life of trust is a stage of christian experience; and that it is attained by simple belief, not by mental struggling, nor inward agonies, nor even by prayer, but alone and solely by trusting Jesus. I saw this with great clearness.

A NEW POWER.

6. There was consciously bestowed on the mind a new power, whose office is to trust; and I saw that the life of trust is one not full of doubts and fears, as my christian life had been for nearly twenty-five years.

7. I saw the burden of my wordly matters, which had been crushing me for so many months, pass directly from me to Jesus, not to the Father, not to the Holy Spirit, but to Jesus; and, at the same time, I saw that hereafter he is to be my burden-bearer. With these temporal burdens, all other burdens passed from my heart. How sweet the peace and rest that took their place!

8. There was a singular power of watchfulness imparted to the mind; the ability to guard the heart, the passions, the feelings and appetites, with a singular ability to stay the tongue in silence; and with a very peculiar sense that the faculties of the mind which I had consciously experienced to be lifted up, would hereafter keep watch over the temper, the disposition to fret and worry, and over all those passions and tempers which so easily lead us into sin. And I realize that there was more than a presence in the mind; there were conscious powers left permanently, practical principles which are to remain in the mind as the means used by the Holy Spirit to secure in me trust life, to be worked out in every-day walking with Christ. There were not new organs given to the mind, but a new power of using those already possessed. I observed at once that there was no force whatever in the objections which I had supposed lay against the life of trust; nor was there the least force in the reasons which I had thought might hinder me from entering into it.

There are no feelings of pride in the blessed experience, but one is emptied of self and self-dependence. There is no feeling that "I am holier than thou," but in looking to Jesus the sight of self is lost. Nor does one feel that he is set free from human infirmity. On the contrary, he feels that he depends on Jesus for every thing, moment by moment. He has no sense of "perfection," but he sees more clearly than it was possible to see before, his own utter imperfection, and total dependence on Jesus for all things. The frame of mind is more humbling far than the former one, though the mind is filled with a boldness to confess Jesus, which it never had before. The mental frame is sweet, calm, and unanxious, with a wonderful power of watchfulness, as the means of abiding in faith and love. One is engaged in prayer and praise constantly, when the mind is not directly employed in other matters. His spiritual sky is also cloudless, and the communion with Jesus is conscious, and most precious to the soul.

"COME SUDDENLY."

In my own case the blessed Jesus was pleased to come suddenly to me, and show me the wonders of his love; and how I bless his name for it! I saw the whole operation in my own mind. But I converse with others on whose minds the same results have been wrought, though done gradually, and they cannot point to the moment when they entered upon this most blessed life. Although it is a joy to know the moment of the great change, the great thing is to know that the change itself has been wrought. God does not deal with us all alike, yet if we seek them he will give to all of us his most precious blessings.

Beloved christian, why continue in your life of strife and struggling? You are not satisfied; your life is not desirable; and though a follower of the Master, much of your life is dark and dreary. The life of trust is as much superior to your present life of conflict as your life of conflict is superior to the life of him who is laboring under conviction. Why, then, not seek a higher, better christian life? It is surely for you. You must believe that that life is, and then diligently seek it; it will then be yours, as many have testified to themselves, with an experience "exceeding abundantly above all that you had asked or thought, according to the power that will work in you." Give the matter the assent of your intelligence, and the consent of your heart; the blessed Jesus will do the rest. He will scatter the darkness, give the light, and bestow the blessing. It will fit you for greater usefulness, take you from the yoke of the law, and give you a sweetness of peace and rest such as you never imagined it possible to have while in the flesh. You will then see what it is to live in Christ, and have him live in you. It will open to you wonders of love, and a richness of experience which hitherto you had thought reserved for heaven. You will see that all the precious promises belong to the children of God in this life, and that they may indeed enter into "his rest" in life.

THE TRACT FUND.

THE ADVENT CHRISTIAN PUBLICATION SOCIETY, at a meeting on Springfield camp-ground, August 11th, 1875, voted to raise Two Thousand Dollars for the free distribution of Tracts the ensuing year; and they invite the help and co-operation of all lovers of the Lord and of his truth, in the furtherance of the good cause. The times are ominous of coming events, and admonish us to diligence in the Master's work. The Lord is at the door, and what we do must be done quickly. Let the contributions be prompt, hearty, and liberal. The Lord will reward the liberal giver.
A. W. SIBLEY, Sec. Adv. Chris. Pub. Soc.

Remittances should be sent to the Treasurer, GEO. T. ADAMS, Boston, Mass., or they may be enclosed with remittances to the Crisis Office.

BRO. M. BATCHELOR.

I was with the church in New Bedford yesterday (May 21st), and called on Bro. Batchelor. I found him quite low, and he must soon leave us and go to the land of the enemy, unless the Lord saves him and raises him up. He requests every brother and sister, when they read this, to spend five minutes or so in earnest prayer to the Lord, that he may raise him up and let him preach yet a little longer to perishing men. I hope that all God's children, who read this, will heed Bro. B.'s request. C. GOODRICH.

Obituaries.

THORP. At his residence, at Jay En, Republic Co., Kan., April 16th, 1876, Eli Thorp, after a short but severe illness, which he bore with great patience, aged seventy-eight years.

He left a wife and seven children to mourn his loss. He was old and helpless, yet they miss him as a dear father. O it was hard to give him up. He was born near Westfield, Mass., in 1798, on the 14th day of April. He was converted to Christ about the age of sixteen, and has always lived the life of an exemplary christian, having never had a charge brought against his christian character. Since he joined the Adventists he has been a zealous advocate of the doctrine. His poor tottering old limbs are resting in the grave, awaiting the sound of the trumpet, when they will come forth to be clothed in immortality, to die no more.

"Asleep in Jesus, blessed sleep."

Funeral sermon by E. N. Bliss.
W. P. THORP.

A. C. Times, please copy.

STICALMYRES. Sister Sticalmyres died in Pineville, of typhoid pneumonia, aged 57 years.

She attended the funeral of her niece three weeks before, took cold, and now she sleeps in Jesus. Thus death has entered the family three times in three weeks, and three newly made graves may be seen in Pineville cemetery, side by side. When will Jesus come and destroy the last enemy—death. Funeral by the writer. M. R. MILES.

COLLINS. In Geneva, N. Y., Jan. 13th, 1876, Bro. Joel Collins, aged seventy-six.

The subject of this notice, being exemplary under all circumstances, was highly esteemed by all of his acquaintance. The last few years of his life was devoted to the service of God, and he greatly rejoiced "in the hope of the gospel," going down to the grave like a shock of corn fully ripe, there to await the time of harvest. His home was "a pilgrim's home," and many times has he carried the servants of God to their appointments, esteeming it a privilege to thus aid in the work of salvation. By his request the writer officiated at his funeral held at Higginsville, N. Y., his former place of residence. May the Lord bless and comfort the large circle of relatives.
C. H. WILLIAMS.

HATCH. In Oxford, Me., March 29th, 1876., William Hatch, aged sixty-nine years.

The subject of this notice experienced religion in early life, and joined the Methodist church, where he has remained ever since. He fell seven years ago and broke his leg, and it never healed. He has been a great sufferer, being obliged to sit in his chair, with his broken leg upon a stool. We believe there is hope in his death. He leaves three daughters who wept bitterly as they looked upon his white locks and palid brow for the last time, yet they mourn not without hope. May the grace of God be given to the afflicted ones.
G. L. TRACY.

ELKINS. Fell asleep in Christ, in New Durham, N. H., March 25th, 1876, Bro. John Elkins, aged seventy-four years.

Our Bro. professed religion in 1843, and although like the church from Egypt to Canaan, destined to disappointments and trials, yet it was his settled faith that in due time our heavenly Canaan would be gained, and rest, sweet rest would be enjoyed forever. He leaves a wife and two daughters with other friends to mourn their loss. Sermon on the occasion by the writer, assisted by Bro. I. Damman. J. G. SMITH.

FOREIGN NEWS.

LONDON, May 17th. The Standard's Vienna special says that a panic prevails among the Christians in Rustchuk, and the consuls have sent their families across the Danube. The Porte has refused to allow a Greek man-of-war to pass Dardanelles, declaring that the powers which signed the treaty of Paris are alone entitled to station vessels of war in Golden Horn.

May 18. A letter from Pera, a suburb of Constantinople, dated the 11th inst., says that the excitement caused by the Salonica affair has not abated. A party of Softas yesterday paraded the Stambord, crying: "Down with the Grand Vizier."

SALONICA, May 17. Two French iron-clads and two frigates, carrying thirty guns and 1200 men, have arrived. The French man-of-war Chateau Renard, which came to Salonica at the time of the murder of the consuls, has been ordered to return immediately to Beyrout. Eleven persons, all of the lowest class, have been convicted of complicity in the murders. Six already have suffered death, as previously reported. The execution took place in the public square. There was a large crowd of spectators present who manifested some excitement. The crews of the French and German men-of-war were present.

LONDON, May 19. The Standard's Vienna dispatch says the Herzegovinians have declared, through their representatives at Cettinje, that they will not accept the rumored armistice because it would give the Turks an opportunity to bring up reinforcements. The German squadron will not be ready to sail for Turkey until three weeks from to-day.

The Daily Telegraph's correspondent at Berlin states, upon unquestionable authority, that the German and Russian embassadors in London have telegraphed their Governments that England does not agree to the proposition which resulted from the Berlin conference.

In the House of Commons to-day the first Lord Admiralty stated that the British fleet in the Mediterranean had been ordered to Salonica, also a gunboat.

A letter from Constantinople to the News of the 12th inst. says that the excitement of the last three days has amounted to a panic. The demand for weapons, both by the Softas and Christians, is so great that most of the shops in Stamboul have sold out all their stock.

The Softas, that is, all persons attached to the Mosques, are practically masters of the situation. They number about ten thousand persons, and their influence over the Protectorate is supreme. They utter threats against the Sultan and his Ministers, and sometimes against the Christians. Although quiet now they profess to be friends to the latter. Yesterday a great number of them went to the Palace and demanded dismissals of the Grand Vizier, Mahmoud Nedion Pasha, the Chickh Ul Islam and the Minister of War. The Sultan resisted an hour, but the clamors of the mob finally induced him to demand the resignation of the Grand Vizier. The scene was most riotous and disorderly. Constantinople contains only 1600 regular soldiers, the remainder being Redits and recruits. The Turkish officers openly admit their inability to control the latter in case of an outbreak, and it is generally believed that they would obey the Softas.

Large mobs of Softas have been parading the streets demanding the dismissal of Mahmond Nedion Pasha, whom they accuse of being under Russian influence. Threats have been made against the Christians generally, and two or three murders have occurred, which the police are doing their utmost to hush up. Constantinople, in fact, is in revolution. The Softas are not satisfied with the appointment of Mehmet Rushdi as Grand Vizier and clamor for Medhat Pasha. They want Mehmet Rushdi as President of a National Parliament. Yesterday a large number of Softas at Bajazet Mosque would not allow prayer for the Sultan to be read. On the 10th inst. Professor Bonamy Price and wife narrowly escaped the violence of the mob while visiting a Mosque.

If the struggle should take place, as everybody is dreading, between the native Christians and the Mussulmans, the Christians would prove victorious, provided the troops did not aid the mob. But in a general rising of the Mohammedans the large colonies of European subjects in Constantinople and along the Bosphorus would be in greater danger than the native Christians, because their wealth would constitute an aditional stimulus to the religious zeal of the Turkish rabble. This danger the respective embassadors have provided against as far as the means at their disposal allowed.

Advices from Bagdad state that from the 23d to the 29th of April the deaths from the plague were 390. At Hallah, for the same period, 148.

CHANGE OF TIME.—The Pittsfield Campmeeting will commence August 20th, instead of August 26th, as heretofore published.
O. S. FRENCH, Secretary.

Mass. Mission Tent.

At the late Conference in Lynn, it was voted to send the Mass. Mission Tent into the field as soon as the weather will permit. There are two questions which the Committee would now ask: 1st, Shall we have the means to send it? and 2nd, Who among our brethren wish it to come into their vicinity, or can tell us where it can be put up with a good result? If those who gave pledges at the Conference can at once remit the amount, or a part of it to the Treasurer, C. Goodrich, the Committee can send the Tent into the field.
For the Committee, I. I. LESLIE.

Alton Bay Campmeeting.

The Alton Bay Campmeeting is appointed to commence August 26th. J. COUCH.

At a meeting of the Board of Managers of the Second Advent Chrtstian Association, held April 11th, it was voted that the Annual Meeting of the Association for this year be held in Chelsea, Mass., Aug. 23d, at 2 P. M. (the week between the Springfield and Alton Bay Campmeetings). Full notice hereafter. C. E. BARNES.

NOTICE.—The Mechanic Falls Campmeeting Committee are requested to meet on the Campground Wednesday, June 7th, at 9 A. M. Should the weather be stormy on that day, let us meet the first favorable day afterward.
R. R. YORK, for the Committee.

NOTICE.—I am obliged to withdraw all my appointments this month on account of sickness brought on by an accident years ago, which has grown to be a serious rupture, which my doctor says must cause my lying still to get well. I for the first time in my life have been in the house five days with sickness. The Lord has favored me thus far. I would say to all my many friends, pray if it is his will I may visit you a few times more; if not, I feel reconciled. Letters cheer.
HIRAM MUNGER.

CONFERENCE.—A special session of the Kansas and Nebraska A. C. Conference will convene (D. V.) near the so-called Bell school-house, in Washington Co., Kansas, Wednesday, May 31st, at 2 o'clock P. M. A general attendance is requested, as business of importance is to be transacted. R. F. and M. J. Clark are expected to be present with the Mission Tent, and meetings will continue through the week and over the following Sunday. As per order. R. F. CLARK, Sec.

NOTICE.—There will be a Quarterly Meeting of the Advent Christian Church of North Fairfield, Ohio, the first Saturday and Sunday in June. A general invitation is extended to all the Brn. and friends that can come, to co-operate with us in the work of salvation. L. C. KERR.

NOTICE.—We propose to hold a meeting at what is known as Edgefield church, one and a half miles from Stevenson, Ala., beginning July 28th, and holding over Sunday, for the purpose of forming a North Alabama A. C. Conference, composed of the churches of Alabama, East Tennessee, and North Carolina. Would be glad to see as many of the preaching brethren as possible. Let every reader of the Crisis pray God to bless the meeting to great good here. We wish to organize and send a delegate to the S. A. C. Association this year. J. A. CARGILE, Stevenson, Ala.

VERMONT CONFERENCE.—The next session of the Vermont Quarterly Conference, will be holden at Hardwick, commencing June 6th, and hold as long as God will bless it. Let Vermonters rally for God, and come to this meeting. Drop your work then, and come to work for and with God. He'll pay you ten-fold. A. A. HOYT, for Com.

NOTICE.—There will be a business meeting of the Eastern Maine Missionary Association, held in connection with the Maine Annual Conference at Bangor, June 18th. We hope as many of our preaching Brn. as can will attend this meeting, as business of special importance in relation to our Camp and Tent meeting enterprise for the season will be considered and arranged.
JER. CARR, O. S. FRENCH, for the Committee.

Women's National Union Campmeeting.

POSITIVELY UNSECTARIAN.

There will be a Women's National Campmeeting held at Seabrook, N. H., under the auspices of the Christian Women's Bureau, organized Mar. 14th, 1873, commencing on Wednesday, June 28th, and holding till Monday, July 10th. All christians, men and women, that can work for the glory of God and the salvation of the perishing, instead of creeds and isms, are cordially invited to meet with us. We expect to have a good old fashioned campmeeting, without the fashions and follies of these times. We shall bring before this meeting the subjects that most inspire and encourage the humble workers for Jesus. The fares will be reduced on the different Rail Roads as is usual for such meetings, which we shall advertise the first of June. All that wish to put up tents on the ground, either wooden or cloth, will please write early to Bro. C. A. Barton, Seabrook, N. H., so as to have their location secured to them.

ANNA E. SMITH, Pres., SUSIE E. PAGE, Sec., of Christian Women's Bureau. Those wishing to inquire more about this meeting will correspond with Sister Anna Smith, 231 West 22nd St., New York City.

By order of the Christian Women's Bureau.

Women's National Campmeeting.

We wish to inform our friends that the above is not designed to take the place of the Seabrook Campmeeting, of which due notice will be given hereafter. Persons desirous of obtaining rooms for either of the above meetings can obtain them by writing to C. A. BARTON, Secretary for Com., Seabrook, N. H.

CONFERENCE.—The Lord willing, the next semi-annual session of the A. C. Conference of Northern Pa. and Southern N. Y., will be held with the church at Turner Creek, Bingham, Potter county, Pa., commencing Friday evening, June 2nd, 1876, and hold over the following Sunday. Those coming by rail, stop at Genesee Station, on Erie railway, Western division, then to Turner Creek. Stop at Bro. Tracy's, on stage road. Those coming by their own conveyance, inquire for deacon Amos Johnson. We hope that all will make a special effort to attend this meeting. Come, friends of truth, let us make a grand rally, and let us show to the world that we mean what we say. Let us make such a stir among the dry bones of ignorance and superstition, that sinners and fallen angels will tremble. Come filled with the Spirit of Jesus, and then our influence will be felt. Now is the time for action; soon it will be too late.
E. C. COWLES, President.
H. ZIEGENFUSS, Secretary.

Conference.

The Washington Co. Quarterly Conference of Advent Christians is hereby called to meet on Friday evening, June 2nd, 1876, with the church at Bell school-house, and hold over Sunday. On account of stormy weather and a bad state of roads, there was no session held for the election of officers on March 11th, as per call. It is hoped that each church will send delegates with credentials signed by Elder and Clerk, and that all of "like precious faith" will lay to a helping hand to save the perishing. The Bridegroom is soon coming. Let us be ready. The business session will be Saturday, June 3d, at 2 o'clock P. M. Officers will be elected by ballot. The business of first Quarterly Conference will follow the election of officers.
J. W. HAYWORTH, President.
[No State given.]

New York State Conference.

The annual meeting of the N. Y. State Advent Christian Conference will be held with the church at Springwater, Livingston Co., commencing on Thursday evening, June 8th, and continue over the following Sabbath. Springwater is on the New York and Erie R. R., about fifty miles south from Rochester. We trust every minister in the Conference will be present at the annual gathering, and that they will encourage the churches to send their full number of delegates and quarterly collections to help carry forward the cause of truth. Let every church where there is no minister located, and every church that wishes occasional or regular preaching, send delegates. If you cannot send Brn. as delegates, send sisters.

Brn. and Srs. scattered abroad, who want a tent or grove meeting in your vicinity, come to this annual meeting, and tell what you want, and what you can do to support one. Our Savior will soon appear, and our work of saving the perishing will soon be past, and our efforts should be increased and untiring until he comes. We hope to see many of the dear saints at this feast, who have not been able to meet with us for a long time. Come praying, in the Spirit, to the first meeting. Come all. Homes will be provided for all who come. Remember the time, delegates, and collections.
M. R. MILES, Pres.
JAS. E. WELLS, Sec.

Maine Annual Conference.

The Maine A. C. Annual Conference will convene at Bangor (in the Hall occupied as a place of worship by the Advent church), Tuesday evening, at seven o'clock, June 13th, and continue several days. It is very desirable that every minister in the State, who is in sympathy with this Conference, should attend, also delegates from every church and society. Each church is allowed one delegate, and one delegate to every ten members additional above twenty-five. There will be important business brought before the Conference for action; such as affects the special interest of the Conference, the mission and tract work, the ministry, and all the churches of our State. Come all.
GEO. HUMPHREY, Pres.
I. C. WELLCOME, Sec.

NOTICE.—A meeting is to be held every Sunday at Turner, Me., Chase's Mills school-house. When there is no preaching, we shall have a prayer meeting at three o'clock in the afternoon. A general invitation is extended to the brethren and sisters abroad to come and labor for the perishing.
For the brethren, C. S. TIRRELL.

CONFERENCE.—The Annual R. I. and East Ct. A. C. Conference, at its March session, voted to hold an adjourned session with the A. C. Church at Danielsonville, Ct., commencing Wedn'y, June 7th, 1876, and hold three days. Preachers and churches are requested to represent themselves at this meeting, as business of importance will come before it; prominent among which will be the new Constitution. The delegates appointed to attend the Annual Meeting at Providence, R. I., are the only legal delegates to this adjourned meeting. Let every church send the same delegates that were sent in March to Providence, R. I.
N. A. ANGELL, Conference Clerk.

NOTICE.—Hereafter there will be regular meetings at the Pine Ground Advent Chapel in North Chichester, N. H., three times on Sundays, and Wednesday and Saturday evenings. All those wishing to preach will correspond with E. Ordway, North Chichester, N. H.

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN:—There are no vacancies in the Desk of the Scitico church for "UNRECOMMENDED STRANGERS." This is my answer to past, present, and all future applicants, during my pastorate. In all kindness, greeting.
H. C. SMITH.

NOTICE.—There having been no meetings in Dover for quite a number of months, and we, feeling that the cause has been lowered, and that it is our duty to raise the banner again, have organized and started meetings. Our meetings will be called The First Advent Christian meeting in Dover, N. H., and we want good brethren that will not make division to come and preach the word. For the church, H. S. PINKHAM.

NOTICE.—There will be a conference in Indian River, Me., to commence June 21st, and continue over the Sabbath. We expect to see a good representation of Jesus' friends in this locality. Come all who can. Ministering brethren from abroad are invited to come and help us make this one of the best meetings for the salvation of the lost and perishing. For the church, M. W. CORLISS.

NOTICE.—Providence permitting, we propose another gathering at the grove of Bro. J. F. Emerson, West Levant, Me., the first, second, third and fourth days of July next. All are invited, who love to meet in the name of the Lord, and so much the more, as they see the day approaching. We have need to gird up anew, to fortify our powers mightily, by giving heed to the sure word of prophecy, and exhorting one another to a waiting readiness for the return of the Master. It is expected that Bro. J. G. Smith, of Farmington, N. H., will be present to assist in gospel labor, as also Bro. F. A. Baker, with other brethren in the ministry. ISRAEL DAMMAN.

Meetings are held in Hall over "German National Bank," corner of Sixth Avenue and Wood St., Pittsburgh, Penn. Bible classes, for the discussion of Bible topics. 10 to 12 A. M. Preaching by Eld. G. D. Clowes at 7.30 P. M.

QUARTERLY CONFERENCE.—The third meeting of the N. H. Adv. Chris. Quar. Conference will be held with the church in Whitefield, N. H., commencing Wednesday, June 14th, at 7 o'clock P. M., and hold over Sunday the 18th. May there be a general gathering in the name of the Lord. We expect Bro. A. Ross, and hope Bro. Couch will attend as usual.
N. WHEELER, D. W. DAVIS, J. W. WHITE, } Com.

Wisconsin Campmeeting.

Our State Campmeeting will be held at Lavalle, Sauk Co., beginning Saturday, June 3d, holding over two Sundays. Lavalle is on a branch of the Northwestern R. R., running from Madison to Elroy, Sparta, etc. The meeting will be held about half a mile south of the Lavalle depot.

Having located the meeting so far north this year, we trust friends in that part of the State will specially appreciate the move, and show their appreciation by a large attendance. We hope for an excellent meeting, and look for great results. Let ministers as well as lay members come early, and come to work with their might.
O. THOMAS, F. J. GROAT, WM. SHELDON, } Com.

N. B.—Let all put up tents for the first Saturday who possibly can.

York Co., Attention!

The next Quarterly Session of our County Conference is to be held at Bar Mills, Me., commencing Thursday, June 1st, 1876, at 2 o'clock P. M. Will our preachers and churches take immediate steps towards attending this session, or having themselves reported by letter? Our continued existence as a Conference may depend upon the course you take in this matter. Ample provisions will be made for all who attend. Strangers in the place may find a good home by inquiring for Simon J. Locke. C. H. SWEET, Secretary.

VERMONT TENT.—Those who wish the Vermont Tent pitched in their vicinity this year will please inform me at once, so we can arrange for preaching, etc. Those who can help to carry forward the work will please correspond with me now. Address me at Waterbury, Vt.
A. A. HOYT.

Nova Scotia Annual Conference.

The Nova Scotia Advent Christian Conference will be held at Bear River, commencing on Thursday, June 15th. We hope not only to see the faces and hear the voices of old friends, but extend a cordial invitation to all who may either personally or publicly feel interested in the grace to be brought unto us at the revelation of Jesus Christ. J. M. TOZIER.

NOTICE.—The subscriber having changed his place of residence from East Penfield to Seneca Falls, N. Y., is at liberty to supply (occasionally) any church in Central New York that may desire his services. WM. INGMIRE.

Maine Special Notice.

Please attend to this at once. The Secretary, Deacon, or Elder, of each Second Advent Church in Maine should give the number of members in their respective churches, by postal card or letter, at once, to the Secretary of the Maine A. C. Conference, that we may know how many delegates we are entitled to in the S. A. C. Association, chosen at our Annual Conference in June next. Address I. C. WELLCOME, Sec., Yarmouth, Me.

NOTICE.—To the Brethren of Iowa Christian Conference:—You are all aware that we are nearing the time for Tent Meetings. The Iowa Mission Tent is not fit to put into the field this season. There is but about one fourth promised that is needed to put into the field a 50×80 tent, which we much need. Camp and Tent Meetings very much depend on your decision. There are many who are amply able to help if this matter was laid before them. I cannot go all around and see you; I should spend more time than is needed to get the tent I have contracted for. Will some one lend a helping hand, and do it promptly? Tent work must stop if this fails, and the blood of souls must be found in some one's garments. I do not want it to be mine. Come, Brn., wake up, and let me hear promptly from any State of all who wish to help the cause in Iowa, that I may know what to do. P. S. W. DEYO, Charles City, Iowa.

NOTICE.—The question of time for the Annual Session of the Vt. Conference has been discussed, and most seem to think September the best time. And as it has been ruled at two Conferences not to have it holden at the time of campmeeting, we think to have campmeeting commence perhaps the last Tuesday in August, or the first Tuesday in September, and close the next week Wednesday A. M.; and the Conference session commence Wednesday P. M., and hold till Saturday A. M., with preaching evenings. Those interested will please communicate to me their views of the plan, at Waterbury, Vt. A. A. HOYT, for Com.

THE LAKE VIEW CAMPMEETING, Magog, P. Q., Canada, will be held, as per vote of Conference, immediately after the Alton Bay meeting. Time hereafter definitely given. Let those who have promised to build cottages be in time with their preparations. Lots free, and all welcome.
C. P. DOW, for the Committee.

NOTICE.—By an urgent request of the churches of Rockland and St. George, Me., to become their pastor, I preach one half the time at each place. First and third Sunday at Rockland, second and fourth at St. George. H. S. MITCHELL.

THE Pittsfield, Me., Campmeeting will commence Sunday, Aug. 27th. O. S. FRENCH, Sec.

THE Mechanic Falls Campmeeting will commence Saturday, Sept. 2d.
R. R. YORK, for the Committee.

NOTICE.—Bro. A. Damon's labors having closed with the church at Bridgewater, Vt., those wishing to preach for us will please correspond with J. Y. Briggs instead of J. T. Briggs, as formerly published in Crisis. J. Y. BRIGGS, Sec.

Tent for Sale.

A Tent fifty feet in diameter, nearly new, having been pitched only six times, will be sold for the very low price of $150.00.
S. G. LOW, Highlandville, Mass.

ANY person wishing to preach for the Second Advent Church in Worcester, Mass., are requested to correspond with some one of the preaching committee before sending their appointments.
E. G. Higgins, Dr. H. W. Buxton, W. M. Hall, Committee. N. J. STREETER, Clerk.

ALL brethren wishing to preach to the A. C. Church in Keene, N. H., will please correspond with A. A. Stiles or Geo. W. Elliott. In behalf fo the church, A. A. Stiles, G. W. Elliott, G. W. Spalding, H. H. Darling.

THOSE wishing to correspond with the church in Portsmouth, N. H., will please address the following committee: J. H. Berry, J. Shannon, J. Downing, J. B. Trefethen, R. Worster.

ALL corresponding with the Adv. Chris. Church in Charlton, Mass., please direct to Thomas F. Dockham, Charlton, Mass., or J. O. Cortis, Oxford, Mass., preaching committee.
CHAS. W. DOCKHAM, Clerk.

NOTICE.—The church in Wakefield, Mass., have chosen Bro. B. Finney their corresponding Secretary, and the preaching brethren who desire to visit the church will please correspond with him. For the Brethren, C. GOODRICH.

Wanted

To purchase, a small house on Springfield Camp ground,—one in the front circle preferred. Any one having one for sale will please correspond (stating the price) with J. HEMENWAY, Westfield, Mass.

NOTICE.—The office of the Biblical Messenger is now removed to Exeter, N. H. Eld. W. C. Stewart will have charge of the correspondence. All communications in general should be addressed to the Biblical Messenger, Exeter, N. H. Articles for publication may be addressed to me at Waterbury, Vt., where my private address will be for the present; and I shall have charge of preparing the matter for the paper.
A. A. HOYT.

NOTICE.—Preaching brethren wishing to preach for the First Christian Advent meeting in Dover, N. H., will please correspond with the following committee, JOHN W. FELKER. H. S. PINKHAM.

Notice.

"UNION IN CHRIST" is the title of a neat illustrated Monthly, devoted to Christian Union and evangelistic work. Its editorial staff are clergymen of ability in different denominations. It will be furnished a year to our readers when remitting to this office, renewals or sending new subscribers, by enclosing 30 cents extra for "Union in Christ." Regular terms 60 cents a year; 25 cts. to ministers of the gospel and to agents. Sent on trial three months free with terms to agents. Address H. A. KING, 37 Park Row, New York City.

QUARTERLY MEETING.—The next Quarterly Meeting for Lexington District will be held in Lexington, Mich., commencing June 9th, and continue over Sunday. Eld. C. Mendenhall, Norwalk, O., is to preach the word. As we have had a continuous revival since January 1st at three points in this District, and is still in progress at a fourth point, we expect a glorious time in the name of the Lord. All are cordially invited.
R. J. ARNOT, Chairman.
GEO. W. WRIGHT, Sec.

Appointments.

☞ APPOINTMENTS MUST BE RECEIVED AS EARLY AS TUESDAY MORNING (as our paper goes to press about noon) to insure insertion for the coming week.

☞ The following RESOLUTION was passed at the late meeting of the A. C. P. Society:—

"RESOLVED, That no appointments be published in the CRISIS henceforth for persons unknown to the Editorial Board (by which is understood the Editors, Editorial Committee, and Business Agent), unless satisfactory reference shall be given."

The Committee appointed by the Adv. Chris. Association, at its last Annual Meeting, to advise with the Editorial Board "in relation to the publication in the World's Crisis of the appointments of men unworthy of recognition as preachers," having attended to the duty assigned them, recommended, and the Editorial Board have adopted, and ordered to be published, the following resolution:—

"RESOLVED, That when the Editorial Board is properly notified by any of our Churches, or Ministers, or responsible persons, by a written allegation that a certain minister, or ministers, lack moral character, that they be instructed to notify such minister, or ministers, of the information received, as a reason for withholding their appointments till after a proper trial and acquittal."

All communications in relation to this matter should be addressed to the Secretary of the Board—GEO. T. ADAMS, Boston, Mass.

MORMONISM EXAMINED: OR
Was Joseph Smith A Divinely Inspired Prophet?

A THOROUGH REFUTATION OF MORMONISM, containing over 100 proofs of its Fallacy, deduced from its so-called Inspired Books, such as The Book of Mormon, The Book of Doctrine and Covenants, and The Inspired Translation of the Bible.

This work is now in press, and will be ready, in paper covers, in June. Price, by mail, 40 cts. single copy; $1.00 for three copies; $3.50 per dozen. Send orders to to Wm. Sheldon, Brodhead, Wis., or to the Crisis Office.

SPECIAL OFFER TO MINISTERS.—Ministers of any denomination (including Mormon Elders) who wish a copy for perusal, or to keep as a book of reference, will be furnished at 25 cts. per copy, provided they send to the author, Wm. Sheldon, Brodhead, Wis., instead of the Crisis Office; and provided further that such orders shall be sent before the close of the month of June. Other orders may be sent to either place.

THE BIBLE DOCTRINE OF THE SOUL.

An answer to the Question: "Is the Popular Conception of the Soul that of Holy Scripture?"

BY CHAS. L. IVES, M. D.

Professor of the Theory and Practice of Medicine in Yale College.

This is a book of 119 pages, in which the Author discusses the above question in an interesting and able manner,—showing the material nature of, the mortality and destiny of the Soul,—A future immortality to be the special portion of the Righteous,—What the Bible teaches as to the future of the Wicked,—The intermediate state,—The Resurrection,—That of the Righteous and of the Wicked, etc.

The Author claims that the doctrine set forth,—"Honors God, exalts the Bible, insures preaching of future punishment, subverts Universalism and Infidelity, errors of Romanism, of Spiritualism and Swedenborgianism, helps in work of Missions, rightly values the body, brings Christian unity, and promotes personal holiness."

We are much pleased with this work. It is having a wide circulation. We have just received a quantity of the pamphlet edition, and can now fill orders at the following prices: Pamphlet, 25 cts. per copy; $2.25 per dozen by mail; $15.00 per hundred by express. Bound in cloth, 30 cts. per copy by mail; $3.00 per dozen by express.

MY PRAYER.

MRS. V. D.

Lord, tarry not, but come.

Dear Lord, I'm tired, sad and weary,
Each day seems long, more dark and dreary;
Bring rest and home,
"Sweet home."
Lord, tarry not, but come.

Dear Lord, I'm but a pilgrim while here I roam,
The way is lonely, and my spirit moans
For rest and home,
"Sweet home."
Lord, tarry not, but come.

Dear Lord, thou "Chief Shepherd" of the fold,
How far yet are we from the gates of gold,
From rest and home?
"Sweet home."
Lord, tarry not, but come.

Yes, come dear Lord, and set thy children free,
For we are exiled here while away from thee,
From rest and home,
"Sweet home."
Lord, tarry not, but come.

Dear Lord, it seems we must be almost there,
Where Eden's beautiful home is bright and fair,
There is rest and home,
"Sweet home."
Lord, tarry not, but come.

SOMETHING ABOUT WASHINGTON.

C. COLEGROVE.

A few words from this prominent and central place may be acceptable and timely. The sun of April 12th, the day I left (which by the way is the anniversary of the birth of Henry Clay) was even uncomfortably warm, and I thought climbing up the various stairways necessary to reach the Senate gallery was rather toilsome. The capitol is surely large enough, and grand enough to satisfy the pride or patriotism of the most ambitious citizen; so I should say at any rate. It is certainly an enormous and costly structure. There is much to write about things in Washington, but I do not propose to go into detail just now.

There is quite a number of believers in the truths for which we feel called to contend, but I do not think there is as much systematic or concerted action at present as would seem desirable. I do not think there are any regular meetings of brethren in the city, except that about fifteen Christadelphians meet in an apartment of the City Hall on Sunday, and listen to expositions by J. W. Boggs, a stair-builder, living on North Carolina Avenue. It is true there are difficulties and discouragements in the way of effort, and these consist largely in the almost hopelessness of enlisting public interest in unpopular truths in a place like Washington. Still, faithful witness-bearing seems a high and honorable obligation on believers, even amid prevailing indifference, and in spite of the intense worldliness of the upper, middle, or lower ten thousand. Christ is able to reward the patient and heroic faithfulness of the few. Who can tell what an aspect of heroism this faithfulness will have in the great revealing day? I think far too small an estimate is placed on this simple waiting and witness-bearing of a little company in the midst of all self-seeking and iniquity around.

It is sometimes said we must do everything to save the people. True. But they reject important truth, and one is often much discouraged in fighting the intense and almost universal prejudice. And that is not all. In a case of so much wrong and false teaching, the question will press. Who is really saved, or how can we certainly tell who is really saved, and who is really fit to be baptized? And who is so bold as not to tremble, lest he may act unwisely or rashly, or with a zeal not united with wisdom? For one, I do tremble. Thousands are said to be converted, though corruptly taught in many things. Ah, it is a time of sore temptation. Who can bear the confusion? And who dare say, I know I do perfectly right, teach right, think right, act right, when everything is on the verge of transition? I tremble and fear, in this most perilous epoch. Call it weakness, or aught ever else. Does not a feeling, painful and oppressive, possess the mind of thinking and seeing people, that the Satanic energies of the air are moved to fierce and excited action? I have come to this—nothing can answer, no, nothing, but the positive, personal interposition of Jesus Christ? Does the world think so? No! it calls your feeling fanaticism, or your instinct insanity, or your conviction a moral or intellectual distemper.

But I have wandered a little. Suppose our brethren in Washington try to do just so much, for Christ's sake, that is to say, bear witness for him, not separately or casually, only, but socially and in unison, and not forget the reward designed by Him who knows and watches and prizes faithfulness, and all the more against mighty odds. O, put that in italics!—mighty odds! And none but Christ is mighty enough to overmatch the odds. And what is all this current evil? It is not sword and fire, and hunting men to death; though what if it should be something that precedes it? Some think so. There is something if possible, even deadlier, or if not deadlier, more dreadful, in the awful pause before a tempest, than in the tempest itself. So thinks the soldier, in the paleness and palpitation that precedes the battle.

I call it a time of temptation. Let those prim themselves for a good time, now, who will. Let them be laughing and gay. It is not hard to scent the subtle moral miasm of a corrupt atmosphere. There is a certain charm, perhaps, in the atmosphere of Washington. But this is the city, the great head centre of political ambition, and of power also. Take up the city daily papers and just see the columns and pages given up to the investigations of roguery, real or alleged. Who can feel safe? What man in office, even if innocent may not stand in dread of some sudden accusation? And amid such a commotion of committees in quest of briberies and villanies, who does not count it a sad necessity to be thus publicly rogue-hunting, or to see Congress, whose proper business is legislation, so largely occupied, and actually compelled to be, in tracing all the adroit and law-breaking scandalisms of innumerable robbers?

But I have wandered again. I was going to tell you of a call I made on the pastor of the 19th Street colored church, Binga by name (but his initials I do not recall). He is just as black, I presume, as any man in his congregation. He received me kindly. I introduced to his attention some of the results reached in one department of study bearing on the second advent of the Lord. He listened attentively, and without objection or offense; nay, apparently with interest. He referred to a number of Baptist ministers in Canada, (where he formerly lived and labored), who, when the second advent was suggested in conversation, did not ridicule or oppose, but laughed in a highly amused manner, as if it was an idea curious, novel, or entertaining! He says he intends soon to return to Canada, as he does not like Washington. I asked him, Why. He replied that his people were very dieffernt from the colored people in Canada.

"Are they not prompt in meeting expenses?"

"O yes, they do exceedingly well in that respect. They have built a house of worship that cost thirty-five thousand dollars, and have paid all but nine thousand, and they look out well for my support; but they do not bear plain preaching, and if rebuked for drunkenness or immorality, they complain, and call it quarreling. And they need rebuking for such things."

"I attended your meeting last Sabbath evening, and I liked the address of the white preacher that evening very well." (His name was Chickering.)

"O yes; but our people don't appreciate such a discourse. They are fond of excitement, and are addicted to shouting and groaning, and that they enjoy."

The next Sabbath evening I went again, and listened to a young colored preacher (not the pastor), who spoke passably well for about twenty or twenty-five minutes. The singing by the choir was really excellent. Occasionally a piece was sung by the congregation, some invisible negro leading in a strange, wild, tremulous way. A colored man, who prayed, desired the Lord to "keep us as an apple near thine eye." He also said—"Drain us dry of the least and last remains of sin." On the whole, I liked the meeting much better than some white folks' meetings, although I thought they forgot the Bible teaching about secresy in giving, since they ask all who will to come forward with their gifts, and there was quite a rush forward, after which the boxes were passed. Then there was a lot of notices of entertainments, festivals, etc., mostly invitations to attend, from other churches. The multitude seem to think money is the magic key to prosperity, and the cry is, money—more money.

Look at the costly edifices in Washington, and everywhere else in our cities. People are building, supposing all things will continue as now. The advent is excluded from calculation. Millions are put into granite walls. What folly!

I was sorry that Bro. McLean, who keeps a supply of tracts and books on F. Street, was suffering from illness when I left. I hope he is convalescent ere this.

On the whole the aspect of affairs is admonitory at home and abroad. The Pope is old, and like a puff, his life may fail any hour. Then what? Will the newly chosen camerlengo be the next Pope? If so, then we shall have a very large straw to point out the course of the wind. More yet; the Emperor Alexander of Russia, is thought by some to have softening of the brain. His son, who must soon come into power, and who is strengthened by the hands of his wife, the Princess Dagmar, is quite hostile to Germany. Then what? The rebellion in Turkey is growing, and fears are expressed that the Sultan will seek to touch a torch to the tinder of Mohammedan fanaticism. Then what? Here at home we have a great election buzz just commencing, with all its sober and critical issues; and what if this should be the most critical in our history? Who can be foolish enough to be dazzled or magnetized by the pageant and glory of centennialism? Is it a wild guess, to guess that this will prove a year of danger? Who dare trust in man alone?

Sardinia, N. Y., April 21st., 1876.

AN OLD PASTOR'S CHARGE.

[The following is an extract from the "charge to the people," given by the Rev. Dr. Lamson to his former parishioners in Brookline. Mass., Jan. 13th, 1876, at the installation of the Rev. H. C. Mabie. It is suggestive to other churches.]

The relation of pastor and people is not one for mutual admiration, or to furnish an opportunity of kindness and generosity on the one hand, and reciprocal gratitude on the other. My brother is not here simply to be loved and liberally supported, but to do a specific work. Let me then charge you.

First, to co-operate with him. Be brethren of this church, fellow laborers with your new pastor. You have called him to till this field, but not alone, or, to change the figure, you have called him to engage in a warfare here, but not alone. He is to be simply your leader in the toils and in the battles of the Christian service here. Never, never let him feel that he is alone in toil or in conflict, but that behind and around him is the whole church, eager helpers. Second his plans, enter into his work. Be with him in every effort, not to see him work but to work with him.

O brethren! I have rejoiced in, yea, been proud of the capabilities of this church as I have occasionally seen them brought out. But more frequently have I sighed over the existing but unemployed resources of the church. The latent forces, I have said, how mighty for good we might be were these fully developed and enlisted! I have sometimes felt, as, I think, the captain of a military company would feel, if, when going into battle, he sees that a large number of his men were in their tents sleeping on their arms. After a long drought, signs of rain appear, clouds gather and hang, full of promise, over the parched and thirsty fields. A few drops, big harbinger drops fall, the pastor has watched it all, and his heart swells with hope and throbs with anxiety. He sees that all that is needed for a plentiful shower is the prayer and the labor of faith of the church. But these are not renewed, and the cloud rich in blessing, folds its wings and floats away, leaving the fields as thirsty and barren as they have been, and leaving the pastor's heart more sad and heavy than before the signs of promise came. The opportune moment has come and gone. Watch, my brethren, the spiritual signs, that you may know when special prayer and special work are needed.

Be near enough to your pastor to see what he sees and feel what he feels. Let him never feel, just when co-operation is most needed, that he is left alone. Let him not sigh over the unused, unavailable resources of his church. Do not, I beseech you, think you can purchase an immunity from personal labor by your money. Christ redeemed you, the whole of you. And your person as well as your estates, are not your own, for ye, personally, are bought with a price. Get the idea inwrought into your very souls and keep it there, that in your pastor you have a leader, a co-laborer, and not a solitary workman, whom you have hired to sow the seed and till the fields and gather the harvest. "Go work to-day in my vineyard," is said by the Master to you no less than to him. There is a place and a work for every member. Paul did a grand work at Philippi—but he had a band of glorious helpers. In writing to the church there how affectionately does he mention the helpers. There were those women and Clement, and others his fellow-laborers. He did not work alone. It is a fine and most suggestive figure employed by Paul when he compares the church at Corinth to a human body, with its many and varied parts. For the body though a unit is not one member, but many. And there is no unnecessary member there. Not one whose office and service can be dispensed with. Neither is there in that mystical body—a Christian church. "Shall the foot say, because I am not the hand, I am not of the body? Is it therefore not of the body? Shall the ear say, because I am not the eye, I am therefore not of the body?" Ah! brethren, if you are a foot, occupy the foot, and do the office of a foot. If a hand, fill the place and do the office of a hand. And when hand and foot and ear and eye and every other member of the spiritual body, the church, is fulfilling its function, then will the pastor be strong and efficient and buoyant. Thus filling your places, co-operate with him, every one of you, in all the work. This is my first charge. But

II. Listen to and hear his instructions. He is to be a teacher. This belongs to his office—it is an important part of his work. You had an eye to his ability to teach when you called him. True, he will lead your public worship and administer the ordinances of Christ. But above and beyond these he is to instruct you. His high calling involves the feeding of the church with God's truth. Leaving out of the account his absences from home and his exchanges, he will be expected to come to you each year with one hundred and four sermons, into each one of which he has put his best thought and ripest experience. Fifty-two of these carefully prepared sermons, a goodly number of them, you will hear. In the mornings of the Sabbaths, when the weather is propitious, neither stormy, nor too cold, nor too hot; in fine when all the conditions are favorable, he will be greeted by a large and attentive congregation. But on unfair days and in the afternoons (unless your habits are changed) his spirit will sink when he enters this pulpit, and looks down on the empty seats, as quicksilver sinks when the glass is exposed to a current of cold air. Little will the absent ones think of the depression which their absence is causing in one heart. He feels that the toils of half the week are to be well nigh thrown away, and he comes to the close of the day chagrined and mortified when but for those vacant seats he might close the day cheered and encouraged. I believe you loved me, friends; loved me as much and as constantly as I deserved; but I do not remember my afternoon and rainy Sunday congregations as any proof of that love. How many times in my study at the close of the Sabbath have I argued with myself this question, my people say they love me and appreciate my ministry. I have many proofs that this is true. But then would a people that really loved their pastor and prized his sermons, so often leave him to preach to nearly empty pews? Would they do it? That was the question, and it staggered me sometimes, and it staggers me now. But it is not all, nor enough to hear the word. Be not hearers only, but doers of the word. The Bible is intensely practical. He who comes to unfold and enforce it has every time a practical message. He comes to tell you what to believe and how to live. For such messages more than testimony is demanded. Be obedient unto the truth.

III. Care for and aim to promote the piety of your pastor. But is not this reversing the order, do you ask? He is to stimulate and cultivate our piety. Are we to do this for him? Even so. You will mould his piety and give it its character, whether you design it or not. An influence goes forth from the church which surrounds the pastor, penetrating to his study and enveloping him in the pulpit like an atmosphere. Your prayer, your example, your activity will act on him, and through him react on yourselves. The life of the church will feed his life. That wonderful, almost seraphic young preacher, McCheyne, had a wonderful church. At one time there were a score of little praying bands in it that met every week to plead for spiritual blessings on their young pastor. Is it any wonder that he grew in piety and in spiritual power? Every time he entered his study, answers to these prayers came down on him.

Every time he entered the pulpit he was environed by an atmosphere pervaded, charged and hallowed by the spirit of prayer. It would have been strange indeed if he had not been eminently, pre-eminently pious. Every true prayer you offer for your young pastor, will return freighted with blessings into your own souls. If his piety wanes and his love grows cold, while among you, you, brethren and sisters of this church, will not be blameless.—Messiah's Herald.

CONFERENCE REPORT.

The business session of the Conn. A. C. Conference was called at South Windsor, Thursday, April 27th, 1876, at 11 A. M., by the President, Bro. Seth Woodruff, who opened the meeting with prayer.

Committee on credentials—O. D. Woodruff, Henry A. Hitchcock. Delegates present—Sidney A. Glover, Morris; Henry A. Hitchcock, Milldale; Henry A. Way, Wm. Reynolds, Bristol; Orrin D. Newell, Chas. A. Smith, Square Pond; O. M. Gilman, So. Windsor. Preachers—R. K. Stark, A. Elliott, I. B. Potter, Seth Woodruff, G. L. White, H. C. Smith, A. H. Steele, Joseph Curtiss, A. H. Phelps, Bro. Morse.

Bro. A. H. Phelps, a member of the Ohio A. C. Conference, having removed and located within the limits of the Conference, was received by vote as a member of the Conn. A. C. Conference.

Ordination committee appointed—A. Elliott, I. B. Potter, R. K. Stark. To arrange meetings during this Conference—Seth Woodruff, O. M. Gilman.

Voted, That visiting brethren be invited to take part in the proceedings, excepting only the right to vote.

Voted, That the former committee on certificates (President and Secretary of Conference, and Bro. H. P. Bradley) be continued, with instructions to issue certificates to preachers in good standing in this Conference.

Bro. Joseph Curtiss, pastor of the church at Morris, was, by their recommendation, proposed for ordination. The subject of appointing delegates to the National Meeting of the Second Advent Christian Association, was discussed, and it was thought that a thorough canvass of membership would entitle this Conference to three delegates; but owing to the absence of necessary information it was decided to send but two, and Brn. I. B. Potter and R. K. Stark were elected for that purpose.

The reports of delegates and preachers showed that the cause which finds favor with so few in these last days, was still near and dear to their hearts; and while the terrible influences which paralyze business, corrupt emperors and rulers, and demoralize nations, have a depressing effect upon the church of God, still, with heads uplifted, faith grasping, and light shining, the scattered flock press forward, amid perils strewn with the wrecks of stranded hopes, impressive mementos of a ruined world doomed to dissolving fire. Their King is coming. May enduring power be given, that at his approach it may be said, "We have waited for him."

The meetings through the week and over the Sabbath were excellent, and the preaching good. A blessed spirit seemed to pervade the minds of all present. Two requested prayers. At the close of the Thursday evening meeting, Bro. Joseph Curtiss was set apart to the ministry. Prayer by Bro. Steele; right hand of fellowship and charge by Bro. Potter. There was a good attendance, and the church at So. Windsor felt encouraged and strengthened. Thus closed our Conference, and may its spiritual interest prove a lasting benefit to the churches loving the appearing of Jesus.

O. D. WOODRUFF, Sec. and Treas.

Correspondence

From Bro. H. L. Stevens.

Editors Crisis:—Dear Brn. and Srs.:— It is not often that I attempt to write an article for publication, from the fact that I am not much of a scholar. I will, however, give you the pleasure of learning that I am yet alive, while many are falling around me. I feel strong in the Lord at times; but again my comfort flies, and I have to go to Him who has "the words of eternal life," and there get a fresh supply of oil, which lights anew my lamp, and it giveth light to those around me.

After the close of the Campmeeting at Plainville, Ct., I returned South and labored six weeks in revivals, which you read of in an article from Bro. E. Brundage, of Black Walnut, Halifax Co., Va. We had a glorious blessing from the Lord; several were converted. I have been teaching school ever since Jan. 3d. I walk four miles every day I teach, and walk three to four miles every Wednesday night, to assist in a prayer meeting; also the same every Sunday to preach, the fourth Sunday excepted. On that day I walk six miles to preach and return, making twelve miles. From constant walking, one of my knees has failed me, but thanks be to the Lord, my tongue continues to act. My knee failed the last of Feb. I cannot feel content doing nothing, if sick; and amid my excruciating pains I have not lost a day from school, and have lost only one night from prayer meeting on account thereof.

Bro. Brundage wrote to me to meet him at Clover Depot, Halifax Co., Va., on Sunday, 30th ult. My knee was in such a condition at the time I received his letter, that I was unable to walk a long distance. I took the case to the Lord. It seemed at one time that the nearer the time came to start, the more severe the pains were. On Friday night I went to bed, not knowing whether I should be able to walk the next day or not. My prayer was, "Thy will be done." I awoke the next morning, with apparently little more pain than I ever felt. Who had given me medicine? He who said, "The well need not a physician, but they that are sick."

I ate breakfast and started on my journey, distance twenty miles. I arrived at the place about 3 o'clock P. M., not very much tired. Bro. Brundage soon arrived, and we were welcomed with warm hearts. We had a very stirring meeting on Sunday. After meeting, I returned here to my labor. My knee has not troubled me any of account since I returned.

"Have we trials or temptations?
Take it to the Lord in prayer."

Sr. Miles has a "Child's Mission School" at Clover, with an average of sixty pupils daily. She depends on the Lord for aid, believing that he is a "judge of the widows" yet. She spent about ten years in Africa, with her husband, as missionary; so she understands how to conduct a mission school, and look to the Lord for an outpouring of his Spirit upon her. We hope to be able to organize a church there soon. Pray for us, that we may have success.

We are trying to raise money enough at this place to build a church. Money is very scarce here, so we have not enough to commence as yet;—hope the Lord will aid us. I am acting as Clerk for the church. We have nearly enough subscribed to buy lumber with, but not enough to buy shingles, nails, etc., neither to pay for the work.

"In some way or other,
The Lord will provide."

We are looking for the Lord to come very soon. Yes, the time will soon be here when we who are worthy shall have an entrance into the "city from above." We shall not have to build houses much longer, and "others inhabit them," but shall soon pass this gloomy vale of tears, and "walk the golden streets." As many as have this hope surely will offer their bodies "a living sacrifice, holy and acceptable unto God." Are we ready to "stand before the awful bar of God"? Let us examine ourselves closely. Let the world be crucified unto us, and we unto the world." Let us live holy, for without "holiness . . no man shall see the Lord" in peace.

In conclusion I would say, Brn. and Srs., pray for me. I sometimes encounter Satan, but never intend to be conquered by him, by the help of God. God's "grace is sufficient." "For the grace of God that bringeth salvation hath appeared to all men, teaching us that, denying ungodliness and worldly lusts, we should live soberly, righteously, and godly, in this present world; looking for that blessed hope, and the glorious appearing of the great God and our Savior Jesus Christ; who gave himself for us, that he might redeem us from all iniquity, and purify unto himself a peculiar people, zealous of good works."

Cole's Ferry, Charlotte Co., Va.

From Sr. E. A. Brundage.

Dearly Beloved in the Lord, pilgrims and strangers on the earth, desiring a better country:—"Having obtained help of God," I still continue with you, heart and hand, bound for the heavenly country. The "good fight of faith," which Paul, the beloved apostle of Christ, fought with such abundant success, we now are fighting, sustained by the same mighty grace, expecting the same glorious prize—a crown of life." But our salvation is now much nearer. Blessed thought! this earth, groaning beneath its terrible load of sin, is soon to be delivered, and the dear saints, now sleeping in dust, to be raised to immortal life, a beautiful Bride, to meet her glorious Bridegroom, to dwell with him on the earth made new, and to hear really, literally, through eternal ages of glory, his precious voice.

Dear sorrowing ones, be of good cheer; comfort yourselves with the exceeding great and precious promises of God's word, and remember that "He is faithful who has promised, who will also perform." Tempted and tried ones, keep looking to Jesus; help will come. "He will not suffer you to be tempted more than you are able to bear, but will with the temptation make a way for your escape." Weak ones, "be strong in the Lord"; "put on the whole armor of God, that you may be able to stand against the wiles of the devil." Little lambs, yours is indeed a blessed portion; for the good Shepherd carries the lambs in his bosom. Abide in Christ, that you may bring forth much fruit.

Sinner, Jesus loves you still. Behold how freely he saves, "even to the uttermost, all who come unto him." Come, then, boldly, for "this man receiveth sinners." Come believing, for he says, "Whosoever will, may come," and "I will in no wise cast out." Come now. The Spirit says, "To-day, if ye will hear my voice, harden not your hearts"; and again, "Now is the accepted time, now is the day of salvation." Should you delay, it may be too late. You run a fearful risk. O, I beseech you, stop and think. Thousands have remained undecided until life suddenly fled from their grasp, and they are irretrievably lost. Shall this be your sad fate?

Brethren and sisters in Christ, let us live humbly, honestly, and prayerfully, watching continually, lest we be overtaken in the snares of the wicked one. To live in Chris- we must labor for him;—work out that which he works in our hearts. Every opportunity of speaking a word for Jesus should be improved. But above all things, let us have "fervent charity among ourselves"; so shall the world see that we are Christ's disciples, "if we have love one toward another." If we seek to please Jesus we shall not please the world, but it is a blessed privilege to bear reproach for his dear name, who died for us. Nothing can harm us, because Christ is our shield. Secure and safe, we may rest beneath the shadow of his wing.

Beloved, when you pray, please remember me and my dear companion. We are still engaged in the work of the Lord. Have together with the church here been passing through severe trials, for the truth's sake, but they are working for our good, and will, we trust, cause the truth to spread but the more. The Charlotte church was similarly tried, but the Lord kept it from falling, and many have been added to it, we trust, of such as shall be saved. My companion is away from home most of the time, laboring to supply our temporal wants, and preaching the gospel freely wherever there is "an open door." The burden is a heavy one, but the Lord supplies strength and grace. Our forefathers waded through seas of blood to preach the gospel; and cannot we, by patient, trusting faith, conquer our smaller difficulties? We are almost home, and soon shall rest. Praise the Lord. Affectionately yours in Christ Jesus.

Dear Editors:—I chewed and smoked tobacco for upwards of thirty years. I have now given it up and am cured. I want, with your permission, to tell your readers, first, how I did not do it, and then how I did accomplish the task. I did not appeal to any spirit medium for medicine to cure my longings for the vile weed; nor did I procure any of the antidotes advertised for this purpose; neither did I rely on my own strength to conquer the foe; for I tried these before and failed. But I have conquered through Christ helping me. When the tempter would raise his head, I would remember God's word (Rom. 12: 1), and ask God to help me, and I was not disappointed; he came to my rescue every time.

My reason for addressing you is, I want to recommend God's medicine for the cure of using tobacco. I do not believe I could have given it up but for his help. I have no longing for it now. Try it, dear friends.

Brn. Editors:—I write a few lines at this time to let you and the readers of the Crisis know that there are a few in these parts who believe in the truth advocated by Adventists, and we believe also are trying to live in accordance with the same, and to let their light shine. The light may seem somewhat obscure, as the darkness is so great around us, and there are so few in comparison to the great mass that are willing to receive the light and walk in it, and so be able to let it shine to those around them. By perseverance on the part of a few, there are quite a goodly number in this vicinity who have embraced the truth and are rejoicing in it, even though it is unpopular and rejected by most of professed christians of the present day.

We had the privilege of listening to some sermons by Eld. C. B. Davis, an Adventist minister, who lives in an adjoining county. It seemed quite encouraging to learn that there was one so near who seemed so well able to advance the light, and also so willing to face the opposition of this remote place, where all is enveloped in superstition, prejudice and ignorance concerning the great truths designed for the people of this age.

We are truly glad that God is raising up, here and there, bold soldiers of Christ, who are willing to take a decided stand for God, and, fearless of consequences, go forth with Bible in hand, endeavoring to clear away the mist and fog of superstition and error, and present in their stead, and in plain contrast, the truth of God as revealed in his Word. It needs only to be contrasted with the error of the present time to let it shine out brilliantly. But O how few are willing to lend a listening ear to these commissioned messengers! The great mass turn aside, unwilling to receive the light, and seem to be willingly ignorant concerning the message sent them. But we hope that none will be discouraged on this account, but go on, willing to work as God directs, even though it it may seem like the gleaning time, as we truly believe it is. Laborers must not expect what might be called great results; but eternity only will reveal the good done by the servants of God who are giving "meat in due season," and thus preparing a few for the judgment of the last day. They truly have a promise which should encourage them, even though everything seem discouraging with regard to the result of their labors; but considering the worth of one redeemed soul, we feel that none should look discouragingly upon the work, no matter how few are benefitted. Yours in love.

Dear Brn.:—I wish to say a word of cheer to the dear brethren scattered abroad. I believe that our blessed Savior is soon coming to judge the world in righteousness, and cleanse this earth from all sin.

The little church under our charge here at Raymond is growing in grace and in knowledge of the truth as it is revealed to us in God's most precious Word. We are expecting to see you all in the course of a few short months, in the glorious kingdom of our Father, where there will be no more trials or temptations. We have passed through some trials of late, but the blessed Lord has been with us and sustained us, so that we feel stronger at the present time than we ever did before. Our prayer and conference meetings are seasons of refreshing to our souls.

Therefore we would say to the tried and tempted ones, hold on to Jesus; put your hand in his, and he will lead you and bring you out more than conquerors. Bless his holy name! The prophetic word, as well as the signs of the times, show that Jesus is soon coming. Cheer up.

From Bro. E. Bryant.

Christian Friends:—It is with joy that I can say to-day I am trying to serve the Lord. I feel weak, and am unable to serve him without help; and he has said, "He that cometh to me I will in no wise cast out." Then let us come boldly to him, that we may find grace to help in every time of need.

He hath said, "Fear not, little flock; it is your Father's good pleasure to give you the kingdom." And again—"They that seek me early shall find me." We that are young ought to take courage, though we have trials, knowing that "the trial of our faith worketh patience." If we are persecuted, remember "he that will live godly in this life shall suffer persecution." Let us try and be faithful, that we may hear it said, Well done."

Dear reader, have you made your peace with Christ? If so, all is well; if not, I pray you to be reconciled to God. Come now, while it is an accepted time, and a day of salvation.

Brn., pray for me, that I may be found without spot and blameless at the appearing of Christ.

HOME AND HEALTH.

DIPHTHERIA.

BY PUSEY HEALD, M. D.

The first thing to be attended to in this, as indeed in nearly all acute diseases, is to cleanse thoroughly the lower bowel by warm water enemas, provided they have not been regularly and freely evacuated up to the day of illness.

A full hot bath should next be given, without delay, immersing the entire body, if possible, to the chin; the temperature, at first 100°, may gradually be raised to 105° if the head is kept constantly cooled with ice or very cold water, applied with linen towels. This bath may be continued from seven to fifteen minutes, according to the strength of the patient; it should be cooled to about 95° for a moment or two before the patient is taken out, which being done, he should be dried quickly, by throwing a warm sheet over the body and briskly rubbing over the same with the hands.

Place the patient in bed at once, after wrapping the body in an open-front flannel, or other warm gown, and cover warmly with blankets; hasten to place hot bricks or jugs of hot water to the feet and limbs, and at once apply ice to the throat; this is best accomplished by putting from a pint to a quart of pounded ice in a bladder or oil-silk bag, one or more of which should be kept in every house. If ice is not to be had, then use linen compresses, wet in the coldest water obtainable, instead. The ice is much better, however, in all severe cases, and if applied in the manner stated, the clothing and bed linen are kept dry, which cannot so well be done when water is used; by placing dry flannel over the wet compresses, however, a careful nurse will do well in this respect.

Renew the ice as often as it melts; if water is used, the compresses must be changed every five minutes, or oftener if they become warm sooner.

Give the patient—if not an infant—small pieces of ice to hold well back in the throat; most of the melted water should be rejected, though a little of it may occasionally be swallowed; it is not best to reduce the temperature of the stomach below the normal standard.

Contiuue the application of the ice for thirty to sixty minutes, and then apply hot fomentations to the throat for fifteen minutes. To do this, take a piece of old, soft flannel, about two feet square, and fold it several times, so that it will well cover the throat—and upper bronchial passages—if the inflammation extends so far; set a bucket of boiling water in a tub, on the side of which you have placed a clothes-wringer, and having wet the folded flannel compress in the hot water, run it quickly through the wringer, or in its absence, wring it by hand, using cold wet towels to protect the hands; apply this hot compress to the throat and upper chest as soon as the patient can bear it without being burned.

The water must be very hot or the compress will get too cool before it can be wrung dry and applied; if it is too hot to apply, it can readily be cooled after wringing it. To be the most effective, it must be as hot as can be borne without burning the skin.

Immediately upon applying it, cover it closely with the bed blankets, using next to it a dry flannel to protect the former from the moisture and to aid in retaining the heat.

Renew the fomentation every five minutes, by having a duplicate ready to apply at once upon removing the other; if no duplicate is at hand, cover the parts with the dry blanket, while the compress is again being prepared. At the end of fifteen minutes, three fomentations will thus have been applied, at which time the parts should be sponged off with cool water and dried, and another application of the ice-bag or cold compress be made as before. Renew the hot bricks, etc., to the feet if the first ones have grown cool. It is very important to keep the feet and limbs fully up the normal temperature.

This alternate application of cold and heat to the throat, as I have described it, has, in my experience, as well as in that of others, been more effective than that of either heat or cold alone; but in the absence of hot water, I should rely upon the cold, though both can almost always be had.

Do not relax the treatment until you have unmistakable proof that you have overcome the tendency to the formation of the "false membrane," or, that having formed, it has ceased to increase, and, perhaps, commenced to slough off; even then it may form again, and often does, unless the cold compresses to the throat are continued.

The entire surface of the body should be sponged off at least once per day, for several days, and if there is much general fever, twice per day may be necessary. In this respect, as well as in all other applications, judgment must be used—the patient's constitution, strength, and the violence or mildness of the symptoms all being considered.

The air in the room should be kept at a temperature of about 70 to 73°, and as pure as it can be by thorough ventilation—neither extreme nor spasmodic, but constant.

The patient and nurse should be the only occupants of the room; all others should be persistently refused admittance; the more nearly this is adhered to, the better for the patient. If the nurse lies down, it must not be upon or in the bed occupied by the sick person.

No food should be given for the first twenty-four hours, nor even then unless the inflammation is subdued and the danger past. After that a little fruit juice may first be given, then baked apples and oatmeal or wheat-meal gruel, and afterwards Graham bread, canned fruit, and other hygienic dishes suitable for the convalescent.

If the fever lasts several days, a little canned or stewed fruit juice, orange juice, and very thin wheat or oat gruel may be sparingly given, if craved, but no solid food of any kind should be taken. The stomach cannot possibly digest any but the most simple food at such times, and instead of strengthening the patient, any other is sure to retard recovery, if it does not cause a dangerous relapse.—Science of Health.

In Hall's Journal of Health it is stated that for persons about to travel, or to go into the country for the summer, an ounce vial of spirits of hartshorn should be considered one of the indispensables, as, in case of being bitten or stung by any poisonous animal or insect, the immediate and free application of this alkali as a wash to the part bitten, gives instant, perfect and permanent relief, the bite of a mad dog (we believe) not excepted; so will strong ashes water.

SOME persons work all night, but it is not so healthful as working by day. It is easier to work in cool weather than in hot, but in excessively cold weather the limbs are benumbed, and cannot move so readily. In hot weather the most laborious work should be done in the morning and evening, and light work in the middle of the day.—Ex.

"No man's spirits were ever hurt by doing his duty; on the contrary, one good action, one temptation resisted and overcome, and one sacrifice of desire, pleasure, or interest, purely for conscience sake, will prove a cordial for weak and low spirits, far beyond what either indulgence, or diversion, or company can do for them."

I ONCE saw the parent of a lovely family approach his children with a basket of fine fruits, which he held up for them to reach. They were obliged to leap for them, but at length the indulgent father let down his hand and gave them the prize. Thus our heavenly Father holds his blessings at a distance to try us; but we need not fear the result, for if we look to him in earnest, he will in due time lower his hand, and give us "far more abundantly than we can either ask or think."—Rowland Hill,

WAITING FOR THAT DAY.

Waiting we stand,
And watching till our Savior shall appear,
Joyful to cry, as eastern skies grow clear,
"The Lord's at hand!"

But now the night
Presses around us, sullenly and chill;
Pain, doubt, and sorrow seem to have their will:
Lord, send the light!

Weary we wait,
Lifting our heavy eyes, bedimmed with tears,
To skies where yet no trace of dawn appears:
Lord, it is late!

But yet thy word
Saith, with sweet prophecy that cannot fail,
That light o'er darkness shall at length prevail:
We trust thee, Lord.

Oh, Morning Star
Of heavenly promise, light our darkened way
Till the first beams of the expected day
Shine from afar.

So will we take
Fresh hope and courage to our fainting hearts,
And patient wait, though every joy departs,
"Till the day break."

CHURCH ORDER vs. CREEDS.

W. TEFT.

The idea of a creed is so intimately associated with church order, in the minds of some very honest persons, that at the bare mention of any kind of regulation in church affairs, they exclaim, "Away with your creeds. I had enough of them when I belonged to —— Church. Away with your iron bedsteads, I have had enough of Papacy," etc., etc. As though organization necessarily implied the enactment of articles of faith, or the curtailing of one's private opinion, while it simply signifies, "To arrange or constitute in parts, each having a special function, act, office, or relation" (Web.); i. e., when applied to a church, to so systematize them that each member shall understand, and so be able to occupy its proper sphere, or function in the body.

But this class oppose all systematic arrangement, as though order was not a part of God's economy, when with but a moment's reflection, we are forced to acknowledge that in all created things, from the arrangement of the vast planetary system, down to the most infinitesimal animalcule, the greatest possible symmetrical perfection is exhibited, and all is governed by laws so systematic that but a slight deviation from them would produce inevitable ruin.

And yet these things were all arranged in such perfect system for man's special benefit, or to beantify and set in order a house for man to live in, over which he was to have dominion. Gen. 1: 26.

How vastly more important then, the laws and order necessary for the full moral and spiritual development of Christ's Church, especially as these concern our eternal future destiny. Indeed God esteems his revealed laws so perfect a system, that he threatens to punish with eternal death, the slightest deviation from them, on our part, unless we find refuge in the merits of one who has kept them, and so becomes our propitiation.

Paul comments on the order of Christ's church thus: "For as the body is one, and hath many members, and all the members of that one body, being many, are one body; so also is Christ. . . . . For the body is not one member, but many. If the foot shall say, because I am not the hand, I am not of the body; is it therefore not of the body? . . . But now God hath set the members every one of them in the body, as it hath pleased him. . . . . And the eye cannot say to the hand, I have no need of thee; nor again the head to the feet, I have no need of you."

Why not we ask, if each member can act separately, and independant of the other, and should do so, as those claim who repudiate organization? Hear him: "But God hath tempered the body together, having given more abundant honor to that part which lacked, that there should be no division [marg.] in the body; but that the members should have the same care one for another. And whether one member suffer, all the members suffer with it; or one member be honored, all the members rejoice with it. Now ye are the body of Christ, and members in particular." I Cor. 12: 12–27.

Now will some "no order" friend tell us how this unity of action, complete sympathy, and care of the members, described by Paul, can exist when each member is left to act separately, and feels independent of the other?

Again Christ represents his church as "sheep" and says, "There shall be one fold and one shepherd." Again, "Fear not, little flock, it is your Father's good pleasnre to give you the kingdom." Luke 12: 32. As a flock signifies a company or collection, and a fold an inclosure, can we be said to be a flock or fold when, there is not unity of action among us? Sheep are never said to be in a flock or fold when each goes his own way without regard to the other.

What a perfect symbol of order is a flock of sheep. All by common consent keep close together, each going the same way, or all lying down in the fold together for safety. It is a well known fact that while a flock of sheep remain in a compact body, wolves, no matter how hungry they are, dare not attack them, being too cowardly; but the moment they can frighten one out of the body, they are sure of him.

Thus the poet graphically and truthfully depicts the care,

"Jesus, great Shepherd of thy sheep,
To thee for help we fly,
Thy little flock in safety keep,
For O the wolf is nigh.

Thy flock are safe in danger's hour
Who in the fold abide,
The wolf the sheep can ne'er devour
Unless he first divide.

He comes with hellish malice full,
To scatter, tear, and slay,
He seizes every straggling soul,
As his own lawful prey."

And facts have proved these things true with us as a body. We certainly have exhibited very little of the wisdom of the "serpent" in the past. Nor are we to suppose our Savior used these similitudes without regard to their signification, for he could just as easily have chosen others had he wished.

I here give an instance that came under my personal observation of the sad effects of the lack of gospel order.

About twenty years ago there was a great revival in the town of C——, in this State, and about seventy were brought out into the light of Christ's coming at hand. They met to make some arrangement for church government, but "No," said some leading ones, "the Bible is sufficient," and nothing was done; but in less than three years wolves had come in, and they were "scattered, and pealed, and torn, and to this day nothing has been done to save souls there, and all, we believe, for lack of system. And this is only one of many like instances.

As we go from place to place to preach these "last day" truths, and our labors are blessed in saving souls, would the wisdom of the "serpent" throw open the doors and say, Come one and all, preach just what you please, these lambs will take care of themselves; or not rather, These are my children, and I must and will exercise a fatherly care over them. I will throw every possible means of protection around them.

Hear Paul to Titus. "For this cause I left thee in Crete, that thou shouldest set in order the things that are wanting, and ordain elders in every city, as I had appointed thee. Titus 1: 5. Here to "set in order (organize) churches" was so essential that Paul left Titus to do that work, rather than to go and preach in new fields, or raise up new churches.

Again, "For though I be absent in the flesh, yet I am with you in the spirit, joying and beholding your order, and the steadfastness of your faith in Christ." Col. 2: 5. Church "order," which resulted in their "steadfastness," was Paul's greatest cause of joy. Here let us define the verb order—to put in order; to reduce to a methodical arrangement; to systematize; to adjust. (Webster).

As it was so essential then to put in order, systematize, or organize churches, is our duty less? Says Paul, "Those things which ye have both learned, and received, and heard, and seen in me, do; and the God of peace shall be with you."

But I am sometimes told, with considerable self-complacency by some living where there are a number of scattered ones, instead of a united church, "I know we are rather hard to govern, we don't intend to submit to man very much. No church will make us haw, gee, etc."

Let us see, if, while we feel so rebellious toward church government, we are not rebelling against higher authority. Let Paul define the duty of the church to the ministry. "I beseech you, brethren, . . . that ye submit yourselves unto such, and to every one that helpeth with us, and laboreth." 1 Cor. 16: 15. "Submitting yourselves to one another in the fear of God." "Likewise, ye younger, submit yourselves to the elder. Yea, all of you be subject one to another, and be clothed with humility; for God resisteth the proud, and giveth grace to the humble. Humble yourselves therefore, under the mighty hand of God, that he may exalt you in due time."

Let us humble ourselves, and submit to church government.

Otis, Mass.

THE WATCHMEN ASLEEP.

THOS. FITZSIMONS.

The watchmen (the preachers) are asleep on Zion's watch-towers. They were commanded by their Master, when he went away into a far country to obtain his inheritance, to watch for his return; and they are now asleep on their posts, and the sheep left in their care are also asleep, in fancied security; and many will be lost thereby.

Now what shall the Lord do with that unfaithful servant, whom, when he returns, he findeth asleep, and who has utterly broken his command to "watch"? I tell you, christian preachers over the land, there is a fearful responsibility resting on you, and for the neglect of which, in the coming judgment, you may forfeit your souls. Ye are the shepherds and watchmen, and if through your sleep the sheep be scattered and lost, God says—"Their blood will I require at your hands." You are failing to give the warning; you close your eyes to the signs, and the prophecies obtain no meaning in your minds.

Awake out of your wretched slumber! Come out and proclaim to your flocks, as you are commanded by the Anointed One—"Behold the Bridegroom cometh! go ye out to meet him." Let not worldly considerations weigh in the balance. The time is so short, shorter than you have any idea of. Arouse from your deadly slumber, and have confidence that God will provide your bread.

UNCONSCIOUSNESS IN DEATH.

R. H. GOODE.

Near two months ago, I had occasion to notice, through the Crisis, a sermon upon immortality, delivered by Elder Bridges of this place. After the publication of my letter in the Crisis, I was publicly invited by Mr. B. to hear him again upon the same subject. This I did on the fifth Sunday in April, and now propose with your permission, to give your readers a short synopsis of the sermon.

After criticism upon my letter, in which I was unjustly charged with misrepresentation, the speaker launched into his subject by saying—Christ, the apostles and early Christian writers taught the doctrine of going to heaven at death; and he closed the harangue with the startling announcement—"I can prove from the Bible there are men now burning in hell who have been there for a thousand years."

Now I have nothing to boast of as a Scriptorian, but the little knowledge I possess of the Bible emboldens me to say, there is not to be found a sentence within the lids of the Old or New Testament Scriptures that affirms the Orthodox assumption—that man receives his reward at death.—Such a theory was never taught by the pen of inspiration; hence the Bible invariably speaks of the coming of Christ and the resurrection of the dead as the time of reward of the righteous as also of the punishment of the wicked.

Jesus says, "When thou makest a feast, call the poor, the maimed, the blind, and thou shalt be blessed; for they cannot recompense thee; for thou shalt be recompensed at the resurrection of the just." Luke 14: 13, 14. Again "The Lord knoweth how to deliver the godly out of temptation, and reserve the unjust unto the day of judgment." 2 Peter 2: 9.

From the reading of these Scriptures is it not evident to every unprejudiced mind, that the distributions of rewards are held in reserve until the day of judgment? Paul did not expect to receive the crown at death. Hence he writes—"Henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which the Lord, the righteous judge, shall give me at that day, and not to me only, but unto all them also that love his appearing." 2 Tim. 4: 8.

Bnt to a consideration of the Brother's text. "And the Lord God formed man of the dust of the ground, and breathed into his nostrils the breath of life, and man became a living soul." Gen. 2: 7.

The breath of life breathed into the nostrils of Adam was claimed by Mr. B. as the soul entity, or the principle that endowed him with immortality, independently of the physical organism, and on the death of the body took its flight to "fairer worlds on high."

In the Bible account of the creation of man, Gen. 1: 26, we read that man, and not merely the body of man, was formed of the dust of the ground, and man thus formed is said to become a living soul; not by the creation or impartation of another intelligent nature, but simply by breathing into his nostrils the breath of life. Now if the material organism became a living soul in consequence of breathing into it the breath of life, is it not a self evident fact that the material structure needed only the principle of vitality to constitute a living soul or perfect living man?

To admit as valid the argument of Mr. B., that the breath of life breathed into the nostrils of Adam is the immortal soul, and that this immortal entity formed the creature in the image of his Creator, would be to discard the Bible account of his creation in Gen. 1: 26, and admit the possibility of the soul entity passing from one body to another; for we read, "And it came to pass when he had made an end of speaking unto Saul, that the soul of Jonathan was knit to the soul of David." 1 Sam 18: 1.

If breath of life means immortal soul, then Jonathan's immortal soul passed into the body of David, or else how could they have knit together.

This definition of immortality makes it possible for a man to possess several souls at one and the same time. The idea of twin souls was believed by some of the ancient philosophers. "Avaspes, a Persian nobleman, when called to an account for some misconduct of his relative to a captive whom Cyrus had entrusted to his care, excuses himself thus; 'O Cyrus, I am convinced that I have two souls; if I had but one soul it comld not at the same time pant after vice and virtue; wish and abhor the same thing. It is certain therefore, that we have two souls; when the good soul rules I undertake noble and virtuous actions, but when the bad soul predominates I am constrained to do evil." Only give popular theology a fair chance, and it will commit suicide.

It was further argued that the soul is the intelligent and conscious part of man, and without it man is void of consciousness. If this be true, I would ask what part of man is reduced to unconsciousness by the stroke of death? Not the body, if that never possessed consciousness; not the soul if that escapes to heaven, or wings its flight to the regions of the damned. This view renders death powerless to reduce either the soul or body to unconsciousnes, and does away with the Scripture declarations—"The dead know not anything"; "their love, their hatred and their envy, is now perished." If love, envy and hatred are passions of the soul, how can they perish by the stroke of death, if the soul escapes its power. How vivid the contrast between the teachings of men and the teachings of the word of God. Man affirms the dead know more than they did before death. The Bible affirms they know nothing. Man says they have gone to their reward. The Bible says that neither have they any more a reward. Popular opinion says that the love of the righteous and the envy of the wicked are perfected at death. The Bible says that both are perished. The pious poet said "And when my voice is lost in death, praise shall employ my nobler powers." The pious psalmist—"The dead praise not the Lord."

Other Scriptures and other arguments used to prove immortal soul-ism might be noticed, but time will not permit, nor is it necessary. In the beginning of his sermon Mr. B. stated to the audience that "all the early Christian writers taught the doctrine of going to heaven at death." We propose to show what a few of them thought of the idea of emigrating to heaven at death. Clement, Bishop of Rome in A. D. 78, says, "All the days of the world, from Adam until this day are passed away; but they who have been made perfect in love have, by the grace of God obtained a place among the righteous, and shall be made manifest in the judgment of the kingdom of Christ. For it is written I will remember the good, and will raise you out of your graves." Polycarp, who was martyred A. D. 169, in his dying prayer at the stake, gave this testimony—"Father of thy well beloved and blessed son, Jesus Christ, I bless thee that thou hast thought me worthy of the present day and hour, to have a share in the number of the martyrs, and in the cup of Christ unto the resurrection of eternal life, both of the soul and body, in the incorruptible felicity of the Holy Spirit." Justin Martyr, who had been a Platonist, and who lived in the times immediately following the Apostles, A. D. 150, after his conversion to Christianity, writes thus:—"For if you have conversed with some that are called Christians, who confess not this truth, but dare blaspheme the God of Abraham and Isaac and Jacob, in that they say there is no resurrection of the dead, but that immediately, when they die their souls, are received up into heaven, avoid them, and esteem them not as Christians." Coming on down the stream of time we find Martin Luther protesting against the superstition thus: "I permit the Pope to make articles of faith for himself and his faithful, such as "The soul is immortal, and of the substantial form of the human body, with all those monstrous opinions to be found in the Roman dunghill of decretals," etc.; and William Tyndale, the man who it is said first translated the Scriptures into the English language, in replying to a Catholic writer who sought to establish the doctrine of the immortality of the soul says, "Christ and his Apostles taught no other, but warned to look for Christ's coming every hour, which coming again, because ye believe will never be, therefore have ye forged that other merchandise (Purgatory). And ye in putting them (souls) into heaven, hell and purgatory, destroy the argument wherewith Christ and Paul prove the resurreetion. If the souls be in heaven, tell me why they be not in as good case as the angels be; and then what cause is there of the resurrection?"

So we find the early Christian writers did not look for the crown at death. Their hopes of eternal life and immortality were based upon the coming of the Son of man. Christ taught it, and the Apostles preached it, yet I know one man, a minister of the gospel, who dares to say "Adventism is the worst form of infidelity," and unblushingly affirms that none but the ignorant and unlearned believe the doctrine. If the pages of inspiration do not teach the doctrine of going to heaven at death, what shall we think of those who continue to preach Papal traditions and fables of men, intermixing truth with error, or who are preaching and basing their hopes on the belief that their immortal souls go to heaven when they die. Are they not thus perverting the Scriptures, and preaching another gospel than that preached by the Apostles? Furthermore, do not preachers who are laying up earthly treasures preach another gospel than that preached by Jesus or Paul? Jesus plainly said "Lay not up for yourselves treasures upon earth." And Paul said "But thou, O man of God, flee these things." The minister of the gospel, who claims to be a watchman on the walls of Zion, but whose mind is wholly engrossed with worldly affairs, who engages in worldly enterprises, or joins political parties, or who is burdened with the cares of the farm and other secular callings had better give heed to the warning voice of inspiration—"But thou, O man of God, flee these things."

THOUGHTS WHILE ON A SICK BED.

M. JANE LOCKE.

"Thou wilt keep him in perfect peace, whose mind is stayed on thee, because he trusteth in thee." Isaiah 26: 3.

While this mortal body is racking with pain, this precious promise has been verified in my behalf. Vain are our own endeavors to keep ourselves in perfect peace when we are laid upon a bed of sickness. All we are required to do is to "Trust in the Lord for ever; for in the Lord Jehovah is everlasting strength.

O, the many rich and blessed promises left on record in the precious word of God, to all such as put their trust in him; and the most blessed thought of all is this, that the means of obtaining this perfect peace is put within the reach of all who will comply with the requirements of the gospel. A full and ample provision through the atonement of our adorable Saviour has been made for the redemption of all mankind, for Jesus himself declares plainly, "And I, if I be lifted up, will draw all men unto me."

While I contemplate the glorious plan of salvation, I view it as a broad river, touching as it were the very feet of the perishing with its silver spray, and a gentle voice is heard saying, "If any thirst, let him come unto me and drink." I am thinking, too, of the boundless ocean of God's love. "For God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth on him, should not perish, but have everlasting life." And as Moses lifted up the serpent in the wilderness, even so the Son of man has been lifted up, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish but have eternal life. I love also to contemplate the earth, where those who are counted worthy to obtain that world and the resurrection from the dead will never say "I am sick," and where there will be no more pain, for the former things shall have passed away. The blessed thought that all men have a home in Christ's coming kingdom is truly inspiring; but that any will choose the wages of sin, which is death, is indeed a sad thought. "The Spirit and the Bride say, Come; and let him that heareth say, Come; and let him that is athirst come; and whosoever will, let him take the water of life freely."

Poor sinful, thirsty, fainting souls
Are freely welcome here;
Salvation like a river rolls
Abundant, free, and clear.

Come, then, with all your wants and wounds,
Your every burden bring;
Here love, unchanging love abounds,
A deep, eternal spring.

THE SABBATH—MY PRESENT POSITION.

G. W. BURNHAM.

I have been for the last ten years or more, a strict observer of the seventh day Sabbath, in the observance of which, I have been blessed of the Lord, as he saw that I did it in the integrity of my heart and with the desire to do his will; but, within a few months my mind has been strongly drawn out to inquire if it was really the Lord's pleasure that I should keep it, and whether he did enjoin upon the followers of Christ the observance of the seventh day or the Israelitish Sabbath.

While I have strictly adhered to the requirements of the law in regard to the seventh day Sabbath, I have many times announced, that when it became evident to me from the Word of God that Christians were not required of the Lord to observe that day as the Sabbath, I should renounce it immediately.

A few months ago, as I was busily engaged with my work, this passage of Scripture came very forcibly to my mind—"My Sabbaths ye shall keep; for it is a sign between me and you, ... that ye may know that I am the Lord that doth sanctify you." Ex. 21: 13. Immediately my mind became exercised by the passage, and the matter opened before me as never before. The train of thought which the passage suggested, and which led me ultimately to assume my present position, I give as briefly as possible.

While the nations of the earth at the time of the exode of the children of Israel were worshippers of "gods many and lords many," works of their own hands, and sought through them their righteousness, sanctification, and the final salvation of their souls, (!) as well as protection and deliverance from ills incident to this life, victory over enemies, and prosperity and blessings desired, God gave a sign to Israel to observe, acknowledging him to be the God who sanctified them (set them apart from all the nations of the earth as his peculiar treasure,) and led them out of the house of bondage according to his promise to Abraham. He fed them with angels' food, and gave them victory over their enemies. He walked before them to lead them in the way, and guarded them on every side, and in the toilsome march not allowing a foot to swell nor shoe to wear out. While the gods of the heathen were powerless either for good or evil, the Lord, whose sign they bore, was almighty for preservation or destruction.

And so the sign was to be borne before the world, to show their faith in the power and goodness of their God, until a new sign was given, which not only recognized the creative power of the Almighty One, in the acceptance of his Christ, but also declares the wondrous fact, that, "when sin abounded grace did much more abound," and that all who bear it, will not only receive the blessings and protection of Him who gave it, in this present time and world, but also guarantees unto all who bear it, eternal life in the kingdom of God, which sign is—The cross of Christ. No argument that I have ever heard or read against the seventh day Sabbath, has ever made any impression on my mind to cause me to waver in my faith in regard to it. But when the above mentioned Scripture came as it did to my mind, I was staggered. I began to reflect. What is my sanctification? I saw that our sanctification is now of Christ and the Spirit, and not by any works of the law. "Wherefore Jesus also, that he might sanctify the people with his own blood, suffered without the gate." Heb. 13: 12. Therefore, whoever bears the cross of Christ, it is a sign to the world that they (who bear it) are sanctified through him.

By what am I justified? I saw that the cross of Christ becomes the sign of our justification also. "Being now justified by his blood, we shall be saved from wrath through him." Rom. 5: 9. Where do I rest? What is my peace? In the cross of Christ I also beheld the sign of peace,—"Having made peace through the blood of his cross." Col. 1: 20.

So I meditated, studied and prayed, till I have been led to cease from the observance of the old sign or the seventh day Sabbath. While the old has vanished away, I see in this new, the sign of an everlasting covenant.

"Now the God of peace, that brought again from the dead our Lord Jesus, that great Shepherd of the sheep, through the blood of the everlasting covenant, make you perfect in every good work to do his will, working in you that which is well pleasing in his sight through Jesus Christ." Heb. 13: 20, 21.

This is not written as an argument against the seventh day Sabbath, but simply to define my position in regard to it at this present time, as I thought that a candid statement of the change in my views concerning this matter, was due to the chnrch, my friends and myself.

I do not wish to slide, or shirk out cf my former position. I lay down the sign of that covenant which has vanished away, and hold fast to that of the everlasting covenant. While the old sign might be kept by the most ungodly of the nation to whom it was given, none will be found bearing tne new, except those who have "been with Jesus and learned of him," and who by his Spirit have his law written in the heart—"a chosen generation, a royal priesthood, a peculiar people."

WHAT HATH GOD WROUGHT?

J. M. HARRIMAN.

"Not by might, nor by power, but by my spirit, saith the Lord."

"God moves in a mysterious way,
His wonders to perform."

A large congregation came out in Haverhill, N. H., Sunday, May 14th, to hear a young convert preach from the above text. We feel like giving a brief outline of the work of God in this place since Sept. 1875. Perhaps it may encourage others to put forth effort to work for God.

Nine months ago there was hardly one Advent Christian in this part of the town. The writer and one or two others felt that something must be done to warn the people of Haverhill, of coming judgment. Accordingly, we invited the N. H. mission-tent here, which came in September after the last Alton Bay campmeeting. Bro. R. F. Clark and wife, Bro. Simpson and others, came and labored for two weeks, and as a result, a goodly number started to serve the Lord. When the tent went away, the question arose, "Shall these meetings stop here?" All were agreed that they should not. "But who should labor with the people?' was the next question. The Lord made his own selection by his Spirit, and sent Bro. G. N. Little, who has remained with the church until now. Our meetings have been characterized all along by the Spirit of God, and numbers are being added to the church, such as we trust will eb saved.

In February, the N. H., A. C. Conference held one of its quarterly sessions with us, which was a great blessing to the church. A great amount of prejudice was removed, and lasting good done, we trust. There has been a strong current of opposition against us all along. But the Lord is mighty, and we will not fear as long as we feel that his approbation rests upon us. Our meetings have been held, up to the present time, in a school-house, but we are now erecting a house 31×40, to have our meetings in, which we hope to have done in a few weeks.

THE GREAT PROMISE.

J. W. THOMAS.

"Eternal life." Titus 1: 12.

How brief is this mortal life. From the cradle to the grave there is but a step. Flowers fade, the grass withers, leaves fall; so man lives for a moment, and then disappears. None live forever on this great theatre of human activity. The curtain drops—the music ceases—the lights go out, and the drama is at end. As the meteor flashes through the darkness and suddenly vanishes, so the brightness of our dear ones quickly departs, leaving us in greater darkness than ever. The weaver's shuttle, the hunter's arrow, the flying cloud, the flitting shadow, all illustrate how rapidly life departs, and man dies. The space that separates the seen from the unseen is thin as a wafer. The cord that holds us here, tender and delicate as a spider's web. Yet how little we realize it. We live as though there were no danger, and life were an unfailing possession. Like a man floating down a rapid river toward an awful precipice, looking at the trees and flowers along the bank, forgetting his danger and making no effort to save himself. So, we, taken up and interested by the pleasures and business around us, forget that the stream of time is running rapidly, and that ere we are aware, we shall have "gone the way whence we shall not return."

This life, though so brief and uncertain, is yet of immense value. No treasure is too ear to sacrifice for its continuance. "All that a man hath, will he give for his life." What are farms, and houses, and factories, and ships, and merchandise, and silver, and gold, without life? What are friends, and music, and pictures, and beautiful gardens, without life? Can we possess, or enjoy anything without life? Nothing at all. Upon life hinges all usefulness, all possessions, all enjoyment. Upon this brief life, the manner in which we improve it, turns our future and eternal destiny. Indeed, this life is valuable, it is the greatest treasure we possess. Well may we prize it, cling to it, love it. Each moment of it is worth more than thousands of gold. But whether we love life, or value it, or loathe it, part with it we must. Sooner or later the summons will come. There is no release, no escape.

"Before us lies a valley dim,
Which soon our feet may tread
And through it rolls a sullen stream
The river of the dead."

The sentence, "Dust thou art, and unto dust shalt thou return," has been passed upon all, and it cannot be revoked. Whether saints or sinners, young or old, in poverty or riches, die we must. Bnt is this the end of us? Is this brief existence all there is for man? Must our sun set in darkness, and thick clouds, with no ray of light, no bow of promise to indicate the dawning of a brighter day? No. I see hovering on the border of the retreating cloud, a radiant bow of promise—the harbinger of eternal day. "This is the promise that he hath promised us, even eternal life."

Who has a mind to grasp the idea? O what a promise is this—"eternal life." A life that shall have no end, life that runs parallel with the existence of angels, a life that shall soar aloft amid the countless periods of the infinite futurity, a life that shall abide in sublime and cloudless glory.

Eternity. Count the stars of heaven, count the sands by the seashore, count the drops of the ocean; let there be a million years between each single one, and then eternity would only have just begun. This is the promise of the eternal God, whose days are everlasting. "In hope of eternal life, which God, that cannot lie, promised before the world began." "God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him might not perish, but have everlasting life." Christ is the life-giver. He will raise the dead, and give to his children eternal life. Then we shall sail on an ocean—the ocean of eternity—and never find a shore.

PROVERBS 14: 12.

There is a way which seemeth right unto a man, but the end thereof are the ways of death.

B. KNEPPER.

According to the German it would read: "Many are pleased with a way." We know this to be the case, that many are pleased with a way which they know is wrong. But many are satisfied with their hope resting on an unsafe foundation. Though they would not undertake to say that the way which they follow seemeth right unto them, yet they satisfy themselves with a kind of a hope of God's mercy, on future repentance.

There are many who seem ready to ask with Thomas, "How shall we know the way," or, which is the right way to go? Upon this I would answer: There is "a way of sinners," in which David advises us not to go. Psalms 1: 1. There is a "way of transgressors," which Solomon says is a "hard" way. [Pro. 13: 15]. Do not follow it. There is a "way which leadeth unto life." This is the only right way. It is found in Christ. John 14: 6.

There are, therefore, different ways which men travel, but we learn from the above passage that the end decides the question. There is a way that leads through carelessness; many are pleased with this way. There is a way that leads through wickedness and sin; many are pleased with this way. There is one way really right. It begins in Christ, and ends in life. Rom. 6: 22—"Ye have your fruit unto holiness, and the end everlasting life." The way of the sinner ends in death. "The soul that sinneth it shall die." "What fruit had ye then in those things whereof ye are now ashamed? For the end of those things is death." Rom. 6: 21. "For the wages of sin is death." v. 23.

Unto man in his fallen state it was said: "Dust thou art, and unto dust shalt thou return." Under the plan of redemption it is said: "And the Redeemer shall come to Zion, and unto them that turn from transgression in Jacob, saith the Lord." Isa. 59: 20. The judgment then ends the whole matter. Jesus saith, "The word that I have spoken, the same shall judge him in the last day." John 12: 45. This word, by which all shall be judged, says or teaches that the unbeliever shall not see life (John 3: 36), and that the believer shall then never see death. John 8: 51.

I AM TIRED.

L. B. WEAVER.

While passing through this weary world of pain, sorrow and suffering, how weary and tired we often get; and how often we hear people say, "O, I am so tired! I must get up and run out of doors and rest me." How often the thoughht has come to me—O, how I would love to get up and rest my poor, weary, aching limbs, by walking out into the open air, and inhaling the sweet perfume of flowers and plants, and behold the works of Him who laid the foundations of the earth, and caused all these beautiful things to come forth. Friends often say, "Why, how can you lie there, and not be taken from your bed at all?" And again, "I should think you would ache so hard and and be so tired." It does seem at times as though poor human nature must give out, and I be laid away to rest, which truly would seem sweet when I am in such extreme suffering. O how sweetly then have come the gentle whispers of love from Him who knows every pain and sorrow, and cares for us too: "I will give you rest"; and, "Afflictions shall not rise up the second time." It seems as though he had, with the touch of his gentle, loving hand, soothed my deep distress, poured the oil of comfort and consolation into my heart, and was bearing my aching head upon his loving bosom, and soothing me to rest. O how sweet it has been, how blessed, how precious, beyond all that I can express.

My soul goes out to the Giver of all blessings, that he will soothe, comfort, bless and provide for all the sick and suffering ones of whom we hear through the Crisis and by letter. If it looks dark to us, let us keep a steady eye on Him who will never leave nor forsake us. And when we are so weary, let us rest upon his promise of everlasting rest in his kingdom, where "there shall be . . . neither sorrow, nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain."

A dear sister wrote me that God would take care of me, even if he had to send a big raven to feed me. So let us rest and trust, and by and by we will meet, never to be separated.

IF by losing anything we gain wisdom, we are gainers by the loss.

CONSECRATION.

Consecration, says Mr. Webster, is "the act or ceremony of separating from a common to a sacred use, or of devoting and dedicating a person or thing to the service and worship of God." South says—"Consecration makes not a place sacred, but only solemnly declares it so." To consecrate is to "make sacred"; that is, it is to prepare a person or thing for sacred work or to occupy a holy place.

These things are important to be understood in this matter of christian consecration: (1) That God himself does the work of preparing a man for "sacred use." (2) That God accomplishes this work of preparation on the condition that man unreservedly surrenders himself to be operated upon just as God may determine. (3) That God receives the man thus prepared into his service, on condition that he consents to do willingly, faithfully and continuously just what he may reveal to him as his will that he should do.

The first and most fatal mistake made by men generally is, that they can prepare themselves for sacred work, without depending entirely upon God to do it for them. God says, "The preparation of the heart in man and the answer of the tongue is from the Lord." Prov. 16: 1. "I will give them an heart to know me, that I am the Lord; and they shall be my people, and I will be their God; for they shall return unto me with their whole heart." Jer. 24: 7. Paul says—"For we [christians] are his workmanship, created in Christ Jesus unto good works." Eph. 2: 10.

A watch made by a man is his workmanship; so a believer in Christ, prepared to do good works, is God's workmanship, because God has prepared him to do gospel work, just as the mechanic has prepared the watch to keep time.

God has illustrated this by the potter and his manufactured vessels. Just as the clay is passive in the hands of the potter, so we should be in the hands of God, to be fitted by him for any kind of work in his "great house" that he may choose to prepare us for.

Perfect submission to God, lying passive in his hands, to be affected and used by him as an infant lies in its mother's arms, to be laid here or there as she may choose, is the essential idea in practical Christianity. Our experience should be like a man with broken bones; his only way to be restored to active, happy life is to submit to the directions and operations of the surgeon, which, though it may be painful, is the only way to be relieved of pain and be restored to health.

Christian consecration on our part is an unreserved submission to God, to be led by his Word and controlled by his Spirit, in harmony with the divine will; while on God's part it consists in a perfect cleansing from sin, a renewing of the heart, filling it with perfect love, and controlling the entire man by the "divine nature."

The proof that we are consecrated to God according to the gospel is, that we are fitted to do the holy work appointed by God for us to do, and that we do it according to his instructions given in his Word. The particular experimental evidence that we are savingly consecrated is a sensation of willingness to let our heavenly Father do with us and dispose of us just as he pleases, whether it be in giving us joy or sorrow, life or death. It is a sense of pleasure in doing the will of God like that of pleasing and gratifying a friend greatly beloved. The child delights to wait upon its mother whom it loves dearly; the sense of delight measures the degree of love.

The heart is not prepared to serve God which does not experience a joyful willingness in doing that service. There is no such thing as a partial, imperfect christian consecration, for God will not accept a man who does not make a full surrender; and when that is made he always, perfectly, and never partially, prepares the surrendered heart for his service.

We believe in a very high standard of christian principles and character, because they come from and are produced by an infinitely perfect God; but we grade very low all that comes from and is produced by unassisted humanity. The christian is what Christ makes him; but the sinner is what Satan makes him.

For this reason Paul could say, "By grace I am what I am." If God by his grace had made Paul what he was, then it is honoring God to call him a very good man, and defaming God to reckon him an imperfect man. If a man makes a machine, it is dishonoring to him to call it a poor one, and praising him to call it a good one.

It is no evidence of a person's consecration to hear him tell much of what he has done or can do; but it is a strong proof to hear him praise God for what he has done for him, and that he can do nothing without him. If we have any goodness it was given us of Christ, and if we have done any good thing he did it by us. Therefore the declaration is true—"Christ is all and in all," and "is rich unto all that call upon him."

Let none dream of enjoying peerage with angels and the infinite boon of endless life who are not rich in gospel blessings, and enjoying the glorious brotherhood of Jesus Christ.

Brethren, we are called, as disciples of Jesus, to a high and holy position, and we shall not fail to enjoy the heavenly elevation if we fully trust him to take away our sins and give us the divine nature. Keep under the cross where falls the cleansing blood. Lie quietly in the arms of Him who will safely bear you over the threatening waters of Jordan. Let us wait a little while, and the glorious reward of full consecration will be enjoyed by all the redeemed in the ever-blessed kingdom of God.

ANNIVERSARY.

An anniversary is a yearly period noted and made important by the occurrence of some impressive and noteworthy event. To-day, the nineteenth of May, is the anniversary of the darkening of the sun, as foretold by Christ and the prophets, given for a divine signal, to show that the ages of sin and the curse are drawing to an end;—that the measure of human pride and woes is nearly full;—that the galling yoke of tyrants is about to be broken, and the secret grief of oppressed innocence is immediately to be avenged.

The fearful darkness of the historic day appropriately typified the gloom and hopeless waiting of earth's rebellious millions, under the crushing weight of the last apocalyptic woes. It was to the church, the long looked for and divinely appointed signal of approaching deliverance. It heralded, in deepest shades of waving darkness, the speedy coming of earth's eternal king. It's prophetic utterance sweetly promised that the darkness and gloom of the grave should soon pass away. Faith followed the subtle shadow as it retreated from the earth, and viewed the coming day of glory beyond the night of sin. It whispered promisingly to the "generation," whose eyes were blinded by its impenetrable curtain, that it should not pass away until "they" should "see the Son of man coming in a cloud with power and great glory."

Ninety-six years have swept the generation onward over a restless tide of rapid and wonderful changes; the wave of death constantly submerging the moving millions, until but a scattered, dying remnant remain, like Simeon and Anna, some of whom, we trust, will not die until they have seen the Lord's Christ.

The annual return of this prophetic day awakens reminiscences of the past, and flashes before the watching eye the peerless grandeur and unsurpassed importance of this transition period, into which are crowded wonderful events, heinous sins, which cry for divine vengeance. The rich are howling over their cankered gold, while the poor cry for bread under the shadows of their lordly palaces. The kings are spending the people's money, preparing for their universal butchery. The Roman apostacies are madly rushing into foreshadowed death. A universal expectancy of some untried scenes has seized upon all men. The earth groans under the ripened curse, which threatens it with swiftly approaching dissolution. The heavens shake portenteously, and the human heart responds with fear of coming judgment. Each added anniversary causes the church to pray more imploringly, "Come, Lord Jesus, come quickly."

THE Eighth Annual Convention of the National Christian Association will be held in Chicago on the 20th, 21st and 22nd of June.

THE TURKISH SITUATION.

The condition of things in Turkey grows "worse and worse." The insurrectionists seem to be increasingly determined to gain their liberty from the terrible Turkish yoke, or die in the attempt. They have long borne a heavy load, but it now looks as though they would soon be free. They have the sympathy of all civilized nations, and it appears quite certain that Russia is giving ing them secret aid, and will do more if necessary. A crisis must soon come. The nation that holds Constantinople is considered as having "the keys of the East; hence, if Turkey is conquered, the great powers of Europe look with much jealousy upon the one who seems most likely to have the Turkish capital. Russia stands the best chance by far, as it most naturally belongs to her. While Turkey remained sick, weak, and undisturbed, it was thought best to let her alone, rather than have a terrible fight about the Eastern question; but now something must be done.

The two great anti-christian systems, Papacy and Mohammedanism, came into power about the same time, and seem to be coming to their end together, brought about in the main by their own subjects. They have stood in the way as fierce lions to frighten, torture, and destroy Christians. A mighty change is at hand.

Abd-ul-Aziz, the present Sultan, is said to be "a mere pampered and cloyed voluptuary," living chiefly to gratify his natural, animal passions, having but little to do with the outside world. The mene, mene, tekel, is already written for him and his empire, as truly as it was on the walls of the palace of Belshazzar. The hand of the Most High seems to have taken hold of Turkey, as of Egypt, when the time came to bring his people out of bondage.

INQUIRIES AND ANSWERS.

1st. In your reply to "X," in Crisis of April 12th, you say, "We cannot find it (referring to any scrap of evidence in favor of the consciousness of the dead) in the Bible, in physiology, philosophy, facts, sciences, or common sense." Do you mean that no one can find evidence satisfactory to himself? or do you simply use the we in its editorial or sectarian sense?

2nd. If Jesus Christ, as is admitted by our best Bilblical scholars, always stated some well-known or accepted fact, as the foundation of his parables; that is, used one established fact to prove or to explain one less apparent; how can you explain the parable of the rich man and Lazarus, without admitting that dead men, to us, are conscious or alive to other conditions?

3d. Physiologically and philosophically, when a man dies, the power to breathe, to move, to act, goes out of him. What is that power, and where does it go? Philosophy teaches that power cannot die (cease to exist). It may expend itself in one direction to be more active in another; and our renowned physiologists hold that the brain does not think, does not originate thought; but is the machine by which power is manufactured into thought, so that it may be manifest in gesture, speech, and in a thousand directions; and that this power itself is knowledge, intention, strength. Are they right or wrong?

4th. Scientifically, is there any such thing as absolute death—that is, death to all conditions of scientific law? Change of condition relative to death, or death to us, is admitted.

5th. Can you not find reason for difference of opinion in regard to the meaning of "hades?" Does it, beyond a reasonable doubt, imply perfect unconsciousness between death and the resurrection? or may it not mean what Josephus in his dissertation on hades teaches, and what the Greeks doubtless understood it to mean, and what Christ expected his hearers to think, that it was a condition of consciousness where all men, good or bad, awaited acceptance or sentence; the good in happy rest, expecting a reward (in Abraham's bosom or paradise); the bad in bitter fear, expecting punishment.

6th. From careful study of Greek in college, and of late, I am inclined to think that immortality—athanasian—applies only to God, and those made God-like, requiring no change; but that in no sense does it unqualifiedly apply to unending life; that is, the wicked not being immortal, does not argue that consequently they must ceace to exist. As wicked men they are liable to the second death—change—to be destroyed root and branch; having all power to work wickedness removed, but not annihilated. Have I not good Greek, Hebrew, philosophy, the Bible, and common sense in support of this view?

In the spirit of christian love, I submit these queries, my only aim being for more light. I have many other questions, but fearing I have trespassed too far already, I refrain, as I also purposely do from referring to the passages in the Bible that seem to uphold the views I have expressed. Yours for the truth,
QUIRETUS.

(1) In the editorial sense.

(2) We think it is very evident that all Bible parables are not founded upon facts, any more than the fourth beast, in the seventh of Daniel, having ten horns, brass nails, and iron teeth; or the great red dragon, of Rev. twelvth chapter, having seven heads and ten horns, are real beasts living on the earth. They are imaginary ones, taken to represent political powers. We believe no one would affirm that the parable in Ezek. 17: 2–8 is founded on fact. It represents that great eagles came to "Lebanon, and took the highest branch of the cedar, . . . and carried it into a land of traffic," and "set it in a city of merchants. He took also of the seed of the land, and planted it in a fruitful field." Eagles have not been known to do such work, as to crop off the top of a cedar, and "set it in a city of merchants;" but this, and another eagle represent what some kings did.

In Judges 9: 8–15, it is said "The trees went forth on a time to anoint a king over them." It cannot be that this parable is founded on fact, for trees do not talk, and choose kings to rule over them, but these trees are used to represent the doings of men. Without further investigation, it must be apparent that all parables are not founded on facts.

Yet in the Jewish Talmud is found an account similar to the parable of the rich man, which Jesus might have used to represent to the Jews what would come upon them as a nation for rejecting him. Lightfoot renders it as follows: "There was a good man and a wicked man that died. As for the good man, he had no funeral rites solemnized, but the wicked man had. Afterwards there was one who saw in his dream the good man walking in gardens, and led by pleasant springs, but the wicked man, with his tongue trickling drop by drop, at the bank of a river, endeavoring to touch the water but he could not."

It is hardly reasonable to suppose that Jesus would teach a doctrine in an unexplained parable, taught no where else in the Bible, which would be the case, if we attempt to make him say, "that dead men, to us, are conscious, or alive to other conditions."

(3). We think they are partly wrong. Power is not an entity, or something that exists by itself. It is but a result produced by some organized body. Attraction is a power, but does not exist independent of bodies. If all material objects were annihilated, attraction would cease. Power does not depart from us at death, to exist by itself, any more than the light in a room goes away to light some other place, when we put out the lamp.

If what some philosophers say is true, "that the brain does not think, does not originate thought, but is the machine by which power is manufactured into thought," then it may be inquired, how can thought be produced without the machine, when it it dead and buried? Who can tell?

(4). Science is not opposed to facts. It is a fact that there is such a thing as literal, real death, and that in such cases there is no life remaining in the dead object.

(5). Hades neither implies consciousness nor unconsciousness, but as Moses Stuart says: "Hades means grave, sepulchre, depository of the dead." It is the Greek word used to translate the Hebrew word sheol, which Parkhurst's lexicon says, signifies "the common receptacle of the dead." Other words in the Bible tell us the conditions of those in sheol, or hades.

For instance, the wise man says: "There is no work, nor device, nor knowledge, nor wisdom, in the grave (sheol), whither thou goest." Eccl. 9: 10. The whole Bible harmonizes with this declaration, unless it be assumed that the Savior contradicted it in the parable of the rich man, which is an unreasonable assumption. All in the literal hades, or grave, are utterly unconscious, having no knowledge, no wisdom, no power.

(6). We think there is no good New Testament Greek, or Old Testament Hebrew; neither philosophy to show that "the second death" will not consist in the utter destruction of all wicked persons, so that they will never have another moment of conscious existence. Thus sin will be finished," and only the saints will live eternally.

HELP US.—Whenever any of our readers come across any choice article in any paper, or book, we wish they would send it to be inserted in the Crisis, and then it will come back to them again, and be enjoyed by all our readers. In this way "our paper" may be enriched by what would otherwise be unknown. Of course we cannot make a positive promise that we will publish all that is sent, but we will do the best we can. Let all help to make the Crisis as good as possible. As a general rule, we prefer to have short articles, not over a column in length.

Send us also items of christian experience, especially on the subject of consecration, and the gift of the Spirit, temptations and deliverances, and accounts of revival work. Such are read with special interest.

BRO. J. MILLAR, 1109 North Eighth St., St. Louis, Mo., writes May 23d, 1876, that he is ready to preach in southern Iowa, or Missouri, or Kansas, provided the traveling expenses of himself and wife are paid. He formerly preached for the Methodists, but now sees that the Bible is opposed to some of the views he supposed were true, consequently, he feels it duty to make his preaching conform to the teachings of the Scriptures. On account of this change, he finds doors once open, now closed against him. Lend him a helping hand.

PERSONAL WORK.

What is most needed is personal efforts from every disciple of Jesus, put forth in earnestness, to save the perishing. Daily opportunities are offered to speak with those out of Christ, but how few improve them. They may wish to go off to some distant place as a missionary, and feel hurt because some society will not send them, but if such persons really wish to work for Christ, they need not go out of their own town to find a field all ready for the harvest. Speak to the first person you meet, and find out whether he loves Jesus. If not, try to persuade him to seek the Lord at once. Be lovingly in earnest and rich results may be expected.

At the Newark Christian Convention, May 3d, 1876, Dr. Tyng of New York, spoke as follows:

"If there is one thing to be attained in this revived christian work, it is the establishment of the individuality of the lay element and the respect shown to its influence as such in the church. Who are the laity? Are they the men only, or the men, women and children? The laity include every person from the front pew to the door, from six years old and upwards, and that church is not a complete apostolic church which has not found something for everybody to do.

To be a worker, a person must be established in the freeness of grace himself. No one can be relied on at all times except he knows in whom he has believed, and is persuaded that He is able to keep that which is committed to him. If you want to have a working church, be sure to know and teach the freedom and fulness of salvation in Jesus Christ; so that a man can see that there is nothing for him to do except to submit to a Savior who has canceled his account before God, and is now representing him before the throne."

The people who claim they have but "one talent," need encouragement to go to work in the Lord's vineyard, lest they lose every thing. Christ calls for "laborers," shall he call in vain?

THE TRACT FUND.

THE ADVENT CHRISTIAN PUBLICATION SOCIETY, at a meeting on Springfield camp-ground, August 11th, 1875, voted to raise Two Thousand Dollars for the free distribution of Tracts the ensuing year; and they invite the help and co-operation of all lovers of the Lord and of his truth, in the furtherance of the good cause. The times are ominous of coming events, and admonish us to diligence in the Master's work. The Lord is at the door, and what we do must be done quickly. Let the contributions be prompt, hearty, and liberal. The Lord will reward the liberal giver.

HOOSIC VALLEY A. C. CONFERENCE.

The second quarterly session of the Hoosic Valley A. C. Conference was held at North Adams, Mass., commencing Wednesday evening, Apr. 19th. The first meeting for business was called to order by the President, H. K. Flagg, Friday morning, at 9 o'clock. After the opening prayer by Bro. H. Munger, the minutes of the last conference were read and adopted. By vote, the Chair appointed Dea. S. D. Hutchins as the Com. on credentials. The following preachers and delegates were reported and accepted as members of the conference present:

PREACHERS—H. K. Flagg, Savoy, Mass.; Richard Mosher, Sandy Hill, N. Y.; F. S. Wheelock, South Adams, Mass.; Srs. Flora Blanchard and Mary L. Tower, No. Adams, Mass. DELEGATES—Geo. F. Kilburn, No. Adams, Mass.; Nelson Robertson, Hoosick, N. Y.; S. D. Hutchins and Robert Candlish, Rutland, Vt.

Voted, That Bro. H. Munger be invited to a seat, with the privilege to participate in our deliberations. Bro. Robertson reports the church at Hoosick as holding meetings every Sabbath, but with preaching only one half the time. They number about sixty-eight members. Bro. Kilburn reports the church at No. Adams as growing in strength and in the faith. They have thirty-eight members. Sister Flora Blanchard, Elders Flagg, Blanchard and Sears, have supplied the desk most of the time since last conference. The church is united and working in harmony for the triumph of truth, without a single distracting element. Their prayer-meetings, of which there are two in each week, beside one on the Sabbath, are well improved, spiritual, and perfectly harmonious. Three converts have been added to the church by baptism since last conference. The church has been steadily growing in grace and strength for the last two years. We have not had much preaching for the last two months, Eld. Flagg having left us for new fields of labor; yet the interest has not abated, nor the number to our prayer-meetings decreased. A letter received from the church at Sandy Hill, N. Y., by the hand of Bro. Mosher, reports the church as exceedingly prosperous under the pastoral labors of Arthur A. Waite. They write that they are enjoying the power of the Holy Ghost, more than they can express. Many new ones are converted, and old ones reclaimed. The church is a unit, without a distracting element. The church is working hard, and has presented to their pastor sixty-five for baptism, fifty-two of whom have united with the church. They number in all about one hundred and twenty members. Their chapel was never before so crowded. Extra seats of benches and chairs are made in the aisles.

Hebron church reports by letter that they have not had much preaching the past year, yet they are working hard to keep up the interest of the prayer-meetings. They have some bright lights who are looking and waiting for the Bridegroom. They expect the labors of Bro. Wm. J. Blanchard part of the time in future. Eld. R. Mosher reports his labors as being nearer home. He had done what he could, mostly in the revival meetings at Sandy Hill. Eld. H. K. Flagg was fully convinced that God required that he should travel, and confine his labors mostly with the old flocks scattered throughout New England. He believed the coming of Christ was just upon us. The church needs the warning.

Sr. Blanchard reports she is laboring the best she can in the gospel vineyard. Her labors are confined mostly with the church at Hoosic and No. Adams. Sr. Tower reports her labors in Savoy, New State church, and Plainfield, Mass.; good results following her labors. Elds. W. O. Higley and E. D. Kemp, of Bennington, reported by letter. Their labors have been near home, and have been blest with good interest manifested to hear the truth. Bro. F. S. Wheelock is just starting out into the gospel field, and gives hope, if faithful, that good results will follow his labors. He sustains a good christian character to start with.

Bro. H. Munger compares his labor with an old clock tinker, whose business it is to clean and repair clocks. Where he finds a breach in the wall, he has to be particular in the choice of the right kind of timber to make good the fault. He has to divide and sort out the word, so as to give the babes the milk, and the old the meat.

There was preaching three times each day, excepting Friday forenoon. There were between those meetings interesting prayer and conference meetings. Preaching mostly by Elds. Munger, Flagg and Mosher. Our stay and reception at No. Adams was very pleasant indeed. The meetings were exceedingly harmonious and spiritual. The Sandy Hill church sent an invitation to hold our July conference at their place. The invitation was cheerfully accepted. A second, but short session, concluded the work of the conference; after which a vote was taken to adjourn, subject to the nex call.
R. CANDLISH, Secretary.

FROM BRO. GEORGE THOMSON.

Dear Editors and Brethren:—I will try in my weakness to indite a few lines for our beloved paper. I have suffered much since my last, but the dear Lord has wonderfully sustained me. Praise his ever blessed name. I do wish I was able to write to-day just as I feel in reference to one particular subject, and that is—What should be written for the especial benefit of the three months subscribers? God has very evidently blest this enterprise, and many are by this means, no doubt, brought face to face with the truth for the first time. How will it appear to them? This will depend much upon the manner in which it is presented. And in this connection let all who write for our beloved Crisis heed the injunction of our blessed Master—"Be ye wise as serpents and harmless as doves." As in all probability the majority of those subscribers will cease to be such at the end of the three months, it is very important also that they see the truth in a condensed form; and this is easy, because the truth is so simple. The plan of redemption is plain;—reconciliation through Christ, life through Christ, immortality thro' Christ, kingdom to come on the redeemed and renewed earth; Satan frustrated; Satan, sin and sinners destroyed together; no more curse, no more sorrow, no more tears, no more sickness, no more death, no more pain. Glory to God! then the whole universe in harmony praising God.

O, dear brethren, how often I contemplate that scene while lying upon my couch of suffering, and how earnestly I long for its speedy realization. I am weary, O, so weary, waiting for the Lord to come; but let us not be discouraged, fellow sufferers; the leaves are putting forth, the nations are angry, the world is about ripe for the harvest, the trumpet is about sounding. Jesus will soon come.

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS.—I desire to acknowledge herewith, with many thanks, the following sums received since my last report. I pray that God may abundantly bless the kind donors. They do not know now timely their aid has been.

SPARTA, OHIO.

The work of the Lord has been prospering gloriously in this place during the past few months, although much effort has been put forth by those who should have rendered aid in the work of spreading the truth and saving the perishing, to keep people from learning and believing the truth as found in the word of God; but notwithstanding this, the Lord has stood by his people, and the good seed has taken root in good soil, and is bringing forth fruit to the praise of his name; and all the opposition serves only to strengthen and make the true followers of Christ more firm in the glorious truths of the Bible.

Quite a number of noble, self-sacrificing hearts in this place have embraced the truth, which has resulted in the organization of a church of twenty members, with a prospect that others will unite with them soon. They also expect to build a Chapel this season, in which to worship God in the beauty of holiness; as they are not permitted to worship in any of the churches in town, although they are not used except every other Sabbath. The organization took place at Bro. John Blinn's, on Saturday, May 20th, and was truly a heavenly season. God's rich blessing seemed to fall sweetly upon all present. After prayer and singing, the following officers were chosen: Secretary, Dr. J. H. Tims; Treasurer, T. G. McFadden; Deacons, John Blinn, M. B. Lyon; Pastor, Eld. E. McCulloch.

As I could be with the church only every fourth Sabbath, for the present, Eld. David Lyon was chosen as assistant pastor to carry the work in my absence. After having perfected this organization, to be known as the A. C. Church of Sparta, Ohio, and singing,

"Blest be the tie that binds
Our hearts in christian love," our brethren and sisters went to their homes rejoicing in the Lord, and with a consciousness that God had been with them and approved of the steps they had taken. May the peace of the Lord be with them evermore.

E. MCCULLOCH.

BRO. H. MUNGER writes:—"We would inform my friends that after three weeks' sickness I am able to ride out a little, and hope to get so as to preach again soon, for it is lonesome for me to be shut up in the house, after so many years in the field. I hope to see Bro. Batchelor in the field again, for old soldiers are getting scarce; yet this generation will not pass till the war ends. Signs are thickening."

Obituaries.

SWANESBURG. Died, April 27th, 1876, after a lingering consumption, which he bore with christian resignation, Elder A. B. Swanesburg, of Shelburne, N. S., aged forty-three years. He leaves a wife, son and daughter, together with other relatives, to mourn their loss.

Elder Swanesburg first learned to love the coming of Jesus about seventeen years ago, while residing in Boston, Mass., under the labors of Brn. H. Munger and Edwin Burnham. In 1869 he gave himself to the work of the christian ministry, and counted not his life dear unto him, to the end sinners might be made ready for the coming of Jesus and the kingdom of God. Though during the last two or three years of his life his labors were interrupted by sickness, he took great pleasure in preaching the unpopular truths of God's word, choosing rather to suffer affliction with the people of God, than to enjoy the pleasures of sin for a season.

During his sufferings, which were very great at times, he enjoyed great peace of mind, resting in the Lord Jesus, and in the assurance of his soon coming with redemption. Of this holy doctrine he was a strong advocate till the day of his death. His hope in being soon resurrected by the Spirit of God to a glorious life and immortality comforted him as he passed into the enemy's land. He rejoiced greatly that it would only be for a "little while"; then, he believed the strong man armed would spoil the house of our common foe. May the God of all comfort cheer the hearts of the mourning ones by the hope of meeting him in the morning of glory. Words of comfort by Eld. W. Halliday.
F. ALBERT VERGE.

HATFIELD. In Chaseburg, April 19th, 1876, at the residence of her son-in-law, Alfred Dodgson, of heart disease and paralysis, Mrs. Anna Hatfield, aged seventy-six years.

Having been converted at an early age, she united with the M. E. Church, and still held to the plain apparel and godly life taught by that people in those early days, but she looked for and loved the appearing of Jesus. Her life has been one of toil and sorrow. Two husbands, and four children have preceded her to "the land of the enemy," but she now sleeps in Jesus.

"Blessed sleep,
From which none ever wake to weep."

Funeral services conducted by Bro Bender, of the United Brethren church, who preached an excellent discourse from the words—"How are the dead raised up? and with what body do they come?" showing a literal resurrection, and the necessity of loving the appearing of Jesus to gain the "crown of righteousness."
E. DODGSON.

WILKINSON. In Gilford, N. H., May 18th, 1876, Sister Amanda wife of Bro. H. Wilkinson, aged thirty-eight years and eleven months.

Sister W. was converted under the labors of Sister Julia Buswell, and baptized by the writer, in June, 1866. For the past six or seven years, she suffered from an ovarian tumor, which assumed a very large size, and finally resulted in her death. But in all these years of pain and trial, she most eminently exhibited the characteristics of the christian; patient and cheerful, not a murmur escaped her lips. Like Paul, with her "to die was gain." Life's bitter conflict is ended, and she sweetly sleeps, waiting the glad hour when the victor's crown will be given. Truly He giveth his beloved sleep. Funeral services by the writer.
C. H. FLETCHER.

NORTON. Bro. John Norton died in Addison, Vt., April 10th, 1876, aged seventy-three years.

His death was peaceful and triumphant, as his life had been devoted and happy in the Lord. How much he loved his Bible those can best judge who know that he had read it through thirty-three times. Rev. P. B. Morgan baptized him years ago. Kind friends buried him with prayer at his decease, and we improved Sunday, the 23rd, in the Advent chapel from 1 Thess. 4: 16, a text of his own choosing. He was respected and loved, as the large gathering on that day showed, and his bereaved wife and family mourn in hope.

BEAN. In Deerfield, N. H., May 3d, 1876, George W. Bean, son of Rufus P. and Phebe Bean, aged twenty-seven years.

George gave himself to Christ, and was baptized by Bro. Enoch Morrill some years since; but left off praying. Just before he died, in conversation with his father, he said he had been praying for some time, and felt all was well. We laid him on the hill-side, by the side of brother and sister, to sleep till the trump shall sound. Funeral service by the writer, from 1 Cor. 15: 21, 26.
J. M. QUIMBY.

YOUNG. In Great Falls, N. H., Oct. 23d, '75, after a few weeks of illness, Bro. Geo. F. Young fell asleep peacefully in Jesus, with a bright hope of awakening in the morning of the resurrection.

Bro. Young gave his heart to Jesus in 1854, and was ever a firm believer in the near personal coming of the Savior. He leaves a wife of like precious faith, and three children, who sustain a great loss, as he was a kind husband and an indulgent father. Funeral attended by the writer.
J. BICKFORD.

CARR. In Holderness, N. H., May 18th, 1876, A. G. Carr, aged seventy-eight years.

The subject of this notice was an old veteran soldier in the army of the Lord, and his history is summed up in these words: "I have fought the good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith." He leaves a wife and children to mourn their loss. May the Lord bless them.
D. M. LEAVITT.

MITCHELL. In Oakland, Cal., Jan. 9th, '1876, Mr. Wm. H. Mitchell.

Thus death invades our family circles, and my only sister is left to weep, lonely and sad, yet not without hope of reunion in the kingdom of our Lord Jesus Christ, the only place where beautiful homes will never be darkened by sorrow.
MRS. M. L. DURAND.

FOREIGN NEWS.

LONDON, May 24. The warlike preparations continue. The British arsenals are preparing for increased work. It is reported that the Government is contemplating a great increase of the stock of coals for the supply of the Mediterranean fleet.

Cotton manufacturing is very much depressed here. The cotton mills at Preston are running short time. It is rumored that others will follow. The cause is the continued decline in prices. It is stated that prices are lower than for thirty years, and the prospects are discouraging. The mills in some parts of Lancashire will be closed during Whitsuntide.

A despatch from Vigo of this date says the British fleet, comprising the Minotaur, Black Prince, Iron Duke, Hector and Defence, have sailed for ten days' evolution. The Monarch has gone to Malta. The situation continues warlike and threatening.

ROME, May 24. A meeting of Cardinals has been held, at which the Pope was present. The position of the Church toward Spain was considered. It was resolved that the relations with the Spanish Government should not be formerly suspended on account of the adoption of the toleration clause of the New Constitution, but that the Nuncio at Madrid should be granted indefinite leave of absence.

VIENNA, May 24. The Bulgarian insurrection is reported as growing to alarming proportions. The number of insurgents is estimated at from 12,000 to 30,000.

May 26. The latest advices from Herzegovina state that the insurgent leaders held a meeting on Tuesday last and determined to continue the war until the independence of Bosnia and Herzegovina is conceded.

BELGRADE, May 24. Twenty-seven Russian army officers have arrived in Belgrade to assist in the Servian campaign.

CONSTANTINOPLE, May 26. The Porte has issued a circular to the northern powers intimating a determination to reject the proposals of the Berlin Conference. It asks the powers to preserve the provisions of the treaty of Paris.

PARIS, May 26. The note of the Berlin Conference stipulates a two months' armistice, the restoration by the Porte to Christians of their houses and churches, and their exemption from taxation for three years, the distribution of relief by a Commission of Herzogovinians and Christians, the withdrawal of Turkish troops, the cessation of hostilities before the Herzegovinians shall lay down their arms, and the execution of reforms under the superintendence of the Consul. The note says if the armistice expires without the accomplishment of the programme, the powers will take such effectual measures as may appear requisite.

DOMESTIC NEWS.

Denver, Col, May 24. Yesterday witnessed the end of a violent rain and snow storm. The rainfall in this city was six inches. At Central City, Georgetown, and other mountain towns, the snow is three feet deep. The railroads centering here have all lost bridges and embankments, and travel is suspended, but it is believed all will be able to move trains soon. Considerable damage was sustained by the owners and occupants of houses in the lower part of the city, but no casualties are known.

Cincinnati, May 22. Special dispatches report heavy storms in various localities in the northwest during the last twenty-four hours, which considerably damaged crops and property.

In Clay county, Iowa, the storm was destructive. In Gayville same county, many houses were torn down or wrecked. Hailstones, from two to three inches in diameter, fell, covering the ground four inches. A terrific wind accompanied the storm.

In Lansing, Michigan, the storm was destructive. In Sparta, Wisconsin, and Mendota and Rockford, Illinois, fields were deluged and much damage inflicted. No loss of life is reported.

Morristown, N. J., May 22. The hail storm here last evening spent its fury on Morristown, but was slightly felt a few miles from here. Its fury was terrible, such as was never known in this locality. The hailstones killed chickens and birds on the wing. Plate glass was shattered as easily as common. Hailstones were found six and three fourth inches in circumference, and the ground was covered. Not a green house, hot-bed or skylight in town escaped, and many plates of stained glass in church windows were broken. Fruit was greatly damaged if not ruined, but the storm did not reach the great fruit districts outlying.

— The new British war ship, the Inflexible, cost $2,500,000. Her total length is 350 feet, breadth 75 feet; displacement, 11,407 tons. Her turrets are covered with 18-inch iron, her citadel is sheathed with 24-inch iron, and below the water the plate is 16 inches thick. The total weight of her iron plate is 3,155 tons. She will be propelled by engines of 8,000 horse power.

Mass. Mission Tent.

At the late Conference in Lynn, it was voted to send the Mass. Mission Tent into the field as soon as the weather will permit. There are two questions which the Committee would now ask: 1st, Shall we have the means to send it? and 2nd, Who among our brethren wish it to come into their vicinity, or can tell us where it can be put up with a good result? If those who gave pledges at the Conference can at once remit the amount, or a part of it to the Treasurer, C. Goodrich, the Committee can send the Tent into the field.

For the Committee, I. I. LESLIE.

Alton Bay Campmeeting.

The Alton Bay Campmeeting is appointed to commence August 26th. J. COUCH.

At a meeting of the Board of Managers of the Second Advent Christian Association, held April 11th, it was voted that the Annual Meeting of the Association for this year be held in Chelsea, Mass., Aug. 23d, at 2 P. M. (the week between the Springfield and Alton Bay Campmeetings). Full notice hereafter. C. E. BARNES.

Campmeeting.

The annual campmeeting of the Christian Mission Association of Iowa will be held at the old place of meeting, near New Hartford, Iowa, commencing June 23d, 1876, and holding over two Sundays. The lease expires the present year, and hence we desire this meeting to be the best ever enjoyed there. Let every brother and sister contribute to the interest of the meeting by their presence and help. Do not allow worldly cares to keep you away, but come to one more reunion of the children of God, and unite with them in working for the salvation of souls. Every one should be personally interested, and do all that lies in his power to make it a success and blessing to many. Let all who possibly can bring family tents, appropriate and comfortable clothing, and bedding. Arrangements will be made to accommodate those who desire to board on the ground, and every provision made for your comfort and convenience. It is not known what ministerial help will be secured, but we expect to have interesting speakers, who will edify and instruct all who come. E. A. MARSH, Sec.

ANNUAL CONFERENCE.—The annual meeting of the Christian Conference will be held in connection with the Christian Mission Campmeeting, June 26th, 1876. It is desired that all the members be present on that day, as circumstances make it absolutely necessary. A full representation of the various churches should be sent, and delegates elected that will do their duty by co-operating with the members of the conference. Brethren in the ministry, come, and confer together. Let no trivial cause prevent you from attending it. The cause is in a critical condition. We need your help. E. A. MARSH, Sec.

A CALL TO THE SECOND ADVENT CHURCHES IN N. H.—It is important that the Secretary of the N. H. Advent Christian Conference be informed without delay of the number of members of the churches in the State, that we may know how many delegates to send to the Advent Christian Association. Let the Pastor, Clerk, Elder, or Deacons, report at once to the Secretary at Newport, N. H. C. H. FLETCHER, Sec.

NOTICE.—Providence permitting, there will be Sunday meetings at the Advent Chapel, at West Alton, N. H., this season and onward as it seems duty. Bro. Enoch Flanders, whom we believe is called to labor in word and doctrine, will attend; and other servants of the Lord are invited who do not feel like lowering the standard of truth, or bringing in things to divide the church. Such can please correspond with Bro. Flanders. J. G. SMITH.

AT the last annual Conference of the State of Kansas, I was instructed to correspond with any who may reside within the bounds of the State Conference, who desire preaching in their localities, and find out from all such how much they will give to bear the expenses of a minister in their vicinity; also what the prospects of good are, if they could have some preaching. Address V. F. Hunt, Arvonia, Osage Co., Kansas.

The Beebe Plain Adv. Campmeeting.

The first annual session of this campmeeting will be held at Beebe Plain, P. Q., at the Stanstead Junction of the Passumpsic R. R., commencing Saturday, June 24th, and holding over two Sabbaths. The grove is a beautiful one, unsurpassed for campmeeting purposes; a real leafy cathedral. The ground is smooth and dry, and the trees large, spreading rock-maples. The location is convenient of access, the cars leaving the people at the grounds, on a platform built by the railroad company on purpose for our accommodation.

There will be good board provided for all who wish it on the European plan, or each having what of plain substantial food he wishes, and paying only for what he has. We shall also make the best possible provision for lodging all who come unprovided for. Stabling and feed will be provided for horses; 25 cts. for hay and oats, or half that price for either, and 75 cts. a day.

All the railroads will carry passengers for half fare, or fare one way. All along the line of the Passumpsic and South Eastern railroads, passengers will purchase the regular tickets to Stanstead Junction, and receive on the ground, of the Secretary, free return passes.

On the line of the Central Vt. and Montpelier and Wells River Roads fare is also reduced. Inquire always if tickets are sold to STANSTEAD JUNCTION; if not, purchase tickets to points intercepting with the Passumpsic Road, and then purchase again to Stanstead Junction. Purchase the regular tickets, and receive free return passes on the Camp Ground. Fare is reduced one half as far south as Concord, N. H., by the B. C. & M. Road, and as far as Vernon, Vt., on the Central Vt. Passengers below White River Junction on the Central Vt., purchase tickets through to Stanstead Junction via the Conn. and Passumpsic Roads. Those near St. Albans, purchase to West Farnham, then to Stanstead Junction. Those on the Montpelier and Wells River Roads, purchase to Wells River, then to the Junction. Those on the Shefford and Chambly Road, purchase first to West Farnham, then to the Junction.

On the line of the Grand Trunk Railway, east of Montreal, and on the International, Quebec Central, and Boston, Concord and Montreal Rail Roads, purchase Campmeeting tickets for Stanstead Junction, and receive through tickets for fare one way; good to return on, and subject only to be countersigned by the Secretary.

Fare is also reduced on the Vt. Division of the Portland and Ogdensburg R. R., and free return passes will be given via St. Johnsbury.

Arrangements will be made with other local Roads, if persons living on the lines of such, who desire to attend the campmeeting, will inform the Secretary of the fact at Richmond, P. Q. All tickets will be good from June 14th to July 5th inclusive, so as to give all who build tents the opportunity of doing so.

Be careful always in changing cars to see that baggage is re-checked.

We have made arrangements for procuring lumber, so that we can furnish it to brethren desiring to build tents, for a lower price than it can be bought of lumber merchants in the immediate vicinity, as we have it brought us by the Passumpsic R. R. Co. free of transportation; and we furnish it to those desiring to build at cost. Lots are also free, and every facility will be offered to assist all, who wish to build, to put up tents as cheaply as possible; and we hope many will avail themselves of their privilege of doing so.

All persons who purchase the through tickets will change cars as follows, when they come from points beyond the limits of the Passumpsic R. R. Those who purchase them in Montreal will call for them via St. John, and take the train via the South Eastern R. R.; and all who purchase them east of Montreal, on the Grand Trunk R. R., will call for them via Sherbrook, and change cars at Sherbrook or Lenoxville.

Those coming by the Boston, Concord and Montreal R. R, go via Wells River, and change there for the Passumpsic cars. Call always for Campmeeting tickets.

We expect prominent preaching brethren from abroad will be present. We anticipate the presence of Elds. J. Couch, Wm. H. Mitchell, E. A. Stockman, I. C. Wellcome and others. We hope for a large gathering of the brethren and sisters to this great feast of truth, to hear the Word from his servants, and we hope all will pray for God's special blessing on the meeting, and come in these last moments of time to labor for union in Christ, and to save the perishing.

M. A. Potter, President; R. W. Warner, Vice President; C. L. Percival, Treasurer; L. C. McKinstry, Secretary. Lewis Bergoine, John Elliott and John H. Carbee, Campmeeting Committee.

CONFERENCE.—The Lord willing, the next semi-annual session of the A. C. Conference of Northern Pa. and Southern N. Y., will be held with the church at Turner Creek, Bingham, Potter county, Pa., commencing Friday evening, June 2nd, 1876, and hold over the following Sunday. Those coming by rail, stop at Genesee Station, on Erie railway, Western division, then to Turner Creek. Stop at Bro. Tracy's, on stage road. Those coming by their own conveyance, inquire for deacon Amos Johnson. We hope that all will make a special effort to attend this meeting. Come, friends of truth, let us make a grand rally, and let us show to the world that we mean what we say. Let us make such a stir among the dry bones of ignorance and superstition, that sinners and fallen angels will tremble. Come filled with the Spirit of Jesus, and then our influence will be felt. Now is the time for action; soon it will be too late.

E. C. COWLES, President.
H. ZIEGENFUSS, Secretary.

Conference.

The Washington Co. Quarterly Conference of Advent Christians is hereby called to meet on Friday evening, June 2nd, 1876, with the church at Bell school-house, and hold over Sunday. On account of stormy weather and a bad state of roads, there was no session held for the election of officers on March 11th, as per call. It is hoped that each church will send delegates with credentials signed by Elder and Clerk, and that all of "like precious faith" will lay to a helping hand to save the perishing. The Bridegroom is soon coming. Let us be ready. The business session will be Saturday, June 3d, at 2 o'clock P. M. Officers will be elected by ballot. The business of first Quarterly Conference will follow the election of officers.

J. W. HAYWORTH, President.

[No State given.]

New York State Conference.

The annual meeting of the N. Y. State Advent Christian Conference will be held with the church at Springwater, Livingston Co., commencing on Thursday evening, June 8th, and continue over the following Sabbath. Springwater is on the New York and Erie R. R., about fifty miles south from Rochester. We trust every minister in the Conference will be present at the annual gathering, and that they will encourage the churches to send their full number of delegates and quarterly collections to help carry forward the cause of truth. Let every church where there is no minister located, and every church that wishes occasional or regular preaching, send delegates. If you cannot send Brn. as delegates, send sisters.

Brn. and Srs. scattered abroad, who want a tent or grove meeting in your vicinity, come to this annual meeting, and tell what you want, and what you can do to support one. Our Savior will soon appear, and our work of saving the perishing will soon be past, and our efforts should be increased and untiring until he comes. We hope to see many of the dear saints at this feast, who have not been able to meet with us for a long time. Come praying, in the Spirit, to the first meeting. Come all. Homes will be provided for all who come. Remember the time, delegates, and collections.

M. R. MILES, Pres.
JAS. E. WELLS, Sec.

Maine Annual Conference.

The Maine A. C. Annual Conference will convene at Bangor (in the Hall occupied as a place of worship by the Advent church), Tuesday evening, at seven o'clock, June 13th, and continue several days. It is very desirable that every minister in the State, who is in sympathy with this Conference, should attend, also delegates from every church and society. Each church is allowed one delegate, and one delegate to every ten members additional above twenty-five. There will be important business brought before the Conference for action; such as affects the special interest of the Conference, the mission and tract work, the ministry, and all the churches of our State. Come all.

GEO. HUMPHREY, Pres.
I. C. WELLCOME, Sec.

NOTICE.—There will be a conference in Indian River, Me., to commence June 21st, and continue over the Sabbath. We expect to see a good representation of Jesus' friends in this locality. Come all who can. Ministering brethren from abroad are invited to come and help us make this one of the best meetings for the salvation of the lost and perishing. For the church, M. W. CORLISS.

NOTICE.—The Mechanic Falls Campmeeting Committee are requested to meet on the Campground Wednesday, June 7th, at 9 A. M. Should the weather be stormy on that day, let us meet the first favorable day afterward.

R. R. YORK, for the Committee.

NOTICE.—There will be a Quarterly Meeting of the Advent Christian Church of North Fairfield, Ohio, the first Saturday and Sunday in June. A general invitation is extended to all the Brn. and friends that can come, to co-operate with us in the work of salvation. L. C. KERR.

Wisconsin Campmeeting.

Our State Campmeeting will be held at Lavalle, Sauk Co., beginning Saturday, June 3d, holding over two Sundays. Lavalle is on a branch of the Northwestern R. R., running from Madison to Elroy, Sparta, etc. The meeting will be held about half a mile south of the Lavalle depot.

Having located the meeting so far north this year, we trust friends in that part of the State will specially appreciate the move, and show their appreciation by a large attendance. We hope for an excellent meeting, and look for great results. Let ministers as well as lay members come early, and come to work with their might.

O. THOMAS,
F. J. GROAT, } Com.
WM. SHELDON,

N. B.—Let all put up tents for the first Saturday who possibly can.

York Co., Attention!

The next Quarterly Session of our County Conference is to be held at Bar Mills, Me., commencing Thursday, June 1st, 1876, at 2 o'clock P. M. Will our preachers and churches take immediate steps towards attending this session, or having themselves reported by letter? Our continued existence as a Conference may depend upon the course you take in this matter. Ample provisions will be made for all who attend. Strangers in the place may find a good home by inquiring for Simon J. Locke. C. H. SWEET, Secretary.

VERMONT TENT.—Those who wish the Vermont Tent pitched in their vicinity this year will please inform me at once, so we can arrange for preaching, etc. Those who can help to carry forward the work will please correspond with me now. Address me at Waterbury, Vt.

A. A. HOYT.

Nova Scotia Annual Conference.

The Nova Scotia Advent Christian Conference will be held at Bear River, commencing on Thursday, June 15th. We hope not only to see the faces and hear the voices of old friends, but extend a cordial invitation to all who may either personally or publicly feel interested in the grace to be brought unto us at the revelation of Jesus Christ. J. M. TOZIER.

Maine Special Notice.

Please attend to this at once. The Secretary, Deacon, or Elder, of each Second Advent Church in Maine should give the number of members in their respective churches, by postal card or letter, at once, to the Secretary of the Maine A. C. Conference, that we may know how many delegates we are entitled to in the S. A. C. Association, chosen at our Annual Conference in June next. Address I. C. WELLCOME, Sec., Yarmouth, Me.

NOTICE.—To the Brethren of Iowa Christian Conference:—You are all aware that we are nearing the time for Tent Meetings. The Iowa Mission Tent is not fit to put into the field this season. There is but about one fourth promised that is needed to put into the field a 50×80 tent, which we much need. Camp and Tent Meetings very much depend on your decision. There are many who are amply able to help if this matter was laid before them. I cannot go all around and see you; I should spend more time than is needed to get the tent I have contracted for. Will some one lend a helping hand, and do it promptly? Tent work must stop if this fails, and the blood of souls must be found in some one's garments. I do not want it to be mine. Come, Brn., wake up, and let me hear promptly from any State of all who wish to help the cause in Iowa, that I may know what to do. P. S. W. DEWO, Charles City, Iowa.

Tent for Sale.

A Tent fifty feet in diameter, nearly new, having been pitched only six times, will be sold for the very low price of $150.00.

S. G. LOW, Highlandville, Mass.

NOTICE.—We propose to hold a meeting at what is known as Edgefield church, one and a half miles from Stevenson, Ala., beginning July 28th, and holding over Sunday, for the purpose of forming a North Alabama A. C. Conference, composed of the churches of Alabama, East Tennessee, and North Carolina. Would be glad to see as many of the preaching brethren as possible. Let every reader of the Crisis pray God to bless the meeting to great good here. We wish to organize and send a delegate to the S. A. C. Association this year. J. A. CARGILE, Stevenson, Ala.

QUARTERLY MEETING.—The next Quarterly Meeting for Lexington District will be held in Lexington, Mich., commencing June 9th, and continue over Sunday. Eld. C. Mendenhall, Norwalk, O., is to preach the word. As we have had a continuous revival since January 1st at three points in this District, and is still in progress at a fourth point, we expect a glorious time in the name of the Lord. All are cordially invited.

R. J. ARNOT, Chairman.
GEO. W. WRIGHT, Sec.

Meetings are held in Hall over "German National Bank," corner of Sixth Avenue and Wood St., Pittsburgh, Penn. Bible classes, for the discussion of Bible topics. 10 to 12 A. M. Preaching by Eld. G. D. Clowes at 7.30 P. M.

QUARTERLY CONFERENCE.—The third meeting of the N. H. Adv. Chris. Quar. Conference will be held with the church in Whitefield, N. H., commencing Wednesday, June 14th, at 7 o'clock P. M., and hold over Sunday the 18th. May there be a general gathering in the name of the Lord. We expect Bro. A. Ross, and hope Bro. Couch will attend as usual.

N. WHEELER,
D. W. DAVIS, } Com.
J. W. WHITE,

CONFERENCE.—The Annual R. I. and East Ct. A. C. Conference, at its March session, voted to hold an adjourned session with the A. C. Church at Danielsonville, Ct., commencing Wedn'y, June 7th, 1876, and hold three days. Preachers and churches are requested to represent themselves at this meeting, as business of importance will come before it; prominent among which will be the new Constitution. The delegates appointed to attend the Annual Meeting at Providence, R. I., are the only legal delegates to this adjourned meeting. Let every church send the same delegates that were sent in March to Providence, R. I.

N. A. ANGELL, Conference Clerk.

NOTICE.—The office of the Biblical Messenger is now removed to Exeter, N. H. Eld. W. C. Stewart will have charge of the correspondence. All communications in general should be addressed to the Biblical Messenger, Exeter, N. H. Articles for publication may be addressed to me at Waterbury, Vt., where my private address will be for the present; and I shall have charge of preparing the matter for the paper.

A. A. HOYT.

VERMONT CONFERENCE.—The next session of the Vermont Quarterly Conference, will be holden at Hardwick, commencing June 6th, and hold as long as God will bless it. Let Vermonters rally for God, and come to this meeting. Drop your work then, and come to work for and with God. He'll pay you ten-fold. A. A. HOYT, for Com.

NOTICE.—There will be a business meeting of the Eastern Maine Missionary Association, held in connection with the Maine Annual Conference at Bangor, June 13th. We hope as many of our preaching Brn. as can will attend this meeting, as business of special importance in relation to our Camp and Tent meeting enterprise for the season will be considered and arranged.

Jer. Carr, O. S. French, for the Committee.

A NEW BOOK.

"LIFE IN CHRIST:

A STUDY
OF THE SCRIPTURE DOCTRINE
ON THE NATURE OF MAN; THE OBJECT OF THE DIVINE INCARNATION,
AND THE
CONDITIONS OF HUMAN IMMORTALITY.

BY EDWARD WHITE,
Author of the "Mystery of Growth," etc.

LONDON:
ELLIOT STOCK, 62 PATERNOSTER ROW.
1875."

The above is the title of a book of 590 pages octavo—perhaps the most comprehensive and exhaustive statement of the arguments in favor of the non-eternity of future suffering yet published.

As many as can, should possess themselves of this work. Just received from the London publisher, and for sale at this Office. Price $4.00. Sent by mail on reception of the same. AG'T.

VALUABLE ENGLISH WORKS
JUST RECEIVED.

HADES, OR THE INTERMEDIATE STATE OF MAN. By Henry Constable, A. M. This is an able work of 367 pages. Second edition. Price $1.37. Postage 13 cts.

THE STRUGGLE FOR ETERNAL LIFE. By E. Petavel, D. D. The design of this work is to show that "Eternal life, instead of being the natural inheritance of man, is to be striven for and sought by faith in Christ, and patient continuance in well doing, and that at last there is a choice of the fittest for eternal existence, while confirmed sinners are doomed to extinction."

Price: Cloth, by mail, 85 cts.; paper, by mail, 55 cts. AG'T.

RE-PRINTED
ELD. S. S. BREWER'S EXPOSITORY WORKS.

Several of Bro. Brewer's works, which have been out of print some time, so that we have not been able to fill orders, are now published, and we can supply as follows:—

"THE LAST DAY TOKENS."
Three volumes in one. The Signs in the Sun, Moon, and Stars, with other strange phenomena, illustrated with splendid cuts. 216 pp.; 50 cts.

"TREATISE ON REV. XIIITH."
Illustrated with cuts. 25 cts.

"The History of an Immortal Soul."
This is a work of the history of the origin of the dogma, with copious extracts from ancient heathen and Christian writers, to which is added a Scriptural exposition. Price 10 cts.

"THE SEVEN SEALS"
is also regarded as an important work. 15 cts. And the "Slaying of the Witnesses." 10 cts. AG'T.

SAVED.

I'm saved, I'm saved; O blessed Lord!
I'm sweetly saved, I'm saved in thee!
Saved by thy blood, and by thy word,
I'm saved, and thine henceforth will be;
Thy blood has saved me, blessed Lord,
I'm sweetly saved, I'm sweetly saved.

I'm saved, I'm saved, O joy sublime!
I'm saved from self, and saved from sin;
I'm saved, I'm saved, O bliss divine,
Eternal love has closed me in.
Thy blood has saved me, blessed Lord.
I'm sweetly saved, I'm sweetly saved.

Saved at the cross, the blessed cross,
I'm saved without, and saved within;
I'm saved, I'm saved, O what a loss
Is theirs, who fail this joy to win!
Thy blood has saved me, blessed Lord,
I'm sweetly saved, I'm sweetly saved.

I'm saved, I'm saved, I'll tell it here,
I'm saved, I'll tell it o'er and o'er;
I'm saved from doubt, I'm saved from fear,
I'm saved, as never saved before!
Thy blood has saved me, blessed Lord,
I'm sweetly saved, I'm sweetly saved.

I'm saved, I'm saved! I still repeat,
I'm saved, I'll sing it o'er and o'er;
I'm saved in Jesus, O how sweet,
I'll sing on the eternal shore.
Thy blood has saved me, blessed Lord,
I'm sweetly saved, I'm sweetly saved.

FROM J. C. & S. E. SMITH.

MISSION WORK.

To the loved ones in Christ, Greeting:—Again I continue our correspondence for Jesus' sake.

Lord's day, April 16th, we were at our brother's home in Arvonia, and met a large company of neighbors and friends at the district school-house. The Lord met with us in a special manner, and helped greatly in the presentation of his holy word. To him be all the praise. In the evening we met again, and had freedom in the gospel. One started for the kingdom. We had a number of blessed exhortations from those that love the Lord with a whole heart.

Monday, 17th, we bade adieu to the loved ones and started into the regions beyond, some over a hundred miles west, into McPherson Co., where a lone Bro. and Sr. had moved and anxiously petitioned for help. The country had been newly settled, and a new school-house had been built, and they were anxious for the banner of truth to be erected in their midst. We scattered the seed on the way, in tract form. We crossed the broad prairies, going many miles without seeing a human being. We left the word of the kingdom with many as we passed along. We reached Marion Centre, Marion Co., quite late in the evening, and found we had nine miles more to travel before we reached a pilgrim's home. We chose to do this rather than stop at a public house.

We found a home with Bro. Frank Webb, from Wis. The roads were good, and we traveled sixty miles this day. Bro. Webb welcomed us to his stone-cellar home in the earth, and we were thankful, after so long a ride, to find a resting-place for our weary bodies.

Wednesday, 19th, we went on, passing across the country twelve or fifteen miles without coming to a house or a person. While riding along we started up nine antelopes as they were grazing. We came at length into a large settlement of Russians. They are divided into companies; some three to six families settle near each other. Hundreds have come to this country. They have nice homes, and are great workers. They have their leading men appointed among them, and if anything is purchased outside of their church by the lay members, they first consult their Elders, and do as they say. They are making intercession to the Government to be set off by themselves, and to be exempt from taxation. They have one of the nicest tracts of land for wheat in the West. It is very level, and at some points it is said one can see a distance of twenty-eight miles.

We arrived at Bro. Davis' home in the afternoon, and received a hearty welcome. Notice was at once given out for meeting. At night we met, and set before the people the glorious truths of the coming kingdom, and of its establishment on the ruins of all earthly kingdoms, with Christ the King, the saints of the Most High the subjects, the renewed earth the territory, the New Jerusalem the capital, and the Divine law to live by to all eternity.

Night after night we reasoned out of the Scriptures, opening and alleging that Christ must needs have suffered and risen again from the dead, and that this Jesus is Christ. Five who had been on the back-ground renewed their covenant with the Lord, and others promised by grace divine to meet us in Eden restored. Bro. and Sr. Davis were greatly strengthened to press forward toward the mark. Bro. D. used to be a great gambler aud dancer, but came out from the world two years ago. He loves the truth, and the Lord has blest him in opening the eyes of a dear companion to behold wondrous things out of the law of God, and they both now journey together to the promised land. We left many tracts and papers for the people to read.

We returned to Bro. Webb's home, and went to the M. E. meeting. But few were out. Bro. W. gave notice of meeting next evening. The 26th, I took my team out and carried the appointment into adjoining neighborhoods, the distance of eight or ten miles. At night we had a full house, and the Lord gave freedom in speaking from the chart. Praise the Lord for his immutable word, that liveth and abideth for ever;—"Heaven and earth shall pass away, but my word shall not pass away." The words of Jehovah are yea and amen. His promises are sure. O, how clear the prophetic utterances, and how precise their fulfillment! Soon, very soon will the fourth universal kingdom in its divided state pass away, like the chaff of the summer threshing floor, which the wind driveth away, and no place be found for it. Christ will gather out of his kingdom all things that offend, and them which do iniquity, and they shall be gathered together in bundles and burned. The Nobleman will return, and receive the kingdom; and those that would not that he should reign over them, will be brought hither and slain before him. "And it shall come to pass that every soul which will not hear that Prophet shall be destroyed from among the people."

We continued to have meetings every evening, and over Lord's day (30th), and then attended to the ordinance of baptism. O it was blessed to be there and obey the Lord. The Lord has blest our labors here abundantly. Bro. Webb and family have taken a new stand for the Lord; others have been strengthened to press on; and many who have hitherto held to many notions, doctrines, and commandments of men, have been stirred to search the Scriptures, and the harvest day will declare the results. Other places were open for meetings, but we could not fill them.

May 1st. We left dear Bro. Webb and family in the hands of the Lord, hoping to meet ere long in the rest that remains for the people of God. We came some twenty-five miles to Middle Creek, Marion county. Notice again went out for meeting, and the Lord gave utterance in giving the judgment message, and we left some stirred up to search the Scriptures. 2nd. We came on to our appointment to Plymouth, eight miles from Emporia; and here the Lord helped in sounding the alarm of the speedy coming of Christ and the glorious restitution. 3d, we started for appointments in Coffey Co. The streams were very high, and had we waited till the next day they would have been past fording, as the water rose at a rapid rate, and often rises fifteen and twenty feet high. We could not make our point as we desired that day; but after passing all the bad streams we stopped with an M. E. brother, who treated us kindly, and gave us a warm invitation to come and hold meetings. He asked many questions, and we set before him the blessed truths of the gospel.

4th, we came to Ottumwa. 5th, it rained again. The streams rose in all directions, flooding corn and wheat fields. 6th. At night, after the storm had passed, we met a number of the faithful band, and spoke to them from the Word.

Lord's day, 7th. It was cool and pleasant, and a large company came out to hear the good things of the kingdom. Before speaking we had a heavenly feast in prayer and conference. Brethren and sisters were cheered on their journey. The Lord has helped the church here to stand through many storms. Dear Bro. Klock, the Elder, is a faithful and earnest man for the truth, with all the church. They are contending earnestly for the faith. The Lord gave us utterance from the words of Jesus—"My sheep hear my voice, and I give unto them eternal life."

In the afternoon we went to hear a M. E. minister, and he ridiculed the idea that the earth would be renewed, and said: "God never promised it to him," and that "the dead in the Lord were never called asleep," and that "Christ was not the Lord of the dead," and other assertions very remote from the truth. In the evening the Lord helped us to speak the truth boldly and with love to a full house. The same M. E. Bro. was there, and we gave testimony after testimony from God himself, the prophets, apostles, and from Christ, showing that the earth would be "renewed," "restored," "redeemed," "created new," "changed," "regenerated," etc., and that the meek would have it forever and ever. The Lord helped in a special manner to show the difference between light and darkness, error and truth, God's word and man's word. We trust they will settle the word in their own minds, and abide by it.

O that these judgment truths may be held out to the people, whether men will hear or not. Brn., let us not flinch, but let us ever fear the mighty God, and stand at our post for his eternal truth, that has been settled in heaven, and will ere long be settled on the earth.

We left the people eager for truth, and many deciding for the Lord. 8th. To-day after visiting eight families we came to our brother's and sister's home in Arvonia, distance ten miles, thus making a journey again of over two hundred and fifty miles in three weeks, and had meetings in five different places. We are tired and worn, yet we rest in Jesus, and hope to have our strength renewed to march on to victory. Nearly all of our tracts and papers have been distributed. Are there any more for us shelved away, or on tables not being used, or any that would like to send the Crisis for three months to the poor, or to some of the ministers of other denominations? If so, please make it known to Bro. George T. Adams, Boston, Mass., or to me at Arvonia, Osage Co., Kansas, and we will endeavor to scatter them.

Pray for us, that we may run all right till Jesus comes, and have others set out with us, and continue unto the end, that we may be saved together.

Our Annual Conference is soon to be held, in Franklin county. I hope all who can will attend, and come to work for the perishing. Soon Jesus will come, and the work will be cut short in righteousness; for the Lord will make but a short work of it, and then will be ushered in the everlasting kingdom, and all dominions that serve and obey him here will serve and obey him there. Amen.

Arvonia, Osage Co., Kan.

THERE IS NOTHING SURER THAN GOD'S PROMISES.

What does this world hang on? It floats on nothing. This globe stirs not from its course. But what supports it? There are no pillars, no foundations. It hangs as a globe in space because God keeps it there. What supports the splendid arch of heaven, under which we all dwell as beneath a magnificent hall? Is there any pillar? No! God supports it, and the arch stands without a crack. You never heard of any defect in the mighty arch of heaven; because God upholds it. A Romish Bishop once said to Luther: "If the Elector of Saxony withdraws his protection from you, what will you do?" "Do! stand under the vault of heaven and look up to the bar of God, as I have done before, and I know that I am secure." Oh! this frippery! these "second causes!" They come in between us and faith; but the faith that hears that which the ear cannot hear, and trusts an unseen God, and rests in a finished atonement; this is the faith that brings peace and safety to the soul. We know that we are safe; and a man who knows he is safe believes every thing else. If we can trust our souls with Jesus and commit them to God, surely we can trust him with everything else; and yet I know some professors who do not seem to do that. They are trusting God for eternity, but they cannot trust him for a weeks' wages. They are trusting their souls with God and yet are worried about every little thing. We ought just as much to cast our little burdens upon God as our great ones, for our little ones are the worst to carry. A gentleman riding in a gig overtook a peddler on the road and offered to give him a ride. The man accepted the offer thankfully, got into the gig, but failed to take his pack off his back. "Why don't you take off your pack?" said the gentleman. "Because you were so kind as to give me a ride, and I didn't want to trouble you with my pack." "But don't you see," said the gentleman, "it won't make any difference? I have to carry you and your pack, all the same, and there can be no reason why you should carry it; take it off and lay it down."

So we seem to think we must not take our little cares to God. Ah, my dear friends, whether you take your troubles to God or not, he will have to carry them. You will have to do it or all will go amiss. Do take your daily troubles to God, and commit them all to him. Oh! to have done with self—self's esteem and self's trust—and just to be as a little child who knows nothing about to-morrow, but trusts its mother and nestles down in her bosom; or as the chickens that hide under the hen's wing and are perfectly safe there.

Make your refuge God; commit your cause to him, and all will be well. But this, dear friends, leads the christian man to begin to think about others, and try to lead them into his own happiness. None of us serve God as we might. The most active of us might be a little more. There are little things that we could do for Jesus that would please him, and which might be much more useful in the long run than the larger things might be. A few words dropped casually to a soul upon an omnibus, or to a friend by the wayside, might do more good than an hour's discourse.—Rev. C. Spurgeon.

A PRAYER SONG.

More holiness give me, more sweetness within,
More patience in suffering, more sorrow for sin,
More faith in my Savior, more sense of his care,
More joy in his service, more purpose in prayer.
More gratitude give me, more trust in the Lord,
More zeal for his glory, more hope in his word,
More tears at his sorrow, more pain at his grief,
More meekness in trial, more praise for relief,
More victory give me, more strength to o'ercome,
More freedom from earth-strains, more longings for home;
More fit for his coming, more use would I be,
More blessed and holy—more, Savior, like thee.

"NEWS-CARRYING."

BY E. J. Y.

It is hardly necessary to say that, in plain Anglo-Saxon, "news-carrying" means gossipping.

A reverend gentleman, some time ago, while speaking of the manner in which gossips were punished by the ancients, said very truly that if the practice of whipping all gossips were continued to-day, there would be a whipping post at nearly every street corner. And I would add, although it be not pleasant, that I am afraid that the majority of those waiting their turn to be whipped would be of the "gentler sex."

Ladies, before you contradict this statement, pause; look around upon society, think of the sewing-circle, and that tea-party you attended, and if you can say that you have seen few or many women assembled to have a social time, and that there was not one unkind word spoken about a friend or neighbor, no gossipping done, then I am very much mistaken. And if you can say, too, that gentlemen, when they come together, spend their time in "small talk"—well, then we had better keep quiet.

This pernicious habit is becoming so popular and common, and is breeding so much mischief, that it is actually alarming. The love of gossipping indicates a shallow brain, a hard heart and a want of power to talk on nobler subjects. Are not the advantages for the development and education of a woman's mind increasing every year? Then, why should this habit be so general? Is there any excuse whatever for indulging in it?

But why should ladies be more addicted to it than men? The reason is quite obvious. Man is a social being, so constituted by his Maker; he loves to hold intercourse with his fellow-men. When men have finished their work they generally sit down and read, not only the newspaper, but good solid books. They store their minds with knowledge and increase their powers and capacities by nourishing food. Then they have something to think about, and consequently something to talk about.

Most women never have time to read. A woman spends most of her time in the house and cannot therefore obtain all the information relating to current affairs that a man can obtain who is always abroad. But she must have, nevertheless, something to think about outside of her family cares, and she must talk, too. For a woman has, proverbially, a "long tongue," but she did not make it, and she does not blame men if they do twit her for it whenever they can, since they are always decidedly reticent (?) themselves. Now, what shall she talk about? Where is she to obtain good subjects for thought and conversation if she does not read? Why, her mind is in almost a starving condition, and is ready to grasp at any thing, whether nutritious or otherwise. Oh, if we read more, gossipping would appear so little, so mean, we would never care to have anything more to do with it!

Now comes Mrs. Poking-her-nose-into-other-people's-business,—who, by the way, has no time to read,—her budget is full, pressed down, shaken together and running over. She draws her chair up to you very confidentially, opens her pack and begins. What a delightful procession of "Oh's" and "Ah's"! How glibly the words roll off her tongue! The most prominent of which are used to convey ideas of love and good-will and esteem! You have something to think about for a while. The next time you go out or somebody comes in, the latest piece of news you have received is related, either as a reward for what "Busy-body No. 2," brought you, or to encourage conversation on the part of "Busy-body No. 2;" and it is given consciously or unconsciously with your own modifications. Oh, the misrepresentations, the baneful, keen, biting words, the envy, the malice, wholly needless! Every word, look or act turned, twisted, distorted in every conceivable way.

No one but the All-knowing One knows the blighting, destructive results of such news-carrying; the characters damaged, sensitive feelings stung and wounded, hearts wrung and broken, contention and hatred stirred up; the waves of misery surging round the victims, trying to draw them into the awful vortex. What is to be done with the divine injunction, "Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself?" Is there no charity left? What delightful repasts for the mind to blast the reputation of your neighbors, to make friends enemies, to misconstrue all that is innocent!

Crossing the pampas of South America, that ocean of sand, where many travelers are overtaken by storms and never reach their destination, one may now see long lines of bones stretching across the desert, the remains of those who perished. There the vultures have made their homes and feed on the refuse. As travelers pass along they come out of their nests and stare at them with their dark, withered eyes as if speculating on the chance of one being left behind.

Just so with these vultures of society. In the barrenness of their own hearts and minds they lodge, feeding on all the wickedness they have already accumulated, watching with cruel eyes to see what new victims they may obtain, whose "praises they may sing." Gossips are dutiful children, for does not their father walk about as a roaring lion, seeking whom he may devour? Neither deal they with truth, else they would seldom have anything hurtful to say.

But what shall we say about those "go betweens," who go from house to house peddling their vile stuff? Here silence is more eloquent than words; for words fail to express the contempt in which they should be held by all members of society.

And what about those, who, while they do not speak so much about others themselves, yet are always ready to listen to any news concerning other people, and even wheedle and pet those from whom they know they may obtain that which suits their taste. They are to be despised as much as any gossip, and they should remember that just as Madame Slander is speaking about and dissecting the affairs of others, just so will she take them behind their back and pull them all to pieces.

This evil is only to be remedied by beginning "at home." Each one turning over a new leaf, resolved to guard well the little unruly member, determined not to listen to, nor believe every evil report, and not to countenance any one who retails such news. There would be little news-carrying done if there were not persons ready to receive it. If these gossips find that there is no one to listen to their stories, they will soon grow tired of their business and probably turn to something better.

Then let us try to emulate all that is good and virtuous, and cultivate our hearts and heads, but above all, let us follow the blessed example of our all-righteous Lord. Let the pure ever find utterance in a woman's voice, may her lips never be soiled by uncharitable words. Let her breathe words of comfort and hope, and let the divine truths that come to her spirit in her hours of musing or sadness or deep experience, go forth to bless the needy heart as they have blest her own.
—Evangelical Messenger.

Correspondence

From Sr. M. F. Hughes.

Dearly Beloved Friends:—I am glad once more to have the opportunity of writing a few lines to you, to let you know how I am getting along. Since I wrote last I have been South for my health. I have returned again to Boston, but my health is still very poor. My trust is in God; he maketh all things work together for good to them that love him. He gives me great patience, and his holy Spirit to keep me from falling. He has proved himself the God of the widow to me. He is my strength and shield; in him will I trust. I am resolved with the aid of the Holy Spirit to live righteously and godly in this present world, looking unto Jesus, the author and finisher of my faith. I have no desire to turn back to the world, but to press onward toward the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus. I am poor in this world's goods, but I am trusting wholly in the promises. My trials are many, but when Jesus, our great High Priest, shall come again, I shall be delivered out of them all; and I hope to be prepared to receive him with joy.

I receive the World's Crisis, free, from week to week, and I do enjoy its teachings. It cheers me and makes my heart glad. I prize it next to my Bible.

I have been a member of the Congregationalist church fifteen years, but I am an Adventist in belief. I am looking for my blessed Lord and Savior from heaven, to change this vile body, that he may fashion it like unto his most glorious body. My earnest prayer is, "Come, Lord Jesus, and come quickly."

347 No. Charles St., Boston, Mass.

From Sr. J. A. Goodrich.

Dear Brethren and Sisters:—Once more, after so long time, I take my pen to write a few lines for our much loved paper, which comes laden with its precious truths from week to week. O how cheering to read the letters which it contains, and to know that there are some who go forth with their lives in their hands, willing to work for their Master. We are told that "he that goeth forth weeping, bearing precious seed, shall doubtless come again rejoicing, bringing his sheaves with him." How blessed the thought that there is a resting-place for the way-worn traveler, and we can find it by looking to Jesus. There we can find a sweet resting-place even in this life; but we have the promise of a long and glorious rest in the "sweet by and by."

Christ's life was a life of unrest. Every day brought toil and weariness. Coming to Jacob's well, he sat down that he might rest. It was only physical weariness that he felt. It was not the unrest that the prophet likens to the waves of the sea, whose waters cast up mire and dirt. Only the wicked know what it is to be tired through and through. Satan gives no holidays to his servants. The only ones he allows to sleep are carnal-minded professors of religion, who will awake ere long as from a fatal slumber. Many who have been by divine power released from the cruel taskmasters of the soul, still cry, O, where shall rest be found? Though a present God is their light and their defence, and though they find manna for their hunger, and water out of the rock for their thirst, yet the desert is about them instead of promised possessions in a land of plenty.

Grievous mistakes have been made in regard to real rest. Samson slept, but it was to awake to unrest from a consciousness of the loss of the guidings of divine strength. Elijah sought rest in the wilderness, but found a bitterness of soul that made him desire death. It was in the midst of foot-sore journeyings that he found the chariot that conveyed him to everlasting rest. Jonah, fleeing where he thought rest might be found, was tossed by angry waves.

Has it not been so with many of us? Inactivity alone is not rest. The sweetest quiet that Heaven bestows is rest amid toil. So the Savior rested. Sitting on the well, he had meat to eat that the world knew not of. He wanted water from the well, which was deep, yet he did not forget that one stood before him thirsting for a draught from the well of salvation.

Like Jesus our feet may need rest, our heads and hands may seek release from toil; but there is a soul-peace more priceless than this, which must be found ere we can rightly pronounce that sweet word, rest. No circumstances can put us in possession of the promised peace; no accumulation of trials can rob us of it. Faith unites the soul to God. Love lashes our tossing bark firmly to the side of the ship of God's strength, and we have only to be borne along, while at the same time we are accomplishing vastly more than when trusting simply in our own strength.

No matter how frail our boat may be, so long as the ship is strong and the connection perfect. Having ceased from ourselves, and hid in Christ, labor is rest. We have not to go here or there—to ascend or descend. The word is nigh thee; believe it, rely upon it, and the rest will come. Believe, and rest. "Hearken diligently unto the Lord, and eat ye that which is good, and let your soul delight itself in fatness. Then shall ye go out with joy, and be led forth with peace. The mountains and the hills shall break forth before you into singing, and all the trees of the field shall clap their hands." Let us labor to enter into that rest which is prepared for all the children of God, is the prayer of your sister in Christ.

New Britain, Ct., May, 1876.

From Sr. A. M. Tripp.

Dear Brn. and Sisters:—For many long years I have been willing to confess what I believed to be the truth, and as far as I have seen my faults have been just as willing to confess them. It is well known to many of our brethren that I accepted as truth the doctrine of "trine immersion," gifts, etc., as taught at present among a certain class, and was baptized and worshiped with them from the fall of 1874 to the spring of 1875; not committing myself very strongly upon the point of "time," but trying to hold myself in readiness for the glorious event for which I had been looking so long.

Our meetings at Searsport were generally (as I thought) very good, but at times I feared we had something among us that was leading to fanaticism; then a feeling of regret would cross my mind that I had accepted those views which I had for years rejected. I was watching every movement that seemed to tend that way among our young and inexperienced brethren, and was generally the most quiet when things looked a little suspicious; but finally rested upon the point that the 19th of April would test the question; if the tongues were of God, they would of course tell the truth, for they said the Lord would come the 19th of April. But the time passed, and as my mind became fully settled, I was willing to confess my fault to others that were not with us, and came out from among those that still insisted that it was of God, and God blessed me in so doing. Some condemned, but it is a light thing to be judged by men.

Our little church in Searsport is divided, which is a cause of grief to us, for we still hold those brethren honest, although unwilling to confess what has proved to be an error. We have a meeting of a few brethren who are united to worship God together, and our union increases, and God has blest our efforts. We may differ a little in our opinions, but are agreed on the great theme of the near coming of Christ and the preparation to meet him.

For months after separating myself from our "gift Brn.," as they are called by many, I said but very little about the baptism, thinking it might be the apostolic mode, as history seemed to teach, and also some terms of Scripture. So I dared not be in haste to give it up, or reject it, until my mind was fully settled upon the point. But as weeks passed away, the light upon that position grew more and more dim, until it has finally vanished from me, and I am now satisfied it is an error of the head, although it may not be of the heart. "One Lord, one faith, one baptism," is according to Bible; and trine immersion is certainly three; and I now acknowledge the old mode of baptism, by which I was baptized in 1838—the backward mode—once buried with him (Christ) in or by baptism, is being "baptized into his death; and Christ never died but once, and, bless his dear name, he lives to die no more.

I love those brethren that still believe in that way, and by making this confession I shall no doubt sadden some hearts; but dear brethren and sisters, our precious cause, or the cause of Christ, is bleeding at every pore by the many divisions among us, and is it not high time for us all to confess our faults and seek for those things which make for peace, and rally around the standard of love? God help us, and save our honest brethren from running into error. Truth will stand, while error will fall.

From Bro. A. Conklin.

To the Brn. in the vineyard of the Lord:—It has been some time since I have written to the Crisis, and as it does me so much good to hear from others, I thought they might feel the same. I am still doing what I can to prepare a people to meet the soon coming King. I have moved to Russell Co., Lura P. O., and by so doing I am six miles from the Union Grove church, of which I am pastor. Our dear old Brother M. E. Moss organized a church last spring with five members; now we have nine. On account of hard times four left, but we are trying to gain the land promised to Abraham. He did not receive it at the death of Sarah, but bought a burying place for her and was himself buried in it.

Now the promise was made to Abraham and his seed, not through the law, but through the righteousness of faith. Then if we are Christ's, we are Abraham's seed, and heirs according to the promise.

Dear brethren, let us be awake, for the time is near at hand when we must cease our labors, and leave many dear ones to perish in the storm if they do not repent and turn to Christ.

I have not done much this winter on account of being poorly clad and poor health. The times are very hard, and I have a large family to support. It is all we can do to live; but I do feel thankful to the brethren for their kindness in sending me the Crisis the past year. We love it, and it would be almost like losing one of the family to lose it. The church uses it till it is worn out.

May God bless the giver of it and the Editors of it, and hold them in the way of life, and at last save us all in his kingdom, is my prayer.

From Bro. Wm. Sweet.

Dear Brn. in Christ:—I have written a short letter to the tried and tempted ones. I am looking for the return of the absent Master. He will not appear as he did the first time, to be mocked and derided by wicked men; but he will come robed in power, in the glory of his Father, and all the holy angels with him. He will come with the voice of the archangel and with the trump of God; the living saints will be changed, and the dead be raised. Then we shall be free from all our maladies. The groaning earth will be renewed; the curse will be gone forever.

I have spent some time this winter in several counties, trying to stir up lukewarm professors to renew their covenant obligation with God, before lingering and abused mercy is gone forever. I have tried to persuade sinners to seek the Savior whom they have so long slighted. He still pleads, "Come unto me, ... for I am meek and lowly in heart, and ye shall find rest unto your souls." There is no true rest but in him. Come, sinners; come, ye needy, come.

I sought Christ over seventy-five years ago, and found him to the joy of my heart. He has been my Helper and Friend ever since, and will be to the end of my troubles.

Iberia P. O., Brown Co., Minn.

From Bro. W. R. Dewey.

Dear Brn., Who have so kindly sent the World's Crisis to my wife, Louisa A. Dewey, for so long, accept my thanks. I hail its weekly visits with delight. Having no Advent preaching, and not much of any kind, I read all that it contains.

There is a brother here who was a Methodist until he preached a sermon on the destruction of the wicked, and they did not allow of that; so, as they did not wish to have the trouble of a trial for heresy, they gave him the privilege of withdrawing. He has preached in different places, and says he feels better since he came out and made a stand for the cause of Christ in that direction. He is taking the Crisis for three months, and pays for it himself.

How long will it be before people will read the Bible as it is printed, without note or comment, and acknowledge the truth? As for me, I am an Adventist in most of the doctrines. I am not able to go out but little, as I am so lame that I cannot go a step without two crutches, and all the preaching I get is from the Crisis, except once in a great while I go from home. I hope the time will come when I shall be able to pay up all arrearages on the Crisis.

WAS CALVIN RIGHT?

John Calvin, speaking of Paul's assertion: "Henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which the Lord, the righteous Judge, shall render to me on that day, and not to me only, but likewise to all who love his coming" (2 Tim. 4: 8), says: "This is a singular mark which he employs in describing believers. And, indeed, wherever faith is strong, it will not permit their minds to fall asleep in this world, but will elevate them to the hope of the last resurrection. His meaning therefore is, that all who are so much devoted to the world, and who love so much this fleeting life, as not to care about the coming of Christ, and not to be moved by any desire of it, deprive themselves of immortal glory. Woe to our stupidity, therefore, which exercises such power over us that we never think seriously about the coming of Christ, to which we ought to give our whole attention. Besides, he excludes from the number of believers those in whom the coming of Christ produces terror and alarm; for it cannot be loved unless it be regarded as pleasant and delightful."—See Com. on text.—Messiah's Herald.

HOME AND HEALTH.

SIMPLICITY AND LONG LIFE.

All persons who make good claim to intelligence and balance of mind are desirous of long life, but can it be said that the larger proportion of them live in such a manner that the object of their desire is promoted? If one examine the records of the hundred or more old men and women now living in their ninety and odd, he will find that their habits in early life were simple; that they were quite regular in the matters of eating and sleeping, and were not given to practices of an exciting or brain exhausting nature. That there are some cases of longevity whose youth or early manhood was not remarkable for a close observance of hygienic proprieties must be admitted, but it will be found that the folly of such a course was recognized ere it had made very serious inroads upon the constitutional vigor.

Not very long ago the writer received a visit from an elderly gentleman whose age, bordering on eighty, would not have been surmised from his fresh appearance and active manner. Allusion being made to the fact that he was a very young looking old man, he stated that at thirty he was supposed to be far gone in consumption, and, becoming thoroughly dissatisfied with the treatment received from physicians, broke away from them, and set on foot a line of practice which had been suggested by reading some magazine articles, and which he deemed consistent with natural law. He went into the country, worked according to his strength, was out of doors a good part of every day, ate the simplest of food, avoiding everything in the way of excitement as far as he could, and found, in the course of a few months, that his health was greatly improved, the symptoms of pulmonary consumption becoming less and less marked. As the result of this experiment he changed his business, which had been of an in-door character, for another which gave him out-of-door life, and a continuance of simplicity in his habits established him in robust health; such bodily vigor, in fact, as he had never realized before, and which had remained his almost without intermission.

An illustrious example of regularity and simplicity, and of their effects in prolonging life, although it be surrounded with cares and responsibilities, is the present Emperor of Germany. We are told that his affairs, public and private, are regulated with the utmost strictness; that his personal habits are so simple that they have passed into proverb. "Many a man in Berlin," says a writer, "who is not an emperor, would look upon the two or three slices of Schwarzbrod (black bread) and bit of cold meat as very meagre fare." And yet such is his daily luncheon. Confine a New York business man upon such materials for his "lunch" and he would deem himself hardly used. The Emperor is a really hard-worked man. The cares of his great estate are heavy, and he seeks to meet and discharge them. He is doubtless often weary when the day is done, but he does not go to a downy, luxurious couch, but to a hard, military bed, which gives him the healthful repose so much needed.—Science of Health.

INJURIOUS EFFECTS OF TOBACCO.

"Doctor," we said to a splendid specimen of the profession, "tell us something about the baneful effects of tobacco."

"Its effects, sir," he replied, "are evil and only evil, and that continually; and it is a perfect mystery that gentlemen of my profession care so little, do and know so little, about a poison that is doing mischief at so terrible a rate."

"Sir," the doctor continued, "I was on a council of physicians the other day, on the borders of this town; the patient was a young man prostrated by paralysis; he was deprived of the use of his lower limbs from the abdomen to the toe; we overhauled him; we withdrew and talked about antecedents and probable causes, and came to no satisfactory conclusion. Dissatisfied and impatient, I inquired of the attending physician whether the poor fellow used tobacco."

"Oh, no!" he replied, "I guess not," and with an air of nonchalance, added, "what if we does? that can have nothing to do with his case."

"I did not ask you," I replied, "about the effects of tobacco, but simply if the patient used it."

"Gruffly he said, "go and see."

Stepping to his bedside, I said, "My young friend, do you use tobacco?

With a squealing voice, more cat-like than human, he answered, "I use a little."

"How do you use it?"

"I smoke a little."

"Did you smoke this morning?"

"Yes, a little."

"Did you smoke at noon?"

"Yes, a little."

Before I quit his side I ascertained that he had actually consumed sixteen cigars a day, and the poor fellow's soul was so obfuscated by smoke, that he considered that prodigious amount but a little!

"This," continued the doctor, "may seem strange, but the strangest thing of all is the fact that his attending physician, regular and well-bred, did not know, in the first place, that his patient used tobacco, and secondly, if he did, he did not know that a rank and deadly poison could have anything to do with his case."

We are indebted to the medical profession for the most effective testimony against this most popular poison; hence we have no wish to arraign it and denounce it in wholesale style. But account for it as we may, on the score of selfishness or ignorance, the main body of the profession are mournfully derelict in duty touching the ruinous effects of this great and fashionable narcotic.—Am. Baptist.

PURSUIT AFTER PERFECTION.—Archbishop Leighton doubted whether those who do not sincerely aspire after perfection, have saving grace, and pious Doddridge is explicit on this head: "To allow yourself deliberately to sit down satisfied with any imperfect attainments in religion, and to look upon a more confirmed and improved state of it as what you are secretly resolved that you will not pursue, is one of the most fatal signs we can well imagine, that you are an entire stranger to the first principles of it."—Christian Standard.

IT is ten thousand times harder to live right than to die right. It is not difficult for a man to give his life up through the chamber of death. But to give his life while you hold it, yes, and to use it so that it is a perpetual benefaction all through—that is hard, and that is the special christian duty. To live in such a way that, as from the moon by night and the sun by day, light and guidance are issuing, from you shall proceed an influence that comforts, cheers, instructs and alleviates the troubles and sufferings of life—this is the true following of the Lord Jesus Christ.—Ex.

SILENT INFLUENCE.—We are touching our fellow-beings on all sides. They are affected for good or for evil by what we are, by what we say and do, even by what we think and feel. May flowers in the parlor breathe their fragrance through the atmosphere. We are each of us silently saturating the atmosphere about us with the subtle aroma of our character. In the family circle, besides and beyond all the teaching, the daily life of each parent and child mysteriously modifies the life of every person of his household. The same process, on a wider scale, is going on through the community. No man liveth to himself, and no man dieth to himself. Others are built up and strengthened by our unconscious deeds; and others may be wrenched out of their places and thrown by our unconscious influence.—Ex.

GREAT AND LITTLE THINGS.—We cannot often do great things, but we can do some little good thing every day. A word fitly spoken, a cup of cold water given in the name of a disciple, a crumb afforded to some starving sufferer—all these are small to those who do them, but they may be very great to those to whom they are done, and it is the aggregate of such deeds that make up a benevolent life. A rain drop is small, but it is equal to any and all of its kind, the multitude of which water the fields and swell the floods.—United Presbyterian.

UNDER TRIALS.

I. K. LOMBARD.

Hush! my heart, although so smitten,
Let the Lord thy sorrows lighten,
He can all thy prospects brighten,
Lighten all the gloom.
Why so oft in gloom and sorrow?
Why so many troubles borrow?
Is there not a brighter morrow?
Look ye not for day?

Dearest friends, by death, may leave us,
Living friends may sometimes grieve us,
Yet there's One who can relieve us,
Jesus is our friend.
Make him now thy burden-bearer,
Cling to him yet nearer, nearer;
He can make the way seem clearer,
Even to the end.

Yet, let not all mourning vanish,
Neither let all tears be banished;
Nature's ties would thus be famished—
Love itself would die.
But, avoid all sore repining,
For God's love is o'er thee shining,
Giving clouds a silver lining,
Whispering, "I am nigh."

Oft these trials, little prized,
Come as blessings in disguise,
Causing drooping hearts to rise,
Turning night to day.
O for grace my heart to know,
And to soothe each rising woe;
Lest perchance, astray I go
From the narrow way.

Wearied with earth's pains and cares,
Wearied with its frowns and snares,
Wearied with its heartless prayers,
How I long for home!
There, thank God, all sorrow ends,
There I'll find my dearest friends;
So, I'll pray till Christ descends,
Jesus, quickly come."

St Johusbury Vt., May 26th.

A SERMON.

This know, also, that in the last days perilous times shall come. For men shall be lovers of their own selves, covetous, boasters, proud, blasphemers, disobedient to parents, unthankful, unholy, without natural affection, truce-breakers, false accusers, incontinent, fierce, despisers of those that are good. 2 Tim. 3: 1-3

These words were spoken by the apostle Paul to Timothy, and the exhortation appears appropriate to be repeated at the present time to the men of our day. The doctrine taught by Paul to Timothy is the same which the apostle always preached to the church and to the multitude. He says that, "in the last days perilous times shall come," and have they not come upon us? Have not his words in regard to the last day become true? Are not men lovers of themselves? Are they not covetous, boasters, proud, blasphemers, disobedient to parents, unthankful, unholy, without natural affection, truce-breakers, false accusars, incontinent, fierce, despisers of those that are good?

Here is the indictment which Paul has drawn against the men of the last days, and does not the charge come home to us in all of its power and force? How many of the men of the present day can lay their hands upon their hearts and say that they are entirely free from one or more of the complaints which the apostle charges upon us of these last days? Are not all more or less guilty, insomuch as we may have offended in some of the ways pointed out to us? Who could preach more truthfully than Paul of the wickedness of men in his day and in our time? Who could set forth our sins and wickedness to our gaze better than is made known to us in the words of the text. Look which way we may, we find the same. Boasters, proud, blasphemers, disobedient to parents,—all of these things are among us, and abide with us always.

If this be so, what progress are we making in truth and in righteousness? Are we making personal investigations into our daily walk and conversation, to see if we are clean and free from guilt in all things? Do we strive to improve ourselves, so that we may render an acceptable service unto God, as did Paul after his conversion to christianity? Do we examine into our own hearts, to see if we are boastful, covetous, disobedient to parents, blasphemers, and do we try to reform ourselves in these particulars? or do we go on, day after day in our wickedness, and commit the sins which Paul says shall come in the last days?

If any one desires to improve him or herself, let them read the history of Paul from his conversion to his death, and see what he suffered from both Jews and Gentiles, and how well he knew what persecution was, and how hard it was for him to contend with the ignorance and prejudice of his own people, and how he has foretold what was to come in these last days. He knew that the people had preached unto them false doctrines. He knew that there could be but one true religion. He knew that there was but one true God, and but one Jesus Christ whom he served. He knew that Christ was the first to rise from the dead, and that he ascended into Heaven, and that he would come again to judge the world. He knew that he had the power himself to raise the dead, and to perform miracles in the name of Jesus Christ, which he did, and in this way established himself in truth, as the ambassador of God to a world sunk in idolatry and superstition. He knew that in the last days men would forget God and disobey his commands. He knew all of these things, and much more, for his genius came direct from heaven.

Do we not know that what he preached is true? Are not men guilty of all the charges which he makes against them? Are we not boastful and wicked? Do we not blaspheme the name of Almighty God and of his Son Jesus Christ? If so, must we not expect that punishment will follow for a violation of his laws? Can we blaspheme God, and expect to prosper in our worldly affairs? Will not God withhold his rain and the dews of heaven from us if we blaspheme his holy name? Will he not send upon us the grasshoppers and the insects to destroy vegetation which shall deprive us of food and raiment? Are we thankful for God's mercy and loving kindness toward us in all things? or are we covetous and proud? These things will be required of us in due time, and should we not be careful to avoid laying up for ourselves wrath against the day of wrath, and then when too late, find out our great mistake?

Do we not know that in order to prevent this disaster from coming upon us, we must reform our hearts within us, and lay aside the sins portrayed in the text? Must we not be temperate in all things, in honor preferring one another, loving our neighbor as ourselves? We know all of this and more, but we disregard the teachings of God as made known to us through Christ and the apostles, and go on in sin and in wickedness day after day, and year after year. Are not selfishness and covetousuess everywhere observable, and do not men strive to lift themselves up by pulling other men down? Do they hesitate to lie, cheat, or defraud? Are they not filled with envy, hatred and malice? Do they not blaspheme? and are they not disobedient to parents in the last days, when perilons times shall come, and have they not come upon us as a people, for the reason that we forget God and disobey his commandments?

These are questions we can all answer for ourselves, as we must answer at the bar of God in the presence of the Son of God and of the apostles. How will the record stand? Will it be in our favor or against us? For by the record shall we be judged. We may cheat each other, but we cannot cheat God; that is sure. Neither can we escape paying the penalty which is attached to a violation of divine law. This is impossible. Then would we urge the people to hear the words of the text, and to lay aside all forbidden things. In so doing we shall vastly improve our condition here as well as hereafter. We shall then have secured an inheritance in God's kingdom where all persecution shall cease, where pain and sorrow are unknown, where the heavenly hearts shall sing praises unto the most high God. Then will all be bright and joyful; then shall we be clothed in robes of righteousness and be forever blessed. . . . Is it not worth an effort to be diligent, to labor while the day lasts, that we may be prepared for our departure, for it must come sooner or later, and we know not how soon it may be.

If, then, we would be prepared for the coming of Christ, we should lose no time in reforming our hearts, and in putting our house in order for another, and let us hope, a better world. What avail are worldly homes and worldly riches, compared with the unknown future? Ages and ages will roll away with our destiny fixed, as we are admonished in God's holy word. So let us, this centennial year, resolve that we will commence an individual investigation into our own hearts to see if they are right in the sight of God and man, and that we begin a new life which shall lead us into paths which are ever green, and beside the still waters of salvation, and be counted worthy to enter into paradise. . . . That God will help us to do this, we should pray without ceasing, remembering that it is for our own good, and for the advancement of God's kingdom on earth that we labor, and for our efforts we shall receive a sure compensation which shall be eternal and everlasting.—Daily Patriot, Concord, N. H.

CONSCIENCE.

"My conscience does not condemn me." This has, in almost every case, been the excuse of those whom the Lord has led me to reprove for indulging in things that his word forbids. They say "my conscience does not condemn; so I am all right." But are you sure your consciences are enlightened by the Holy Ghost? If they are not, they cannot be a sure guide. Saul said, "Verily I believed I must do things contsary to Jesus;" so he followed the leadings of his conscience to deeds of persecutions, yet he felt free in all this till the Spirit of God shone on his heart. Then, and not till then, was it safe for him to follow his conscience. The conscience, that will allow us to indulge in anything God's word does not permit, must be wrong. Who professes religion and does not profess to take the Bible for his rule of action? Yet many do things it forbids. Sister in Christ, thou that fostereth pride by putting on things that God's word strictly forbids, how readest thou? Peter, 3: 3; 1 Tim. 2: 9; Isa. 3: 16-25. In putting on these things you are advertising the world in characters as visible as if they were written in large capitals, "I am living in disobedience to the claims of God."

Brother, thou that makest hard bargains with thy neighbors, you know you have property in your possession that honestly belongs to yonr neighbor, but you say, "my conscience does not condemn me." The command from the lips of your Redeemer is, as you would that men should do unto you, do ye even so unto them. Then do not allow your conscience to remain quiet when God condemns you. Like a true man, be honest with yourself. . . . Rest assured that it would shut you out of heaven! Is not the saying of the prophet true, "as with the buyer so with the seller." Are they not both guilty before God? Then repent, and restore, if it be in your power to do so, if not four-fold, make that good wherein you have wronged by mistakes or otherwise.

Does not indulgence in superfluous ornaments in dress, or on your carriages, or harness, cost money for which you will have to give an account when the Master settles with you? Then be not deceived either by conscience or otherwise, for God is not mocked. God's holy word must be the chart by which we steer to heaven. Then bring your life to this rule. Do not let your conscience lead you where the holy word will not go with you. "For he that is not with me is against me, and he that gathereth not with me scattereth abroad."—Guide to Holiness.

THE ATONEMENT.

From the "Plan of Redemption."

SECOND PART.

This law of faith had its germ in Eden, the scene of the transgression and our fall. Thus, it seems, inasmuch as God had determined to sacrifice his only begotten Son, and make his soul an offering for sin, he would offer the first typical sacrifice ever offered on earth by the slaying of beasts, to impress upon our first parents a sense of their guilt, and to signify to them his purpose to provide a remedy for their fall, and thus teach them the means through which the seed of the woman should bruise or crush the head of the serpent, and he, the serpent, should bruise his heel (a promise upon which our faith still clings, as did Paul's, when he said, "The God of peace shall bruise Satan under your feet shortly," and thereby also to procure skins to cover them and hide their shame; an emblem of the righteousness of Christ which covers us who believe in him. Indeed, we may well suppose all this would arise from that love which gave his only Son to redeem and save us.

Again, the offering of Abel was a development of the working of this law of faith, and so on down through the watery deluge. So perfectly did Enoch walk by it, that God translated him, because he pleased God. We find the law of faith working and developing itself in the patriarchal age also. Paul says, "Without faith it is impossible to please God;" and in the 11th chapter of the epistle to the Hebrews, he traces the workings and power of this law, which should make our hearts thrill with joy and thanksgiving to God that it was ever given; yea, and even in the dark shades of heathenism, as we are shown in the Scriptures, specimens of its power are manifested where tradition and the book of nature were the only theological rules through which it could be studied. The apostle says:

"When the Gentiles which have not the law [written] do by [studying the righteousness of God] nature the things contained in the [written] law, these, having not the law, are a law unto themselves; which show the work of the law written in their heart, their conscience also bearing witness, and their thoughts the meanwhile accusing or else excusing one another." Rom. 2: 14, 15. That this law is embodied in the new covenant, the law of faith, is evident from its being written in the heart, and therefore by the Spirit, and not the old covenant or letter on stones. They are, therefore, to be judged by the law of the new covenant. This view is sustained by the following verse: "But he is a Jew, which is one inwardly, and circumcision is that of the heart in the Spirit, and not in the letter." Rom. 2: 29.

Again it is written (concerning the heathen), "Who in time past suffered all nations to walk in their own ways; nevertheless, he left not himself without witness, in that he did good, and gave rain from heaven and fruitful seasons, filling our hearts with food and gladness." Acts 14: 16, 17.

To this also agrees the testimony of the Psalmist: "The heavens declare the glory of God, and the firmament showeth his handy-work; day unto day uttereth speech, and night unto night showeth knowledge. There is no speech nor language where their voice is not heard." And in view of this the prophet exclaims, "The law of the Lord [thus written in the volume of nature] is perfect, converting the soul; the testimony of the Lord is sure, making wise the simple." Psalm 19: 1-7. Please read the whole Psalm. Paul refers to it thus: "But, I say, have they not all heard? Yes, verily, their sound went into all the earth, and their words unto the ends of the world." Rom. 10: 18.

From these scriptures it is shown that the working of this "royal law" of faith is not confined to those who have the written word, but is preached through the works of nature by the Spirit, and finds disciples in heathen lands, in whose hearts it is written by the Spirit.

But it may be asked, Why, then, would you preach the gospel to the heathen? We will let Paul answer this question. When he went into the idolatrous city of Athens, planting his feet on Mars' hill, he exclaimed, "Ye men of Athens, I perceive that in all things ye are too superstitious; for, as I passed by, and beheld your devotions, I found an altar with this inscription, To the Unknown God. Whom, therefore, ye ignorantly worship, him declare I unto you." Acts 17: 22, 23. Here, in a heathen city, where the true God was acknowledged and worshipped, though ignorantly, Paul thought proper to preach the gospel; nor did he preach in vain; for he found many converts, among whom were "Dionysius the Areopagite, and a woman named Damaris, and others with them."

Why preach the gospel in Jerusalem? They were in a similar condition, with the Scriptures in their hands, as the Greeks with the volume of nature for their study. Paul says of them, "For I bear them record, that they have a zeal of God, but not according to knowledge. For they being ignorant of God's righteousness, and going about to establish their own righteousness, have not submitted themselves unto the righteousness of God." Rom. 10: 2, 3.

The object of preaching should be to expound and urge the truths of God home upon every man's conscience in the sight of God, whether from the book of nature or revelation, whether upon civilized or heathen nations.

It may be well to inquire here, What is the transgression of this law? The Scripture answers, Unbelief. "He that believeth not is condemned already, because he hath not believed in the name of the only begotten Son of God." John 3: 18.

The natural man is a sinner by nature; nor can he be anything else by nature; as well might the "Ethiopian change his skin, or the leopard his spots." The corrupt branch of a corrupt tree cannot bring forth good fruit, neither a bitter fountain send forth sweet water. Men do not "gather grapes of thorns, or figs of thistles." Therefore there is no man by nature good; "no, not one." All have "gone out of the way; they are together become unprofitable." This condition is the result of the fall, and death is the inevitable consequence of this condition; "for sin when it is finished, bringeth forth death," as we have before shown. "For the wages of sin is death," and from this sin and death Jesus died to redeem us, and from it we shall be delivered as passive as we were passive in the fall. "For since by man came death, by man came also the resurrection of the dead; for as in Adam all (men) die, even so in Christ shall all (men) be made alive." Thus death shall be destroyed. The responsibility, therefore, of our natural condition does not rest on us, but on Adam.

It may then be asked, "How is the sinner made responsible for his sins in this world? We reply, By disbelieving the word of God, and thereby rejecting the offers of mercy and grace as presented in the gospel. "Light is come into the world, and men loved darkness rather than light, because their deeds were evil." God extends forgiveness under the new covenant, on conditions of repentance and faith, but the sinner refuses to accept it. Yet the Holy Spirit reproves; the word of God is preached and published; thus men are kept under restraint, and though the wrath of man is often manifested, yet it shall praise God, and "the remainder of wrath shalt thou (Lord) restrain," says David; while the grace of God enables the believer to keep his body in subjection, and to yield his "members as instruments of righteousness" unto God, and to present his body a "living sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God, which is" our "reasonable service." Thus they are saved from sin in this life, and in the end the second death will have no power over them.

Let us illustrate this point. We will suppose two men to have fallen involuntarily into a loathsome pit, from which they have no power to extricate themselves, and in which, without assistance, they must perish. In this condition a friend approaches, and offers to rescue them, and cleanse away their filth, on condition that they confess their helplessness, accept his hand, and acknowledge him as their benefactor and deliverer. Reader, at what point would the responsibility of remaining in the pit be thrown upon those men? Would you not say, At the very point where help was offered and refused? For certainly it was not before. But suppose one of those men accepts the proffered hand, is delivered, entreats his fellow sufferer to accept the same kind hand that saved him, but he still refuses. Would not his blood be upon his own head?

Sinner, Jesus finds you in your native state of sin and death. He died to redeem you, and thereby brings you under the law of faith and obedience to himself. In the gospel he submits to you the whole plan of redemption; he offers you present salvation from personal sin and guilt, to enable you by his grace to break off from sin, to overcome the world, the flesh, and the devil, and to give you eternal life in the end,—all on condition of repentance and faith. "For with the heart man believeth unto righteousness, and with the mouth confession is made unto salvation." Rom. 10: 10.

But what is the result of unbelief? The penalty of the law, which requires faith, on which salvation, immortality, and eternal life are offered, is the second death; for we are informed that "he that overcometh shall not be hurt of the second death," Rev. 20: 6. "But the fearful, and unbelieving, and abominable, and murderers, and whoremongers, and sorcerers, and idolaters, and all liars, shall have their part in the lake which burneth with fire and brimstone, which (part) is the second death." Rev. 21: 8. This death must succeed the resurrection from the first death; this is the death which is everywhere in the gospel set over against life, everlasting life, eternal life. "If ye live after the flesh (according to the flesh) ye shall die; but if ye, through the Spirit, do mortify (crucify) the deeds of the body (unbelief, pride, lust, envy, murder, theft, lying, and all other evil propensities), ye shall live." Rom. 8: 13.

KIND words are like the flowers we may scatter around us, whose fragrance rises up like incense; or, better still, they remind us of the girl in the fairy tale, from whose lips when she spoke, beautiful pearls fell. But they are of more value than pearls. From them we reap a rich reward here, and they are treasures laid up in heaven.—Ex.

SLEEP OF THE DEAD.

L. BOUTELL.

1 Thess. 4: 13, 14—"But I would not have you to be ignorant, brethren, concerning them which are asleep, that ye sorrow not even as others which have no hope. For if we believe that Jesus died and rose again, even so them also which sleep in Jesus will God bring with him."

The subject of the few thoughts that I shall give utterance to will be the sleep of the dead. Do they or do they not sleep? And what is it to sleep? Webster says—"To take rest by a suspension of the voluntary powers of the body and mind; a periodical suspension of the functions of the organs of sense, as well as those of the voluntary and rational soul; hence, also, to be dead." How natural is this with aspirations of men, when fatigued, toil-worn, weary, nervous, sick or pain-stricken; how they long to rest, repose, sleep. "If I could only sleep a little it would be delightful." It is no wonder that all religionists have almost deified the following:

"Asleep in Jesus, blessed sleep,"
From which none ever wake to weep."

These comforting words, implying only a periodical suspension of the organs of sense, mind and life, in unconsciousness, till awakened therefrom by the sounding of the last trump. Then will David's desires be fulfilled (Ps. 17: 15)—"As for me I will behold thy face in righteousness; I shall be satisfied when I awake with thy likeness." And this agrees with the Bible testimony, both of the Old and New Testaments. It seems very strange that theological men can not adopt, and decide by the same rule of interpretation generally, as they would in mathematical problems.

The uniform answer is, seven and five make twelve; but, theologically, we have a variety of answers. Now, is it right or proper to say the dead sleep? and, if asleep, are they awake at the same time? Sleep is the word commonly used in the Bible for death. Deut. 31: 16—"And the Lord said unto Moses, Behold, thou shalt sleep with thy fathers." 2 Sam. 7: 12—"And when thy days are accomplished, thou shalt sleep with thy fathers"—become unconscious like thy fathers. 1 Kings 2: 10—"So David slept with his fathers, and was buried in the city of David." And Paul in his day intimated that David was still asleep, and had not gone to heaven, as most people suppose. Hear him (Acts 2: 29, 34)—"Men and brethren, let me freely speak unto you of the patriarch David, that he is both dead and buried, and his sepulchre is with us unto this day. . . . For David is not ascended into the heavens." So David is still asleep. But is not his body that sleeps? It is David that is dead and buried. It is David that has not received his reward yet. It is David that will be satisfied when he awakes out of his sleep.

Now we will come to the New Testament, and see if that corresponds with the common use of the terms by the prophets. I shall call attention to the history of the sickness, death, burial and resurrection of Lazarus. John 11: 11—"And after that he saith unto them, Our friend Lazarus sleepeth; but I go that I may awake him out of sleep. Then said his disciples, Lord, if he sleep he shall do well. Howbeit Jesus spake of his death." They did not seem to understand, yet "they thought that he had spoken of taking rest in sleep. Then said Jesus unto them plainly, Lazarus is dead." Here we have Jesus making it all plain. "Lazarus sleepeth." "Lazarus is dead." Now Lazarus had slept four days. But where did he sleep? In the dust of the earth. Dan. 12: 2—"Many of them that sleep in the dust of the earth shall awake." So Lazarus sleeps in the dust with all the sleepers, and "I would not have you to be ignorant, brethren, concerning them."

Yes, but is there not another, inner, inside Lazarus, that went directly to heaven, or is conscious; and that can enjoy rich blessings and heavenly felicity somehow, or somewhere? Not a bit of it. Not a word here that could show any such state. But the whole narrative proves, to me, the unconscious state of the dead. Suppose Lazarus had gone to heaven, where he met his old friends gone before, and had spent only four days with them and the redeemed; would he not have had a story to have told of the ineffable glory of the upper world, that would have thrilled the hearts of all his brethren, and made their hearts burn within them on his return? Only think of it,—had been where Jesus is, was there four days, was welcomed by Jesus to the heavenly felicity, sang the song of redemption in glory, comes back, lives awhile with his sisters and friends, and not a word escapes him of anything he saw or heard. How account for all this? If your friends should visit the Centennial grounds in Philadelphia, and be there only four days, and return without a single word of what they saw and heard, you would certainly think they had been asleep. So in this case, Lazarus had slept sweetly in Jesus, without even so much as a dream.

But is it an eternal sleep? Let the old apostle Paul answer. 1 Cor. 15: 51-55—"Behold, I show you a mystery; we shall not all sleep, but we shall all be changed; in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, at the last trump; for the trumpet shall sound, and the dead [the sleepers] shall be raised incorruptible, and we [the living] shall be changed. For this corruptible must put on incorruption, and this mortal must put on immortality." Here is the time my text will have its fulfillment. "For if we believe that Jesus died and rose again, even so them also which sleep in Jesus will God bring with him." God will bring the sleepers out of their graves, as he did Jesus, and "the dead in Christ shall rise." This consummates the hope of the christian, and welcomes them to the rest that remains for the people of God. Here is victory over death.—Chelsea Record.

SORROW.

J. W. THOMAS.

"As sorrowful." 2 Cor. 6: 10.

Are you sorrowful? Search for the cause of it. Some persons are born with a sorrowful temperament. It is natural for them to look on the dark side of things. However prosperous their outward circumstances, and however much they have to make them happy, yet they carry a heavy heart, and wear a sad countenance. Many good christians, with this turn of mind, are melancholy. Such should take good care of their health, and avoid places and associations calculated to increase or produce gloomy feelings. Cultivate hope. Be cheerful. Sing. Go out into the fields, and survey the beauties of Nature. Throw off despondency. Think how good the Lord is to you. Go and comfort the heart of some one who needs an encouraging word, or a little assistance, and you will find joy gushing up in your own heart. Know yourself. Search out your own weaknesses, and guard against them. Be stirring, active, hopeful, joyous. Some christians are sorrowful because of secret sins. They are backslidden in heart. The world does not know it, their friends do not know it, but they themselves know it; and though outwardly they have the appearance of cheerfulness, yet within there is a heavy burden of sorrow. A tree may put forth its foliage, and give signs of life and fruitfulness; but if there is a worm gnawing at its heart, its beauty will begin to disappear. A vessel may leave the wharf with fair wind and widespread sails, but if there is a leak she may never reach her destined port. Soundness is essential to safety, and safety is essential to happiness. If you are conscious of moral defects, go and get right at once. Do not carry a heavy heart any longer. Confess all to the Savior, and beseech him to make you every whit whole. Sweep the house from garret to cellar; shake the carpets; brush down the cobwebs; go into every nook and corner, and make a thorough cleansing. Drive out all the bugs. Get everything clean within, and then you can sing within.

Sorrow sometimes arises from a lack of knowledge. Doubtless there are many honest, well meaning persons, who walk from day to day beneath heavy burdens because they do not understand clearly the teachings of the gospel. They have been taught that none can live without sin, hence they have not cast their burdens on the Lord, nor sought for light and truth as it is their privilege; consequently they do not enjoy clear and satisfactory evidence of their acceptance with God. They are walking in the dark. "The entrance of Thy word giveth light."

A right understanding of the truth is of great importance, in order to know the "way of salvation." There is a higher grade of experience than many have yet attained. It is to be fully and completely saved by faith in the blood of Christ now. It is to know that we have passed from death unto life, because we love the brethren. It is to be filled with the Spirit, to walk in the Spirit, to be led by the Spirit, and to be "kept by the power of God through faith unto salvation, ready to be revealed in the last time. Wherein ye greatly rejoice, though now for a season, if heed be, ye are in heaviness through manifold temptations."

This leads me to remark that the true christian may have sorrow. "Blessed are they that mourn, for they shall be comforted." Christ himself was a man of sorrow and acquainted with grief. As long as we possess mortal bodies, and live in a sinful world, we need not expect to escape sorrow. Paul had his share of it, yet he could say, "As sorrowful, yet always rejoicing." Deep in his heart, underneath the outward afflictions, there was a joy unspeakable and full of glory. He felt sorrowful to see men reject the offers of salvation—to see divisions among his brethren; but his confidence was firmly fixed in risen Savicr, and he knew that whether living or dying he was the Lord's. His heart was tender, and he could sympathize with his brethren in affliction. When death had entered the church at Thessalonica he wrote—"I would not have you to be ignorant, brethren, concerning them which are asleep, that ye sorrow not even as others which have no hope. For if we believe that Jesus died and rose again, even so them also which sleep in Jesus will God bring with him."

TRUST.

Are you trusting in the Lord? Are you believing in his promises? Are you taking him at his word; and leaning on his strong arm for support? Are you living so that you can bring forth fruit to the glory of God? Are you reflecting the gospel light? Are you an honor to the church, and a blessing to the generation in which you live? Or, are you following the vain fashions and maxims of the world, seeking its honors, mingling with its gay followers, uniting yourselves to oath-bound societies, and calling those brother who are enemies to the cause of Christ? If you are, you have let go your hold on God, and forgotten to trust him. If you love the world, the love of the Father is not in you.

If you are the friend of the world you are the enemy of God. We are commanded to separate ourselves from the world and renounce the hidden works of darkness, and take refuge in the ark of Christ's blessed church, if we would be followers of the Lamb. The blessed Master has said it. "Come out from among them andbe ye separate, saith the Lord, and touch not the unclean thing; and I will receive you, and will be a Father unto you, and ye shall be my sons and daughters, saith the Lord Almighty."

Are you getting discouraged with the ruggedness of the way? Trust in God, it will not be long. Does the cross at times seem to be heavy? Jesus bore it for you. Trust in him. Do the storm clouds gather around you? Do the wavering billows of old ocean seem to rise, as if they would swallow up your frail bark in its turbid waters? Fear not, the blessed Savior is at the helm; and he will guide you safe through.

Finally, "be ye steadfast, unmovable, always abounding in the work of the Lord." Trust him at all times and under all circumstances. Lean not to your own understanding, or to what this or that one says; but trust in the Lord, and lean on his strong arm for support. "And the very God of peace sanctify you wholly; and I pray God that your whole spirit and soul and body may be preserved blameless unto the coming of our Lord and Savior, Jesus Christ."—Earnest Christian.

AFFLICTION A PREPARATIVE FOR SERVICE.

The young christian, in the enthusiasm of his early love, and little suspecting meaner motives, often longs and prays for power to do something great in the world in the service of his Master. He would like to be a great evangelist, or a great worker, or in some other beneficent way a great ruler over other men's minds. Most likely he has not counted the cost.

So it was with the two sons of Zebedee. They went one day to Jesus, and prayed that they might sit, the one on his right hand, and the other on his left, in his kingdom. But they knew not what they asked. In praying for a share in the glories of his throne, they were unconsciously praying for a share in the agonies of his cross. When the ore in the fable was asking Jupiter that it might be fashioned into a sword, it was asking to be made acquainted with the furnace and the forge, the sifting stream, and the shattering hammer-stroke.. It was needful for the file to bite and the brazier to burn; it would have to be melted and re-melted before it could be tempered into delicate splendor and strength, and made meet for service in battle. . . .

This is the ordeal through which must pass that which is destined to be "a polished shaft" in the hands of our King. Powers of great usefulness can be educated in no other way. Powers of endurance are unknown where there has been nothing to endure. Powers of rule belong alone to those who have learned to rule by learning to obey. The power of teaching is the especial faculty of men who have themselves undergone stern discipline. The power of sympathy is educated in the school of sorrow. Most of the Psalms were born in the wilderness. Most of the Epistles were written from a prison. The greatest thoughts of the greatest thinkers have all passed through fire. The greatest poets have "learned in suffering what they taught in song." In bonds Bunyan lived the allegory that he afterwards indited; and we may thank Bedford jail for the "Pilgrim's Progress." All the foremost worthies of our world, all the spiritual heroes of our race, have been men of sorrow and acquainted with grief.

Take comfort, afflicted christian! you have often prayed to be made of some use in the world before you die, and now the answer to that prayer has come. God tries you because in some way he is about to use you; for your history will furnish no exception to the rule that when God is about to make pre-eminent use of a man, he puts him in the fire.

AFFLICTIONS.

I have felt that terrible calamities are great blessings to the spirit of a man who knows how to suffer. To such a man a great affliction from God is like a great blast in a quarry; it throws out great treasures, or it opens a way for great projects. I revere a man who is in great affliction. God seems to have selected him, like a piece of second growth timber, for an important work. It is not every one who can be trusted to suffer greatly.—Selected by E. P. Robinson.

THE DEGENERACY OF, AND LESSENING RESPECT FOR GOVERNMENTS.

THOS. FITZSIMONS.

One of the significant omens of the day is the general degeneracy of, and lessening respect for governments, now so visible in Europe and America. Public journals, parties and men, speak now openly in terms of opprobrium and disrespect of their governments, that fifty years ago would not have been tolerated. Now it is scarcely rebuked.

The corruption and selfishness of the ruling powers have largely opened the way to this, whilst the spread of the leaven of revolutionary democracy throughout the Old World, or the supreme power getting into the hands of the people, has been the machinery to bring about the present condition of things, connected with the political and moral earthquake. We cannot fail noticing also, the palpable rising indifference to honored customs, and the authority of the law. In the iron clay toes of Nebuchadnezzar's image, at the end, we have the solution of just what we are now witnessing;—the supreme power of all governments broken and mixed, popular will with kingly rule. And the next step we look for in the current chain of events is the subversion of governments, and anarchy, and confusion.

HYMN BOOK.—The Committee appointed to get out a new hymn and tune book, report, that the obstacles they have encountered compel them to defer the execution of the work for the present. M. G.

A Great Fire in Quebec broke out on the afternoon of May 30th. About seven hundred houses were burned, thus leaving over one thousand people without homes. The fire was in a suburb of the city called St. Louis. M. G.

FAST TRAVEL.—A train has just crossed the continent from New York to San Francisco, a distance of 3317 miles in eighty and one half hours. The following is a summary of the trip:

"New York to Pittsburg, over the Pennsylvania railroad, with one engine and no stop, the train ran 444 miles in ten hours; fastest times sixty-two miles in sixty minutes. The run between New York and Philadelphia of ninety miles was made in ninety-nine minutes. Pittsburg to Chicago, over the Fort Wayne Divsion of the Pennsylvania railroad, 469 miles in eleven hours; best time, sixty miles in sixty minutes. Chicago to Omaha over the Chicago and Northwestern railroad, 492 miles in eleven hours; fastest time, forty-five miles in forty-four minutes. Omaha to San Francisco, 1916 miles in forty-eight hours; fastest time, sixty miles in sixty minutes. Engines were exchanged twice on the Fort Wayne road and twice on the northwestern. M. G.

BRO. S. A. COOLIDGE writes May 15th, from San Bernardino, Cal., that Bro. and Sr. D. D. Reed have just been there and held some meetings with good results. Three were baptized, and others became much interested in the reasons for the christian's blessed hope. Bro. Coolidge has recently seen the clear light on the great Bible truth that, if man desires immortality, he must seek it through Christ; but if he rejects Jesus, he must die "the second death." May the Lord bless Bro. Coolidge, and help him to do much for Jesus. M. G.

REVOLUTION IN TURKEY.—A telegram from Constantinople, dated May 30th, reads as follows:

CONSTANTINOPLE, May 30. An official proclamation has been issued, declaring Sultan Aziz dethroned in acordance with the popular will. Murad Effendi, the heir presumptive and a nephew of Aziz, has been declared Sultan.

It is thought this change will have an important bearing on the Eastern question, but just how it will be affected, it is not now easy to determine. The present Sultan will be thirty-six years of age Sept. 21st, 1876. The course he will pursue with the insurrectionsts is not yet known. He promises many reforms. M. G.

"NO CONFIDENCE."

The covetousness, corruption, selfishness, dishonesty, hypocrisy, and general wickedness of the present age, have destroyed the confidence of business men in each other to such an extent that they are afraid to go forward in business transactions, as in other days. All this tends to produce the "perilous times" foretold by the apostle Paul (2 Tim. 3: 15), that would characterize the "last days" of the present dispensation. The lack of confidence is becoming very wide-spread. The London Spectator, of April 22nd, says:

"The state of affairs in the city is strange. The bank of England has dropped its official rate to two per cent., the money dealers are lending on the best securities at 1½, and there is, as the Times reports, an 'unhealthy' plethora of money. At the same time, there appears to be no confidence in anything. Regular business is not extending, and of new speculation outside the feverish gambling in foreign bonds there is not a trace. There is even an out-cry for 'some new outlet for capital,' and unless a war breaks out and the great Governments begin to borrow, there ought to be a rush toward some new kind of industrial enterprise. It is not visible yet, but inventiveness is no more extinct than roguery."
M. G.

"CONDITIONAL IMMORTALITY" CONFERENCE.—In another part of this paper will be found a report of an interesting conference, held in London, England, commencing Monday, May 15th. Bro. W. Kellaway (Editor of Bible Echo) had a verbatim report taken, at much expense, and has sent us the account of the opening of the meeting. This is the first meeting of the kind in London. It was one of special interest. Strong men were there, noted for piety and learning; men, who, like Luther, dare stand in the front ranks of those who venture to proclaim unpopular Bible truth. May the Lord bless them, and give them persevering courage; real christian, humble boldness. We trust our readers will be specially interested in the continued report of this conference. We feel much obliged to Bro. Kellaway for sending us such an early and well-prepared report. M. G.

THE TURKISH SITUATION.

"The sick man" is wasting away. There are no symptoms of recovery. He appears to be struck with death; and the great powers of Europe are watching his dying struggles with special interest, as they expect to receive benefit by his death. As neighbors, they profess some sympathy, but feel none at heart. Turkey dies as a tyrant, loved and pitied by none who are friends of humanity. She has been a foul blot upon the earth, and added much to its sorrow and wickedness. She, with her corrupt sister, the Papacy, have served Satan with remarkable faithfulness; but the time has come for them to drink from the cup they have filled to others. Says the New York Tribune:

"It is evident that the end has come. . . . The action of the other European nations may possibly keep up the galvanic motions of life for a little while longer, but the vitality has already left the body, and the symptoms of decomposition cannot be much longer delayed."

Syria appears to be coming in for a share in the trouble, as the following despatch shows:

"London, May 14. The Standard's Vienna despatch says disturbances are feared in Syria, where the excitement is daily increasing. Two English men-of-war have arrived at Jaffa, three at Beyrout, and one English and one French man-of-war at Latakia."

The murder of the Governor and French Consuls by the Turks, at Salonica [the same as the Thessalonica, in the days of Paul] has stirred up a deep feeling against the Turkish powers, and probably will hasten its downfall. They not only murdered them, but then marched past them, spat upon them and refused to let their bodies be buried. This has caused the Germans and French to send war ships into the Turkish waters, in order to be ready to fulfill any orders given by their respective governments. The Russians and English are also sending war ships to the same neighborhood. Salonica is blockaded. The schools are closed, and work suspended. The Turks had a celebration at Saloniça over the murder of the German and French Consuls. A storm is gathering that may produce mighty results. Let us watch, and patiently wait for further developments. A correspondent of the London Times sends the following despatch from Constantinople, dated May 13th:

"A general panic prevails here. The low classes of Mohammedans are purchasing daggers and revolvers with money supplied by persons who are plotting the overthrow of the Sultan and the government, and the massacre and plundering of the Christians. The Mohammedans insult and threaten the Greeks and Armenians, bidding them to prepare for imminent death. Travelers are leaving en masse. The European residents are sending away their families. The presence of European squadrons and the organization of a volunteer European militia can alone allay the alarm. The Bulgarian insurrection is extending." M. G.

FASTING.

1. Is it a duty or privilege now for christians to fast?
2. What does Jesus mean in Mark 9: 29, "This kind can come forth by nothing but by prayer and fasting?"
3. Does fasting mean an entire abstinence from food; or rather, as the prophet Daniel did as recorded in Dan. 10: 2, 3? Very truly yours, L. D. H.

(1) It is a "privilege," but not a commandment. To be acceptable, or profitable, it should be voluntary. It is certain that the Bible gives examples of rich blessings obtained by prayer and fasting. In our own experience, we have often found this true. Then fasting must be considered a "privilege," instead of a duty. It has been common for saints to fast and pray when any special blessing was desired, and the Lord has paid respect to them, and granted their requests, thus encouraging others to follow their example.

(2). In the case mentioned in Mark 9: 19, the Savior refers to the casting out of demons; thus showing that in connection with "prayer and fasting," a power is received to do what could not be done otherwise. The Holy Spirit is more fully manifested on such occasions, than it would be without the "prayer and fasting."
